A circular letter on "Parcel-Post Mail—Care in Handling," states that "although cautionary notices and nistructions concerning the care and handling of parcel-post packages have been issued from time to time, many patrons of the postal service still complain that parcels are being received in bad condition, and investigations show that in some instances the parcels were not properly packed and in others that the trouble was due to careless and rough handling of the mails.

Postmasters, clerks, carriers, railway postal clerks, and all employees of the service are hereby warned that they will be held to strict account for damage to the mails for which they are responsible.

"Fragile parcels must be kept separate, so far as practicable, from other mail," the circular states, "and bags containing fragile parcels must have 'fragile' tags on them. Parcel post packages liable to damage must not be thrown from moving trains. All parcels must be promptly handled and dispatched and special care muse be used to prevent delay to perishable articles."

"POWER OF EVIL" ARRAIGNS DRINK EVIL

When George Bronson Howard wrote "The Follies of 1912," he had no idea that some day he was going to write one of the most serious film dramas of the times.

Most of Mr. Howard's writings have been in a more or less light and humorous vein, and thousands have enjoyed his theatrical efforts as produced in collaboration with David Belasco, in his "Passing Show of 1912," and in a number of one-act plays that have been produced in this country from time to time.

"Snobs," "The Double Cross," "The Red Light of Mars," "An Enemy of Society" and "The Only Law" are among the well-known books of this author. To those who are acquainted with him through these stories, B. S. Moss Film, "The Power of Evil," by Mr. Howard will come well recommended.

This photoplay is an arraignment of the drink evil.

Margaret Nicholas, who is remembered for her work in "Little Mary Sunshine," plays the leading role, and is supported by an all-star cast in "The Power of Evil," to be released by the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation in October 1. It is the first release under its new state right plan.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, Sept. 9.

WITH "Mr. 44" wholly completed and sample print and negative sent to New York, Director Henry Otto, of the Yorke-Metro, devoted several days of the past week to adapting for screen portrayal, the Marie Van Vorst novel, "Bit Tremaine." The story is laid in Virginia, and Director Otto being a son of the South, will be perfectly at home in filming the subject. It gives Harold Lockwood the role of a big-hearted man, who, by sheer force of character, is successful in everything he undertakes, even to securing a seat in Congress. May Allison takes the other featured part, that of the daughter of the village banker. Lester Cuneo and Andrew Arbuckle have been cast in important parts in this coming production, the latter having been specially engaged by Fred J. Balshofer.

Charles P. Stalling, late of the American Company, has been engaged as assistant director for Mr. Otto.

Marshall Neilan has been added to the Famous Players-Lasky organization as director, and has taken up the filming of a photodrama which will star Blanche Sweet.

Another addition to the Lasky staff is Van Zimmerman, late location man for the Fine Arts Company, who took up his new position with Lasky last week.

Arthur Friend, attorney for the Lasky Company, arrived at the Coast to spend several days with Samuel Goldfish, who has been detained longer than he anticipated.

Walter Moore, of Miner Lithograph Company, who came to the Coast with Mr. Goldfish, has found it necessary to return East. His purpose in visiting Los Angeles was to investigate the matter of a branch lithographing plant on the Coast, which would supply Western States with paper instead of all being shipped from New York. Before departing for the East, Mr. Moore made it known that he would recommend that a branch of their company be established in Los Angeles.

Fox Director Raoul Walsh, his assistant, James Marcus, and Cameraman Georges Benoit, spent several days of the past week at Phœnix, Ariz., where they went to show the first finished print of Walsh's late story on prison reform to Governor George W. P. Hunt. Governor

Bessie Barriscale as "Plain Jane" and "Beautiful Bessie" in the Kay-Bee Triangle Drama

Hunt, after seeing the picture, was glad to indorse it. Among the prisoners who took part in scenes, is Victor Louis Eytinge, a skillful advertiser, who has gained a national reputation since he entered the prison. Eytinge edits a small magazine from the prison. This is published at Boston.

Harry Carey has been engaged by Western Representative A. Carlos, of the William Fox Film Corporation, and will appear in Western subjects under the direction of R. A. Walsh. Scenario for the first subject is now being prepared, and filming will shortly be commenced. Other members for the first cast have not been named.

Another new picture will next be started by Oscar C. Apfel. Apfel's story is being written, and deals with the bridging of the gulf which separates the underworld from society. Brooklyn Keller will be one of the principals in this photoplay.

The second big interior setting made for the photoplay being filmed by Director Frank Lloyd at the Fox studio, was used last week. It represents the interior of a Nome lodge. This interior is seventy-five feet wide by one hundred and twenty feet deep, and was very handsomely decorated with furs and huntsmen's trophies of the Far North. Gladys Brockwell is the star of the story, and the supporting cast includes Hershall Mayall, George Webb, Carl Von Schiller, James Farley, William Clifford, Ray Hanford, and Edward Alexander.

Fox Director Charles Parrott has made it clear to his leading comedian, Hank Mann, that he must reduce in flesh. In fact, Parrott is making a practical experiment with Mann in a wild race comedy now being filmed. Mann takes the part of a sprinter. Carmen Phillips is playing the opposite lead. A number of new photographic effects will be given this subject by Frank Good in charge of the photography, they being of the nature of new trick scenes made possible by one time movement process.

Special trains, motor boats, and motorcycles, the fastest of their respective kind to be secured, will play an important part in the next William Fox comedy made by Director Walter Reed. True love in this comedy will battle with crooks and scoundrels, but ultimately will win.

A. Carlos has engaged C. M. and S. A. Franklyn, who have been with the Fine Arts studio as directors, but they will not begin their work under the new contract until November. This addition increases the Fox producing staff to eight companies.

Lester Scott, assistant to Director Oscar Apfel, and Irene Hunt, Universal leading woman, were quietly wed at San Diego last week. Announcement of the wedding

A Brace of New Universals: Carter De Haven in "Perils of the Parlor"—J. Warren Kerrigan in "The Social Buccaneer"—Joseph De Grasse and Dorothy Phillips in "The Place Beyond the Winds" came as a surprise to the Fox organization friends. The wedding was to have occurred at a Los Angeles church, and a number of guests had been invited, but Scott went south with Miss Hunt the day before the wedding date. The couple are now enjoying a honeymoon spent aboard ships along the coast.

Hart in "Return of 'Draw' Egan"

The next William S. Hart release as an Ince contribution to the Triangle program will be "The Return of 'Draw' Egan," a story which gives the well-known player the role of a bad man whom a girl reforms. The action is laid in Yellow Dog, a western town infested with gunmen. The picture was made almost entirely at the big eighteen thousand acre Inceville ranch, and is said to bristle with swift and forceful action. Hart's part in this will compare very favorably with the role in which he was seen in "The Aryan." Margery Wilson is seen in the ingenue role, and Louise Glaum takes an important part in the story, which was written by C. Gardiner Sullivan. The picture will introduce some new photographic effects including sunsets which were obtained without the tinting process. The company spent days and nights in canyons to secure the proper lighting. Because of numerous requests from film fans, Mr. Hart wears in this picture, the peculiar daisy bedecked vest which was first seen in "Two Gun Hicks," and was then worn for a number of two-reel subjects. All the Inceville cowboys work in this picture.

Hart was last week the center of a mob scene in which more than five hundred took part. This is for a later subject which as yet is unnamed. Hart plays the role of an ex-bandit who figures in a number of thrilling episodes. The many people used in this scene represents the town folk. Hart has Alma Reuben as his leading woman in the subject.

A Scene from "Black Friday," a Red Feather Universal Five-Reeler Released September 18

Hart was host one day last week of Al Jennings, bandit, and subject of the famous "Beating Back" stories. They spent the time discussing badmen of the screen and of life, and the actor was warmly complimented by Jennings, who says he has not missed seeing one of the Hart western pictures since this actor began his work for the screen.

Raymond B. West, directing the tri-star production which has Dorothy Dalton, Enid Markey and Howard Hickman as principals, delayed traffic of a continental railway just out of Los Angeles last week in the making of scenes showing a wreck. The collision was staged at night, and the crash littered up the tracks so badly that it was impossible for traffic to be resumed according to schedule. About one hundred and twenty-five people appeared in the scenes made during the wreck.

Director Reginald Barker's demands for realism last week caused George Fisher to dye his blonde hair black. He appears in the part of an Italian artist in support of Clara Williams in an Italian drama. Fisher tried to persuade the director that a wig would answer the purpose, but Director Barker, to secure the best results, insisted upon changing the color of the actor's hair.

Director Barker's requisitions have caused the wardrobe department of the Ince studios to work overtime in an effort to complete nine hundred Austrian uniforms needed for war scenes in the play.

The Ince company under the direction of Walter Edwards, returned Friday from spending a week along the Sacramento River in northern California, making exteriors for the coming Frank Keenan subject which has Margery Wilson for its leading woman.

Monte M. Katterjohn is writing another photoplay for William S. Hart, which he declares will give new situations heretofore never attempted for western drama. Katterjohn is the author of "The Apostle of Vengeance," "The Captive God," and "The Patriot," all Hart productions.

With the first episode of the coming Signal Mutual serial, "The Lass of the Lumberlands" completed, Director J. P. McGowan decided to take advantage of a wrecked Pacific Coast line steamer, the Bear, for the second release, and the company, by the aid of two yachts, secured excellent scenes several miles out in the Pacific. The S. S. Bear, which plied the full length of the U. S. western coast, went aground several weeks ago on rocks, and while workmen were attempting to get it afloat to repair the damage, McGowan made a number of scenes.

The Signal Company has experienced considerable difficulty in the northern California lumber district because of heavy fogs, not unusual at this time of the year. If this interference continues, Director McGowan has decided he will make but one more episode in the Eureka-Arcata redwood district. Upon the completion of the third episode, the Helen Holmes Signal Company will go to Hume lumber district, which is farther south, and where climatic conditions are more favorable for filming during the fall.

A feature of the first episode of this new serial will be the White Deer dance performed by the chieftains, and all members of the Hoopa Indian tribe at the reservation of that name. This is a religious ceremony performed twice a year by all Hoopa Indians, and McGowan and Helen Holmes induced the Indians to perform it for the films. When it was learned that the dance was to be given, more than a thousand automobile loads of people went to the reservation to witness the spectacle. About two hundred feet of these scenes were sent east for the Mutual Weekly.

Hurst Kills a Deer, So We Hear

To Paul C. Hurst belongs the credit of being the first of the Signal Company to kill a deer. It was while returning from a distant mountain location that a buck crossed the road a short distance in front of him. He brought the machine to a stop regardless of breaks and tire wear, and two shots from his trusty rifle, writes the press agent, and Mr. Deer was a dead one.

Preparedness has been practiced by the Signal Film Company, as Director McGowan, believing that it would be best to have a large stock of film on hand, ordered a sufficient quantity to last two or three months sent with the company. He now declares that if the railroad strike becomes a certainty, he will be in a position to continue production and probably finish the serial without additional supply.

"The Garden of Allah" Selig company is back from spending ten days on the Mojave desert near Oxnard. A portion of the time was spent in an attempt to secure a realistic sand storm, but this not being accomplished, the technical staff of the Selig studio has perfected a way of making an artificial one. Propellers and six cylinder motors of aeroplanes are used with the most desirable results. However, it requires some time to make each scene by this process.

The Selig Zoo now contains seven sets for this picture. Three of this number are extremely large, and represent street scenes with large buildings. The others are smaller, but require pretentious furnishings. All are of the type of buildings to be seen in Algeria, the locale of this story. The company will spend the greater part of the coming week at Santa Barbara where they will use the gardens of the Santa Barbara missions. These are known as the most attractive to be found in California.

The other Selig company under the direction of E. A. Martin, is still working at Newhall making scenes for "The Light of Western Stars," which features Tom Mix and Bessie Eyton.

Labor Day at the Selig Zoo was the scene of the annual picnic held by all labor organizations in southern California. The attendance is said to have been greater than any previous event of this kind held at the zoo. There was a continuous program of events from early in the morning until late at night, including dances and concerts. A feature of the day was the making of a motion picture for the labor unions in which the members took part. This is to be used in the present campaign for better workingmen's laws in California. This was made under the direction of Eugene Lowry and Scotty Beal.

"A Million Dollar Smash" is the name given the L-Ko comedy in which a runaway box car plays havoc in many localities. Russ Powell, Dick Smith, Billy Bevins and Lucille Hutton are the principals of this L-Ko comedy.

Three Stories in Production

Another picture just completed is titled "Safety First." It is a story of two crooks and the adventures they have. One to escape detection climbs into a safe and is locked up, while the other finds the alarm to be false and moves the safe away.

Three new stories are in production. One is being made by Craig Hutchinson with scenes laid around a Turkish bath establishment. Director David Kirkland is in charge of the filming of another, which has the adventures of a flirty hotel keeper who has a jealous wife. Director General Jack Blystone is working on the third picture, which has Alice Howell, Will Dunham and Fatty Voss as its leads.

Messrs. Rounan and Edwards, of the E. & R. Jungle Film Company, will shortly make an announcement of a change in policy with respect to their future productions. The company has established an enviable reputation for making comedies of exceptional merit. The popularity of these films has caused many exchanges and exhibitors to write, asking if larger subjects are made, and it is these letters that have induced the managers to begin preparations for the making of larger pictures.

Up to this time one two-reel subject has been filmed. It is entitled "Nap and Sally, the Deserters." It is one of a series made under the title of "Nap and Sally in the Movies." In this subject they run away from the army by stealing the general's mule, which they trade to a Chinaman for a laundry. Nap falls for the Chinese pipe, and the dream he has is up to standard. The costumes for this production are said to be the funniest ever used in an E. & R. comedy, and the two principals have most unique outfits. The popular song, "Dreamy, Dreamy Chinatown," will be appropriate incidental music for a portion of this picture.

The Fine Arts race track story being made by George Siegman has been titled "The Best Bet." Dorothy Gish is featured in this picture. It was originally planned to go to Tia Juana for the race scenes, but lack of good horses there caused the arrangements to be made for the filming of this at a Los Angeles course. Director Siegman was formerly a race fan, and his experience secured in following the ponies, is serving him in the present production. Siegman was one of D. W. Griffith's assistants in the filming of "Intolerance." The story of this new photoplay is that of a girl who brings about the reformation of her sweetheart, who has developed a mania for gambling, and to win her he promises to bet on but one more race. The race is jobbed, and his horse made to go lame. Later the horse wins, and thus he routs the heavy of the story, and not only wins the stakes, but the girl. Five hundred extra people were used in the race course scenes, and six horses participated in the race.

Erect 7 Ranch Buildings for "Defenders"

A Fine Arts Company is spending a week at Sunland, Cal., where seven big ranch buildings have been erected, around which battle scenes with approximately five hundred horsemen will be staged for the early day California story now known as "The Defenders." All the Fine Arts kiddies take part in this, and Bessie Love, Ralph Lewis, Frank Bennett have the featured parts.

The temporary title given a two-reel Triangle komedy being made by Edward Dillon is "The Village Vampire." This gives Fay Tincher the role of a small town hotel waitress who reads a book on vamping, and decides to practice this in and out-of-door sport of the fair sex. For a time she gets on well as a heart breaker, but finally is glad to return to her homespun beau. Max Davison takes the part of the small town spender, who starts in to show her life on the gay white way, and Eddie

Gertrude Cameron (Universal)

Dillon is the country sweetheart whom she returns to.

"The Rescuers" is the name given another Triangle komedy just completed. This gives the featured part to Tully Marshall, who as a crook, corrupts a society youth, and induces him to help in perpetrating a bold robbery by making the youth believe he is aiding a maiden in distress. Howard Gay is the smart youth wearing a wrist watch, Lillian Webster is the girl, and Tod Browning is directing.

The reformation of a wayward son of the rich by a manicurist at a barber shop, serves as a plot for the short subject, "The Barber Shop Sport," being filmed from a Calder Johnstone scenario by William Garwood.

Allen J. Holubar has written and produced a two-reel subject featuring Flora Parker DeHaven. It depicts the misfortunes of a little city waif, the sole guardian and caretaker of her little sister. The waif secures employment in a millinery establishment, on the day she is ejected from a tenement house for non-payment of rent. She sneaks her sister into the store, where they stay all night, or rather until they are awakened by a burglar, the girl's cries brings a friendly policeman; and the children become his wards. Virginia Corbin is the Little Sister; Charles Cummings, the cop, Margaret Whistler, the milliner, and William Walsh, the proprietor.

Leah Baird, Agnes Vernon and Jack Mulhall are the principals of a program picture being made by Fred A. Kelsey from scenario by M. B. Havey. It is titled "The Sunset," and the plot deals with the deception of a sister who marries the young man engaged to her sister, but who had decided to break her engagement when he loses his eyesight. The youth weds the sister thinking she is the one he courted before the accident, and the sister learning of the deception and seeing the couple very happy leaves them, to continue on her career as a singer.

"David's Idol Dream," is a two-reel picture being made by U Director Walter Morton, from a story by Adele Farrington. This picture has Jay Belasco, Madge Kirby, Rex Roselli and Miriam Selby as principals and is of the nature of a comedy drama. An artist and an illustrator are engaged to be married, but the girl breaks the engagement when the artist exchanges a picture on which he has worked for months, for a hideous idol. Shortly after the idol falls, and when it breaks to pieces, a valuable pearl necklace falls from where it has been placed by a small child of the family that formerly possessed it. The return of the pearls secured several orders for the artist and the couple are reunited.

"The Little Apostle"

The separation of a father and his son during a railroad wreck and their reunion many years later by chance, is the theme of "The Little Apostle," filmed by George Cochrane and a cast composed of Molly Malone, Jack Nelson, Miriam Selby, George Berrell, Anna Dodge, Miss DeFoe and Burton Law. The father, after the loss of his son, becomes a missionary.

Corinne Parquet (Keystone)

The child is cared for by others in the wreck and educated for the ministry. He goes to a small town to succeed his father, neither knowing the identity of the other, and causes a split in the congregation, which is not done away with until the two ministers learn of their relationship.

How the attentions of another woman affected a wife who in the absence of her husband had secured a divorce, and will not consent to re-marriage, will be shown in "Bridging a Distance," a one-reel Universal program subject being filmed by J. McDermott. The other woman causes jealousy and she soon comes to see virtues in her former mate previously unnoticed. McDermott has Betty Shade, Charles Mailes and Ed Brown as his principals in this picture.

The "triangle plot" has a new situation in "Daddy's Kid," recently filmed by Director William Garwood. In this two brothers love the same girl and one weds her while the other is completing his college course. A child is born while the father is absent, and the brother, now a physician, finding the child is dead substitutes the child of another woman in order to add to the happiness of his brother. Years later the husband learns of the deception, and thinking his brother is the child's father, threatens death to the wife and brother but fails to carry out such a plan, for by accident he learns the true story. George Chesbro, Richard

"Matchin' Jim," a Two-Reel Mustang-Mutual Drama, Dated September 8, and Featuring Anna Little

Directors Maxwell Ryder and Jack Cunningham are filming the subject titled "Atonement," with a cast made up of Wadsworth Harris, Peggy Custer, Paul Byron, Countess Du Cello, Fred Montague and Mina Cunard. The story, written by the producers, pertains to a mother watching over her daughter, whom she had given to a relative because of her lack of funds to properly care for the girl when an infant. In later years she prevents the girl from eloping, and is recognized by the foster father and the family is reunited.

Another production being made by these directors is titled "The Card." The players in this are the same appearing in "Atonement." The story pertains to a flirtation of music students, who reside in the same apartment house, and the girl, unable to bear the constant scale practice of the violinist, drops a card, asking him to stop. Later when she is being robbed, the card again serves her, and this time brings the youth to the aid of the girl.

"Just Her Luck" is a two-reel drama, being produced by Donald Macdonald, with Irene Hunt and Lee Hill in the leading roles. The story is by Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude, and deals with the misfortunes which befall a girl who goes to the city for employment. Mina Cunard, Helen Wright, and A. E. Witting complete the supporting cast.

The Nestor Company has filmed two single-reel comedies. One is "Even Stephen" by Tom Gibson, the story of young people at college who wed and attempt to keep the wedding a secret from their parents. This goes well until the aunt of one and the father of the other come on a visit. The attempts of the newlyweds to keep their secret gets them into much trouble, but finally the relatives meet and find they are old sweethearts.

"Six Days"

The other Nestor comedy is named "Six Days." A lovesick youth seeks advice of a physician, who promises to send written diagnosis the next day. The physician sends him one intended for an elderly man, which gives him but six days to live. Learning this fate he contracts with an undertaker for the sale of his body upon death at the rate of one hundred dollars a day during his life. That his last few days may be happy he goes to a beach where he makes merry, but his good time is continually broken up by the undertaker appearing and asking how he feels. There he meets his sweetheart, their troubles are patched up, and a chance meeting with the doctor brings out the error previously made. Walter Newman wrote this story.

"Perils of the Parlor" is a comedy with Carter De Haven and Belle Bennett, with several new situations caused by a wreck of the good ship Matrimony. Wifey goes home to mother, after renting the house at the beach to summer girls. Husband returns, and has the gay time of his life until mother-in-law and wife come for a few things. The story was written by Barney Furey, and prepared for the screen by Harry Wulze.

"Beans and Bullets" is a Joker comedy made by Director William Beaudine, with the usual cast. This is a burlesque on the social life of the army or navy.

The W. Carey Wonderly novel, "The Price of Silence," has been adapted for the screen by Ida May Parks, and will be filmed under the director of Joseph De Grasse. Dorothy Phillips and Lon Chaney will be the principals.

Phillips Smalley's present production, titled "The Double Standard," adapted from the story of Brand Whitlock by Elliott Clawson, is a sex problem play, featuring Hazel Page and Irene Aldwyn, who appear in the roles of two girls of the street. The principal role is that of the judge of a police court, taken by Roy Stewart. The judge decides shortly after taking up the duties of the office to deal fairly with all cases that come before him regardless of the parties, and especially those involving women of the underworld.

One of the first brought before him causes his brother-in-law to be brought into court together with two girls, and later investigation on the part of the judge as to ownership of the apartment house, reveals to him that his wife is part owner. The disgrace brought upon the family as the result of the hearing breaks up his home, for his wife is persuaded to leave him by her brothers, a newspaper owner and a bishop. But the judge has the satisfaction of knowing that he is living true to his convictions. Mr. Smalley has selected a very notable cast, which included Frank Elliott, who but recently returned from a legitimate starring tour in Australia, Clarissa Selwyn, Frank Brownlee, Joseph Gerard, Max Stanley, and others. The subject is being given some exceptional settings.

"The Python" is an underworld gunman story of three reels, being made for U by Director A. W. Rice. Tom Gibson is the author of the scenario, which reveals how an adventuress and her aids were captured by the police by a peculiar perfume odor when aided by a physician who has been taken to the gangman's gathering place to treat an injured man. Gretchen Lederer appears in the part of the adventuress, George C. Pearce plays the role of the doctor, the lead, and Lloyd Whitlock, William Quinn, and Jessie Arnold are the other principals.

A five-reel story, titled "The Reward of His Government," has been written by Robert Lee Weigert, a recent addition to the U scenario staff, who was formerly at the Thomas H. Ince studio. Stuart Paton will be in charge of producing this.

"Liberty" Now In 8th Episode

The "Liberty" serial company is now engaged in filming the eighth episode, and are spending a week in the vicinity of Playadel Rey, California.

Director William Mong is using the soldiers' home at Sawtelle, California, for exterior scenes of the three-reel drama "An Old Soldier's Romance." Nellie Allen plays the lead opposite Mong.

F. McGrew Willis and Walter Woods have written a five-reel drama "The Devil's Dye," which is to be produced by Director Lloyd Carleton. Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnson are featured in this picture.

A comedy melodrama is next to be made by Director William Worthington, who will have Franklyn Farnum and Agnes Vernon as his principals. The title of this is, "In Love."

Director Henry McRae, accompanied by President Carl Laemmle and Mr. McRae's players, were at Catalina Island several days last week for scenes in the two-reel subject, "The Lost Lode." Upon his return from Catalina Islands, Mr. Laemmle went to San Francisco to spend a few days.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

Four Special Subjects and Two Special Features Will Be Released on the Universal Program for the Week of September 18 in Addition to Regular Red Feather

FOUR special subjects and two Universal Special Features will be released on the Universal Program for the week of September 18, in addition to the regular five-reel Red Feather feature.

Marie Walcamp, Eddie Polo and Jack Holt will appear in "The Desert of Lost Souls" the latest and sixth episode of the new Universal serial "Liberty," which was written by and produced by Jacques Jaccard. The following cast will appear in support of the principals: Maude Emory, G. Raymond Nyc, Neal Hart, Bertram Grassby and L. M. Wells.

Carter De Haven continues his "Timothy Dobbs—That's Me" series with a two-reel episode entitled "He Almost Lands An Angel," written by Bess Meredyth and produced by Wallace Beery. Robert Milash, Mina Cunard, Hayward Mack, Dan Duffy and Mr. Horne appear in support of De Haven.

The week's Red Feather will be "Black Friday," a five-reel drama of the period of 1874, in which Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnson play the principal roles. This, the thirty-fourth Red Feather Universal production was scenarioized by Mrs. E. N. Engleton from the story by Frederick S. Isham, and was produced by Lloyd B. Carleton. Supporting Miss Davenport and Emory Johnson are Richard Morris, Wilfred Roger, Gretchen Lederer, Virginia Southern, Marc Fenton and Mrs. Maurese. "Black Briday" will be released on September 18.

On the same day, Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, supported by Priscilla Dean, Harry Nolan and Fred Gamble will hie themselves to Turkey to see what they can do with "A Silly Sultan." This Nestor comedy was written by Ben Cohn and produced by L. W. Chaudet.

On September 19, Violet Mersereau will be starred in "The Girl Who Didn't Tell," a three-reel Universal Special society and underworld drama in which Paul Panzer, Harry Benham and Charles Ogle play the other principal roles. "The Girl Who Didn't Tell" was written by Harry Dittmar, and produced by Robert F. Hill. Nellie Slattery, Helen Slosson and Johnnie Walker, enact other principal roles. There will be no Victor release on September 19.

The feature on September 20 will be "Cold Hearts and Hot Flames," a two-reel L-Ko farce comedy featuring Billie Ritchie. Gladys Tennison appears in support. On the same day, No. 38 of the Universal Animated Weekly will be issued. There will be no Laemmle release on September 20

The following day, September 21, Francis Ford and Betty Schade will co-star in "Poisoned Lips," a Laemmle two reel society drama, written and directed by Mr. Ford. Neil Hardin, Alys Mason and Harry Fisher appear in support of the principals. On the same day, Edith Roberts and M. K. Wilson will co-star in the Powers comedy, "High Speed," which was written by Harvey Gates, and produced by Mr. Wilson. There will be no Powers release on September 21.

"A Mountain Nymph" is a Big U drama, scenarioized by Calder Johnstone from the story by G. E. Jenks, was produced by George Cochrane, and will be released on September 22 with Jack Nelson and Molly Malone in the principal roles. Burton C. Law, and Fred Burns are cast in the other principal roles.

"His Mother's Boy," a Rex military drama featuring Kingsley Benedict, also will be released on September 22. The play was written by E. M. Ingleton, and produced by F. A. Kelsey. Besides Mr. Kingsley the cast contains George Fernandez, Charles Dorian, and Mrs. Whitting. There will be no release under the Nestor brand on this date.

Ben Wilson will be featured on September 3 in "The Broken Spur," a Bison drama of the Canadian northwest in two reels adapted by J. Grubb Alexander from the story by Phil Hunt, and produced by Ben Wilson. Charles Ogle, Joseph W. Girard, Clara Beyers and Rosemary Dean, also play important roles. On the same day Gale Henry and William Franey will combine in the fun-making in "Musical Madness," a Joker comedy written by Harry Wulze, and produced by William Beaudine. Charles Conklin, Milburn Moranti and Lillian Peacock assist in the hilarity. There will be no release under the Laemmle brand on this date.

On September 24 the Powers juvenile drama, "The Valley of Beautiful Things" will be released. It will be followed by the Imp comedy drama, "A Desperate Remedy," written by Charles J. Wilson, produced by Charles E. Bartlett and featuring Gertrude Selby. Carl Von Schiller and John F. Connelly appear in support of Miss Selby. There will be no release under the L-Ko brand on this date.

During this week the Universal also will release "Under the Spell," a special Red drama, featuring Phillips Smalley and Lois Weber, supported by Douglas Gerrard and Lue Warrenton; "Buzzard's Prey," a special Imp drama in one reel; "A Wife's Innocence," a special Laemmle drama; and "After the Battle."

TRIPLE PERSONALITY IN "SAINT, DEVIL AND WOMAN"

A tale of a girl of triple personality, "Saint, Devil and Woman," will be released by the Thanhouser Film Corporation through the Pathe exchanges on September 24. Florence La Badie, the star, is supported by Wayne Arey, Hector Dion and Ethyle Cooke.

The story, by Philip Lonergan, is based upon Dr. Morton Prince's famous treatise, "The Dissociation of a Personality," which discusses the case of Sarah Beauchamp, the first person of changing personality to be carefully investigated by scientists.

Investigations by Boris Sidis and Dr. Hugo Von Munsterberg also were used in making the play psychologically accurate.

Florence La Badie appears as a simple girl who is changed into a fiend by a chain of startling circumstances. A railroad strike plays a big part in the story and Director Frederic Sullivan has staged a battle between strikers and strike breakers.

"THE MAN IN BLACK" IS SECOND "FANTOMAS," SET FOR RELEASE ON THE 14TH

The second release in the "Fantomas" series is called "The Man in Black." It will be released by Mutual September 14, as these three-reel episodes reach the screen at weekly intervals. The man in black is a mysterious law breaker who is in a desperate conflict with Juve. The man in black, who is in reality Fantomas, has allies everywhere and his resourcefulness is infinite.

One instance of it is when he is trapped in a restaurant. As he leaves the restaurant in charge of Juve and Fandor, the detective's newspaper assistant, he breaks away from his pursuers. They find to their chagrin that they have been holding rubber forms in the shape of arms while the criminal has had his own arms held tightly against his body.

"BEATRICE FAIRFAX" SCENE TO BE MADE AT THE POLO GROUNDS FOR INTERNATIONAL

A thrilling episode of "Beatrice Fairfax" the new photoplay series of the International Film Service, Inc., has to do with a romance in the lives of a professional baseball player and his wife. The big scene takes place during a ball game at the Polo Grounds.

The International Film Service has arranged with the New York American to stage several of the scenes during the game between the Yankees and Giants on September 10, for the benefit of the American's Neediest Families Fund.

Manager McGraw, of the Giants, Manager Donovan, of the Yankees, and the star players of both teams will have prominent parts in the picture.

METRO-YORKE COMPANY BEGINS "BIG TREMAINE," UNDER DIRECTION OF OTTO

Fred J. Balshofer, president and general manager of the Metro-Yorke studio, closed negotiations last week with Little, Brown and Company, the Boston publishers, for the motion picture rights to "Big Tremaine," the popular novel by Marie Van Vorst, author of "The Girl from His Town" and several other fiction successes.

Production will be starred in a few days by Director Henry Otto, with Harold Lockwood and May Allison in the stellar roles.

Mr. Lockwood will characterize the name part of "Big" Tremaine, who is so called by reason of his bigness of heart, mind and physical development.

Miss Allison is cast to portray the role of an aristocratic young Southern girl, who idealizes "Big Tremaine," and hence she assists him in obtaining his election to Congress.

The story of "Big Tremaine" is laid in picturesque Virginia. Special settings for the feature will be built at the West Coast Metro-Yorke studio under the supervision of Henry Otto, who was born and raised in the South.

A cast to support Harold Lockwood and May Allison is now being assembled in Los Angeles, at the Metro-Yorke studio in California.

"THE PILLORY" IS NEXT THANHOUSER FOR FLORENCE LA BADIE

Edwin Thanhouser announces that following "Saint, Devil and Woman," the next Florence La Badie feature to be released through Pathe will be "The Pillory," by Philip Lonergan and directed by Frederic Sullivan.

Miss La Badie is supported in "The Pillory" by Marie Shotwell, Ethyl Cooke, George Marlo, Nettie Parker Spaulding, Marie Haynes, Yale Benner, and James Seeley.

"The Pillory" is a strong tale of a country girl who is reared by a stern aunt whose religion is super-orthodox. Miss La Badie's mother has been driven away, and finally Florence, innocent of any wrong suffers the same fate.

She drifts to a city and is protected by a judge's wife. Just as happiness comes, the aunt, firm in her belief that the Bible must be interpreted literally, in a dramatic denunciation scene, crushes all of Florence's hopes.

All World-Brady Releases from Now Until New Year's Are Made, Edited and Ready for Delivery

WILLIAM A. BRADY, director general of the World Film Corporation, announces that all its releases from now until New Year's are made, edited and ready for delivery.

These photoplays, produced under the personal supervision of Mr. Brady, embrace a broad selection of themes and employ the services of all the World-Brady stars.

The first on the list, the release date of which is September 18, is "Friday the 13th," a dramatization of Thomas W. Lawson's famous novel, with frenzied finance as its background. Robert Warwick is the star of this production, and the "big" scene is a photographic reproduction of the floor of the New York Stock Exchange during a panic.

Clara Kimball Young, in "The Dark Silence," follows. This play is of the European war in the sense that its story threads the battlegrounds and field hospitals of France, where the heroine of the play and her lover are torn apart and reunited under vivid and thrilling circumstances.

"The Revolt," a drama of the great city, filmed from a noted stage play in which Helen Ware and Alma Berwyn met with great success throughout the country—a play that aroused vehement discussion of the sociological problem it laid bare—will be acted by Frances Nelson and Arthur Ashley.

"The Gilded Cage," with Alice Brady as its star, illustrates the vicissitudes of a young girl reared in the pleasant and spiritual atmosphere of the convent, with gentleness and goodness on every side, and suddenly plunged into the turmoil and wickedness of life at court—a veritable bird in "a gilded cage."

In direct contrast is "The Man Who Stood Still," a simple comedy of combined humor and sadness, the first World-Brady picture in which Lew Fields is the star. Mr. Fields impersonates a warm-hearted, kindly old jeweler who "loses out" to more aggressive business rivals, and suffers in ostensibly cheerful silence when grief and hardship enter his home.

"The Hidden Scar," starring Ethel Clayton and Holbrook Blinn, is a modern drama of love nearly wrecked through a misstep in the past.

Robert Warwick in "The Heart of a Hero" assumes the role of Nathan Hale, one of the most heroic characters in our national history. The photoplay is made from Clyde Fitch's stage drama, which met with countrywide favor under the title "Nathan Hale." A big, stalwart American play.

Marie Dressler in "Tillie's Night Out" contributes the first of the "Tillie" series for which she has been engaged as star by the World-Brady organization. The various happenings to which Tillie is subjected during the progress of her night of recreation would have utterly exhausted a less enthusiastic comedienne. Some of the scenes are laid at Coney Island.

Alice Brady in "Bought and Paid For" enacts the heroine of George Broadhurst's most successful play, which ran for two seasons at the Playhouse, New York, and was a wonderful success for several seasons all over the continent. This is a drama showing the influence of drink upon a household in which a noble husband and a charming wife idolize one another until the insidious enemy poisons their happiness.

The World-Brady interests are understood to have several other completed offerings in full readiness, but formal announcement of their identity and rotation is deferred for the present.

A new service has been established, called the Clara Kimball Young Service-World Pictures. This program provides eight reissued pictures with this star, each re-edited and retitled and all prints new.

First choice on the Clara Kimball Young program is given to the regular holders of World franchises, with no advance in price. The printing and other advertising specialties for this service are entirely new and unique.

ANOTHER ADE FABLE IN TWO REELS BY ESSANAY

Another two-act George Ade fable is being filmed by Essanay. It is "The Fable of the Kittenish Superanns and the World Weary Snipes." This will be the second time an Ade fable has been put in two reels, rather than one, but more will be issued in this length, whenever the story requires, as they have been found equally as popular as the shorter ones. The two-reel fables also afford an opportunity for larger sets. President George K. Spoor is now casting only recognized Essanay leading players in the fables.

MARSHALL NEILAN TAKES UP WORK AS A LASKY DIRECTOR

Marshall Neilan, one of the best-known leading men in motion pictures, and prominent also as a director, has taken up his new work as one of the Lasky directors at the Hollywood studio of the company. Mr. Neilan by no means is a stranger to audiences that have seen Paramount Pictures during the past two years.

He took leading role some months ago in the Lasky production of "The Country Boy," and he has also appeared as leading man for the Famous Players Film Company in "Madame Butterfly," in support of Mary Pickford, and in "Little Pal" with the same star.

In the past few years, Mr. Neilan has been connected with various companies, always to his increasing credit, as his popularity both as a player and director has constantly grown. He was recently with the Selig Company.

Maurice and Florence Walton, Dancers of International Fame, Will Be Seen on Paramount Program Week of September 25

ON the Paramount Program for the week of September 25, Maurice and Florence Walton, the dancers of international fame, will make their first screen appearance in the Famous Players production of "The Quest of Life."

The other feature for the week will be the Lasky production of "Anton the Terrible" in which Theodore Roberts and Anita King will be starred.

Surrounding the program this week, will be Paramount's three short reel subjects, the thirty-third edition of the Paramount Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen, the thirty-fourth of the weekly "Trips Around the World," with Burton Holmes, in which Bonnie Scotland will be visited, and the Paramount-Bray Cartoon, "Bobby Bumps Starts a Lodge" from the pen of Earl Hurd.

The Pictographs, Paramount's magazine-on-the-screen, for this week has four leading subjects—"Fresh Water Acrobats," "Dining Automatically," "Wonders of the Unseen World," and "Leather Footprints." In the first subject there is visualized the fact that a course in acrobatics is almost necessary in order to handle the sailing canoe, while in "The Wonders of the Unseen World" there is shown the various bacteria that exist in the water we drink, invisible to the naked eye. This is a plea for pure water, which is more necessary than pure food.

Treating humorously the manner in which thousands of people dine automatically each day, the subject treating on "The Nickel-in-the-Slot Dinner" is very interesting, but shows thoroughly the inside workings of one of the country's newest institutions. The subject of "Leather Footprints" shows in a most interesting manner, the method in which custom-made shoes are manufactured.

The Paramount Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures for the week, continues the "Trip Around the World," leaving England behind and entering the land of the Heather. In Bonnie Scotland the trip takes in every possible point of interest in the land of the Scotchman, including the raspberry picking, which has grown to a wonderful industry, the granite built Aberdeen Marischal College, and through the Caledonian Canal, and then to the highest mountain in Great Britain, together with a number of other interesting places.

Earl Hurd, the well-known cartoonist offers as the Paramount-Bray Cartoon for the week, "Bobby Bumps Starts a Lodge."

Next week Paramount will release its first comedy "Nearly a Deserter," a Black Diamond Comedy, produced by the United States Motion Pictures Corporation. This comedy deals with the surest fire trigger in the comedy world, the trick possibilities of the motion picture.

"The Sex Lure" Is to Follow "Her Surrender," Ivan Film Productions—Picture Will Be Released in Six Reels

"HER SURRENDER" having been completed, the Ivan Film Productions are already preparing for the next production, to be released in October.

"The Sex Lure," the new play which will be put into work almost immediately, is based on an original story especially conceived for the screen by L. V. Jefferson, one of our foremost dramatists.

There are six parts, each almost equally strong, and the Ivan Company has closed contracts with several stars, and is at present negotiating with other stellar lights of both the silent and spoken stage to enact various roles in their next play. Immediately the cast is completed, a further full announcement will be made.

This new production will not be directed personally by Ivan Abramson, director general of the Ivan Films, but another director has been especially engaged to produce this play under the supervision of Mr. Abramson.

Novelty is promised in the lighting effects of this new drama, and M. le Picard, chief of the battery of Ivan cameramen, has devised some ingenious contrivances for his camera, and promises new fade-in and fade-out effects.

Work on this new play will commence almost immediately, and "The Sex Lure" is expected to be completed early in October, so that it may be the regular scheduled Ivan release for that month.

"THE LITTLE LIAR" IS A FINE ARTS WITH MAE MARSH

Mae Marsh, the Triangle-Fine Arts star, with Robert Harren, will next be seen on the Triangle program in a different sort of a screen story, "The Little Liar," for which Anita Loos is responsible. The basic idea of the picture deals with the imaginative period of childhood. Lloyd Ingraham directed.

LEONORE ULRICH, THE MOROSCO STAR, IN A GROUP OF SCENES FROM "THE INTRIGUE," THE NEWEST WORK OF THE MOROSCO STUDIOS FOR THE PARAMOUNT PROGRAM

FIRST OF NEW KITTY GORDON FEATURES NOW IN THE MAKING AT BLACHE STUDIOS FOR SELZNICK

Kitty Gordon, the famous beauty of the musical comedy stage, has began work at the Blache Studio, on the first production of the Kitty Gordon Film Corporation. This picture will be a film version of "Vera the Medium," by Richard Harding Davis.

Miss Gordon's new picture is being filmed under the supervision of G. M. Anderson, the famous "Broncho Billy." The story is exceptionally well suited to the statuesque star, giving her many opportunities to appear in startling costumes, and to make the most of her noted beauty and superlative gifts of expression.

The Kitty Gordon Pictures have been added to the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, and will be released by him on the open booking plan, along lines similar to those he has adopted for the Clara Kimball Young and Herbert Brenon pictures.

Kitty Gordon's Back Again

Mr. Selznick hopes to enlarge his field of operations to include seven or eight stars of the first magnitude so that he will be able to produce and release fifty-two pictures a year. These will not be on a program, but the pictures of each star will be marketed separately at a price commensurate with their box office value. Negotiations are rapidly being closed for the control of all the pictures to be produced by one of the largest theatrical firms in the country. By this deal, Mr. Selznick will add to his attractions three noted stars. A definite announcement of this transaction is expected within a week or two.

OCHS, NATIONAL PRESIDENT, BOOKS "THE YELLOW MENACE" FOR ALL HIS THEATRES

The Unity Sales Corporation believes it is scoring a record number of bookings on its sixteen episodes serial "The Yellow Menace," which is now being released to exhibitors throughout the United States. One of the most important contracts which has been closed, books "The Yellow Menace" for all the theatres controlled by Lee A. Ochs, president, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

These theatres are as follows: Costello theatre, 23 Fort Washington avenue; Concourse theatre, Concourse and Fordham Road; Fordham theatre, Davidson avenue and Fordham Road; Broadway Airdrome, Broadway and 161st street; Grand theatre, Long Branch, N. J.; Ochs' Airdrome, West End, N. J.

When asked to express his opinion in regard to the value of serials for a program, Mr. Ochs says, over his signature: "For the coming season I have booked serials for all my theatres, because to my mind serials are the best two-reel propositions that the market offers. Generally speaking, more money is spent on serial productions, and the tremendous publicity behind them is of inestimable value to the theatres. Another factor of utmost importance that must not be overlooked, is the fact that when patrons become interested in a serial, it means continued patronage from fourteen to sixteen weeks as the case may be, and furthermore by bringing the patrons to a theatre, an exhibitor, through the medium of the screen, has the opportunity to keep them posted as to the excellence of his other attractions.

"In regard to how 'The Yellow Menace' appeals to me, my best answer is—I have booked this tremendous soul stirring serial for all my theatres."

TERRE HAUTE EXHIBITORS FORM ASSOCIATION

With the election of officers, the Terre Haute (Ind.) Exhibitors' Association was officially launched Thursday, August 26.

William E. Keating was elected president; Bennie Van Borssum, vice-president; Nat Wolf, secretary; G. Boland, treasurer.

This organization gives Terre Haute its first film organization. The organization have several plans for the betterment of the business in that city, which they will propose soon.

The Grievance Board consists of Will E. Keating, Nat Wolf, Ike Ades, and Sam Drifuss. This board is to act on all grievances that arise.

The Grievance Committee have just settled a dispute between the Musicians' Union and the theatres, and have also authorized the secretary to write to F. J. Rembush, president of the State League, that this organization will work hand and hand with him.

"CHARITY?" FIRST FEATURE OF FRANK POWELL PRODUCTIONS, INC., NEARS COMPLETION

"Charity?" the first feature of the Frank Powell Productions, Inc., is rapidly nearing completion. This picture, which has been made from a scenario by Linda A. Griffith, will mark Mr. Powell's initial effort as an independent producer. In it appear Creighton Hale, Linda A. Griffith, and Sheldon Lewis. "Charity?" will shortly be ready for release.

"THE LIGHT OF LOVE" MABEL TALIAFERRO'S NEWEST METRO PICTURE, WILL SHINE LATE THIS MONTH

Only five principal characters are required to tell the story of "The Light of Love," Mabel Taliaferro's latest Metro play, being produced by Rolfe Photoplays, Inc. These are true types of the rugged life of the Maine coast, where the action of the drama is located.

Mabel Taliaferro

Miss Taliaferro, with her supporting company and with Edwin Carewe, who is directing all Miss Taliaferro's pictures on the Metro program, have been at one of the most picturesque spots on the coast of the Pine Tree State, where a lighthouse is necessary to protect seafarers from treacherous rocks.

Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf have supplied the diminutive star with this latest vehicle, and June Mathis, one of the ablest scenario writers in the country, has translated the work of the collaborators in terms of the motion picture studio. "The Light of Love" will be released late this month.

WORK SOON UNDER WAY IN SUCCESS STUDIOS

With Constance Collier engaged for the leading role in "The Eternal Magdalene," the drama by Robert H. McLaughlin, which was seen on Broadway last season, and Orrin Johnson under contract to play the lead in the adaptation of the "Decameron" of Boccaccio, the Success Films Corporation expects to announce within the next week where and when it will begin making its first two pictures, and when they will be ready for release.

The remainder of the cast for the first two pictures will be announced shortly. The company's offices in Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and Detroit are now open, and the New York offices will be opened this week.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

Capacity for Concerted Action Demonstrated by Boston Film Men in Strike Preparedness

THE capacity for concerted action among Boston film men was demonstrated last week when representatives of the twenty-nine exchanges in Boston met and took heroic measures to prepare to supply the exhibitors in case the strike of railroads went into effect on Labor Day. The large building, 171-173 Pleasant street, was hired and a telephone switchboard installed, and the plant inspected and passed by the city officials. New England was districted into zones, thirty autos were contracted for, and all the exhibitors in the five states were telegraphed as to the delivery points. The committee putting the plan into execution were: Manager Asher of the Famous Players, Manager Harry Campbell of the Fox, and Eastern Division Manager Fred B. Murphy of the Unicorn.

Although the strike was averted, the committee is still out on the proposition of determining to what extent the film men may legally act as a unit in similar contingencies. It is probable that the committee will be made permanent and given power to act for the trade in emergencies.

Leo Balsdon, manager of the Boston V-L-S-E office, has received appointment as manager of the New York office, and will leave soon. He is receiving congratulations from his friends in the exchanges. Lester Reardon, now assistant manager, will be the next manager of the Boston office. Mr. Balsdon declares that the past week has been the greatest in the history of the Big Four in New England for business done. The E. H. Sothern pictures are in great demand. The Park theatre secured the contract for the first showing in Boston, and the films are being booked throughout New England.

George Whitney, of the Whitney interests, with headquarters at the Bijou theatre, Springfield, has signed a no-cancellation contract for a year for V-L-S-E features. Miss Sullivan, one of Mr. Balsdon's most popular stenographers, has been promoted to the position of assistant bookkeeper, the occasion of which was her getting married during her recent vacation. The groom is R. N. Bacon, and Mr. Blasdon says that V-L-S-E employees always bring home the bacon when they go after it.

Ed. Farrell, formerly manager of the General exchange in Boston, was appointed manager of the Pathé office here by C. B. Seelye, assistant to the Pathé president, who has been in town the past week.

Hunter Bennett, traveling representative of the Mutual, is in town negotiating for a Pleasant street location for the Mutual exchange. The intention is to build.

Frank Vine, manager of the International Film Company, with Representative E. H. McCloskey, Walter Davidson and Dan Hogan are getting ready to move into the new International building at 48 and 50 Piedmont street. Manager Vine says he will be glad to get out of his present cramped quarters.

The Globe Film Company has moved to the Frohman Building on Winchester street, leaving the Piedmont street building entirely to the Ferguson Feature Film Company, who needed all the space.

Metro is getting their new building in good running order. This plant has the latest appliances and labor and time saving devices. There are two machines in the projecting room to save the time of exhibitors. They are getting ready to book "Romeo and Juliet."

Harry Campbell goes on a vacation the 24th of September. For two weeks he will be hunting on a game preserve 140 miles north of Quebec. He is at present occupied mainly in polishing up his guns and pistols.

John Pavonne, formerly of the General, New Haven, is the new booker and shipper under Salvini, at the New Haven Unicorn office.

Kansas City Screen Club Opens Its New Headquarters to Two Hundred Guests at Housewarming on September 1

THE Kansas City Screen Club made its bow September 1, in its new quarters at 15 West 10th street, and received the hearty congratulations of the two hundred guests present. The quarters have been beautifully and tastefully decorated and furnished. An illustration of the good taste was shown in the comments of the women. A common expression heard was a desire to take some of the furniture away with them. There is a ball room, furnished with rugs, chairs, tables, and a piano, all of which were removed or set aside when the dancing began. There is a pool room, and a dining room will care for more than thirty at a time. A bar in the rear has the usual accommodations. The walls are decorated with pictures of screen stars.

The reception and ball on September 1 began at 9 o'clock, with the arrival of many of the invited guests. By 10:30 more of the moving picture exhibitors and guests came, and by 11 o'clock, there were more than 200 persons in the rooms, though some of the earlier arrivals had gone. Interspersed with the dancing, were cabaret numbers, the performers being persons on the week's bill at the Globe, the Century and the Gayety theatres. Charles W. Harden did the honors of the occasion, announcing the numbers as they appeared on the program.

C. W. Potter, the publicity man for "The Yellow Menace" at the United Film Company exchange, is reporting the best of success for that serial. Advertising in the local papers and on sign boards about the city has prepared the picture for a record run. The first house to get the picture was the Empress theatre, now operated under the Pantages. The serial will be staged by that theatre, for sixteen weeks, running an episode each week.

Furthermore this timely serial will be shown at each of the theatres in the circuit, which takes in some of the larger cities throughout the West. Running a serial straight through, day after day, is something new for the theatres of Kansas City, and a record house is expected at least one day a week. Joe Levy, manager of the Kansas City office of the United Film Company, selected a competent man to handle the new serial. Mr. Potter has had a wide experience in the Universal exchange of that city.

Hyrum Danberry, proprietor of the Lucile theatre, King City, Mo.; C. C. McCollister, manager of the Star theatre, Wichita, Kansas; J. W. Hayter, Lutic theater, Girard, Kansas; and Joseph Kohlberg, proprietor of the Farnum theatre, Omaha, Nebraska, were in the city visiting the Kansas City exchanges.

SAWYER AFTER CANADIAN RIGHTS TO PICKFORD PICTURES

It has been learned on very excellent authority that Mr. Sawyer, head of the Standard Film Service, Toronto, Ont., who is now in New York, expects to take back with him the Canadian rights for the Mary Pickford Artcraft Pictures. The Standard Film Company, which distributed Metro pictures in Canada, is said to have many novel and pretentious plans in view.

The Monarch Film Company, Ltd., has been incorporated in Toronto, with headquarters at 12 Queen street E., and they will distribute the new Clara Kimball Young features in Canada. The first of these will be "The Common Law."

Harry Price, who has just left for his western trip, representing the Canadian Universal Film Company, will book in addition to Universal Service and Bluebird photoplays, "The Dumb Girl of Porticia." The Strand theatre of Toronto, will show this picture first in Canada, during the month of September.

WEEMS IS MADE MANAGER FOR MUTUAL IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Owen D. Weems, one of the most active motion picture men of Baltimore, has been made manager of the Baltimore branch of the Mutual Film Corporation. Mr. Weems for some time past has been the leading salesman of that office, and the promotion came rather as a surprise to his many friends in Baltimore. In addition to his film exchange experience, Mr. Weems has also had a general theatrical training.

For some time he was a member of prominent musical comedy companies. After leaving the stage he entered the motion picture business as an entertainer when songs and novelty features were popular in the various motion picture theatres. Later he became manager of several of the most prominent film theatres, after which he entered the exchange end of the business.

Mr. Weems succeeds E. G. Evans, who has been manager of the Baltimore Mutual office for some time. Mr. Evans will go to Washington to take charge of the Washington office for the Mutual. B. C. Cunningham of the Washington office becomes manager for the Philadelphia branch of the Artcraft Film Company, which concern will have charge of the distribution of the Mary Pickford films in that territory.

KIRK, MANAGER OF PATHE IN OMAHA, KEEPS HIS EAR TO THE GROUND WHILE ON TRIP

Manager J. E. Kirk, of the Pathe Exchange in Omaha, has just returned from his vacation. He traveled over the Omaha territory, or, rather, a part of it, and heard optimistic reports of prosperity on every hand. Here are a few of the facts he brought back with him:

M. G. Gaylord has bought the Iris theatre at Hamburg, Iowa, and is remodeling it with the expectation of accommodating the best fall and winter business he ever enjoyed.

Jack Howard, manager of the Auditorium theatre at Norfolk, has just returned from a vacation trip to the Minnesota lakes.

H. E. Swan, widely known proprietor of the Empress, Kearney, declares it was the best summer's business he ever had. "We just kept plugging with the advertising," he declared.

Manager Epley, of the Edison theatre, Hastings, told Manager Kirk that, although there are three houses in Hastings, not a week passed all summer but that he made money. Mr. Brock is building a big new theatre at Hastings, to be known as The Brock. And these are just a few of the things he heard.

DOW HANDLES "CIVILIZATION" FOR NEW ENGLAND

The New England Film Distributors, Inc., are already booking the Thos. H. Ince spectacle, "Civilization," through the New England territory.

Offices have been opened at 15 State street, Boston, with David E. Dow in charge. Mr. Dow was with the "Birth of a Nation" forces in the same territory all last season.

Here's a Horse-sense Talk from Nelson, Manager of General in Washington, D. C., to the Man Running a Five-Cent Theatre

"STRANGE as it may seem, the re-issue of the General Film Company are proving very popular," commented Mr. Nelson, manager of the Washington, D. C., General Film exchange. "Whether this is due to favorite players, interesting plots, or short subjects, it is not easy to determine. But they certainly are booking readily, anyway."

When asked what he thought of the small theatre, or the houses using a program service of short subjects at five cents admission, Mr. Nelson had this to say:

"Yes, there is a place and a serviceable place for such a picture house. In fact, such a house is very necessary to a community, whether it be in the residential or downtown section of the big city or in the small town. The main point for such an exhibitor to remember is to remain in his place, to remain a five cent house with a short subject program.

"Just as soon as such an exhibitor attempts to compete with the theatre of costly long features, he is going to walk to his own doom. These features are as much out of his sphere as the long plays are out of the sphere of the vaudeville circuit. It is when the exhibitor tries to give his show and the feature man's show as well, that he makes his greatest mistake. In the first place he can't afford it for a five-cent admission, and when he begins to lose money he blames his competitor. It is his own fault.

"If you mean to run a five-cent house, keep within that scope. Let the public know what standard you maintain and it will know where to go when it wants your pictures, and the people will want your short subject pictures, too. They make a relaxation from the serious, long features. They give opportunity for the whole family to go to the same show, say for a quarter when only two could attend the feature house. They also serve to pass away a short time which would otherwise be spent in waiting in some department store waiting room and one scarcely misses the nickel, which might otherwise have gone in soda. And best of all, the exhibitor is running a paying business.

"Yes, I emphatically announce that there is a place and a necessary place for the five-cent house. In all but its program, this house must be on a par with the big feature theatre, asking from ten to twenty-five cents. It must have just as good ventilation, be just as commodious, offer just as courteous treatment to its patrons and be just as artistic and attractive. Its music must be just as good, musically, as the five-piece orchestra. And here is where the manager of the five-cent house makes another big mistake. He often thinks he can outdue his higher-priced neighbor by having an orchestra. Usually a pianist who knows how to follow the pictures is ample; more instruments only detract from the pleasure of the picture by being too loud for the size of the house. Then his music bill becomes too high for him and again he blames his neighbor, and again it is his own fault.

"The fact that our one, two and three reelers are always kept busy, is ample proof that small subjects are popular," concluded Mr. Nelson.

Kingsley, Top Man for Fox Business in August, Goes from Detroit to Cincinnati; Thompson Succeeds Him

NEIL KINGSLEY, for the past seven months manager of the Detroit office of the Fox Film Corporation, the man who stood first among branch managers for increased business during August, has been transferred to Cincinnati, where he will have charge of the Fox office in that city, handling Southern Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, and West Virginia. He succeeds A. M. Muller at Cincinnati, the oldest branch manager with the Fox Company, who has resigned. The change became effective on Monday, September 4.

Dow Thompson, who has been associated for the past year with the Fox office at Detroit succeeds Mr. Kingsley in the automobile city.

Harvey Day, formerly of the Montreal and Pittsburgh offices for the Fox Film Corporation, has been appointed manager of the Cleveland office to succeed Joe Williams, who has returned to newspaper work.

The above changes were officially confirmed by Paul Mooney, district manager of the Fox Film Corporation, who was in Detroit last week.

Mr. Kingsley, by the way, was formerly assistant manager of the Cincinnati office for Fox.

R. Von der Goltz is now traveling in Michigan for the International Film Service. He has been doing similar work for Pathe since the first of the year, and was previously assistant manager of the Majestic theatre, Detroit.

SUPREME FEATURE WINS SUIT AGAINST OMAHA COMPANY

The Supreme Feature Film Company, of Minneapolis, recently won a suit in the United States Court at Omaha, against the Fine Arts Feature Film Company, of Omaha, J. A. Schlank, president. The Minneapolis firm was awarded an injunction forbidding the Omaha firm from distributing the feature, "Where Are Your Children?" which the court believed to be an infringement upon the rights of "Where Are My Children?" produced by the Minneapolis concern.

OMAHA PREPARED FOR STRIKE

Omaha exchange men met last week and had automobile routes and other plans all laid to circumvent the threatened strike tie-up. For several days chaos reigned about the exchange offices, as exhibitors frantically sought assurances that their supply of films would be forthcoming.

WILLIS, PIONEER FILM MAN, IS WESTERN REPRESENTATIVE FOR UNICORN

J. E. Willis, who has been engaged in the moving picture industry since its inception, has been appointed Western representative of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation.

Mr. Willis was with the General Film Company as manager of its offices and as special representative and division manager for several years; with the Mutual Film Corporation in a similar capacity, and with George Kleine prior to the formation of the General Film Company. He severs his connection with the Triangle Film Corporation to become affiliated with the Unicorn.

More than twelve years devoted to catering to the needs of exhibitors in various parts of the country has given Mr. Willis a keen insight into the conditions surrounding a picture house, and he will give his personal attention to the Unicorn exhibitors and assist them in every possible manner.

In accepting the important post assigned to him by Unicorn, Mr. Willis said: "I thoroughly believe the Unicorn ideas and the Unicorn plan are necessary to every exhibitor in the United States."

PITTSBURGH EXCHANGEMEN CLAIM DISCRIMINATION

Pittsburg exchangemen are investigating what they consider discrimination regarding the eastern and western parts of the State of Pennsylvania by the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors. It all happened by the censors passing with a few eliminations "Back of the Shadows."

This was passed by the censors and is being shown in the eastern part of the state, but when the Kriterion Company sent their copy for the Pittsburgh district to the censors the copy was turned down flat as it is said they figured the picture came under the classification of drug pictures.

If the facts are as stated above it is a clear case of discrimination or else the ruling has been made since the censors put their stamp of approval on the picture from Philadelphia.

DENNISON IS MADE PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE OF STEELE

D. Leo Dennison, for the past year manager of the Detroit office of the Famous Players Film Service, Inc., has just been promoted. He has been appointed personal representative to James Steele, secretary and treasurer of the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Dennison was also connected with the Pittsburgh office of the company and for two years was with the George Kleine Company. He was also in the exhibiting end of the business, having served as resident manager of the Temple theatre for the Harry Davis Enterprises.

The host of friends of Mr. Dennison in Pittsburgh are glad to see this young man advance in the motion picture business, and they are all of one accord in wishing him all kinds of good luck in his new position.

Exchanges in Des Moines Were Ready with an Effective Plan to Make Film Deliveries If the Railroad Strike Had Become a Fact

THE exchanges in Des Moines, Iowa, proved themselves wide-awake and on the job, when, on Friday before the Monday the big strike was called for, they held a meeting in the office of the Laemmle Film Service and discussed plans as to handling the situation that did not come. Their plan was to place some one person from one of the exchanges in the more important towns in the state.

This person would represent the Des Moines exchanges and would handle all film in the town, making arrangements to forward it to its destination, if possible. The system was one of rotating the films. The exchange men are glad that the strike did not come. There is little doubt but what they would have suffered, but by their plan they had reduced this possibility as much as possible.

Manager D. B. Lederman of the Laemmle Film Service, accompanied by a bookkeeper out of his office, recently went to Davenport, Iowa, where he installed a new auditing system in the office of the Central Film Exchange of that city. Mr. Lederman took this opportunity of visiting some of his most prominent exhibitors. He gets out of his office but very few times and endeavors to make the most of any of his trips.

Before leaving, Mr. Lederman finished supervising some improvements in his own office. The poster department was doubled. New racks, shelves and partitions were built in so that the capacity of the place was much increased. No additional floor space was taken on.

Stanley Mayer, who has been connected during the summer months with the Oklahoma City office of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, is back in his old territory in Iowa, traveling for the Des Moines Film and Supply Company. As this company handles Paramount releases, Mayer is right at home. He was there for the past year with the same company. Mayer has been given his old territory.

The second new traveler to be added to the Des Moines office of the Metro Film Service in the past month is H. B. Burgess. Mr. Burgess has been representing the Universal for the past three years and is very familiar with his territory, which will be Iowa. Mr. Burgess will handle serials and features for Metro.

After a layoff of several weeks, W. R. Shea, formerly with the Laemmle Film Service, is again handling Universal pictures. Mr. Shea has been with Universal for some time, but recently severed connections. He was gone but two weeks, and is again handling the Universal line.

The Laemmle Film Service, Des Moines, Iowa, distributors of the Universal releases, has installed a publicity department. Charles Stevenson, a former newspaper man of Kansas City, has been placed in charge of this department. Stevenson was on the sport desk of the Kansas City Journal for several winters, and has acted as correspondent for the Kansas City Star. The last five months he has been representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS in Kansas City, as well as acting in the same capacity for several other trade magazines.

He attended the University of Missouri for a short time, taking a special course in advertising. All of the publicity work, features, novelties, and circular letters sent out of the Des Moines office will be under his direction, while he will be assistant editor of the Universal Weekly, the paper issued by the Des Moines company. It is the plan of D. B. Lederman, manager of the Des Moines office, to extend the publicity and advertising service to all exhibitors in the territory. It was after noticing the excellent work of George H. Bowles, publicity head of the Kansas City Universal office, that Mr. Lederman introduced this feature into his exchange.

Film News From Foreign Parts

American Films Set Standard for French Producers

Paris, Aug. 25.

WE have had an opportunity to witness for the first time in Paris an official film called: "The Battle of the Somme," shown to a distinguished audience at a Parisian theatre.

A great war picture, it is a fine peace picture and is worth a thousand Hague conferences.

In America they have tried to show what war is like in their great pictures, "The Birth of a Nation" and "An American's Home," but their most vivid imagination is but a faint shadow of the blackness of war as it is waged to-day. No two pictures from across the Atlantic ever made a greater impression upon the people on this side, but they are theatrical, good as they are, from start to finish. "The Battle of the Somme," a phase of Armageddon, is Armageddon as our soldiers know it, not as we in our understanding of the printed word imagine it to be.

This picture will be released for public exhibition shortly.

Never before in the history of films, has a picture made such an impression on the general public, like the one shown two weeks ago called "Cheat," Famous Players.

Mr. Lordier, chief editor of the Cinema, proprietor of the well-known French film "Les Films Français," who has been fighting against the importation of foreign films to France for over two years, has published an open letter to the tradespeople strongly recommending everybody to go and see this picture and to take a lesson in what can be done in the way of perfection.

Until now the universally known La Belle Otero absolutely refused to be filmed. Mr. Fred of the Fred Monopole has been lucky to persuade the great Spanish diva to be filmed.

She is leaving shortly with a large company for Spain where many scenes are to be taken.

Another of the Famous Players films, "Molly," with Mary Pickford, for the first time in France, was shown last week and made a very favorable impression on the large audience. There is no doubt that French film makers will have to improve their pictures from present indications.

M. Albert Lambert, a well-known member of the Comedie-Francaise company, has met with an accident while performing in a kinema play, which was being filmed in one of the courtyards of the palace at Fontainebleau. His part required him to gallop across the scene on a richly caparisoned charger. His steed, however, entered into the spirit of the play with excessive enthusiasm. It bolted as soon as he got into the saddle, swerved, and threw him. He remounted, but was again unhorsed without ceremony, dislocating his shoulder in the fall.

DAILY PRESS CLIPS SCREEN STORIES FROM THE "NEWS"

Some idea of the value of Motion Picture News as a medium through which press stories may be secured in the newspaper can be secured from a recent Sunday issue of the Milwaukee Journal. Three big feature stories on one page of the photoplay section had been clipped from the "News." One dealt with Kathlyn Williams joining the Morosco-Pallas company, another with the departure of King Baggot from the Universal, and the third told of Mary Pickford heading her own company.

These three stories occupied nearly a column of space. A number of the Milwaukee papers receive copies of the "News" weekly, and all clip from it freely.

Christie, Danish Actor, Is Here to Study Studio "Wrinkles"

Star of "Blind Justice," Set for Private Showing Soon, Is High Authority on Technical Points of Picture Making and Is Preparing Book on Screen

BENJAMIN CHRISTIE, the Danish actor who is seen in the stellar role of "Blind Justice," a seven-reel production of the Dansk Biograf Company of Copenhagen, Denmark, a feature which he wrote and directed as well as played in, is probably as high an authority on the technical points of picture-making as any in the world. While in this country in the interests of "Blind Justice," he is making a profound study of American producing, with a view to embodying it in a work he is writing which embraces the methods and criticizes the faults, and sets forth the merits, of studios in England, Germany, France, Austria, Italy, Russia—yes, and Japan.

Benjamin J. Christie

So far the assiduous Mr. Christie has visited two or three studios every day and viewed from four to five features as an average. Next to Russia, where the censorship rule is simple, consisting of "Go as far as you like," Mr. Christie says he is inclined to think American censorship singularly fair and openminded.

In a few days the date of the forthcoming private showing of "Blind Justice" at a Broadway theatre will be announced. At the same time something will be revealed of its subject matter.

GREECE WANTS FILMS

Motion Picture News is in receipt of the following letter:

77 Kolocotroni street,
Piroeus, Greece.

Gentlemen:

Before the European war the motion picture films were chiefly imported here from Europe, but now this is impossible owing to the small amount of the production there. Consequently there is a great demand for films here, and therefore I will be obliged to you if you will kindly give me names and addresses of some leading firms of America which are engaged in the production of films.

Films Entering Minneapolis Must Be Registered with the Mayor and Mild Form of Censorship Is Instituted

WHILE censorship has never been a serious question in Minneapolis, nevertheless it has been hanging over the industry in the Northwest like a small threatening cloud. Whether it would disappear altogether or develop into large proportions was keenly watched by all interested in the business.

A meeting, at which Mayor Nye of Minneapolis, participated, was held by the film men of all the prominent exchanges and the social, religious and charitable organizations of the city on Friday, September 1, at the Athletic Club, at a noon-day luncheon.

In view of the fact that censorial condition could not be avoided, it perhaps developed into one of the broadest and sanest situations that has arisen in the motion picture industry at any of its vital stations in this country.

The outcome of this gathering, as it will be taken into consideration by the Mayor, is that, in the main, censorship will rest with the Mayor. The censor board will be able to demand eliminations, but the Mayor alone will have the power to condemn. Assisting him in his work of determining the merits or demerits of the photoplays will be volunteers of the various organizations present at the meeting. There will be no official permits issued; there will be no fees; neither will each and every picture be viewed by the censors.

Every picture brought into Minneapolis, will have to be registered with the Mayor's office, with the name of the picture and the name of the manufacturer. The trade papers will be consulted by the Mayor and his assistants as to whether the picture contains anything objectionable; they will also rely to some extent on the national board of review's opinion. Their chief source of information, however, will be the reviews of the trade papers.

Should anything be found that is seemingly not what it should be in the reports of the trade papers concerning a picture, the firm or person handling that photoplay in Minneapolis will be requested to submit it to a board at which the owner of the picture or his representative will be allowed and permitted to offer any explanations that he might see fit.

The theatres will also have to submit a list of the pictures they intend showing in advance of exhibition date.

Briefly the entire situation is that of a registration of all pictures with the Mayor.

It was not only acknowledged by many of the film men, but enthusiastically stated by them, that the meeting was one of the broadest and most reasonable gatherings that could be imagined. It progressed most harmoniously and resulted in anything but a hardship being imposed on the industry in Minneapolis. There was no tendency shown at any time by either faction to open up hostilities that could not help but offend someone, but there was a united action and a reasonable and broad view assumed by everyone present. It was one of that kind of gatherings where each faction left saying what wonderful people the other faction contained.

Among those present, representing the film industry were, Mr. Bradford of Triangle; Mr. Davis of Metro; Mr. Friedman of Pathe; Mr. Robinson of Fox; Mr. Stafford of Mutual; Mr. Knapp of General; Mr. Barnett, Sr., of Famous Players. The censor board was represented by Mayor Nye; Miss Michaels of the Jewish Women's Club; Representative of the Drama League; Mr. Nelson of the Censor Board; the secretary of the Censor Board, and others.

OMAHA EXHIBITORS SEE WAY OUT OF CENSOR BURDEN

With the censorship agitation spreading with renewed venom over the country, the Omaha exhibitors thought it best to renew their heretofore satisfactory relations with the powers that, if any were contemplated, would be most likely to try to impose a censorship. Accordingly an exhibitor, representative of the others, called upon Karl Schrieber, superintendent of the Welfare Board, established by the city government to have supervision over entertainments of all sorts. He came away with this assurance:

"I depend upon the exhibitors, who have proved dependable in the past, to be their own censors. So long as they adhere to their principle of showing none of the objectionable pictures, and satisfying in every way the thousands to whom their choice of pictures are shown every day, just so long as they do that, this board will take no action that in any way will cause the exhibitors inconvenience."

With a thriving Screen Club, and a consequent thriving friendship and mutual understanding between the film men, the following out of Mr. Schrieber's plan seems a simple matter, the exhibitors say.

COURT DECIDES AGAINST IMPORTATION OF WILLARD-JOHNSON FIGHT PICTURES

Justice Augustus N. Hand in the Federal Court has held illegal the attempt of the Pantomimic Corporation to get the Willard-Johnson fight pictures into this country by rephotographing them across the Canadian border.

In denying a motion of the film owners to prevent Collector of the Port Malone from seizing the pictures, the court upheld the constitutionality of the film exclusion act, prohibiting the importation of representations of pugilistic exhibitions.

In ruling on the technical points involved in the rephotographic process, the court said:

"It is clear the negative New York film could not be taken except by the agency of forces set in motion in Canada. The argument that this process did not amount to bringing a picture representation from Canada to the United States while difficult to answer is, I think, met by the unquestionable fact that a pictorial image, though not a physical object, which was in Canada is now in New York, and that its presence in New York is caused by the travelling of rays of light starting in Canada and passing through a lens on the New York side, which gives a record or pictorial representation there.

"This, while not an introduction of the film, I hold was an introduction of the pictorial representation, in spite of the fact that the pictorial representation was not at all times visible and did not exist at the particular moment when the rays of light crossed the border."

AGITATION IS STARTED IN BIRMINGHAM TO CLOSE THEATRES ON SUNDAY

A campaign has been started in Birmingham, Ala., to close up the moving picture shows on Sunday. A petition asking for a referendum has been filed with the city commission. The city commission will have to pass one way or the other on the petition asking for the closing of the theatres on Sunday at the meeting to be held on August 29.

It is believed the ordinance will not be adopted and that an election will be called for some time in September to decide the question. Mention of the referendum was made on August 28, in some of the churches, the move having the endorsement of the Pastors' union. The election and the campaign preceding it promises to stir up Birmingham as never before.

Censor in Sacramento, Cal., Makes Move to Prevent Exhibitors from Bringing Test Cases to the Courts

THE enforcement of the moving picture censorship ordinance at Sacramento, Cal., has taken a new angle and exhibitors are not even being given the opportunity of testing cases of this kind in the courts. The new tactics of Censor E. J. Carraghar in handling cases where exhibitors do not agree with his ideas in regard to censoring films were placed in operation recently, and proved eminently successful in preventing the showing of "Twilight Sleep" at the T. & D. theatre.

The censor had previously refused to allow this film to be presented at Sacramento, reaching his decision without viewing the film, and the Turner & Dahnken Circuit was planning to make a test of the matter to ascertain just how extensive the authority of this official might be. It was intended to run the film, submit to arrest, if necessary, and have the matter brought before the court and tried in the usual manner. Evidently realizing that his case would be a weak one before the law, the censor adopted a new plan of procedure. When the attempt was made to run the film, M. Naify, house manager, and E. Bruce Johnson, of San Francisco, were promptly placed under arrest. When taken before the authorities no ground could be found upon which to hold them and they were released.

A meeting of the city commission was called and upon the recommendation of the city censor a resolution was drafted by the city attorney revoking the license of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit. Information to this effect reached Manager Naify, and he at once repaired to the meeting place of the commission and waved the white flag of truce, giving his word that no attempt would be made to show this subject while he was the active manager of the house.

It was realized that it would be extremely poor policy to attempt to show the picture with such an ultimatum as this hanging fire, for the commission was determined to follow the course outlined by the official censor, regardless of the merits of the case. Some legal action may be taken at a later date to restrain the commission from revoking the license of a theatre merely because a case is pending in court, but definite steps have not been taken toward this end.

Supervisors in San Francisco Agree to Abolish Censor Body, Following Efforts of Film Exchange Board of Trade

ONE of the most important decisions, from the standpoint of the motion picture industry, that has been made by the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco, the law-making body of the city, was made on the afternoon of August 31, when the police committee of the board, by a vote of two to one, decided to recommend the abolition of the present moving picture censorship ordinance and as the board is depending entirely upon the finding of the committee this step will be consummated at the next meeting.

This action of the police committee marks the end of a fight that moving picture men, exchange interests and exhibitors alike, have been making for months, led by the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco. In the future moving picture houses will be classed the same as the so-called legitimate theatres and their owners will no longer be compelled to secure licenses from the police commission.

At the final hearing on the question several women, representing women's organizations, were present and advanced the arguments that they have adhered to all along, insisting that the present board of censorship be maintained and that its membership be increased to at least nine. In answer to this Attorney John T. Williams read reports from nine of the largest women's organizations in the East, showing that they were opposed to censorship and pointed out that conditions were no different in San Francisco than elsewhere.

The two members of the police committee who favored the abolition of the present ordinance made short talks and each expressed the opinion that it was unfair to pick out moving pictures alone as a subject for censorship, and that the theatres showing these should have no more regulation than the regular theatres. Both stated that it would be a comparatively easy matter to pass a new ordinance creating a board of censorship any time that improper pictures were being shown. They pointed out that the present board has had nothing to do for a long time, and further that it has been declared an illegal body with no real authority, making its abolishment largely a matter of form.

FIRE WARDEN IN KANSAS CITY INSPECTS PICTURE THEATRES

Fire Warden J. E. Marvin, with his secretary, William H. Gardner, have started a careful inspection of the moving picture theatres in Kansas City. Among those already inspected are some which must be repaired immediately or must be closed. In one theatre the seats were not fastened to the floor.

However, Mr. Gardner said that there were a few which came up to all expectations. Red exit signs, galvanized sheet iron booths, and sufficient fire escapes are some of the features in the rule pertaining to theatres in the city ordinance. The fire warden's headquarters are at 1020 Central street.

EXHIBITORS LOSE SUNDAY OPENING VOTE IN WICHITA, KANSAS

The referendum of the question of Sunday moving pictures in Wichita, Kansas, resulted adversely to Sunday pictures. The vote was 10,680, and the majority against Sunday opening was 1,678. The churches became very active in the campaign.

PENNSYLVANIA PARALYSIS BAN AFFECTS THEATRES

The order of the Pennsylvania state health officers in barring children from the motion-picture theatres in the state and especially in the Pittsburgh district has worked a hardship on the theatres. Many of the theatres have had their receipts cut more than twenty-five per cent., and it is said that a number of the small theatres in the suburban sections have been compelled to close their doors as a result.

That the order is a good one is expressed by the fact that the members of the Pittsburgh Screen Club at its last meeting voted to assist the police and health officers in every way in regard to the enforcement of the new order, and that it has not been broken in one single instance is due to the fact that the management has been most watchful.

Many of the exhibitors have been to see their managers of the exchanges where they get their films, and have been permitted to cut down the number of reels which they have been getting as a result of the decrease in patronage.

A committee of members of the Screen Club have been to see Dr. Burns of the health department in regard to the length of time that the theatres will have to bar the children, and as yet nothing definite has been done regarding the date when children will be admitted to the theatres.

METRO BUILDS LIGHTHOUSE FOR "THE DAWN OF LOVE"

The only lighthouse ever made and erected within doors was that set up in the Metro-Rolfe studio for Mabel Taliaferro's five act Metro play, "The Dawn of Love." Portland Headlight, off Port William, Maine, was reproduced in every detail for the purposes of the picture.

The original lighthouse was used for most of the scenes of the photoplay, but the government would not permit the actual switching on and off of the light necessary for the action of the play, and so Metro was compelled to incur the expense of reproducing the lighthouse in its entirety for the sake of a few scenes.

Edward J. Shulter, technical director, made the plans, and the lighthouse was built, the exact size of Portland Headlight, by Patrick J. Carey with five assistants. Working in shifts, day and night, they finished it in six days.

A wealth of dramatic action takes place in the lighthouse. Miss Taliaferro and the "villain" of the play, Martin J. Faust, struggle all the way from the lamphouse down the spiral staircase, when Miss Taliaferro is picked up and carried out of the house bodily. The little star herself manipulates the great light.

One-Reel Pictographs to Contain Substance of 5-Reeler

Instead of Using Two Subjects and a Couple of Fillers, Company Intends to Take Four "Articles" and Prune Them Until Only the "Heart" Remains

PARAMOUNT Pictographs have squared away for the fall and winter months. The Pictograph editors have been engaged during the summer in choosing features from the great masses of material which they have on hand. Instead of using two meaty subjects and a couple of fillers, the editors have laid out a program which takes four "articles," each capable of making one-reel, pruned them until nothing but the heart of the material is left and crammed them into the necessary 1,000 foot lengths. That means there is no room for a single filler of any sort. The result of this policy is that a large editorial and mechanical staff is necessary.

Among the subjects which have been prepared for the ensuing campaign are articles depicting what the chiefs of the nation do for a living. The series is entitled, "What I am Trying to Do," and deals with the work of the cabinet officers, who are, in reality, the heads of big corporations doing greater work than any private industrial corporations; also with the work of the private chiefs of the United States, who in their palatial offices direct all the affairs of the business world.

The people of the United States do not play enough, and as a result our business men and their wives are not able to live through such long and useful careers as they might, did they know how to take a day off. With this in mind, Paramount Pictographs' editorial staff has arranged to show the people of America things that are not known about the fun of outdoor play. Pictures have been made from an entirely different angle, which not only show people how to play, but actually, while they are in the theatre, make them participate in the game or sport.

One of the member of the editorial staff discovered early in the summer a method of presenting lost motion which is more graphic than any which has ever been shown by the camera to the public. A housewife in the kitchen spends most of her energy rushing back and forth between the sink and the ice box, the stove and the cupboard. It is possible to eliminate two-thirds of this lost motion. The boy sliding down hill does not do it efficiently. The tailor cutting cloth wastes most of his effort; the mechanics in Henry Ford's plant do not work as efficiently as they might. By the use of various exclusive devices these things have been illustrated in a graphic way so as to make entertaining pictures which will at the same time give the audience something to carry home.

The cover of future Paramount Pictographs will be in color as it is on all printed magazines. The latest tricks of the motion picture photographer will be shown. Psychological puzzles and guessing games will be used. One of the recent ones, which was put out almost started a riot in a small theatre. The audience began to guess out loud and the theatre manager came running in to find out who was making the disturbance. When he saw that the audience was having the time of its life, he found that for the first time in his career he was glad of the noise. After the reel had been run the enthusiastic patrons clapped until he was forced to forego the use of a scenic he had planned to use, and re-run the Pictograph.

Paramount exchanges are reporting a great increase of business throughout the country, and are predicting that the coming months will prove Pictographs among the most profitable single reel, issued in the industry.

Bluebird Plans Many Releases for October

First Three Weeks Are Provided for in the Announcement of the Company, But a Number Are Ready and Only Lack Dates Set for Distribution

WHILE only the first three weeks of October are provided for in the Bluebird announcement of releases for that month, there are on hand many more subjects ready for release, awaiting only the selection of the exact date for their distribution.

"The Social Buccaneer," produced through an arrangement with the Bobbs Merrill Company, publishers for Frederick S. Isham, will be the October 16 release; "Wanted—A Home," October 2, and "The Chalice of Sorrow," October 9, having been previously announced. J. Warren Kerrigan and Louise Lovely, who have been individual stars under Bluebird's earlier policy, will interpret the leading roles in "The Social Buccaneer," and Harry Carter, Hayward Mack, Marc Roberts and Maude George will be prominent in the supporting company.

"Wanted—A Home" is a Lois Weber production, marking the third appearance of Mary MacLaren as a screen star. The heroine of "Shoes" and "Saving the Family Name" has a different role than any she has previously essayed, and the success she attained in earlier Bluebirds gives the exhibitor an opportunity to capitalize on the combination of Miss MacLaren, Miss Weber and Phillips Smalley.

Cleo Madison will be introduced to the Bluebird series as a leading lady in "The Chalice of Sorrow," directed by Rex Ingram, who also directed the feature. Mr. Ingram contributed two earlier Bluebirds in "The Great Problem" and "Broken Fetters," pictures that exhibitors will recall as immensely popular with the "fans." Wedgewood Nowell and Charles Cummings will be principals in Miss Madison's support.

"EVIL" NOT TO BE RELEASED IN SERIAL FORM

The Twelfth, Thirteenth, and Fourteenth chapters of Pathe's "The Grip of Evil" will not be released in serial form, but the story will continue to its climax, combining the interest-compelling elements of a serial with the strong points of a series.

Constantly Increasing Public Patronage Proves the Soundness of The BLUEBIRD Policy of "The Play's The Thing."

BLUEBIRD Photoplays (inc)

THEATRE Owners and Managers who have been convinced that the BLUEBIRD policy of "The Play's The Thing," is right, are daily receiving ample evidence of the soundness of that policy by increased profits and prestige.

In affairs that concern the public, the final test of success of any proposition always remains with the people, thus the growing patronage at theatres where BLUEBIRDS are being exhibited, proves conclusively that BLUEBIRD Photoplays constitute that high character of photoplay entertainment the people desire.

Thru the medium of half-page ads in the Saturday Evening Post, BLUEBIRD Photoplays have already become the topic of conversation in millions of the better class of American Homes.

You can identify your Theatre as the discriminating play house in your territory by exhibiting BLUEBIRD Photoplays.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

A GREAT DARK SECRET WILL NEVER BE KNOWN

The great railroad strike threatened.

For days the magnates and the labor leaders had been in conference.

Their horns were locked in stubborn opposition.

The film business was threatened with serious difficulties. Meetings were being held to discuss ways and means of getting the film shipped.

And Ike Schlank, vice-president and general manager of the Unicorn, laughed.

For Ike is an old-time showman, and is used to surmounting difficulties.

When the theatre burned up, or the tent blew down, Ike always managed to give an exhibition.

So that the mere matter of a railroad strike did not make him weep or grind his teeth in anguish, as other heads of big organizations were doing. In fact, some of them were doing a powerful lot of worrying.

Ike rolled up his sleeves; and he sat down at the telephone; and he called up branch office managers on the long distance and held conversations in which they were sworn to secrecy. Far into the night he labored. And strange people were ushered into his private office for whispered consultations.

Tired, red-eyed and weary, he smiled a broad smile. For he had made arrangements to have Unicorn film delivered to the theatres all over the country.

His scheme was novel and unique.

And the strike was settled. And everything went on as before.

And the great scheme was not put in operation.

And nobody will ever know what it was, for he made everybody swear to keep it secret.

And he won't tell himself.

E. H. Allen, David Hartford and Raymond B. Vest, business manager, superintendent of production and director, respectively, at the Ince Studios, were hosts of the "Uplifters," an inner organization of members of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, the largest and most exclusive of the film city. The dinner was given in the private dining-rooms at the club, and the guests included many of the most prominent professional and business men. A hit of the evening was a menu made up of studio terms, and contained the pictures of the hosts in caricature. The meaning of the various terms as applied on the menu are as follows: Hypo en glass (martini cocktail), A Red Tint (Lobster Canape), Fogged Dissolve (Mulligatawney Soup), Forest en miniature (Celery), Static Berries (Olives), Deep Sea Negative (Filet of Sole), Wah Haw a la Edwards (a mqsterious dish made by Director Edwards' housekeeper and deriving its name from the combined initials of the three hosts), Assembled Cut-Outs (Beefsteak Pie), Fill 'em Favorites (Lima Beans), Sun Spots (Brown Potatoes), Interiors (Lettuce Hearts), Flare Torches and Smoke Pots (Cigars and Cigarettes). Ince players, including Jack Gilbert, Charles Ray and others, contributed "home talent" cabaret numbers, in addition to a big program put on by professionals.

In showing "The Misleading Lady," the Essanay feature, or any other high class film, exhibitors in America may profit by the example of Alex Gilchrist, who operates a theatre called the Eglinton Electric in Glasgow, Scotland. Mr. Gilchrist decided to bar all deadheads and issue no free passes when showing "The Misleading Lady," so he had a large lobby stand lettered to read

IN ANCIENT DAYS
No passes were given.
Don't take my word for it—Search the Scriptures.
Thou shalt not pass.—Numb. xv, 18.
Suffer not a man to pass.—Judges iii, 28.
The wicked shall no more pass.—Nahum i, 15.
None shall pass—Isaiah xxxiv, 10.
This generation shall not pass.—Mark xiii, 30.
Though they roar, yet they cannot pass.—Jer. v, 22.
He paid the fare thereof and went within.—Jonah i, 3.
——TO THE EGLINTON ELECTRIC.

The genus deadhead not yet being extinct, the stunt practiced by this canny Scot may be worthy of imitation.

The Boy Scouts of America, in a circular letter to motion picture manufacturers, desire that any scenario dealing in any way with the Boy Scout Movement be first submitted to them for approval before the scenario is finally approved or before the picture is produced.

The letter calls attention to a law passed by Congress last June giving the organization the exclusive right to the use of the words Boy Scouts, and other descriptive words and phrases used in conjunction with their program including the uniform, badges, insignia, and other devices.

This request has been made necessary by the embarrassment which the organization has undergone as a result of the misunderstanding of the public of its aims and ideals caused by the exhibition of several motion pictures, which in referring to the Boy Scouts showed boys engaged in militaristic maneuvers, sham battles, and representations of actual battle scenes.

The Bayside Bugle

"Bigger, Busier, Brighter Bell Ave." Bayside, L. I., September 16, 1916.

—Bill Johnston and wife have just returned to our midst from a sojourn in the Adirondacks.

—Cliff Bruce is on the sick list; he has been under the doctor's care, but that has not stopped his working in the movies up at Fordham.

—Vicky Searl, of here, got her name and picture in all the papers last wk/, but they called her "Veta" Saerl, which isn't her real name, but is all right for the movies.

—Quite a party was down to Exhibitor Corn's theatre, last Fri. eve., to see "The Witch" a picture produced by Frank Powell of here, and acted by Nance O'Neil, also of here.

—Exhibitor Corn is quite up-to-date these days. He has booked "The Eternal City" for next Wed. eve., this being, in our humble estimation the best moving picture we have ever seen, and proving that Polly Frederick is some actress.

—Arthur Hoops was Stutzing down Bell ave., Sun. aft.

—Riley Hatch is working in the city, he acting a part in one of the new plays, not a moving picture this time.

—Jack Clymer has moved to a new house over in Bradish ave.

—Dick Schayer is about the same as usual.

—Geo. Irving has finished work on the picture he has been directing for several weeks past, and is now ready to begin on another. Just one picture after another as Geo. finds it.

—Del. Henderson, the w. k. Famous Players director, has been out this way getting artistic scenes for his latest Paramount production. Owen Moore and Margaret Courtot were with him.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

H. G. Segal, secretary and general manager of the Globe Feature Film Corporation, Boston, Mass., and his associates Edward D. Levinson and Benjamin J. Shoolman, have been at the McAlpin Hotel since last Sunday, and are spending the entire week reviewing pictures to be handled by them in the New England States.

Frank B. Donovan, director, Milo Pictures Corporation, of Baltimore, made the trip from Baltimore to this city via auto and will stay a week or two on business and engage some new popular stars for the company.

Herbert Van Loan, Universal, has gone away on a week's vacation.

Capt. Stanley Huntley Lewis, who has been recruiting for the U. S. Army via "Battle Cry of Peace" last season and "Fall of a Nation" this season, arrived in New York Friday and left Saturday for Ohio, where he will handle publicity for "The Fall of a Nation."

Many Pittsburgh exchangemen are in the city preparing for their fall and winter business in films. Mayer Silverman is in the city to close several big deals for films this week.

John McAleer of the Independent Exchange of Pittsburgh is here on account of the serious illness of his wife, but before returning to Pittsburgh will close several film deals.

James B. Clark is also in the city. He will close several contracts for feature films before returning to Pittsburgh. Mr. Clark is head of the Metro company in the Pittsburgh section.

CHARLES P. STALLINGS JOINS METRO AS ASSISTANT TO HENRY OTTO

The latest acquisition to the forces of the Metro-Yorke Hollywood studio is Charles P. Stallings, who will act in the capacity of assistant to Henry Otto, director of the Harold Lockwood-May Allison feature productions.

Before joining the Metro-Yorke studio Stallings was affiliated with the American Company in Santa Barbara, during the time Harold Lockwood, May Allison and Henry Otto were making Mutual pictures. He then joined the Morosco studio in Los Angeles as technical director, where he remained until his present engagement.

Kleine Exchange, St. Louis, Will Move Into Larger Quarters—Alterations at Pathe Exchange

Joe Levy, manager of the Fox exchange, 3632 Olive street, has returned from an extended trip throughout the territory surrounding St. Louis. Levy made many splendid contracts during his trip, and he says the Fox features have become very popular in the smaller towns and cities in the district.

The Pathe Exchange, 3210 Locust street, is undergoing extensive alterations and rearrangements in order to enlarge the office and desk space, and to accommodate the increased business and output of the Pathe Company. C. S. Edwards, manager, claims that the St. Louis office stands first among all the Pathe exchanges, in the matter of booking the "Who's Guilty?" and the "Grip of Evil" series. Mr. Edwards' most energetic salesman, F. W. Gebhardt, who has done more business during June, July and August than any other Pathe salesman in the United States, is largely responsible for the serial bookings, and he is planning to even beat his own record for the fall and winter trade.

The George Kleine Feature Exchange, under the management of I. P. Rosenberg, in the Empress Theatre Building, on Olive street, near Grand avenue, will soon have to move into larger quarters, on account of the Kleine offices taking charge of the Selig, Essanay and Edison feature productions in the near future. Mr. Rosenberg says that the move will be made within the next few weeks. He claims that the theatres showing "Gloria's Romance" are increasing in number every day.

F. J. Fegan, who has been put in charge of the new L. C. F. exchange at 3311 Olive street, St. Louis, is extremely well pleased at the amount of business already done with the "Yellow Menace" through his office, and the many good prospects for future bookings on the serial and other films handled by the exchange, since it opened. Mr. Fegan is having a large fireproof vault built for the storing of films, and is having other conveniences for the rapid distribution of films put in the office.

Harry F. Grelle, traveling representative of the Supreme Feature Film Company, who placed the "Where Are My Children?" film in St. Louis, and surrounding cities, has left for Kansas City, but promises to return next month to open an office in St. Louis for his company, then he will go to Omaha, Nebraska, where he will immediately open another distributing office.

Detroit Enacts Ordinances for Better Sanitation, Ventilation and Heating in Motion Picture Theatres

DETROIT motion picture exhibitors were summoned to appear before the Ordinance Committee of the Common Council on Tuesday, September 5, and when they presented themselves, they learned the members of the committee were out of the city. The hearing was relative to the proposed Board of Health ordinance that regulates the heating, sanitation and ventilation of theatres. The ordinance is not a drastic one, and with a few modifications there is no doubt but that it will pass.

It does not effect theatres already constructed, but applies only to new houses which may be erected after the ordinance is approved. Some of the clauses of the ordinance are not properly understood, and it is for the purpose of explaining them fully that the hearing will take place. W. F. Walker, Detroit, sanitary engineer, is responsible for the ordinance, and he has been asked to be in attendance when the next hearing takes place so that exhibitors can ask questions and have the doubtful clauses explained to them.

Most of the requirements are sensible ones, and about which no exhibitor could find fault. The purpose of the ordinance is simply to bring about better sanitation, better ventilation, better heating and greater cleanliness. And in this respect exhibitors will gladly co-operate. In the construction of new theatres, most of which nowadays are large ones, it is an easy matter to accede to the requirements of the Board of Health, the building code and the plumbing code.

Old Units Still Identified with the General Film

Selig, Essanay, Vitagraph, Kalem, Knickerbocker and Biograph Pictures Are Scheduled for Release on Its Fall and Winter Program—Kleine and Edison Interests to Remain the Same as Before—Exact Make-up of Arrangements to Be Announced in a Few Days

GENERAL Film Company has made preliminary announcement regarding its fall and winter program, in which it is stated there will be no change in its releasing plans; that Selig, Essanay, Lubin, Vitagraph, Kalem, Knickerbocker, and Biograph will be identified as heretofore with General Film Service. The George Kleine and Thomas A. Edison interests with the General Film Company remain identically the same as before. The exact make-up of the program will be announced in a few days.

This means that the General Film Company feels that the best interests of exhibitors will be conserved in pursuing the same lines laid down when the present administration under the direction of President George Kleine took hold of the reins. The same predominating policy of presenting distinguished stars in short length pictures will prevail. This announcement coming from General Film Company's advertising and publicity department will no doubt be welcomed by exhibitors. The preliminary statement by General Film Company concludes with this paragraph:

"General Film Company purposes to do in the future what it has in the past—lead. It blazed the way, maintained always a commanding position, served faithfully the best interests of exhibitors, won the public's confidence, produced pictures abreast of the times and made it possible for exhibitors to earn liberally in proportion to their investment. A program of variety, quality and consistency such as is furnished by General Film Service is responsible in a large degree for the unquestioned popularity of moving pictures to-day, and there is no reason to change this policy.

"Noted stars in short length productions will be a feature of our fall and winter program. Exhibitors everywhere have indorsed this policy by subscribing to General Film Service and business with the General Film Company has increased steadily. It is a permanent growth due to the excellence of our service. There will be improvements, of course, in the service where improvement is deemed essential and exhibitors will always have the assurance that they are offering a program unequalled by competitors.

"There will be no change in General Film Company's numerous branches covering the United States and Canada and our customers will be served with the same promptness and regularity that has always characterized General Film Service. There will be no waste of printer's ink in conducting a campaign based on braggadocio, but an effective comprehensive advertising campaign calculated to best serve exhibitors has been decided upon. We pledge that General Film Service will be best and we will keep our pledge."

General Serves 6,000 Theatres

According to Albert E. Smith, of Vitagraph, a director of the General Film Company, more than 6,000 theatres are now using General Film Service. This is claimed by the company to be a greater number than is served by any other distributor.

Announcement of the make-up of the program for the week September 18-23, following so closely the preliminary statement of General Film Company with regard to its fall and winter program, indicates that General Film Company is still pinning its faith to the policy of presenting its most distinguished stars in pictures of short length.

A Selig three-part drama, "Into the Northland," featuring Fritzi Brunette and Harry Lonsdale will be the first picture shown. "A Perfect Day," a Vitagraph single reel comedy will follow and then will come the Selig-Tribune picturizing the big events of the world. This picture will be followed by a Biograph production (reissue), in which the old time favorites Mabel Normand and Robert Harron have the titular roles in "The Unveiling."

The program for the following day will get an excellent start when the Essanay two-part drama, "When Justice Won," is thrown on the screen. Marguerite Clayton and Sydney Ainsworth are starred in this drama. Kalem will then present "The Mud Cure," a one-reel comedy with "Ham" and "Budd," assisted by Ethel Teare as funmakers.

The Essanay Canimated Nooz Pictorial and scenic reel will lead the following day. This will be followed by "The Honeymoon Car," a Vim one-reel comedy presenting Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby. The big event for that day appears to be "The Gun Runners," the seventh episode of "The Girl From 'Frisco," featuring Marin Sais and True Boardman, Kalem stars. Henry Walthall and Blanche Sweet will be seen next in a Biograph three-part drama, "Strongheart."

A Selig-Tribune chapter and a Vim one-act comedy, "Love and Duth," presenting "Plump" and "Runt" will make up the program for the following day.

The Rest of the Program

A Knickerbocker Star Feature in three parts, "A Lesson From Life," with Frank Mayo and Marie Empress in the titular roles will be the first picture shown Friday. Then will follow a Kalem one-reel comedy, "That Pesky Parrot," in which Ivy Close will have the spot light. This will be followed by a Vitagraph one-part comedy with Hughie Mack in the star role, "Land Scamps and Strategy." The day's program will conclude with a Vim one-reel comedy "The Man Hunters" of the "Pokes and Jabbs Series."

For the final day of the week an Essanay three-act drama, "The Way of Patience," presenting Nell Craig and Ernest Maupain, will blaze the way. This will be followed by an episode of the "Hazards of Helen" series by Kalem, in which Helen Gibson has scored success, "Defying Death." To Tom Mix, the Selig cowboy actor, is given the distinction of closing the week's program in a one-act drama, "A Corner in Water." Selig is specializing lately in Western dramas in which Mix fits particularly well.

An analysis of General Film Service program for that week shows that exhibitors are offered nineteen reels of drama, seven of comedy, two of the Selig-Tribune News Service and a split reel of travel and caricature.

VIM COMEDY PUT ON AT STRAND

During the week of September 4, The Strand theatre, New York City, ran the latest Harry Myers-Rosemary Theby Vim Comedy, "The Chalk Line," as an added feature on their program.

So well were the stars liked and so strongly was the comedy appreciated by the Strand audiences that more of these features will be seen there in the near future.

The story tells of a young couple who are greatly taken up with their first baby.

Through an error, the secretary to the husband, slips a love letter intended for one of the other men in the office into hubby's coat pocket.

Wifie discovers it and trouble results. She draws a chalk line in the center of the house and tells him to stay on his side. In similar fashion the servant and the baby are divided by a line—his half, and her half.

After a day of trouble she discovers her mistake and goes to hubby's side of the house to beg his pardon, but the little one who just learned to crawl has erased the chalk line in his efforts to go from one side to the other.

NEXT FARRAR-LASKY FILM IS "JEANNE D'ARC"

Geraldine Farrar, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has left California for New York, arriving here the latter part of the week to prepare for her concert and opera seasons. Miss Farrar has been acting for the movies all summer in California.

It was announced yesterday by Jesse L. Lasky that the film was a version of the story of Joan of Arc, with the prima donna in the role of the French heroine. Miss Farrar has always been interested in the life of the saint, and she assisted Cecil B. De Mille and Jeanie McPherson, who made the screen version, materially in their work. Several scenic cities were built on a ranch near Los Angeles for backgrounds, and several thousand men and horses were used in some of the scenes. The picture will be exhibited on Broadway this fall.

DESMOND SIGNS TWO-YEAR CONTRACT

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, Sept. 9.

Business Manager E. H. Allen of the Ince studios last week made a two-year contract with William Desmond to play exclusively in Ince pictures. Desmond made his screen debut in support of Billie Burke in "Peggy," and one of his latest releases is "Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A." Information received at the studio is to the effect that Desmond is growing in popularity with every new subject. Desmond is now playing in a detective drama by C. Gardiner Sullivan, and much of the action is laid about a lodge in the Adirondack Mountains.

A setting requiring an entire stage was used last week, and is spoken of by the studio force as the handsomest ever constructed at an Ince plant, and reflects great credit upon Robert Brunton, art director. Margaret Thompson plays the leading role opposite Desmond in this picture.

Bessie Barriscale is next to take the part of an American newspaper woman—a sob sister—and has been in the company of local writers considerable recently to learn correct mannerisms. Charles Miller will be in charge of the filming, and important parts will be taken by Jack Gilbert, Charles K. French, Jerome Storm and others.

CLEVELAND ART MUSEUM NEGOTIATES WITH KLEINE FOR FEATURES

Special to Motion Picture News.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 9.

Cleveland's Art Museum in Wade Park is contemplating the exhibition of a number of big film spectacles of the historical and educational type and probably will announce its program this month, according to information from George Kleine.

Already negotiations are pending between the museum directors and Harry Reavey. Cleveland representative of George Kleine, for the showing of six multi-reel Kleine-Cines features. According to present plans, the museum will book each feature for two or three showings in connection with the educational work it contemplates, and it is possible that the showing will be accompanied by talks from authorities on the periods and nations shown on the screen.

The features figuring in the pending negotiations are "Antony and Cleopatra," eight reels; "Spartacus," seven reels; "Othello," six reels; "The Merchant of Venice," six reels; "Julius Ceasar," nine reels, and "The Last Days of Pompeii," seven reels.

BESSIE BARRISCALE RETURNS TO TRIANGLE IN "PLAIN JANE"

Bessie Barriscale returns to the Triangle program October 1 in "Plain Jane," a comedy drama from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan.

The picture serves to introduce Miss Barriscale in a decidedly new and different role than she has been seen in for many months, as the little maid of all work in the cheap boarding house.

Seconding all of Miss Barriscale's efforts is Charles Ray.

"No Drama Is Stronger Than Its Story"—Brenon

"To Them Who Have Given the Drama Serious Consideration, This Statement Is a Truism, and Yet Many Picture Makers Fail to Realize It," He says

"NO drama is stronger than its story, whether that drama be presented upon the spoken stage or upon the screen."

This vital principle is laid down by Herbert Brenon, creator of "A Daughter of the Gods," and a long line of previous successes, who is now directing a cinema production of "War Brides," with Nazimova as the star.

"To them who have given the drama serious consideration, this statement is a truism," Mr. Brenon continues, "and yet when we see the vast sums of money expended by moving picture corporations in endeavors to provide a substitute for a story, it appears that there are many who have not considered the matter. When a producer invites you to the theatre to witness a play performed upon the screen, and instead of giving you a dramatic story presents a few episodes, embellished by a number of big scenes or spectacles, which have little or nothing to do with the story, it is as if a friend invited you to dinner, and then presented you with a handsome fountain pen. You may like the pen and be glad to have it, but you go away unsatisfied and hungry for the anticipated dinner.

"Similarly when the virtuosity of a famous star is employed to cover up the lack of plot, or, as occurs frequently, when the plot is deliberately abandoned to make opportunities for the star to shine. Given suitable plays, the real stars will shine.

"In producing 'War Brides' there will be no halting of the story for either of these purposes. There will be no battle scenes, though war is the background of the story. There will be no pause for the exploitation of the star, for Nazimova is an artist who makes every situation register. She does not require artificially constructed 'big scenes' because she impresses even when her acting is most repressed. This production will be substantial proof of my belief in the pre-eminence of the story, and the necessity of finding the artists who have the ability to interpret that story with simple strength."

Mutual Sells British Rights to Chaplins for $500,000

Bolton Closes Deal with Freuler for Walker, London, Who Will Market Pictures in Asiatic and African Territory as Well as in England

THE British rights on the Mutual-Chaplin comedies have been sold for $500,000. The announcement was made in an interview given a representative of Motion Picture News by Fred Bolton, of London, at the Hotel Walcott in New York, who conducted the negotiations with John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, and the Lone Star Corporation which makes the Chaplin comedies.

Mr. Bolton is a director of Walker's Mutual Chaplins, Ltd., Film D'Art of American and Canada, Ltd., and Anglo-Italian Films. Walker's Mutual-Chaplins is the name of the newly-formed concern which will handle the new Chaplin comedies, taking its name from J. D. Walker, known as the premiere renter of the United Kingdom.

The deal was put through by Mr. Bolton prior to his departure from London. The Chaplin deal is said to establish a record for single film transactions in the United Kingdom. The rights thus acquired by Walker's Mutual-Chaplins, Ltd., covers the series beginning with "The Floorwalker" and continuing through the twelve two-part comedies to be made under the Mutual's $670,000 contract with Charles Chaplin. The Walker territorial rights under the deal just closed take in the British Isles, India, Burma, Ceylon, Siam and Africa.

As is customary in the Walker ventures, Anglo-Italian Films of Reynold's House, Great Newport street, London, will handle exploitation in all territories outside of the United Kingdom.

TRADE SHOWING OF "JIMMIE DALE" SET FOR MIDDLE OF SEPTEMBER

The first trade showing of the Monmouth Film Corporation's forthcoming series "Jimmie Dale, alias the Grey Seal," will be held in New York about the middle of September. Under the direction of Harry McRae Webster the episodes are now being produced at the company's Glendale studios, and will be ready for release October 16.

The publicity and advertising for this series will be distributed in 500 daily newspapers throughout the United States. The feature parts will be taken by E. K. Lincoln, Edna Hunter, Paul Panzer, and Doris Mitchell. Each episode will be two reels in length, although it is said that they will contain material enough for a five-reel feature.

UNITY COLORED INSERTS FOR "YELLOW MENACE" CAUSE COMMENT BY MAN WHO KNOWS GOOD ADVERTISING

The double page advertisement of tehe Unity Sales Corporation, which has appeared in the last two issues of Motion Picture News, announcing the release on Labor Day of "The Yellow Menace," the new serial produced by the Serial Film Corporation, has caused much favorable comment.

H. Bradley Fish of the United Film Service of Denver, in writing to the Unity Corporation, said among other things: "It is the classiest piece of work that has ever been sent out between the two covers of a moving picture trade journal. To say that it has made an impression on exhibitors is putting it mildly. It is distinctly in a class by itself. The departure from the ordinary advertising by V-L-S-E was noticeably a good move and you have gone them one better."

The printing for this advertisement, which was a series of colored reproductions of scenes from the serial on a background of black and gold, was done by the Commercial Press.

"THE COMBAT," ANNOUNCED FOR OCTOBER 9, SET FOR RELEASE ON SEPTEMBER 18

Vitagraph's Blue Ribbon Feature to be released on September 18, will feature Anita Stewart.

In "The Combat," Miss Stewart is said to be seen at her best, under the direction of Ralph Ince. Supporting Miss Stewart are: John Robertson, Richard Turner, Virginia Norden and Winthrop Mendell. The scenario is by Edward J. Montayne.

In the opening scenes of "The Combat," Miss Stewart is ideally cast as the young society girl, who has everything her heart can wish for. After a loveless marriage contracted to save her mother from extreme poverty, the man she had secretly married, whom she believed dead, returns to reproach her for her lack of faith.

Then comes the climax—the man she loves is accused of a crime of which he is innocent. Her husband the attorney tries by hook or crook to fasten the crime upon the real husband. He fails. Anita Stewart as the unknowing wife of two men, breaks under the strain. When she recovers the sky is once more clear, and she is in the arms of the man to whom she first gave her heart.

WAGE SCALE FOR OPERATORS IN CLEVELAND IS STILL UNDER DISCUSSION

Special to Motion Picture News.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 9.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League held its regular meeting last week at the League rooms in the Republic Building. After the regular business of the League was disposed of, Ernest Schwartz, chairman of the committee appointed to deal with the Operators' Union in connection with the wage scale increase, made his report. The committee met with the Grievance Committee of the Operators' Union last Friday, but no agreement as to wage scale was reached. The League Committee then filed a demand for arbitration, which so far has not been recognized by the union.

Instead of dealing with the League as a body, the union has been approaching individual exhibitors with a demand that they sign a card indorsing the $3.25 weekly increase from $17.50 to $20.75. The exhibitors are holding out in the hopes that the League Committee may effect some compromise in the demand which they all feel is unjust at this time.

NEWSPAPER LIFE IS SHOWN IN "RUMMY"

The story of "Rummy," the new Triangle-Fine Arts drama, starring Wilfred Lucas, concerns a young girl, who is the victim of unfortunate circumstances and an ambitious newspaper reporter, who by chance meets the girl in a police court. Newspaper life is introduced in this Triangle release by Director Paul Powell, who before entering the portals of filmdom, was himself a newspaper man.

With Lucas in "Rummy," appear Pauline Starke, W. H. Brown, James O'Shea, A. D. Sears, Harry Fisher, Clyde Hopkins, Ralph Lewis, Tom Wilson and F. A. Turner.

MANY KEYSTONES FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The Triangle-Keystone studios are promising a number of immediate releases, among them being "She Loved a Sailor," said to have been one of the most difficult water pieces ever staged on the Mack Sennett lot; "The Winning Punch," the famous fight story featuring Slim Summerville and Bobbie Dunn, "His Lying Heart," Ford Sterling's new comedy; "Her Feathered Nest," with Charles Murray, Louise Fazenda and Harry Booker; "The Houseboat," with Chester Conklin, and "A Scoundrel's Reward."

FIVE-REEL FEATURE ON UNICORN PROGRAM FROM NORBIG

The Norbig Film Company, of Los Angeles, has produced a five-reel feature for the Unicorn, entitled "The Path of Darkness," in which Margaret Darwin is featured.

Scene from "The Path of Darkness" (Unicorn—Five Reels)

Miss Darwin plays the part of a blind girl, a pathetic role, with whom two men, an artist and a broker, fall in love.

This five-reel subject is the first of a series which the Unicorn Company announces will be released in the fall.

"YELLOW MENACE" MUSIC SCORE IS PREPARED BY BERG

The United Sales Corporation, distributors of "The Yellow Menace," has prepared and delivered to its exchanges the country over a booklet of twenty-four pages, containing a complete musical score cleverly worked out for an orchestra of any size in any theatre. This work is the effort of S. M. Berg.

Mr. Berg prepared his outline for the music after seeing the entire serial production, and, as might be imagined, has followed closely the Oriental nature of the picture.

This is said to be the first time that a complete musical score has been offered to exhibitors to cover a serial picture.

OLESON IS BACK AS BOOKER FOR GENERAL IN OMAHA

E. Oleson is back as booker for the General Film branch at Omaha, after trying it on the road for several months. "Oleson was a decided success on the road," said Assistant Manager Flynn, "but he is also one of the best bookers I ever saw. He has had years of experience in that part of the business. A booker, I have found, is born, not made, and when you get a good one such as Oleson, it is best to keep him right on the job." The "front end" of the General Exchange force has been switched about considerably of late, until highly efficient help has been put to work.

ROSCOE ARBUCKLE IS SOMETIMES SERIOUS

Roscoe Arbuckle, Keystone's fat man, is known far and wide as a comedian, although very few are acquainted with the infinite work that this artist accomplishes to show himself and his company off to the greatest advantage. Mr. Arbuckle is not only the author of all his own scenarios, the originator of all the tricks sprung in his pictures, but he is also the editor, cutter and assembler of his film as well.

Roscoe Arbuckle of Keystone-Triangle Forces Assembling His Own Film

The accompanying picture shows Mr. Arbuckle as few ever see him—serious. It was taken out in the laboratory at the Triangle-Keystone studio in Fort Lee, N. J., long after the rest of the company had completed the day's work. It is at that time that Mr. Arbuckle starts to review and eliminate superfluous negative.

There are few actor-director-writer film editor's in the business. Mr. Arbuckle refuses to entrust the business of assembling to any other than himself. In only that manner can he be assured of absolute satisfaction. Fort Lee will shortly say goodby to Mr. Arbuckle, as within a week's time it is more than likely that he and his company will pull up stakes and travel back to the Triangle-Keystone plant in Los Angeles.

VITAGRAPH'S PRESS DEPARTMENT, UNDER V. B. JOHNSON, MOVES UPTOWN

One of the first moves that the Greater Vitagraph has made since it was authoritatively announced that the V-L-S-E absorption was a fact, was to get its press department under the same roof with its advertising and sales forces. This department, which is under the direction of Victor B. Johnson, now occupies quarters on the rear of the sixth floor of 1600 Broadway. Adjoining is the room occupied by E. Lanning Masters, who will be responsible for the advertising policy of the Greater Vitagraph.

Christie Brothers, Back Home, Explain Policy to Players

Pioneer Makers of Clean Comedies Call Members of Company Together and Tell What the Plans Are for Future Releases and Organization Pledges Support

Las Angeles, Sept. 9.

AL. E. CHRISTIE, producer of Christie Comedies, arrived at the coast during the past week after spending a short time in the east where he perfected arrangements for the release of his comedies, through independent film exchanges in all parts of the country.

Immediately upon his arrival at the Hollywood studios of the Christie Film Company, Mr. Christie and his brother Charles, who had accompanied him to the east, called the members of the producing company together and explained the policy adopted for future release, and every member of the organization pledged the pioneer maker of clean comedies their support in the making of future releases that will add to the name of Christie. The few weeks Mr. Christie has not been producing, he retained all members of his staff on full salary to insure that he woudl have as competent players for future comedies as had appeared in those made by him in the past.

Mr. Christie before explaining his plans, told all members that he would release them from their contracts in the event they did not feel it would be just to them because of his change of policy, but each and every one hooted at the idea of leaving his direction, and the anvil chorus sang the "We Will Follow" song.

During the absence of Al Christie in the east, preparations for better and greater comedies were carried on at the studio, the plant being materially enlarged during his absence, and a large quantity of new material purchased. The scene docks have been enlarged because of the addition of a big variety of stock settings, and ground recently leased for additional stage space has been used partially for a new property room, made necessary because of the purchase of furniture and other props.

"Just now I am more enthusiastic," Mr. Christie said, "regarding the new policy of our company, for on the way to Los Angeles from New York I had opportunity to talk with the leading independent exchange men of several of the nation's largest cities. The few minutes that I had with each man was sufficient to convince me that our future releases will be in demand. I assured every exchange man the comedies from this company will be as good, or better, than anything we have turned out under our own name, or those that I made while with the Universal which were released under the Nestor brand. We have the assurance of several of the best known comedy writers that we will not want for good stories, for we have contracted to pay a higher price than most companies for comedies."

Mr. Christie began the filming of a two reel comedy two days after his return, and at the same time, Horace Davey, who has been affiliated with Christie as assistant and director for the past five years, began making another. The players so well known in all subjects made by these directors in the past, are appearing in the comedies now in production, and include Billie Rhodes, Betty Compson, Ethel Lynn, Stella Adams, Neal Burns, Eddie Barry, Harry Hamm, George Leary, Harry Rattenberry, George French, and others.

Mr. Johnson, who will be remembered for his aggressive publicity work with the Warners and who later was a member of the advertising staff of the Morning Telegraph, will keep one of his staff at the plant to supervise the taking of genuine news pictures. He will also, it is stated, greatly augment his syndicate service to the newspapers of the country and co-operate with Mr. Masters in getting out a wide variety or exhibitor helps.

"A PERFECT DAY" FROM "V" ON SEPTEMBER 18

On September 18, Vitagraph will release "A Perfect Day," a comedy produced at the Bayshore studio, through the General Film Service. It will be followed on Friday, September 22 with another one of the Hughie Mack comedies, written by Lawrence Somon and Graham Baker, and produced by Somon. Hughie's latest effort to reduce his avoirdupois is entitled "Sand, Scamps and Strategy."

Of course due credit must be given to Hughie's confederates; to Patsy de Forest, and to the willowy Eddie Dunn, and to the agile Frank Brule.

In "Sand, Scamps and Strategy," by the time they get through spinning the villain on the old mill wheel, and blowing him and his rascally gang to smithereens by setting fire to the powder house, they are fit subjects for a sanitarium.

ELLIS PARKER BUTLER'S "PHILO GUBB" SERIES TO BE MADE IN JACKSONVILLE BY STEINER

Ellis Parker Butler's "Philo Gubb" series will be made in Jacksonville, Fla., under the direction of Pierce Kingsley, who is picturizing and also producing this series of comedy dramas to be released in two-reel subjects.

Edwin Stevens, who plays the role of the villainous Demon, Ali Singh, in "The Yellow Menace" serial, now being released by the Unity Sales Corporation, is starring in this new "Philo Gubb" series as Philo Gubb, the amateur detective.

In the home studio of the Serial Film Company, at Cliffside, N. J., Mr. Steiner has outlined for himself a busy fall and winter. He will begin work next week on a seven-reel picture, containing some new and interesting phases of the present vice crusades. And, in addition, he is busily arranging all final details for the productions of a serial to follow "The Yellow Menace."

"Intolerance" Reaches Apex of Motion Picture Art

The Latest Production of D. W. Griffith, Presented at the Liberty Theatre, New York, for the First Time on Tuesday, September 5, Is the Biggest and Most Wonderful Achievement in Photodrama Yet Offered for Public Approbation

"INTOLERANCE," the latest production of D. W. Griffith, was presented at the Liberty theatre, New York, for the first time on Tuesday, Sept. 5. It is without a doubt the biggest and most startling picture ever offered to the public; or better still it is the biggest achievement ever presented in any theatrical line.

Back of the ages of the film business; ages which, though really only a few short years ago, are considered too long since for the remembrance of correct dates, David Wark Griffith produced a two reel subject for Biograph entitled "The Reformers." In this subject the director first gave evidence of his true feelings toward the intolerance of social reformers; their dissatisfaction with the progress of society in broader paths than they themselves were able to comprehend. It was a program release and probably not one in a thousand that know the name of Griffith now, knew it then. The germ of "The Reformers," nourished and encouraged for approximately five years, now blossoms forth in new investments in the shape of Mr. Griffith's gigantic and stupendous work, "Intolerance."

"We give this anecdote merely to allow the reader to grasp the full history of "Intolerance." Mr. Griffith spent over three years in its production and probably three times that number in turning over the ideas incorporated in it. We do not intend to imply that "The Reformers" and "Intolerance" are at all alike; they resemble one another only in basic principles. The one was the birth of an idea; the other the idea at full growth—a growth that few ideas attain.

To drive home his belief that Intolerance is the greatest of the world's evils, Mr. Griffith has recourse to the picturization of four parallel themes, one ancient, one sacred, one medieval and one modern. These themes have little in common save for their one underlying idea of the wickedness of Intolerance. In the ancient theme he depicts the fall of Babylon, the collapse of one of the greatest civilizations of the world through Intolerance. In the medieval, the destruction of the kingdom of France at the time of Charles IX is pictured—again the cause is Intolerance. In the sacred theme he shows the developments which led to the crucifixion of the Christ through Intolerance. In the modern wherein a more personal story is presented, the intolerance of a band of social uplifters who seek notoriety through misplaced philanthropy and who in so doing bring disaster upon a group of toilers, is portrayed.

Themes Not Developed in Historical Sequence

Instead of relating these four themes in historical sequence, Mr. Griffith treats first one, then another, then one and then another; developing each to a certain climax, then switching to the next, developing that to a point of equal force, then concentrating his attentions on the next. His ability to concentrate on each theme by turns enables the audience to follow each trend of action without confusion. Following this method of procedure he comes to his closing reels with four climaxes of equal power on his hands and the intensity of each individual denouement is multiplied threefold by the intensity of the parallel themes. A new method of story telling this—another innovation from Mr. Griffith—one that only he could employ successfully.

Of the individual themes presented, that of the Babylonian period is the most spectacular and thrilling, that of the birth of Christianity the most impressive, that of the massacre in France the most tragic and that of the present time the most humanly interesting. "Intolerance" truly appeals to every human emotion —none are neglected.

The siege of Babylon by Cyrus and his hosts with Belshazzar, the ruler and his followers holding the walls beggars description. The furious fighting is so realistic that the onlooker is positively awe-struck. We thought the height of realism in motion picture warfare had been reached but "Intolerance" shatters all previous records. The battling soldiers on the siege towers and the tremendous walls of the city, the hurling of the firebrands, the pounding of the rams and the charges of the chariots and the ranks and ranks of soldiers pouring upon the city—these are shown in flashes of the siege and there is much more besides. Of the settings themselves in these scenes much could be written. The banquet hall which seems to reach a mile in length and the walls, broad enough to accommodate two chariots are the most expansive. Historical research conducted by Mr. Griffith's underworkers has assured correctness in detail in all these settings. They alone are fully worth the price of admission to the picture.

With the massacre of the Huguenots, ordered by Charles IX at the instigation of his mother, Catherine de Medici, there is more of the spectacular and the extreme realistic. The story of the Christ is dwelt on least of all. We see Him at the wedding feast turning water into wine, we see Him with the Magdalene and with the little children. The crucifixion is arranged in double exposure, a method of production that gives the right touch of spiritualism with which such a scene should be endowed.

Sympathetic Touches Skillfully Introduced

But even with such spectacular effects as the fall of Babylon and the medieval massacre, Mr. Griffith has not forgotten his personal touches. He of all others knows the value of introducing an intimate thread amidst the spectacular. He knows that a flash of a baby on the screen will always appeal and he knows what delight an audience gets from the sight of animals.

AN APPEAL TO MANKIND

It is his ability to combine the spectacular with the intimate that makes him great—or at least that is part of his greatness.

And so with the Babylonian theme he introduces the story of a mountain girl who worships the sight of Belshazzar. From the time she is introduced ranting in the marriage market until she dies defending her king, she is a constant center of interest. Constance Talmadge in this role creates an exceedingly sprightly and attractive character. The romance of Brown Eyes and her lover so rudely ended by the massacre furnishes the personal interest for the medieval story, while of course the story of the Christ needs nothing personal other than itself.

Modern Story is Mostly Personal

The modern story is mostly all personal. In it Mr. Griffith takes a hard whack at the mercenary reformists. His plot concerns a young husband and wife who suffer unjustly at their hands, but who come through all right finally after a governor's pardon, thrillingly procured, has arrived just in time to save the husband from the gallows. This part of the picture, too, offers the greatest opportunities for acting, which are most ably taken care of. Mae Marsh as the wife surpassed her wonderful success in "The Birth of a Nation" and Robert Harron as the husband has seldom appeared to such good advantage.

Other principals who appear in one part of the production or another are Josephine Crowell, Frank Bennet, (excellent as Charles IX), Marjorie Wilson, Elmer Clifton, Eugene Palette, Alfred Paget, Seena Owen, Miriam Cooper, Walter Long and Lillian Gish. We find such well known members of the Griffith players as Bessie Love, Howard Gaye, George Walsh, Lloyd Ingraham, Max Davidson, Edward Dillon, George Siegmann and others doing parts that amount to little more than bits.

In a production of such magnitude as "Intolerance," the camera work is almost a consideration second to none. It can only be added here that G. W. Bitzer and his staff have done flawless work in every instance. Some of the tints procured on the panoramas are little short of marvellous.

It is natural that many will ask themselves and others whether "Intolerance" is as good as "The Birth of a Nation." From every standpoint it is, certainly. But as for comparisons one might as well attempt to compare the light shed by the moon with that of the sun—the two have an entirely different effect.

The New Griffith

By Henry MacMahon

EDITOR'S NOTE.—As Special Press Representative for "The Birth of a Nation," with the magazines of the country as his field, Mr. MacMahon for the first six months of the career of that picture, was in intimate touch with Mr. Griffith and had many unusual opportunities to become acquainted with his views, and his dramatic and artistic ideals. The appreciation which Mr. MacMahon gives below of the great successor to "The Birth of a Nation" is entirely spontaneous and should be of more than passing interest to those who have followed the achievements of David W. Griffith and are looking forward to his future performances.

BOLD Columbus sailing into uncharted seas, D. W. Griffith discovered another artistic continent. This is the continent, the Atlantis, the Prospero's isle of pure fantasy or imaginative revery, and Griffith transmogrified has become a sort of Maeterlinck of the film.

Such is the impression I derived from "Intolerance." To borrow Griffith's own foreword, "events are not set forth in their historical sequence or according to accepted forms of dramatic construction, but as they might flash across a mind seeking to parallel the life of the different ages." What is this but poetizing? How can it be called Drama at all? The comparison is with the vers libre of Walt Whitman or the encyclopaedic range of Goethe in "Wilhelm Meister" or the searching of heaven and earth in Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird" rather than with any standard work of the legitimate or film stage.

The new Griffith has enlarged the boundaries of film technique. He pictures four streams of action in four different periods of history which his facile mind classifies as striking examples of Intolerance. He might have given us, first, the Fall of Babylon; next, the persecution of the Man of Sorrows; third in order, the massacre of the Huguenots; fourth and last, modern Society's persecution of members of the "submerged tenth." But, instead, the poet's eye pictures these four actions traveling side by side and presented by brief alternating scenes of each. The almost incredible feat of carrying four stories along in parallel columns, so to speak, is successfuly performed.

Undeniably the most successful of the stories are the Fall of Babylon and the modern tale formerly yclept "The Mother and the Law." Babylon's Fall proves to be a marvelous concept in which the commonly accepted version of Belshazzar's feast and the handwriting on the wall is knocked into a cocked hat and the monarch is represented as a patriotic prince trying to restrain the bigotry of the priests. The one great acting reputation achieved in this part of the film is won by Constance Talmadge in the role of the Mountain Girl. The wild, untamed thing from the Susiana hills, her every breath virginal fire, proves one of Griffith's happiest conceptions which is realized with beautiful artistic surety by the young actress.

Renascence of Babylonian Art in Everyday Life

Of the spectacle itself the director gave us some foretaste in "Judith of Bethulia." But that earlier splendid spectacle was circumscribed by bonds of limited expense and time pressure. With unlimited resource and unrivaled scholarly aid at his command, the producer has fashioned in the Fall of Babylon a classic for all time. I venture the prediction that it will be frequently reissued as a separate film, and certainly it will immediately start a renascence of Babylonian art in dress, architecture, sculpture and house decoration.

The Christ story is somewhat too fragmentary, and the Huguenot and Catherine de Medici story I found somewhat muddy. I am inclined to think that these stories suffered from the author's kind intent to avoid giving offense. Yet both are illustrated by many noble pictures and scenes, among which I may mention the miracle of turning water into wine, the view of Calvary, Admiral Coligny and his family, and the horrific emotions of the female Medici, the instigator of St. Bartholomew's massacre. The work of Joseph Henaberry as Coligny and Josephine Crowell as Catherine de Medici recalled their fine performances in "The Birth of a Nation."

"The Mother and the Law" side of the spectacle may be characterized as social-problem melodrama. It starts with an attack on "social uplifters" and points out the dangers of entrusting the regeneration of Society to moral and educational Foundations established by billionaire wealth. A plea is made for the workingman's beerdrinking and dancing parties. The evils of capitalism are shown in the grinding down of the toilers on the one hand and the trying to uplift them by intolerant reform at the same time. Intolerance drives the poor into the arms of the criminal classes, rifles the infant from the bosom of its mother, finds the wrong victim for punishment and all but hangs on the gallows the friendless type of ex-gangster who is "framed" by his former associates. The tale is told with the customary Griffith melodramatic skill, intermingled with the charming domestic touches for which he is famous, and it is carried in the most convincing fashion by Mae Marsh as the girl-wife-mother and Robert Harron as the young ex-gangster husband. The attempted assault, the murder, the accusation, the chase and the final rescue at the eleventh hour are indeed familiar components of Griffith melodramas, yet the acting is so human and so unexaggerated and the great climaxes are so magnificently handled that the spectator does not crave novelty of plot.

A Poet's Far-Flung Vision Characterizes the Picture

After all, the real novelty of "Intolerance" is the poet's far-flung vision of the force of bigotry operating in many ages and climes, stifling the freedom of the human spirit and crushing ideality beneath the iron weight of its machine-made patterns.

It is a vision that could not have been realized except through the medium of the film. By thus expressing it Griffith has enlarged the boundaries of Art. You could not convey "Intolerance" by novel, play, poem, painting or sculpture. Only the living, moving picture can embody the seer's revery of the past and the present.

And, aside from questions of technique, particularly at this time is such a monumental production valuable. By its awful lessons it inculates a spirit of tolerance and bigmindedness which should be the hope of the New Era. "Live and let live!" must be the slogan of Humankind, else it will sink permanently into the barbarism marked by a frequent recurrence of internecine wars and deadly economic struggles.

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"THE STORM"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

IT is difficult in speaking of "The Storm," to restrain the enthusiastic praise which the production deserves. As pictures go it is almost without a flaw in its essential characteristics.

To begin with, it has a delightfully human little story worked out and treated in a delightful and beautiful manner. It carries the impression of reality throughout, there is not the slightest tinge of the theatric, and in addition it has been staged in scenically beautiful surroundings in a manner that calls forth the most enthusiastic praise.

It is a picture that any audience would enjoy, a picture that carries the direct human appeal, with just enough plot to make it interesting, and enough suspense to keep it entertaining. Every person connected with its production from Beatrice De Mille, the author, Frank Reicher, the director, Blanche Sweet, the star, and Theodore Roberts in a strong supporting character part, deserves the utmost commendation for the able manner in which they have carried out their respective parts.

Though not new by any manner of means the story has been treated in such a clean wholesome manner that it possesses the semblance of originality. Natalie Rayden is the daughter of an absent minded hermit professor, who has brought her up in the wilderness as a beautiful innocent child of nature. Sheldon Avery, a theological student, is camping with his friend, Robert Fielding in the vicinity of her home. Fielding is called away to the city and Avery meets the young girl. Caught by a storm they are marooned on an island in the lake overnight. The next morning Avery offers to marry her but Natalie forces him to admit that he does not love her, and she says that it would be a greater sin to marry. Avery leaves for the city.

"That Young Man Suggested a Contribution to Your Fresh Air Camp"

The next year Fielding returns to the lake and meets and falls in love with Natalie. She returns his affection and he calls upon Avery to marry them. At the crucial point in the ceremony Natalie stops it and confesses. Fielding after a moment of intense passion takes her in his arms and tells Avery to proceed with the service.

Much of the simple delight of the story is lost in the telling in a few words, for it is the manner in which it has been treated that brings out its great charm. Much of this charm is also due to the clever work of Blanche Sweet in the stellar role and of Theodore Roberts as the absent minded professor. The latter is particularly good, never for a moment forgetting the character he is simulating, and incorporating deft little touches of humor that are not only delightful in themselves but serve to lighten the somewhat heavier moments. It is one of the finest pieces of character work that we have ever seen on the screen.

A review of the picture would not be complete without mention of the clever work of Chandler House in the juvenile part of David. Neither should Frank Reicher, the director, be slighted for he showed rare judgment and artistis ability in the selection of his locations. He used the scenic beauties of nature to the greatest advantage. Backed up with the usual excellent Lasky Photography he achieved some scenes that were remarkable for their beauty. Thomas Meighan as Robert Fielding and Richard Sterling as Sheldon Avery were acceptable.

"THE JUNGLE CHILD"

(Kay Bee-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Jungle Child," written by Monte M. Katterjohn and produced by Walter Edwards, is based on a story, which however original in its make-up fails to ring true to life. Its climaxes are unable to create conviction in the spectator. The one place to affix the blame in this case is with the author. His story is impossible and therefore it is unreal.

A Savage Setting in the Midst of Civilization

Ollante, a Spanish girl, has been reared by a tribe of Brazilian Indians unaware of her true ancestry. She rescues an explorer lost in the wilderness. He learns through papers found on her when she was a baby, that she is heiress to a vast fortune. He marries her and takes her back to New York. Here he does everything in his power to obtain control of her fortune and by deception he at length succeeds.

On the night of his success he gives a party to disreputable friends in his own house. His wife comes to the door to listen to the revelry and hears him denounce her as a "damned savage," and expresses his desire to be rid of her. Heart-broken she retreats to a room in the top of the house that is fitted up as her jungle hut. Towards morning she commences the dance of death. Her husband hearing the noise and still half drunk comes into the room and starts to mock her. Infuriated she siezes him and strangles the life from his body.

Dorothy Dalton and Howard Hickman are the principals, while in support appear Gertrude Claire, Dorcas Matthews, Frederick Vroom, Elsa Lorrimer and Leo Willis.

"THE HOUSE OF LIES"

(Morosco-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

IT is unfortunate that a picture so well acted and so well directed as "The House of Lies," should have such an unreal and wholly impossible story as a foundation. Furthermore the story is poorly constructed from a technical standpoint. It requires four reels for the two leading characters to meet. At the beginning of the fifth reel the meeting is brought about, and during the last five hundred feet the man discovers the beautiful soul of the girl, falls in love with it, and the picture closes with a wedding. This is indeed quick work even for moving pictures.

Edna Coleman is not only beautiful as to person and figure, but possesses a beautiful nature and soul as well. With his writings as a basis, she has idealized and fallen in love with Marcus Auriel, a wealthy young poet. Her father is dead and her stepmother has determined that both she and her stepsister, who is also very beautiful, must either marry well or go upon the stage. The mother conspires with Winthrop Haynes, a theatrical manager, to bring about a meeting with the poet. Haynes is indebted to the poet for twenty thousand dollars, and he gets the stepmother to sign a paper stating that if he helps her marry off one of the girls she will return the favor by helping him in any manner which he may specify.

Edna Refuses to Be Sold

An elaborate reception is arranged in the hope that the poet will fall in love with one of the girls. Edna feels that she is being offered to the highest bidder, and as the proceeding is repulsive to her inmost nature, resolves to destroy her beauty. This she accomplishes by pouring carbolic acid on her cheeks effectually disfiguring herself for life. In this manner she escapes meeting the poet, who is somewhat attracted to her stepsister Dorothy. The mother seeing a chance for a match, forces Edna to act as Dorothy's maid and perform the work of a servant in the house.

The poet gives an elaborate house party at which Dorothy and her mother conspire to bring things to a climax. As they are at the end of their resources, they turn Edna out of the house. An old friend of her father's, a doctor, obtains a secretarial position for her with the poet. Dorothy inveigles the poet into a compromising situation and her mother appears at the psychological moment. Without giving him a chance to explain she congratulates him on his engagement to her daughter, and immediately announces it to all of the guests. The poet makes the best of a bad bargain.

Haynes now steps in and calls upon the mother to make good her agreement. Dorothy is forced to steal the key to her financee's strong box, and in the dead of night she and her mother rob it in order to obtain Haynes' note. The poet, however, has felt Dorothy take the key from his ring and is concealed behind a screen. Edna appears as the thief is being consummated, and starts to raise an alarm, but her stepmother dissuades her, saying that it will not only wreck her sister's chances, but will wreck the happiness of the poet. The stepmother and Dorothy rush out on the lawn to meet Haynes, followed by Edna, who suddenly snatches the note for twenty thousand dollars from Haynes' hand. At this moment the poet appears. Edna confesses to the crime, but he soon proves that he knows the real facts in the case. The conspirators are ordered off the premises, and the poet discovers Edna's beautiful soul, and soon after falls in love with it. At the wedding ceremony, Edna appears without a scar on her face. The explanation offered is that she was never disfigured, but conspired with the doctor to paint a scar on her face in order that she might force him to fall in love with her beautiful soul and not with her beautiful face.

Even with this brief synopsis the falsity and unreality of the story is readily apparent. The picture has been beautifully produced, however, with a wealth of beautiful settings and locations. William D. Taylor, the director, has accomplished a fine piece of work from a technical standpoint. Edna Goodrich in the leading role was effective throughout, her extreme beauty registering most effectively. Others in the cast were Juan de la Cruz as the poet, Kathleen Kirkham as Dorothy, Lucile Ward as the stepmother, Harold Holland as Winthrop Haynes, and Herbert Standing as Doctor Barnes. The lighting and photography were most excellent.

"DIANE OF THE FOLLIES"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

JUST why the Fine Arts scenario department unearthed the story presented in "Diane of the Follies" is not exactly clear, judging from the ultimate effect created by the picture. On second thought, however, it might be suggested that the producers desired to give Lillian Gish plenty of opportunities to act and seized upon the handiest vehicle present. Miss Gish has the opportunities and she accepts them, somewhat too eagerly at times, but the story can hope to arouse little of that sustaining interest that is created by pictures of greater originality.

Diane is an actress and just for the fun of it she takes a fling at marriage, the party of the second part being Phillips Christy, a millionaire, a thinker, a writer and a believer in the theory that environment shapes character. After three years everything is all wrong. Christy has offered his wife no encouragement, so she shocks his sister and friends by inviting several of her old stage companions to come and see her. A separation comes in due time, Diane leaving her little daughter, Bijou, in the care of her husband. The care meted out to Bijou is not sufficient to keep him from dying and after a short reunion husband and wife separate again—this time for ever.

Contrast in Temperament

In all fairness it must be said that there is plenty of good comedy throughout the five reels that goes a long way toward making the picture worth while. Much of the humor centers about the acting of Miss Gish, although we wish the director had not seen occasion to interrupt the progress of the story so many times with bits that allow Miss Gish to act, merely for the sake of acting.

The subtitles also contribute greatly to the amusement of the audience. The direction is in most cases good, although it seems peculiar that every performance of the shows starring Diane should be staged in Stamford. And it might have been in better taste to give the daughter of the house a more Christian sounding name than Bijou.

Sam de Grasse is seen to emotionless advantage as Christy, while others are Howard Gaye, Lillian Langdon, Wilbur Higby and little Wilhelmina Siegmann. W. Christy Cabanne directed from a scenario by Granville Warwick.

"HIS WIFE'S GOOD NAME"

(Vitagraph-Blue Ribbon—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WHATEVER the shortcomings of this picture from a dramatic standpoint, it cannot be denied that it contains a number of very entertaining episodes, particularly the first one, which shows the romance of the two principals, Mary Ellen and Harry Weatherby. Josephine Lovett, the author, has told her story through the romance and the marriage successfully. Then she introduces Harry's father, who without much cause, it must be confessed, arranges matters so the young man sees his wife in a detrimental light. They separate. Mary tries suicide but is rescued by a doctor who nurses her back to health again. Harry at last discovers his father's duplicity and going to the doctor for comfort finds Mary as well.

Just why the old master of finance temporarily ruined his son's happiness is not exactly clear. In the latter part of the picture, where Mary, to bide her time takes up settlement work, is done in a rather strained and awkward way, but in most other respects the offering is acceptable.

Heading the cast is Lucille Lee Stewart, who as Mary creates a sympathetic impression. Huntly Gordon, though rather stiff, manages averagely with the role of Harry Weatherby, while others in the cast are Frank Currier, Jessie Miller, John Robertson and William Lytell, Jr.

Director Ralph Ince has given the picture appropriate and commendable production. The camera work and lighting effects are very good.

"FRIDAY THE THIRTEENTH"

(Peerless-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

MANY liberties have been taken with Thomas W. Lawson's big story of the stock market in the picturization of "Friday the Thirteenth." In fact all that really remain are a few stock exchange scenes, which have been particularly well done, by the way, and the title. Otherwise the picture differs little from countless melodramas built along much the same lines that have gone before.

The picture reaches a logical ending at the end of the fourth reel when the battle between the two contending forces of love and revenge is ended. The action which follows in the fifth reel is non-essential and brings about a more or less flat anti-climax.

Otherwise the picture has many merits and is a good example of this class of production. Emile Chautard, the director, has staged it in a careful and realistic manner. His Wall street scenes are particularly good, as well as the stock exchange scenes already mentioned; those showing the interior of brokerage offices also deserve praise for the realistic manner in which they were executed. Great care has been taken with the detailing and the continuity was well carried out.

Gerda Holmes and Robert Warwick carried away the acting honors of the picture, the former as a winsome young southern girl who comes to New York to recoup her father's fortune, and the latter as a young millionaire, who rules Wall street by the dominant force of his personality. Charles Brandt was somewhat miscast as an aristocratic Virginian. His manner was far from polished and though garbed in the traditional stage southern gentleman costume, he failed in a convincing reproduction of the character he was playing. Others in the cast were Clarence Harvey as Peter Brownley, Montagu Love as Count Varneloff and Lenore Harris as Simone Brownley.

The main story tells of how Beulah Sands, in order to recoup the fortune lost by her father through the double crossing of Peter Brownley, obtains a position as secretary in the latter's office. Robert Brownley, the son, and dominant factor in the concern, falls in love with her at first sight. By means of imparting secret information, Beulah enables her father to win another fortune. He then sets out to break Peter Brownley through information obtained by his daughter.

During the midst of a big fight on the exchange, Beulah is caught giving secret information to her father over the telephone by Robert. He locks her in his office until the market closes, and then with the magnanimity of the victor takes her in his arms and forgives her when she confesses. An entirely unnecessary anti-climax follows in which several of the minor characters are effectually disposed of, and the picture closes to the usual happy ending when the love of the young people is made to reconcile the life long enmity of the older men.

Beulah Finds a Way Out

Frankly the picture has little to lift it above the ordinary run of melodramas of this class except the able manner in which it has been directed and staged. It impresses one as an attempt to benefit by the national prestige of the well-known book on which it is supposed to be based, and for the advertising value which accrues to it as a result.

"WHO'S GUILTY?" SERIES PROVE POPULAR IN LOEW THEATRES

THE Marcus Loew theatres have met with great success with Pathe's "Who's Guilty?" series produced by Arrow.

In a letter to the Pathe Company, Nicholas M. Schenck, Secretary of Loew's Theatrical Enterprises, says:

"We beg to advise you that your series of pictures—'Who's Guilty?'—was exhibited at our Eighty-sixth street theatre, this city, and at Loew's theatre, New Rochelle, N. Y., and greatly pleased our audiences. It has a very interesting story, is well acted, and admirably produced."

"THE YELLOW MENACE"

(Episodes Seven, Eight and Nine—Unity—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THE titles of these three episodes in this serial showing the cunning of underworld types of the Orient, pitting their strength against the police and secret service agents of the accident are called "Drops of Blood," "The Time Clock Bomb," and "The Crystal Globe." They are melodramatically sensational throughout and show in great detail the ruthlessness of the Chinese criminal. There were a number of careless lapses in the direction that could easily have been corrected with a little care and forethought, but on the whole the pictures serve the purpose for which they were created.

The three episodes continue telling the story of the manner in which Ali Singh the master Chinese criminal continues spreading his reign of terror and the futile attempts of the police and secret service men to capture him.

The first shows a typically Chinese method of compelling an unwilling person to talk. The inventor of a new and powerful explosive is cunningly captured by Ali Singh, and is forced to confess the formula by having his blood extracted a drop at a time, at the rate of a drop every half second.

Later he in killed by a gas bomb, when the Chinaman tries to kill Manning and Bronson, the secret service men who are on his trail. its strength.

The second one tells of the manner in which the formula is recovered and of the attempt of Ali Singh to again kill Bronson, this time by exploding a time clock bomb in his library. This episode depends largely on fortuitous circumstances, and coincidence for the pivotal points of the action and for this reason loses much of its strength.

The Bomb Fails to Work

As a result of this explosion, Manning moves his residence to the suburbs at the earnest solicitation of his fiancee.

Because Ali Singh has been able to obtain a plan of the eastern coast defenses extra precautions are taken by the government to see that he does not also get possession of the plans of a new gun that has been invented. Nearly all of the action of this episode transpires in a high office buidling but this is hardly understandable as the army officer, who has invented the gun has his workshop in a concealed parapet for underground in Fort Wadsworth. The episode has several other loose ends that are the result of careless production.

There is no doubt but what this serial will continue to please those who are not too particular and who care more for exciting mysterious action than for strict attention to realistic detail in the setting.

"THE EVIL WOMEN DO"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IN "The Evil Women Do," there is depicted a very fascinating story of a woman who makes a living by her wits. An adventuress she is touring the principal cities of Europe and captivating every man she meets by the display of a smooth white shoulder and the use of gowns that cling in an astonishingly intimate way. In other words this lady of "The Evil Women Do" is a vampire of the deepest dyed hue and Elsie Jane Wilson, who lends life to the role, lends it with a vengeance.

After a little introductory episode in which we see the manner in which Ernestine, for that is the lady's name, plays her cards we launch right into the midst of a teeming plot. It teems sometimes convincingly, sometimes artificially, but always interestingly. She captivates a certain Count, very old in reality, who imagines himself young, who straightway marries her despite the objections registered by his daughter and her fiance. Ernstine manipulates affairs with the aid of her two confederates so that she gains complete control of her husband's immense fortune. They spirit away the daughter to a disreputable quarter of Paris and all is going well until the daughter's fiance and an old victim of Ernestine's appear on the horizon and spoil the game. The vampire takes poison and after a while all is put aright.

We mention artificially because for some unknown reason the daughter when she is whisked away to the filthy tenement imagines herself a prisoner. Why, we do not know, because she goes out in the street to mail a letter.

But otherwise "The Evil Women Do" is a very well told tale of its kind.

It is benefited largely by some excellent character portrayals, chief of these being that of the Count given by Rupert Julian. Sydney Dean as another victim acts with feeling and Francelia Billington makes a very pretty and attractive heroine. Hobart Henley as the hero, Douglas Gerrard and C. Norman Hammond as the confederates of Ernestine and Tom Lockhart in a smaller part complete the well balanced cast.

The scenario was made by E. J. Clawson from Emil Gaboriau's story, while Mr. Julian directed. His work is as always commendable, while that of his photographer, Steve Rounds, is exceedingly good.

"THE SCARLET RUNNER"

(Episodes One, Two, Three and Four—Vitagraph—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

"THE SCARLET RUNNER" is a new series adapted from the stories of C. N. and A. M. Williamson, and produced by the Vitagraph Company under the direction of William P. S. Earle and Wally Van. Earle Williams has the feature role in each of the episodes, but the supporting companies are different.

The first four stories are exceedingly well told presenting a wealth of material in a convincing and entertaining manner. Each story is complete in itself and deals with the more or less exciting adventures built around a handsome powerful automobile and its owner.

The first is called "The Car and His Majesty," and while serving largely the purpose of introduction also furnishes an exciting adventure. Christopher Race, a young man with too much leisure, is threatened with disinheritance by his wealthy uncle on account of his riotous living. He is told that unless he earns five hundred pounds within a year he will be left without a penny. Selling his belongings he buys a handsome automobile and at first tries to rent it out to private parties for tours, but is unsuccessful. At last with the wolf knocking at the door he is forced to cruise about the streets looking for chance fares. Luckily he finds a King traveling incognito, and by his ready wit is enabled to foil a band of conspirators, and not only save the life of one of his most intimate friends, but bring about the culmination of his romance.

The second episode is called "The Nuremburg Watch," and relates the manner in which Christopher is able to foil the attempt of a gang of bomb throwers to make way with his uncle's life. The latter is the King's counsel for the prosecution of the leader of the gang. The gang utilizes Chris to deliver a package to his uncle which contains an old Nuremburg watch, which the uncle presents to his fiancee. Later Christopher learns that it contains a deadly explosive timed to go off at one o'clock. He sets off in pursuit of the fiancee and her mother, who have gone house hunting in the country for the day, and after an exciting chase overtakes them just as a member of the gang is successful in stealing the watch. There is an explosion and the member of the gang is killed, but Christopher escapes with a slight injury.

The third episode deals with a colossal joke. It is called "The Masked Ball," and relates how Ponsonby Fitzgerald engages Christopher to help him perpetrate a joke on a young society woman who is giving a sensational masked ball. She has offered a prize of a valuable diamond to the maskers who make the most sensational entrance. Fitzgerald and his friends plan to go as a band of robbers, take the jewels from the guests, make their escape in "The Scarlet Runner" and then later return them. The plan progresses well, but at the last moment Christopher is led to believe that all is not well and he precipitates matters by forcing Fitzgerald to return the jewels before he leaves the room.

The fourth episode again deals with royalty for its principal characters. It is called "The Hidden Prince," and tells of the manner in which Christopher by his ready wit is enabled to straighten out an abduction of a Prince. The Prince in question has become engaged to Eloise Dauvray, but can only get the support of Rudovics, an important official of his country, in his attempt to regain the usurped throne of his father, on the promise to marry his daughter. Fitzgerald kidnaps the Prince, but Christopher brings things to a climax by causing Rudovics' daughter to disappear. There follows an exciting chase in which the Prince is rescued. It then develops that Rudovics' daughter has married Prince Peter, the younger brother of Prince Mirko. Again The Scarlet Runner has come to the rescue.

The four episodes have been staged in an extremely effective manner. The action is rapid and the suspense in each case well sustained. Earle Williams in the leading role is pleasing at all times and wins the sympathy of his audience by his compelling personal magnetism. The photography is clear and distinct throughout, and the locations have been well chosen. Taken all and all it starts off as a mighty good series and one that will not fail to please.

Those making up the supporting companies were Charles Kent, L. Rogers Lytton, Marguerite Blake, Templar Saxe, Thomas R. Mills, Donald Hall, Adele Kelly, Nellie Anderson, Lilian Tucker, William Dunn, Kalman Matus, Gordon Gray, John Costello, and Ethel Corcoran.

"THE WAY OF PATIENCE"

(Essanay—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

WHILE there isn't enough story to justify three reels, what there is is fairly unhackneyed and therefore interesting. The opening scene introduces Patience Worth, a Quaker maid, and her stern, uncompromising father. The barrenness of the girl's eventless existence leads her to run away from home. This first phase of the story is developed logically and well.

The Quakeress goes to a big city, where she is overwhelmed by its strangeness and aloofness. She finally becomes the model of Leonard, an artist. Thayer, a novelist, falls in love with her, but she does not accept his proposal of marriage, because Leonard fascinates her. When Leonard proposes an unlawful relationship, she marries Thayer to secure his protection. Thinking that Leonard's wiles may overcome her duty toward Thayer, she deserts both of them and returns to her father.

The events outlined in the foregoing paragraph seem wholly artificial. This may be because a woman's moods are inexplicable, but more likely because the action is poorly motivated and unnecessarily prolonged.

Patience's father gently welcomes her. A few days later her husband appears, and she throws herself in his arms. The old Quaker blesses them. Although illogical, this happy ending leaves a pleasant taste in the mouth.

Nell Craig, as the Quakeress, catches the spirit of the part admirably. Excepting a few exaggerated bits of action called for by the script, she is uniformly restrained and convincing. Ernest Maupain, always a sterling player of characters, does his bit as the father in a thoroughly finished manner. Others who appear are Darwin Karr and Hugh Thompson.

The photography, settings and locations are adequate with an eye to realism.

"THE GIRL FROM FRISCO"

(Episode Seven—Kalem—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THE seventh episode in this series of a modern western girl is called "The Gun Runners" and teems with excitement throughout. There is not a tiresome moment from the start to the finish. Robert Wells Ritchie, the author, has evolved a good narrative story replete with action. It has the charming novelty of starting at the beginning and continuing right through to the end without the slightest bit of padding or straying down byways. He has a story to tell and he tells it.

Barbara Trent, the daughter of a San Francisco millionaire, leaves her home to attend a fashionable reception. In some unexplained manner the chauffeur of her taxi cab delivers her at the wrong address, the house of a man who is planning a South American revolution.

He mistakes her for English Rose, an adventuress, who has come to negotiate for a quantity of rifles, which he has obtained by double crossing his partner in the plot. While she is still there Arendo, the other conspirator appears with his aides and kills his faithless partner. Barbara is captured by the gang and made prisoner.

Later the real English Rose appears and seeing the Blind Mole, as he was called, lying dead on the floor, telephones the police and then disappears, after finding Barbara's pearl necklase on the floor. While inserting a personal advertisement in one of the papers she leaves her hand-bag containing the necklace. This is found by John Wallace, Barbara's fiancee, and when English Rose returns to claim it she is made to confess all she knows.

The following morning at daybreak Barbara escapes from her captor and hurries home. While she has been imprisoned she has ascertained that the gang will ship the rifles on a tramp steamer. Warning her father to get the polise she hurries to the deck and single handed battles with the gang. She is just about to be overpowered when the police arrive and rescue her from a mighty tight situation.

Marian Sains and True Boardman handle the leading roles in their usual capable fashion. Ronald Bradbury made a good South American revolutionist and Earl Formes, Jr., did a good bit of character work as the Blind Mole. The photography, lighting and direction were up to the standard that has characterized this series from the outset.

"SAINT, DEVIL AND WOMAN"

(Thanhouser-Pathe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

AGAIN does Florence LaBadie appear on the Pathe program, this time in a picture which deals more or less largely with hypnotism and the influence of one mind over another. Miss LaBadie is running the entire gamut of picture plays for Pathe. She has done the dual role as well as dramas of the more average sort and here it remains for her to appear as the hypnotic subject. This part she plays exceedingly well and as a result the production can be ranked with the best of its kind.

The construction of the picture is praiseworthy over most of its length. The hypnotism has not been allowed to overshadow the drama and the drama is very well established. In the latter part of the subject the influence exerted for good and evil over Miss LaBadie in the name part is a little too sudden to result in absolute realism in the action, but as a whole this difficult element has been handled convincingly and successfully.

After her guardian's death, Florence is left in the care of the dead man's secretary who by exerting his evil influence manages to convert her from Saint to Devil. She is harsh and oppressive, grasping and miserly. A man who has previously taken great interest in her, a doctor and social worker, comes into her life again and by his good influence manages to bring her back to her true self. During the climax of the story she alternates between the good and the bad until at last the doctor triumphs and the villainous secretary is put to route.

Wayne Aery appears as the doctor and gives a likable performance. Others are Ernest Howell, Hector Dion, Charles Bogel and Ethyle Cooke. Frederic Sullivan directed from a script by Phillip Lonerage and aside from one or two minor slips, which are too slight to be mentioned, he has done acceptable work.

"PUPPETS"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"PUPPETS" is a motion picture comedy done as a pantomime, and is really quite an innovation. The comedy is not of the sure-fire sort—the exhibit who caters to the crowd that likes swift action, obvious humor, bricks, pies and tricks had better steer clear of "Puppets," for it is an innovation and will appeal largely to those on a familiar footing with all forms of the drama.

The settings, everyone of them, are designed in black and white while, as might be guessed from the title, the characters are clothed as per puppets, in pantaloons, pierrot costumes, ballet effects and tights. The story is founded on a familiar French pantomime, although it is modernized for the occasion and changed to suit the cast.

The story which means nothing of itself need not be related here. Suffice it to say that it shows the neat manner in which a young man cures his uncle of his idea of getting married to a charming young lady of his own choice.

A cast headed by De Wolf Hopper, includes Pauline Starke, Jack Brammall, Robert Lawlor, Kate Toncray, Edward Bolles and Max Davidson.

"INTO THE NORTHLAND"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

WITH thoroughgoing conventionality this picture tells a reasonably entertaining story. Every detail runs so true to the stock specifications that there are no specific merits or demerits to chronicle: Since Fritzie Brunette has some following, it would be well to feature her name, and the fact that she wears male attire during the major part of the picture.

The characters of the film, by the way, are made to appear ignorant of the anatomical differences between the sexes. While Miss Brunette in shirt and trousers is a charming figure, she certainly is not a masculine one. Others prominent in the cast are Leo Pierson, Lillian Hayward, Harry Lonsdale, and James Bradbury. The support, directing, sets, locations, and photography are all average.

Mary Pickford as the Star of the First Picture Made by Her Own Company, "Less Than the Dust"

George Collins loses all his money in a gambling den. Moll McGuire, an underworld character, befriends him and advises him to go to the new gold fields in British Columbia. He takes her advice, and promises Harriet, his wife, to make good in the new venture.

Overcome with loneliness, Harriet later disguises herself as a man, and becomes a stowaway on a tramp steamer. After several vicissitudes she arrives in the North, but cannot find her husband. Moll McGuire has arrived before her, and the good-hearted woman gets a job for the supposed boy.

Harriet takes part in some irrevelant melodramatic episodes. She later becomes a mother. Collins, having collected several gallons of gold nuggets, comes to town, and embraces his wife and heir.

"THE LIGHT OF HAPPINESS"

(Columbia-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

JOHN COLLINS as author and director of this production featuring Viola Dana has succeeded fairly well in the first capacity and very well in the second; so well in the second in fact that a few improbabilities in his story are quite overshadowed by the merits of the direction. Mr. Collins is thoroughly familiar with Miss Dana's possibilities and accomplishments and in none of his pictures, least of all in "The Light of Happiness," has he neglected to give his star full play. And as Miss Dana has an exceptionally pleasing personality combined with considerable talent, such a line of action is by no means amiss.

Miss Dana is cast in a role with which she is very well acquainted. As Tangletop, the daughter of the village inebriate, she is generally despised by all the townsfolk. There is another girl in the town, Mollie Dean, who is in love with Van Orden, a blind man who is heir to a vast fortune. When he regains his sight, his guardian, who for financial reasons desires his daughter to marry Van Orden, employs the messy looking Tangletop to dispel the dreams which Van Orden has woven around the personality of Mollie. Shortly after this Tangletop's father dies and she is adopted by the new minister of the village. Then there comes the romance of these two, and the minister gets the usual snubbing by the townsfolk before he lays hold of the chief gossip and forces an apology from him. And through the influence for good exerted over Tangletop by the minister she confesses all about her substitution for Mollie and two love stories end happily.

Lorraince Frost as Mollie, Edward Earle as Van Orden, Robert Walker as the minister and Bert Busby, George Melville, and Mona Kingsley have the roles of principal support to Miss Dana. While the photography is not up to feature standard in several scenes, all other matters of production have been adequately attended to.

"HER DOUBLE LIFE"

(Fox—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY E. DRAW

THIS production does not reach the high standard of excellence that William Fox has set in the past. The story, which is written by Mary Murillo, has been laid in England with the European War as its background. The title "Her Double Life," conveys nothing to the mind as to the real story, which is not by any means strong. The incident upon which the title is founded could not possibly have occurred in the manner in which it is portrayed on the screen.

J. Gordon Edwards, the director, has done far better work in his past productions. Although the plot is laid in England there is an appalling lack of English atmosphere. The battle scenes are effective but not realistic. We know too much of modern warfare to believe that these scenes show anything approaching reality. It is ludicrous to think that a young lady in town attire is to be found "Lost in the firing line." Upon this incident, however, the theme is based.

Theda Bara is as usual a success. Her portrayal of the young girl is beyond praise and ten years later when she has grown to womanhood she enacts her role with great sympathy. Stuart Holmes is as great a villian as ever and the part suits him admirably.

Walter Law has again too little to do—but what he has to do is done really well. Lucia Moore, as Lady Clifford, is excellent and deserves special mention, also little Jane Lee who makes a fine little "naughty girl." The photography is good, but the action drags at times and is "jumpy" at others. Some of the situations are cleverly handled though illogical.

This film will pass muster for the uncritical and will be enjoyed by the audience who likes adventure. At the opening of the story we find Theda Bara, as Mary Doone, a child of circumstances, who makes her home in Elliot Clifford's parish house. When war breaks out Mary becomes a Red Cross nurse. At the front she meets Lloyd Stanley, a war correspondent, who she knew in London. She is saved from dishonor at Stanley's hands, by the bombardment of the hospital tent. After the attack, Mary finds the body of a young girl in the tent. She later discovers that it is Ethel Wardley, who is on the way to make her home with an unknown aunt, Lady Clifford.

Mary Changes Clothes with Ethel

Mary changes clothes with Ethel, takes the girls papers and luggage and goes to Lady Clifford's. She is received as the niece and soon falls in love with her cousin Elliot. Then Stanley returns to England, bringing with him Ethel Wardley, who has recovered from her wounds. On their arrival at the Clifford's house they intend to disclose Mary's identity, but they are too late, as Mary has done so herself and has been forgiven by Lady Clifford and her son Elliot.

"BOBBY BUMPS STARTS A LODGE"

(Bray—Paramount)

THIS animated cartoon is from the pen of Earl Hurd, and is an extremely meritorious piece of work. The underlying idea is amusing and the drawings have been well executed.

Bobby in search of excitement decides to form a lodge and as a first measure procures a goat. Then he goes out in search of members, finds Chocolate and persuades him to be initiated. Chocolate puts the goat "hors de combat," however, by meeting its charge with his head. He climbs a tree, encounters a bear, and is rescued by Bobby, who in turn, runs foul of Mr. Bruin, and is rescued by Chocolate. As a compromise they both consent to be initiated, but when the goat is finally persuaded to charge he meets nothing but empty air.

"LESS THAN DUST" IS SET IN MODERN INDIA

AN inkling of the story in which Mary Pickford will be presented as an independent star by arrangement with Artcraft Pictures Corporation, and a roster of the principal members of the distinguished company which has been assembled for her support in Hector Turnbull's "Less Than the Dust," were announced this week. John Emerson, who is directing the picture, describes it as a picturesque and appealing story of modern India. Miss Pickford appears as a little English castaway who is regarded by the superstitious natives as in reality "less than the dust" beneath their feet.

There are more than forty important characters in the new production. The principal roles will be played by David Powell, Frank Losee, Mary Alden, Mario Majeroni, Cesare Gravina, Francis Joyner, Russell Bassett, Walter Morgan and Mercita Esmonde.

Tabloid Reviews for the Busy Exhibitor

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"When Justice Won." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Sept. 19.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Fifteen years before the story opens, James Dillon is asked by a fellow convict, who is dying, to become his daughter's guardian. Dillon escapes, adopts the girl, reforms, and becomes a prominent citizen. Several years later he is blackmailed by another convict. When Dillon refuses to pay any more "hush money" the crook tells the girl of her guardian's past. When the girl refuses to leave her guardian, she is kidnapped by the crook. Dillon goes to the Governor, secures a pardon for himself, and then rescues the girl. He finds she wants him to be more to her than a guardian. The cast is composed of Marguerite Clayton, Sydney Ainsworth, John Lorenz, Ullrich Haupt and John Cossar.

"Canimated Nooz Pictorial, No. 16." (Essanay. Split reel. Wed., Sept. 20.)—Wallace A. Carlson's burlesque of the animated news weeklies shares the reel with 500 feet of Canadian scenic.

"The Way of Patience." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Sept. 23.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Mud Cure." (Kalem. Tues., Sept. 19.)—This single-reel Ham and Bud comedy is a good burlesque on many of the hydropathic and so-called mud cures. Bud gets a toothache, and on going to a dentist to have it extracted dreams, while under the influence of gas, that in company with Ham he is the attendant at a celebrated mud bath. The scenes showing the patients in the various pools of mud are exceedingly ludicrous. Later he imprisons Ham in the steam room while he flirts with a charming young patient in the person of Ethel Teare, forgetting all about Ham. When he finally does release him the steam has got in its good work, and the gigantic Ham has shrunk to the size of a lilliputian dwarf. It is a good amusing comedy throughout.

"That Pesky Parrot." (Kalem. Fri., Sept. 22.)—A typical slap stick paper hanger supplies most of the amusement in this single-reel comedy featuring Ivy Close. He is aided and abetted by a wonderfully intelligent parrot. The young husband returning home unexpectedly, listens to the talk of the parrot, and gathers the impression that his wife has been abducted. With greatly exaggerated and burlesque grief he starts out to find her, only to discover that she had left with the paper hanger to select home wall paper. The charming English beauty of Ivy Close registers most effectively, and the comedy efforts of Henry Murdoch are amusing.

"Defying Death." (Kalem. Wed., Sept. 20.)—A thoroughly exciting episode in the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series in which Helen Gibson literally does defy death. Thieves have stolen important legal papers. Helen obtains possession of them and speeds away on a motor handcar. There follows an exceedingly exciting race between the hand car and an automobile. Just as the automobile containing the thieves is about to capture her the hand car approaches the end of the long siding with an express train racing along on the main track. Helen is literally between two great dangers. She sticks to the hand car, it miraculously jumps the switch, and continues along the main line under the express train. It was a well-worked out story excellently carried out.

"Into the Northland." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Sept. 18.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"A Corner in Water." (Selig. Sat., Sept. 23.)—This is a crackerjack Western that will be sure-fire in audiences that like the cowboy flavor. There is action from start to finish, and excellent comedy relief. Tom Mix wrote and produced the picture, and played the lead as well. Supporting him are Victoria Forde, Joe Ryan, Chet Ryan and Pat Chrisman. Joe Simpson and his daughter Vicky stop their prairie schooner at a well to get some water. A man arrives on the scene, who says he owns the well, and that they must pay him for the water they take. Tom, a cowboy, overhears the argument, and, lassoeing the stingy man, drags him away. Later some drunken Indians attack Simpson's wagon, but Tom melodramatically saves them. Vicky is so grateful that she promises to wed the gallant plainsman.

Selig-Tribune, No. 72. (Thurs., Sept. 7.)—G. A. R. parades, Kansas City, Mo.; national tennis championship, Forest Hills, N. Y.; President Wilson signs Army and Navy Bill, Washington, D. C.; hospital train arrives at San Antonio, Texas; Countess Von Bernstoff arrives in New York City from Germany; along the river Somme, France; great dane adopts tiger cub, Los Angeles, Cal.; aquaplaning on Lake Michigan, Chicago, Ill.

Selig-Tribune, No. 73. (Mon., Sept. 11.)—Dancing masters hold convention, Chicago. Ill.; King Nicholas of Montenegro visits Paris, France; granary of flour company burns, Vallejo, Cal.; Hughes at Loveland, Colo.; Illinois National Guard prepares to leave for home, San Antonio, Texas; President Wilson speaks at Lincoln's birthplace, Hodgensville, Ky.; Fourth Division Canadaian troops reviewed by British celebrities before its departure to war, Surrey, England; aviation luncheon, Flying Yacht Club, New York City.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Rolling to Ruin." (Vogue. Sun., Sept. 10.)—This production is quite a good comedy in which Paddy McQuire is seen at his best. The action is rapid and well sustained, and a number of novel stunts are introduced. Paddy, the owner of a grocery store, gets into trouble with his wife as he makes love to Gypsey, the cashier. Gypsey is dismissed, and later she meets Paddy, and the two proceed to a skating rink, where skating in bathing suits is the rage. They create excitement galore, and are having a "ripping" time until Moon, Gypsey's sweetheart, arrives with Paddy's wife. Gypsey and Paddy escape in a coaster, followed by Moon and "wife." Suddenly the car in which Paddy and Gypsey are speeding through the clouds, jumps the rails, and makes a flying leap into the ocean. The cast includes Paddy McQuire, Margaret Templeton, Gypsy Abbott and Arthur Moon.

"Matchin' Jim." (Mustang. Two reels. Fri., Sept. 8.)—An exceptional story, which is highly interesting, has been written by Karl Coolidge. He has introduced several new twists, which will doubtlessly satisfy any audience. Matchin' Jim, who has a mania for matching coins or anything else for that matter, meets Phyllis Ellings, and they become fast friends. About this time Hawkins, a gambler, comes to the ranch, and at once falls in love with Phyllis, who cares nothing for him. Jim soon learns that he has a rival, and believes in his mania of matchin' to get Hawkins out of the way. He proposes to Hawkins that they should match coins, the winner to be free to woo Phyllis. The coins are spun, and Hawkins wins, whereupon Jim packs his belongings and leaves. Seeing a cottage Jim stops for something to eat, and finds a young woman and a baby are the only inhabitants. Here Jim learns that the woman has been deserted by her husband, and from her description suspects Hawkins. Returning to the ranch Jim accuses Hawkins, and forces him to return to his wife, thus leaving Jim and Phyllis once more together. The cast includes Frank Borzage, Chick Morrison, Anna Little, Dick La Reno. Harvey Clark, Queenie Rosson.

"A Boomerang Gold Brick." (Beauty. Wed., Sept., 6.)—This is quite a good comedy with an excellent story. Si Green and his wife Mandy make a trip to the city. Green is well supplied with money, and he intends to have a good time. The couple soon fall in with a pair of crooks. Si falls a victim to the charms of Ima Deville, and on the pretense of going to the bank he escapes from the searching eye of Mandy. Ima conducts him to a place which she calls her home, and here he meets U. R. Dunn, Ima's supposed father, who is greatly depressed owing to his need of ready cash. Si is induced to buy a gold brick, but is loath to part with his money, as he suddenly realizes that he is being fleeced and the gold brick, which he was to purchase, is used to crack Dunn's head. The cast includes Orral Humphrey, Joe Taylor, Joe Massey, Margaret McKenna, John Gough, Charles Newton.

"Atonement." (American. Two reels. Mon., Sept. 4.)—William Barker has written an unusual story in "Atonement," which has been ably directed by Edward Sloman. Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh have done some excellent work. Beautiful scenic photography has been secured, which makes this offering very exceptional and one to be appreciated by all who see it. Richard Stanton falls in love with Collette, a cafe dancer. His father, who wishes him to enter the church, bribes Collette in order to induce her to break her friendship with Richard. A few days later Richard sees Collette drinking with another man, and is furious and knocks the man down with a champagne bottle. Thinking he has killed his rival, Richard hides in the docks. Here he is found by two gamesters, who attack him, rendering him unconscious. They then proceed to place him in a boat, and set him adrift. The next day he is rescued by a fisherman, and taken to the Rev. Bergold's house. Undine, the clergyman's granddaughter, nurses Dick back to health, by which time they have fallen in love with each other. Dick, thinking he is a murderer, refuses to marry Undine, and prepares to leave the village when he discovers in an old newspaper that the man whom he struck was only injured. Dick and Undine then agree to marry, but she stipulates that they must live in the village in order that she can care for her grandfather. Dick consents, and is ordained and takes up the work of the old clergyman. The cast includes Alfred Vosburgh, Vivian Rich, Margaret Nichols, Harry McCabe, William Spencer.

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC

"The Grip of Evil." (Balboa. Two reels. Tenth Episode.)—While "Down to the Sea," as this the tenth episode is called, is entertaining after its own fashion, it must be confessed that the plot itself bears little justification to be trailed by the usual interrogation, "Is Humanity in the Grip of Evil?" The millionaire journeys to the seashore to look after his fishing interests, and there finds that his foreman has been regularly swindling him for many months. The foreman in an unsuccessful attempt to kill the millionarie brings death to two entirely innocent people. Jackie Saunders and Roland Bottomly continue in the leading roles.

"A Change of Heart." (Whartons. Two reels.)—Made in Ithaca by the Wharton Brothers this release makes use of the plot in which a swindler turns against his pals when they contemplate doing an old woman out of her life's savings. This is certainly cut from a familiar pattern, but it has been produced in good fashion, and, though quite obvious, manages to keep the interest well up.

"Pear Growing." (Split reel.)—Showing the extremely interesting industry of raising pears, the grafting of the sprigs, the operations on the trees to prevent disease and the spraying for insects and the harvesting. One of the best educationals seen in a long time, coming on the same reel with "Historic Mobile."

"Historic Mobile." (Split reel.)—Residences of time gone celebrities and various other reminiscent landmarks of the city of Mobile, Ala., make this travelogue averagely interesting. It comes on the same reel with "Pear Growing."

"When Betty's Sister Goes to School." (Florence Rose Fashions. Number Four.)—Clothes for the school-girl are shown in this reel of the Florence Rose Fashions. Without a doubt the picture will appeal to that part of the audience for which it is designed—the feminine part. Some of the scenes which Miss Rose has worked in, representing school life, are decidedly unrealistic but otherwise the costumes are nicely offset.

"Busting the Beanery." (Mittenthal.)—A Heine and Louie release staged, for the most part, in a restaurant. The humor offered is of the wild and low variety typical of Mr. Mittenthal's comedies. But there must be a market for his stuff—otherwise why is it made?

Pathe News, No. 72. (Wed., Sept. 6.)—Secretary Lansing's host to American and Mexican commissioners, New York City; President Wilson at Shadow Lawn, N. J.; part of Atlantic squadron coaling at Hampton Roads, Va.; fashions; Roosevelt at Lewiston, Me.; graduates from military college receive commissions from King Alphonso, Guadalajara, Spain; aero-cable car across Niagara Falls, N. Y.; aerial torpedo tested, Stockholm, Sweden; run on Shanghai banks, China; and other events.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"In Onion There is Strength." (Joker. Sat., Sept. 16.)—This is rather an amusing comedy in which Gale Henry and William Franey carry off the honors. Franey as the deacon who gets in Dutch in every manner imaginable, is very good, and Lillian Peacock as Maggie, the tough girl, deserves special mention. A visit to the prison where Maggie's beau is serving his sentence enables Maggie to substitute the deacon for her Heine, and she and her "feller" make their escape.

"Speeding." (Nestor. Fri., Sept. 15.)—Two girls steal an auto from in front of the store where one of their young men acquaintances has left it for a moment. The car belongs to his boss, and the girls by all manner of pranks succeed in making the police keep a lookout all over the town to try and capture the car and its joyriding owner. The license number is their only clue, and the way the girls get out of the scrape makes a good laugh number. Yvette Mitchell and Harry Depp do some commendable work.

"The Price of Victory." (Laemmle. Wed., Sept. 13.)—This is a sermon in one reel, preaching on the undesirableness of war. It is a cleverly worked out theme, and certainly is a good argument for universal peace. Manuelo promises his father that he will not enlist in the war as both are for peace, but the jibes of the townfolk and the sneers of his sweetheart, who calls him coward, make him go to the front. He is reported killed, but returns to his home some time later, blind, severely wounded, and a wreck of his former self. His sweetheart begs forgiveness and all is well. Alfred Allen and Francelia Billington are featured.

"He Almost Lands An Angel." (Universal Special. Two reels. Fri., Sept. 22.)—This number of the Timothy Dobs's series finds the bluffing hero rescuing a lady in distress. She takes him home, and introduces him to her father. The father is interested in motion pictures, and intends backing a company. In the meantime Dobbs lands a job at a studio, and the girl and her father come around to look him over. But he makes such an awful job of his work before the camera that the father declines being any sort of an angel at all. In this number the producers have relied slightly too much on the personality of Carter De Haven for their humor. It will get over probably, but it does not measure up to the immediately previous number.

"His Mother's Boy." (Rex. Fri., Sept. 22.)—A Civil War story that is decidedly different from other pictures dealing with the same subject. It relies on a strong love element to carry it through, and of battle scenes there are scarcely any. A Northern spy shoots a Southerner, clads himself in a Confederate uniform, and takes refuge in the home of the mother of the dead soldier. She protects him merely because he appeals to her, and later when she learns that it is her own son he has killed, she still saves him from the Confederate soldiers, for his own mother's sake. This is without a doubt the best single reeler released by Universal in many months. Kingsley Benedict is the lead. E. M. Ingleton wrote the story, and F. A. Kelcey did the production.

"To Another Woman." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Sept. 24.)—A rather gruesome yet strong drama depicting the horrible fate meted out to an untaithful husband. It was written by Harvey Gates, and produced by Cleo Madison, who headed a cast embracing William Mong, Margaret Whistler and Edward Hearn. The production is very good, and the story well worked out, but one wants to see a good comedy after its termination.

Universal Animated Weekly, No. 37. (Wed., Sept. 13.)—Protestants march for preparedness, Pittsburgh, Pa.; motor boat races, Detroit, Mich.; President Wilson signs Anti-Child Labor Bill; Freshmen vs. Sophomores, University of California, Berkeley, Cal.; eight-oar boat race, Washington, D. C.; fall fashions; Mexican and United States commissioners on way to conference, New York City; Williams triumphs over Johnston for national tennis title, Forest Hills, N. Y.; interned German sailors build miniature city, Nortolk, Va.; football squad practises, Harvard College, Cambridge, Mass.; thieves' weapons thrown into Lake Michigan, Chicago, Ill.; wounded soldiers train again for fighting, England; motor boats cruise to protect New York City in sham battle; sailors fight hotel fire, New London, Conn.; cartoons by Hy Mayer.

IS ANY GIRL SAFE?

made by the Anti-Vice Motion Picture Co. and passed by the National Board of Censors

MINNESOTA—NORTH DAKOTA

The title speaks for itself
A Fearless Arraignment of a Monstrous Evil

UNRESERVEDLY ENDORSED BY
REV. C. H. PARKHURST AND MORE THAN FIFTY OTHER CLERGYMEN

ALSO BY

LIEUT. DAN COSTIGAN, HEAD OF THE VICE SQUAD OF THE NEW YORK POLICE DEPARTMENT

A picture with a moral—Selected by our representative from the entire New York market as the biggest money making film with a real story to be had.

At the first New York exhibition at the Maxine Elliott Theatre, where the picture is now showing, the police reserves had to be called out to keep the crowds away.

BOOKINGS

begin September 20—no one will have preference. Secure your date by wiring at once to the Confidence

A LETTER has just been received from one of the leading dealers in the western section of the country whose sentiments concur exactly with ours. We are therefore taking the liberty of repeating that part of the letter verbatim which applies to the accessory end of the motion picture industry, for it brings out something which is lacking to-day—something which must be realized before our industry settles down where it should be. The letter follows:

"WE might state for your information that here in ———this practice of price cutting has been nearly overcome because of the mutual confidence between dealers.

"Confidence, truly, is the foundation upon which all business should be transacted, and in this mutual trust between dealers, we are now all securing a legitimate profit on our merchandise and service and are able to improve the quality of the goods we deliver and the manner in which this delivery is made.

"This legitimate profit permits us to maintain a competent corps of expert assistants who can really take care of exhibitors as they should be taken care of, and such help as we maintain are often able to save exhibitors tidy sums because they are experts and able to act not only as clerical helpers, but real advisers. Not long ago, we were approached by a new face in our salesroom. This man opened up his negotiations with us something like this:

"I AM Mr. X. Ibitor of Anywhere. I am not a moving picture man. I am a business man. I am engaged in other lines of business. You are in this business. You should know this business intimately and well in order to maintain such an establishment as you do. I am going to place myself in your hands implicitly and want you to act as my purchasing agent from your own stock.'

"This is CONFIDENCE. It is what is so often lacking in the relations between exhibitor and dealer and what should be encouraged and fostered in the future.

"Don't you think Mr. X. Ibitor got a square deal? Could we betray CONFIDENCE of this nature? Would we dare to do so, because we know that as long as we take care of him we will enjoy the profit from the sales he places with us.

"Confidence—CONFIDENCE—CONFIDENCE. That is That is what is needed between every unit of this vast industry to make it rapidly take its position on a par with other businesses that are in the forefront of the world's industries. Pardon this outburst on our part—and the encroachment on your valuable time—but this is just a tiny angle upon which we happen to be cranks."

LEGITIMATE profit—how does that sound? How was it brought about? Did any of you think it possible? Yes, there are many dealers who are making this profit but they are the exception and not the rule. They do not do it by combinations or deals, they do it by giving service with their goods. They make it because their customers have CONFIDENCE in them—and they in their competitors.

The newly formed National Association of the Motion Picture Industry is the organization which can make every dealer and manufacturer who is a member make this legitimate profit, providing these dealers go into the organization as they should—with a determination to make the organization work for them.

The film manufacturers, when the Board of Trade started, not only distrusted each other, but if you can believe it, the heads of one company did not know the heads of another even by sight. They had no trust in one another.

THE Board of Trade did not last but had it not existed the present organization never could have come into being. It made one man acquainted with another. It did away with a very large part of the distrust which with the new organization is now doing away with entirely. The film companies are now working together.

The shame is that the accessory people were not an active part of the old Board of Trade. Had they been they would now be ready for the present association. Their section of the new organization would have its full quota of members ready to work. It will now be necessary for the same preliminary work to be gone through as has been gone through by the film manufacturers.

CONFIDENCE will have to be established not only with the customer, but between each other. There is only one way to accomplish it—through the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

This applies to the dealers and manufacturers of all Accessories to the Industry. The present membership is not what it should be. Perhaps you don't know about the details of the organization. A B C of the Motion Picture Operating Room

Resistance Is, Perhaps, One of the Greatest Difficulties the Operator Has to Contend With—Many Operators Have No Idea of the Relative Merits of the Various Types of Resistance Devices, Which Are Divided into Four Classes

RESISTANCE is perhaps one of the greatest difficulties the operator has to contend with. Many operators have no idea of the relative merits of the various type of resistance devices. These devices may be divided into four classes, rheostats, transformers, rectifiers, choke coils, and motor generators.

The rheostat is the earliest form of resistance for a motion picture machine, and for direct current is the one most used. There are devices known as D. C. to D. C. Compensares, which while costly at first are nevertheless good machines. Resistance must be used for the reason that if the carbons of an arc lamp were brought together there would be a dead short circuit, which would cause the wires to burn up were it not for the fact that fuses were installed to take care of this possibility.

The rheostat therefore is used to choke back the current, and allow only a limited amount of current to flow through the wires, and by limited amount I mean sufficient for the projection arc itself. Were it not for the fuses the lamp would take more current than the fuses and wire could carry. It was to prevent this that resistance is inserted in the circuit, and we will now take up the rheostat.

The rheostat is nothing more or less than a series of wire coils, each coil having a certain number of ohms resistance, and mounted on an iron frame that is carefully insulated so that no part of the coils touch any part of the frame. Those coils are connected with each other so as to form one continuous length of wire. Some have a fixed capacity while others can be adjusted for higher or lower voltage by cutting in or cutting out by means of a lever or by changing a connection, which can be done by tapping in at any point of the circuit as shown in Fig. 1.

Connection of Coils of a Rheostat

The coils of a rheostat are connected with each other as shown in the above diagram. A and B are the binding posts to which the wires are attached. You will see by this that you are using the entire capacity of this machine and cutting all the resistance that is possible. Now, it is presumed, that your light is very poor and you want to cut out resistance. With the adjustable rheostat this would be a very simple matter; all you would have to do would be to move the lever to the desired point and let it remain there, but with a non-adjustable rheostat this would be impossible, so we remove the wire from binding post B and attach it to any one of the points marked X, being sure that the connection is tight and electrically perfect.

For instance, it is desired to increase the light upon the screen. First try point marked xxi; if the increase is not great enough move to the next point marked xy, and if it is still desired to obtain more light it will be necessary to cut in at point marked xz.

The terms "series" and "multiple" seem to puzzle a great many operators but it is really quite simple. Fig. 1 illustrates the "series" connection, for all the current is passing through all the coils, and if two or more rheostats are used the current must necessarily pass through all the coils one after the other, as shown in Fig. 2.

This method of adding rheostats reduces the current and makes it possible to use 110-volt rheostats on a 220-volt circuit, or if a sufficient number of rheostats are used it also may be used on any circuit regardless of the voltage, unless it falls below that at which the rheostats are designed for.

"Multiple" is something else again, and I will try to explain as briefly and comprehensibly as I can the "mystery" of it. To do this it will be necessary for me to use the accepted form and show by means of "water pipes" the effect. Fig. 3 shows two water pipes connected together with two valves, and this is practically the same as connecting two rheostats in multiple, for if both of the valves were opened you would get double the quantity of water in the lower pipe than you would if but one valve was open.

The reason for this is that your pressure is always the same and you can either get all of it, or only as much as you desire by regulating the flow by the valves.

"A" Shows Valve and One Pipe Closed
B" Shows Valve in the Other Open; if Both Were Open You Would Get Double the Quantity in the Lower Pipe Than You Would With Only One Valve Open

Fig. 4 shows the method of connecting two rheostats in multiple, and by studying Figs. 3 and 4 you will see how closely they correspond to each other.

There are a number of things to remember when using rheostats for resistance. First: See that it is insulated thoroughly, and placed in a location where it will be readily accessible as well as out of the way, and if possible have them located above and not on the floor of the operating room, where possible it is best to have them located outside of the operating room altogether, for the chances of their getting near anything inflammable is greatly reduced. See that all contacts are clean and tight, for a dirty connection is almost as bad as a loose one and a loose one is sure to cause trouble, with a capital T.

When you have "hooked up" and with the coils all cut in, you find that they become red hot, it is a sure sign that you are using a rheostat too small for your work and you should get a larger one, for it is poor economy, as well as bad practice to overload a rheostat. It not only shortens the life of it, but the waste of current through heating will be enormous. Remember that the best is the cheapest in the end, and govern yourself accordingly.

When purchasing a rheostat for motion picture work it is best to get one that will carry more current than is normally used, which will enable the operator to cut in or out at will, for there are times when a very dark or dense film is put out by the manufacturer and if the operator is able to increase the current at the arc, it is possible for him to make a better showing, for without good light you cannot haye a good show, and if your show is poor you will soon be that way too, for your patrons will go where they can see good pictures, well projected.

Next week I will take up the subject of transformers, and try to show the advantages of using transformers on alternating current as compared to the rheostat.

THE CIRCLE, INDIANAPOLIS, A 3100 SEAT HOUSE, OPENS WITH SPEECHES BY PRESIDENT OF CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND THE MAYOR

THE Circle theatre, the latest motion picture house in Indianapolis, held its formal opening August 30. The occasion was accompanied by vast quantities of flowers, the gayest of music and the admiring comments of hundreds—yes, thousands of people. Every one of the 3,100 seats was taken long before the opening of the first performance at 8 o'clock.

The style of interior decoration is ivory and gold, the hangings and carpets and upholstery being of old rose. The ushers are in gray blue uniforms, white gloves and "swagger sticks." The reception committee consisted of the officers and directors of the Circle Theatre Company: A. L. Block, president; Robert Liever, vice-president; Meyer Efroymson, treasurer; Ralph Norwood, secretary; Morris Cohen, Arthur Strauss, Isadore Feibleman and A. J. Gilligham, directors, and the members of the executive staff, Mark Gates, manager; H. L. Spitainy, musical director, and Theodore Stempfel, Jr., publicity.

There was a wonderful exhibition of flowers sent by friends, among whom were J. I. Schnitzer, of the Central Film Company, E. Mandelbaum of Cleveland, and the Pathe Exchange.

Among the out-of-town guests were S. L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Rialto theatre, New York; Harry Rubens, of Joliet, who controls theatres in Illinois and Dayton; E. Mandelbaum, who owns the Metropolitan and Knickerbocker, and the new Stillman theatre in Cleveland, A. J. Gilligham, of Detroit and Grand Rapids; Oscar Meyer of Chicago, and W. C. Both of Chicago.

Speechmaking preceded the opening of the theatre, and among the principal speakers were the President of the Chamber of Commerce and the mayor of Indianapolis.

Hundreds of telegrams of congratulations were received.

OPERATORS IN DETROIT RECEIVE AN INCREASE OF THREE DOLLARS A WEEK

ON September 1 a new working and wage agreement was put into effect between the owners of motion picture theatres and the union operators of Detroit, Mich. The new agreement gives operators an increase of three dollars per week and seventy-five cents per hour for overtime, whether they work downtown or in the outskirts. A new feature of the agreement, which is probably not equalled in many—if any—cities, is that the union agrees to stand the loss of any film by fire, with certain conditions attached, as follows:

That it will pay for any film destroyed by fire while the projection equipment is in charge of a member of this union at rates stated below. No damages will be paid for film over sixty days old. Age of film to be figured from release dates printed in trade magazines. No damage will be paid unless operating room is equipped according to printed rules furnished by this union. Film from one to ten days old, five cents per foot; ten to twenty days old, four cents per foot; twenty to thirty days old, three cents per foot; thirty to sixty days old, two cents per foot.

That the operators employed under this agreement must adhere strictly to the following rules: (a) That machines must be kept clean and in adjustment and ready for use at all times provided in this agreement. (b) That operators must report for duty ten minutes before the regular starting time of a show. (c) That pictures must be run according to the manager's orders. (d) That any operator employed under this agreement shall give the management two weeks' notice on resigning his position.

The Union also demands that the following rules govern the operating room:

(a) The rules below are to be recognized as in addition to State Law governing motion picture operating rooms. (b) No smoking permitted in operating room. (c) No liquor permitted in operating room. (d) Rewind must be in approved metal box as required by Electrical Inspector. (e) No motors allowed on rewind. (f) Motor driven machines must be of standard approved type. (g) Motors must be of approved type for motion picture machines. (h) Near the center of the top of booth shall be an opening at least twelve inches in diameter for ventilation with a pipe leading to the outer air. This pipe must be provided with an exhaust fan independent of all other circuits in theatre. (i) A film box to contain film not in use must be so constructed that each reel of film will be in a separate compartment and with an individual cover for each reel and constructed with a hook or band so that it is impossible to leave cover open when film is in compartment. (j) All fuse blocks and switches MUST BE enclosed. (k) Switch box and speed control for suction fan in ventilation pipe must be outside of operating room. (l) This union will not be responsible for damage to film by fire or otherwise when operators are instructed to project pictures at a speed faster than twelve minutes to one thousand feet of film. (m) No film shall be kept or stored in booth that is not being used as regular attraction advertised and exhibited to the public.

OPERATORS' STRIKE IN OKLAHOMA CITY IS PRACTICALLY UNCHANGED

AFTER five weeks' duration, the strike at Oklahoma City, Okla., remains practically unchanged. The Dreamland and Metropolitan are the only theatres in the city employing union labor. Cora Youngblood Corson has instituted suit for $20,000 against managers of the non-union houses alleging libel, the outgrowth of a newspaper article signed by the Theatrical Managers Association. Miss Corson is deputy organizer for the White Rats. The non-union houses are being picketed and it is feared that every act that comes to non-union houses, will be man-handled until satisfactory settlement has been made.

A New Arc Controller is Placed on the Market

(Owing to a regrettable error last week, the wrong cut was used in illustrating this article. In justice to the Auto-Arc, we are reprinting the article in full with the proper illustrations.)

WHILE in Chicago I witnessed a demonstration of the Auto-Arc, a simply constructed device for automatically maintaining a steady light at the arc. The Auto-Arc is the invention of two Chicago operators who have advanced with the times and their progressiveness has placed them in the ranks of those who "do things."

To describe the apparatus: Figure 1 is termed the controller. It is composed of two coils of magnet wire wound on an iron core, (shown at E in Figure 2) one coil consisting of many turns of fine wire which is termed the pressure or potential winding; the other consists of a few turns of heavy wire and is called the current or series coil.

These coils are connected differentially, that is, the magnetism set up by one coil opposes the magnetism or flux of the other.

On each end of this device there is mounted an armature or vibrator. One of these armatures acts as a circuit breaker or safety, which prevents the Auto-Arc from operating until after the lamp is fed by hand and the arc struck in the usual manner, thereby making use of auxiliary switches, clutches, gears, etc., unnecessary.

The other armature is balanced between one end of the magnetic core and the coil tension spring, the action of which is as follows: The line switch (switch on picture machine) is closed, the arc struck by hand in the usual manner, when the carbons have burned away to a point where a perfect crater is formed with the proper length of arc; the tension of the spring A at this point overcomes the attraction exerted on the other end of the armature, thereby releasing the armature from the core, which makes a contact through platinum points, partly shown at B, which momentarily connects the lamp feeding mechanism, which in turn feeds the carbons together slightly.

Effect of the Contact

This contact also momentarily short circuits the potential winding of the controller, thereby releasing the differential of the two coils which increases the magnetism of the core, thereby overcoming the air gap between the core and the armature, and returning the armature to its normal position which is in magnetic contact with the core.

The armature is now held to the core by the increased current (in the series coil) which is caused by the feeding together of the carbons. This action is repeated indefinitely, so long as there is sufficient length of carbon in the lamp.

Figure 2 shows the method of wiring. "1" is the small potential wires; "2" pressure line through circuit breaker and armature. (Note: The line from the feeding mechanism or solenoid must be connected to the same side of fuse block as are the small potential wires.

The action of the lamp feeding mechanism is very simple and positive. Briefly described it consists principally of a free ratchet A Figure 3, mounted upon the lamp feeding rod. This ratchet is rotated one tooth at a time by the action of a solenoid C connected to a lever upon which is mounted a "Dog" "B," which is normally out of mesh with the ratchet but which is momentarily brought into mesh by the downward pull of the solenoid, thereby causing the carbons to feed slightly and maintain a perfect arc at all times.

The Auto-Arc can be attached to any hand-fed lamp in a very few minutes and will prove to be one of the greatest helps to the operator who is using direct current as it will operate under any and all conditions; at least that is the claim of the inventors, and I believe their claim well founded.

Two of the most prominent features of the Auto-Arc are the free ratchet, which leaves the lamp free at all times and allows the operator to make any adjustment he desires by hand without any interference whatever; the other is the instantaneous adjustment for any current between 25 and 60 amperes, by merely loosening set screw at "C," and moving plunger "D" in or out to decrease or increase the current as determined by the desired length of arc.

The apparatus is so small that it may easily be placed under the projection machine where it will be out of the way and yet readily accessible. It is guaranteed to give complete satisfaction and is left to the exhibitors to say whether he is getting satisfaction or not. All working parts are guaranteed for a period of one year and any part found defective will be replaced if returned to the company, charges prepaid.

This device should be carefully examined by the exhibitor who is looking for an arc controller at a minimum of expense. It is as nearly "foolproof" as the ingenuity of the inventor could make it and the simplicity of its construction should meet with the approval of the operator who does not want added burdens thrust upon him, for it does not call for any attention after once being installed.

CONNECTING A SMALL RHEOSTAT WITH A REGULAR SPOT LIGHT RHEOSTAT

Harry L. Hoffman, Port Richmond, S. I., sends in a most interesting letter containing an excellent drawing, both of which are submitted to the readers of this department.

The accompanying diagram will explain a little stunt I fixed up for a friend of mine. By connecting a small rheostat which he had, with the regular spot-light rheostat he was able to get his choice of either 15, 25 or 40 amperes at the arc. This is quite a convenience, especially in vaudeville houses where the acts demand all kinds of light effects.

Harry L. Hoffman
Rheostat 110 Volts 25 Amperes

In one way at least it is a blessing; when an act calls for a "flood" in addition to the stage lights the operator switches in the 15 ampere rheostat in series with the arc, then almost "freezes" the carbons and walks out. The lamp remains lit for about fifteen minutes without feeding, on account of the low amperage, and the act has a flood, and is satisfied.

This arrangement could, of course be applied to the motion picture machine just as well, only be sure that all switches are heavy enough to carry the maximum amount of current when the rheostats are thrown into multiple.

I submit this in the hope that it may prove of benefit.

ANS.—There is no explanation on my part needed, the diagram speaks for itself, and the ability of the one who submits it. It is well executed and shows that this operator is one who can be rightly called painstaking. Come again, brother, there will always be a welcome for you in the department.

THE EDUCATOR IS A HOME PROJECTOR DESIGNED BY ENGINEERS OF NATIONAL REPUTATION

WHILE in the City of St. Louis, I had the pleasure of looking over a new type of Home Projector called the Educator, through the courtesy of F. Johnson, district manager of the Wagner Electric Company.

The Educator has been designed and patented by engineers of national reputation, and the one object sought by the designers was superiority.

The machine is constructed of magnum metal, which has been chosen for its greater strength over steel with only one-third of the weight. This metal is used in the frame, base, head of tripod, reel supports and handle. The entire weight of the Educator, including tripod, 1,000 feet of film, empty reel, cord, screen and carrying case is but 35 pounds, making it one of the most convenient projectors on the market. It contains everything but the electric current and can be set up and operated in a very few minutes.

The Educator lamp house offers something new in the way of lamp house construction in that it is made of 18 and 22-gauge aluminum, making it extremely light (one pound) as well as beautiful in appearance.

The advantages of the Educator are that it allows the film to be stopped at any point and shown as a "still," which is of great benefit to lecturers, salesmen, etc. This is accomplished by an intermittent movement which in itself is a novelty. As you will see from the illustration this movement is what is known as the roller tooth gear movement and allows the film to be projected without the use of a shutter. The picture is passed from three to five times as quickly as on any other machine, making the use of fan or shutter superfluous. This intermittent cam and roller tooth gear are made of the best grade of tool steel, oil hardened, ground, fitted and run in an oil box. Making it noiseless and insuring its continued accuracy. The manufacturers claim fifteen points in favor of the Educator and from the demonstration I received, and the examination I made, I believe their claims are not exaggerated. I will, in the near future give a more detailed description of this projector which is being handled by the Educational Motion Picture and Film Company of St. Louis, Mo.

Diffraction Gratings and Their Spectra—Grating Produces Normal Spectrum—A Ray of White Light May Be Decomposed or Split Up Into Its Component Parts by Other Means Than the Use of a Prism—Frauenhofer First to Devise a Diffraction Grating

A RAY of white light may be decomposed or split up into its component colors by other means than by the use of a prism, such as was described last week.

We will now consider the case of a parallel ray of light falling upon an exceedingly narrow slit pierced in an opaque screen. When a ray of light passes through an exceedingly narrow opening or slit it is diffracted or broken up and shows a disposition to bend around the edges of the slit. Where the light bends around the edges of the slit interference colors or fringes are seen. These are due to interference between the secondary waves of the light ray incident upon the slit but they would not be noticeable if the slit was not there to limit the width of the wave front.

It is difficult to describe in simple language the exact cause of the diffraction of light ray by a narrow slit and nothing would be gained by going more deeply into this phenomenon here. It is sufficient to state that this diffracting effect of the narrow opening upon the light ray forms the principle upon which the diffraction grating works.

The Diffraction Grating

A diffraction grating (in its simplest form) is an opaque screen pierced with a great number of very narrow slits, side by side, and very close together. By means of such a grating or grillwork a ray of light may be split up into a spectrum, showing all of the spectrum colors, just as is the case when using a prism. The spectra produced by a diffraction grating are vastly superior for scientific work (and especially the photographic analysis of color) to prismatic spectra, as will be presently explained.

Fraucnhofer, a pioneer investigator, was the first to devise and use a diffraction grating. His first grating was made by winding very fine wire around a square frame having at its top and bottom screws with very fine threads.

With this very crude grating Frauenhofer was able to observe all of the characteristics of diffraction spectra—just as we observe them today. In his efforts to produce gratings having finer slits and more slits per inch Frauenhofer tried cutting the parallel slits in a sheet of gold-foil cemented to a plate of glass, and he also tried scratching parallel lines on a thin layer of grease spread upon glass. But when he finally built a dividing machine which, by means of a diamond point, scratched fine parallel lines on glass plates, he laid the foundation for great advances in spectroscopy and the study of light and color.

Spectra Produced by Grating

When a parallel ray of light from a spectroscope slit is allowed to fall upon a transmission grating, placed at right angles to the light ray, there is formed a series of spectra—instead of just one spectrum such as a prism forms.

An idea of the distribution of the spectra produced by a grating may be gained by studying the diagram A, Fig. 4. We see here the diffraction spectra as viewed with the eye in line with the axis of the collimator and slit. The white line S, in the center, is the image of the slit. There is a dark space on either side of this and then there is seen on each side of this dark area a complete spectrum, commencing with the violet, nearest the image of the slit, and extending right through all the colors to the red.

These first two spectra on either side of the central white image are termed spectra of the first order and are indicated by the numbers 1 in the diagram A. Fig. 4. Following the first order spectrum on each side another dark interval is observed, somewhat less in extent than the dark space between the central image and the first order spectra.

Next to this second dark area we now observe on either side another complete spectrum dispersed (or spread out) to about twice the width of the spectra of the first order. These are called the spectra of the second order, and are indicated by the numbers 2 in the diagram. A further examination of the spectrum of the second order, on either side, will show that it is immediately folowed by another or third spectrum. These spectra of the third order (indicated by the numbers 3) are so close to the spectra of the second order that the red ends of the second order spectra are seen to be overlapped by the violet ends of the spectra of the third order.

The first order spectra are the most brilliant, but, the second order spectra being more dispersed are likely to prove more useful when using the grating in the spectroscope. The third spectra are more subdued than are the second and upon close observation through the spectroscope several more spectra can be seen on either side, overlapping more and more the ones previous. These spectra of high orders, it is almost needless to say, are seldom used in making observations.

One of the first things which the user of a grating will notice is the much higher resolution, as compared with a prism, and the greater number of fixed lines visible. When a grating is placed upon the prism table of a spectrscope (in place of the prism of course) and the solar spectrum examined through the telescope the Sodium or D line will generally be seen separated in the spectrum of the first order, while upon studying the spectrum of the second order the Nickel line can generally be seen between the two D lines. These things greatly interest the average student in this interesting branch of science.

Grating Spectra Are Normal Spectra

Another readily noticeable feature of the spectrum formed by a diffraction grating is the distribution of the various colors. By reference to B, Fig. 4, it will be seen that the red of the grating spectrum occupies a greater space than does the red of the prismatic spectrum. The violet, which in a prismatic spectrum is abnormally spread out, is here seen to occupy a much narrower area, while the green occupies just about the same area as in the prismatic spectrum. The yellow now appears near the center and, like the blue-green, occupies but a narrow space. This even distribution of the colors, all arranged exactly according to the order of their wave-length, is one of the principal reasons why the diffraction spectrum is used in the majority of important spectroscopic investigations. Diffraction spectra are normal spectra, because, the material of which the grating is made has no influence on the distribution of the colors, and the importance of the diffraction grating, as a scientific device, will be appreciated when it is stated that the grating is the principle appliance used in measuring the wave-length of light.

The Transmission Grating

A glass diffraction grating, having many fine parallel lines scratched upon it surface, is known as a transmission grating. When it is considered that there must be several thousand of these lines within the space of one inch and that each line must be of exactly the same width, and that the spaces between the lines must all be of equal width, it will be realized that the making of a grating is an exceedingly difficult, tedious and costly operation.

The first glass gratings to become generally available were those ruled by Norbert in Germany. The most common Norbert rulings, perhaps, were those of 3,000 and 6,000 lines per inch. Next came the gratings ruled by Rutherfurd but the finest and best known diffraction gratings were those ruled by the late Professor Henry A. Rowland of Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore. Rowland constructed and used an exquisitely accurate dividing machine, and it was no extraordinary feat for him to rule a perfectly spaced grating containing 28,000 lines within the space of one inch. When Rowland died in 1901, his machine was out of adjustment and although many tried to continue his work, it looked as if the ruling of gratings had become a lost art.

Finally another ruling machine was perfected however; this time by Professor A. A. Michelson of the University of Chicago. Michelson's machine is capable of very fine work, rulings with 30,000 lines per inch and upwards having been turned out, so it will be noted that although very costly, genuine ruled gratings are still obtainable.

Heretofore we have only been considering one type of grating —the transmission grating—which is made of glass or other transparent material through which the light ray can pass. It was long ago discovered, however, that glass had a very injurious effect on the diamond point used in the ruling machine and it was therefore difficult to produce a perfect glass grating.

Other Types of Grating

Rutherfurd then proposed to rule gratings upon speculum metal, which is very hard and has a mirror-like surface. Speculum metal does not ruin the diamond point as does glass, so for that reason, most all gratings have since been ruled upon speculum metal, or upon glass coated with a film of this metal. Light of course cannot pass through these metallic gratings so their spectra are produced by reflection. They are therefore known as reflection gratings. Rowland, that master maker of diffraction gratings, produced another type of reflection grating—the concave grating. The concave grating is one on which the lines are ruled upon a curved mirror of speculum metal and is, in many respects, the most remarkable and efficient of all types of gratings, it being possible to resolve, with the concave grating, lines which are not seen separated, in the spectra produced by any other device.

We are afraid that many amateur readers, perhaps, do not like to see the Camera Department given over to matters of such a deep technical nature as those at present under consideration. We assure all readers of the Camera Department, however, that we will, in the course of another issue or two, have all of these preliminary considerations disposed of, and we will then be able to proceed with a graphic description and discussion of the various processes by which photographs and motion pictures in natural colors are produced.

It is hoped, on the other hand, that the scientific considerations at present occupying the department will find favor with our readers, because, there is an astonishing lack of scientific knowledge displayed by the majority of cameramen.

The cameraman of the future will have to be something more than an empirical muddler and instead of writing about the larger salaries which cameramen should receive, we propose to lay the groundwork of the knowledge which cinematographers must possess in order to secure the larger salaries.

This, the policy of the Camera Department, will obtain in the future as it has in the past.

CLEANING FILM POSITIVES

O. F. F. C. of Albany, N. Y., inquires:

"Kindly let us know the best way of keeping film to prevent dryness and also as to cleaning them. Would appreciate this information very much as we are troubled somewhat by both of the above."

In reply: This inquiry, while not quite within the province of the Camera Department has come the way of the editor, so we will advise to the best of our ability and recollection.

We presume that the correspondent (whom it appears operates a film exchange) is already provided with film vaults or metal film safes. There is a compartment at the bottom of these film safes where pans (or other containers) filled with water may be placed, to keep the reels of film in a moistened condition. Some place a large sponge saturated with water in the lower part of their film containers.

A number of years ago, when all matters pertaining to the technical end of film manufacture received more attention than they now do, most all laboratories used to immerse the films in a weak solution of glycerine in water just prior to drying. Glycerine has an affinity for water, and a film treated with glycerine tends to aborb sufficient moisture from the atmosphere to cause it to remain pliable for an extended period.

The omission of the glycerine treatment by most laboratories at present, however, is responsible for the rapidity with which a film dries out and becomes brittle. There is a way of remedying this deficiency to some extent.

While visiting that sterling projection expert Cecil R. Woods, at the Liberty theatre, N. Y., during the early days of the "Birth of a Nation's" presentation there; we saw, among many other interesting things, the use of glycerine and moth balls (camphor) as a film preservative. In the lower part of the film cabinet, at the "Liberty," was a pan containing a quantity of glycerine, into which had been thrown a dozen or more moth balls. As camphor, which is more or less volatile, is a constituent of the celluloid film base, it was made possible in this way to restore to the film the camphor and the moisture which it was deprived of when projected. As the original print of the "Birth of a Nation" lasted a long while, we believe this treatment must have been very efficient.

With regard to the cleaning of film—this is a little more like work. Although our opinion is, perhaps, not final, we do not look with favor upon the devices which attach to the rewind table and through which the film is run. Our reason is—that when using such a device the dirt and grit removed (by the pads) from the first section of film run through, serves to scratch the remaining portion of the film in its passage through the device.

Of the various renovating machines and systems some "deliver" while some do not seem to benefit the films thus processed. The charges (per reel) are also, in many cases, found to be extortionate.

Anyone can thoroughly clean a reel of film by the use of some "elbow grease," a rewinder, several yards of canton flannel and a pint of benzol (or benzene).

The reel of film being mounted upon the rewinder, a yard or so of the flannel should be torn off and saturated with benzol. This should be laid on the rewind table and—having laid the film on it—one end of the flannel is raised up and placed over the film. The flannel is now pressed tightly down upon the film with the palm of the hand and rewinding commenced.

After each hundred feet or so the flannel should be opened and examined to see how much dirt has accumulated. If the cloth is badly fouled a fresh section should be brought to bear on the film, and so on until the reel is cleaned. The canton flannel may be well soaked with the benzol without any fear of the film sticking together, as this well-known solvent of oil and grease evaporates very rapidly.

PROPER CONDENSER: AND OTHER THINGS

me how to figure it out? How far from the lamp should the wire get hot? I am using a No. 6 wire. Would there be less heating if I used a No. 5, and would I be able to use this on 30 amperes? Will you also tell me the best way to line up the optical system. I will thank you, brother, for your kindness.

ANS.—With a lens of 5½ inch E. F. a 6½ and a 7½ inch condenser would be about the right thing, drawing your lamp house as far back as it is possible to get it with a spot just large enough to enirely cover the aperture plate of the machine. See that your field is clear, which you can do by projecting the light through the machine without film; if there is a ghost try and work it out by moving the lamp farther away from the condensers.

The disance from the condensers to the aperture plate can only be determined by actual experiment; what will do in one place will not do in another, and there you are. As to your wires getting hot.

They should not feel unduly warm at a greater distance than twelve inches from the lamp house, if they do there is something wrong; either you have a loose connection, or the wires need to be trimmed. Cut off the ends that go on to the burner until you find live wire, or wire that is not brittle and does not break off. Scrape your terminals until they are bright and clean, then attach your wires to the lamp. This is one thing that a great many operators neglect to do, and it is necessary, if one is to have good projection, to see that all contacts are kept clean and tight, and owing to the excessive heat imposed upon the wires at the lamp it should be the duty of the operator to cut off the ends of these wires at least once a week.

A No. 5 wire would be more economical in the long run, but that too would heat if you did not keep all contacts clean. A No. 5 wire will carry up to 75 amperes, so you need have no fear as to its carrying thirty. A wire will carry any amperage from one ampere to capacity but be sure to consult a wire table to find out what its carrying capacity is. To line up the optical system, first light up your lamp until you have your spot focused on the aperture plate, then throw off your switch, allowing the lamp to become cool, then take a small piece of wire and bend it in the shape of a U hook and place this between the carbons, taking care that you do not change the position of the lamp in doing so. Attach a strong cord, preferably a fish line to this wire and removing condensers and projection lens from its tube, draw the line from carbons to the front wall of the operating room, and tie the end of the line to a stick of wood on the outside of the port hole in such a position that it can be readily moved from side to side or up and down.

Now take a machinist's caliper and measure at each point the condenser mount, the aperture plate, and the lens tube jacket until you find that the line is in the exact center at each of these points. Withdraw your line and replace the lens in its jacket and you can be pretty certain that you are all right. Do not make the mistake of loosening the lens should your picture be not framed as it was before, but move your machine until the picture is in the position you desire.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Lux

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

Two Factors Necessary for Music and the Picture

First Is the Elimination of All That Is Disturbing to the Audience. Not Only the Disturbing Condition Which Is Caused by a Lack of Synchronization, But Also That Disturbing Element Which Is due to Poorly Arranged Numbers for Picture Playing

THERE are two factors essential to the success of music and the picture. First, the elimination of all that is disturbing to the audience, not only the disturbing condition which is caused by a lack of synchronization, but also that disturbing element which is due to poorly arranged numbers for picture playing. Lack of musical atmosphere suitable to the screen color is always quite noticeable. Numbers of tumultuous interpolations when synchronizing to quiet screen action are very disturbing. Such numbers should only be used at times when the screen action suggests agitation or high tension excitement, which in theatricals is commonly known as "heavy action."

With numbers properly arranged for any instrument or instruments the musician or orchestral leader will soon accomplish a method of flexible interpretation which is highly essential to advanced picture playing. By this we do not mean that an adagio could be converted into a presto movement successfully or that a legato number could be played staccato, etc. This is all ridiculous and such arguments are only advanced by such musicians who are only familiar with a very limited library of music.

Picture music does not require a nonsensical abuse of good music and musical interpretations. When music does not synchronize with the general opinions of its hearers it is annoying and disturbing. Consequently we cannot hold that it will pass with the audience as synchronizing with screen action. It is far better to segue to a new number when you find that you cannot synchronize to the screen action with a number you are playing without disfiguring it beyond human recognition as music. There are many other disturbing conditions in picture playing which it is difficult at the present time to overcome. This is due to the fact that most arrangements of musical numbers are made by men who have made little or no study of the requirements which will benefit the photoplay theatre. The music publishers, who are properly equipped to furnish all the necessary whcrewithal to make Music and the Picture all that could be desired, have up to now used their entire energies in trying to corral the entire picture music industry with a view of advertising their publications and otherwise popularizing themselves as musical publishers, with little or no thought to creating a musical catalog of special and well thought out numbers revised to suit the requirements of the modern photoplay theatre.

Picture Music Must Have Its Own Rule

It is known in musical circles that arrangements for dance, hotel or cabaret are entirely different from arrangements of known value in concert or theatre work. The same rule holds good in picture music. The requirements are here again entirely different from those of the above mentioned. I might suggest remedies but it is a known fact that successful musical numbers are the result of individual and original thought.

Consequently composers and arrangers desiring to be successful in this new line of music should make a thorough research and study of the present and possible future conditions, with a view of allowing themselves to be inspired by its requirements, thereby creating for themselves a new field of originality. I have many times stated that the success of picture music depends upon the combined efforts of many and will never be successfully domineered by one.

With this coming season I am positive we will see the beginning of new and specially arranged music for photoplay theatre work which will materially assist and simplify picture theatre work and make synchronization of an undistrubing character possible to any intelligent musician or leader, without resorting to the musical score.

The other factor of synchronization is found in maintaining a certain temperament among the audience in a quict and nonperceptible manner. This cannot be done by a classification of the dynamic signs known in music. To accomplish this it is first essential that the musician is acquainted with his library of music so that he may know whether the number suggests romance, pathos, frvolity, excitement or tumult. It is again not only essential that he should know the theme values of all these numbers but he should also know the characteristic atmosphere they are better suited to. It is quite often required that while a number may express but one emotion it may however suggest other possible screen requirements. You would not play the same love theme for a love scene set in an American drawing room as you would play for a similar scene with a Japanese setting. In synchronizing emotional music to picture screen action numbers of very telling theme should be used.

The surest way of knowing that your music is synchronizing is to know that your audience in leaving the theatre will say "I didn't take especial notice of the music, but the show was good." Rest assured that if your music was poor and disturbing or did not synchronize, the audience would certainly have felt it temperamentally if they had not known it as a musical fact.

The success of Music and the Picture or the photoplay theatre in general depends entirely upon the audience enjoying the show in its entirety. Added attractions or short magnificent moments that will momentarily attract the eye are never lasting in the picture theatre. The successful theatre is one wherein its entire atmosphere is synchronized and no single factor is allowed to be more prominent than any other.

LOEW'S CIRCUIT OF THEATRES USES MANY ORGANS, RANGING IN COST FROM $8,000 TO $20,000 EACH

SEPTEMBER 4, which inaugurated the 1916-17 season of the Loew theatres, found eighteen theatres of their circuit equipped with large pipe organs, ranging in cost from $8,000 to $20,000 each. Noting this advanced step of Mr. Loew's, who is known as the pioneer and today's largest photoplay exhibitor and vaudeville manager in the world, it speaks well for the advancing of better music in our high class photoplay theatre.

Mr. Loew has the distinction of being the first theatre owner to encourage music and the picture.

Pathe Gold Rooster Feature By ERNST LUZ Max. Projection Time 72 Minutes

This plot is adapted so as to make it possible for the Pianist, One Man Orchestra Player, Organist or Orchestra Leader to make some prior preparation for playing the picture. The numbers suggested do not need to be used, similar numbers, or numbers suggested by "notes" will do as well. It is intended that no unnecessary expense be added for the exhibitor or musician.

22.	Agitato X	"A.B.C. Dr. Set No. 15"—D. 4. (Jos. W. Stern & Co.)	Wife falls on floor.
23.	Desc. (Hy-Path) XXX	"Rosemary" (M. Witmark)
24.	Desc. (Path) XX	"Waiting for You" (Jos. W. Stern)	To End.

Note:—In music plots each reel of film is divided into 10 units of time, each unit denoted by one X representing about 1½ minutes. Consequently when a number is designated by XX it plays about 3 minutes, XXXX about 6 minutes, etc. When no X appears after musical description it means that the number is very short and does not play a minute or more. When cues to stop numbers are in quotation "——" it means that the Cue is reading matter or sub-title. All other cues are action on screen. All segues should be made quietly and clean. When quick segues or abrupt stops are necesary it will be mentioned in Cues and Notes. When the time of each 1,000 ft. of film is less than 15 minutes there will appear less than 10 X's in each reel. To get the correct time of projection for each reel, multiply the number of X's appearing in each reel by 1½.

Effect Notes: A telephone imitation given during No. 12 at the point where the young artist is about to kiss the heiress will be very effective. No. 2 should be a lively movement played on the violin alone. No. 9 is a piano imitation suggested on the screen. All other effects are superfluous.

Music Notes: This picture should be very interesting to play. There are many opportunities for making the music synchronize to great advantage. Nos. 13, 14 and 15 accompany dances and the screen should be followed very closely. You will note that the opportunities for musical contrast are very great. No. 1 should be a medium slow legato and melodious number. Should have a distinct romantic appeal. No. 2 is a screen suggestion. No. 3 is a slow, pathetic number of positive dramatic effect. Should play about five minutes. No. 4 should be a slow, melodious waltz lento movement played legato. No. 5 should be a lively light 4-4 movement.. No. 6 should be a slow, melodious number of pathetic appeal. Does not need to be of dramatic suggestion. No. 7 is a modern 2-4 dance number. Must be played very softly. No. 8 should be an andante movement of pathetic appeal. No. 9 is a screen suggestion. No. 10 is similar to 5. No. 11 should be a modern slow number of romantic appeal. No. 12 is similar to 4. No. 13 must be a lively polka movement as used for toe dancing. No. 14 a light waltz for ball room dancing. No. 15 a lively light gavotte for fancy dancing. No. 16 is similar to 3. No. 17 similar to 4. No. 18 similar to 11. No. 19 similar to 5. No. 20 similar to 3. This number can however be less serious. No. 21 must be a strictly slow dramatic number of a positive agitated effect. This is your big number and you should select a number making it possible for you to illustrate heavy dramatic action on screen. No. 23 is similar to 3. No. 24 is similar to 6.

Example of Best Type of English Picture Theatre

The Picture House, Belmont Road, Liverpool, Is an Instance of What Our British Cousins Do in the Way of Attractive Theatre Building—It Is a Veritable Palace of Photodramatic Art—Decorations Are Superb

IN many instances English motion picture theatres may be cited to Americans as examples of finished design, the consummation of efficient management and the last word in program selection for a completely satisfied patronage. Here and there are photodrama houses throughout the kingdom that stand out in picturedom like the steady glow of a beacon in a stormy sea.

A theatre of this character is in Belmont road, Liverpool, the Picture House. That name seems to imply only one theatre of any account in the neighborhood—the picture house; as if the management of this favored amusement landmark felt that the public would take it for granted that there was just one motion picture theatre meant when they thought of pictures in that locality. And perhaps the assumption is right, judging from the photographs of the Picture House, now before us, in the absence of other picture theatre information concerning that section of Liverpool.

Manager William A. Leak may well be proud of the place under his management. Anyone who might still have his first photoplay to see could not help, in passing the Picture House for the first time, wanting to venture inside.

The structure is a blaze of white in the noonday light, and impresses with a certain air of solidity and decorative attractiveness. A large gable, with Elizabethan panels, towering over the enentrance, gives the theatre a delightful old time touch.

The interior decorations, in the entrance hall and the auditorium, are in keeping with the general air of elegance characteristic of the Picture House of Belmont road. Oak finish and tapestry pannelling, with fibrous plaster ceiling in Wedgwood medallions, strike the eye and hold the attention the moment the patron enters the doorway. On the highly polished parquet floor are spread rugs of harmonizing patterns. Potted plants in wooden tubs, bound with brass, add a distinctive touch to this part of the theatre.

Strip lighting all around the building makes the theatre brilliant at night. Owing to the excellent exit arrangement the house, at capacity, can be emptied in two minutes. The office of the manager is in telophonic communication with all parts of the house.

The ventilating system is perfect. Eight ventilators are worked by fans between the ceiling and the roof. The heating is maintained by hot water radiators. A dinner system of lighting has been installed in the auditorium. On the main floor are 621 seats and 157 in the balcony. A Gaumont motor driven projector throws the pictures on a linen screen, one hundred feet away.

Tip up seats finished in rose du Barri plush make a pleasing contrast against green carpets. At the screen end of the theatre, purple draperies cover the bareness of the prosceniumn arch. Draw curtains of rose du Barri velvet are used over the screen when pictures are not shown.

The music consists of a piano, first and second violin and a 'cello. Large photos of actresses and actors and photographs of the principal scenes in the features shown during the week make part of the publicity plan to excite the interest of the patrons.

A matinee and two performances at night consist of the bill. The house is located in the residential section of Liverpool, and employs fourteen people, in addition to the members of the orchestra.

The management uses the newspapers freely for advertising coming attractions, bill boards, both with pictorials and letterpress, and it also distributes 12,000 hand bills each week to addresses on a permanent list of patrons and prospect patrons.

STANLEY WILL ADD A 3000 CAPACITY HOUSE TO ITS STRING

IT is reported on the best authority that the Stanley Company has another big theatre in prospect in Philadelphia. The house is to be a large one with a 3,000 seating capacity. Stores will be included in the proposed building, which is to be erected at 52nd and Chestnut streets. Every up-to-date device will be included in the project.

MAJESTIC, WYANDOTTE, MICH., IS NEXT TO THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

THE Majestic, Wyandotte, Mich., is an attractive picture theatre standing on a plot of ground measuring seventy-five feet by one hundred and twenty. It is a fireproof structure of steel, stone and faced brick. It has a seating capacity of 1,200, all on the main floor. The house has no balcony. It was built last year and is managed by M. Wilbur for the Majestic Theatre Corporation. Haywood and Wakefield furnished the seats and a Bartola instrument makes up the music equipment.

The lobby is a spacious affair, measuring 14 by 118 feet. A Caille ticket seller is in the box office. The admission prices are ten, fifteen and twenty cents.

Interior Majestic Theatre, Wyandotte, Mich.

The Majestic, the largest picture theatre in Wyandotte, is located next to the public library, and often tempts people to stop in on their way to exchange books. The interior decorative scheme is in the Adam style, and the color effect is obtained by old rose and ivory.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS STUDIO DIRECTORY

This is the greatest thing of its kind that ever was undertaken.

It includes a biographical sketch of all photoplayers, studio executives, directors and assistant directors, camera artists, studio managers and publicity men; in fact everyone connected with the production of motion pictures.

Every exhibitor needs it at his elbow not only for his publicity work for the papers, but through past performances of stars, for example, he can judge of the pulling value of coming films. Everyone connected with the industry needs it as a constant reference. It is an absolute necessity for every member of the industry.

The Directory is included with the regular issue of Motion Picture News and will be included with all subscriptions received up to October 15, 1916.

By itself it sells for 50 cents.

Positively not included in any subscriptions received by us after October 15, 1916.

Annual price of the "News" in the United States—$2.00 per year—less than five cents a copy. Canada $3.00 per year; Foreign—$4.00 per year.

Send us your order at once.

THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS
729 SEVENTH AVENUE

adapted to five and ten cent houses, being designed for safety and economy.

There is a different bell to register each denomination of coins, while pennies are automatically thrown out. There is also a safety attachment which keeps the money in a locked compartment after it is deposited. The quick change attachment dispenses with tickets and ticket taker.

This firm has just installed two 6-A Power machines in the Palace theatre, a large house at 222 E. Girard avenue, owned by Donnely and Haslett, which has just reopened for the fall season.

Two motor drives for Simplex Machines have also been placed in the Imperial theatre on Main street, Manayunk a thriving suburb of Philadelphia. William Greenfield is manager of the Imperial.

The Philadelphia Advertising Company, 1214 Market street, has the selling rights for the United States for the Stanley Automatic Moving Picture machine. Many advantages are claimed for the machine. Being enclosed in an asbestos box, it needs no booth, and can be operated by any one without previous experience. It uses Standard films, so there is no limit to the choice of subjects available.

It is particularly adopted to private exhibitors and home use as it can be attached to any electric light socket. It is driven by a Universal motor, alternating or direct current, and runs without rewinding film. Any size picture up to eight feet can be projected. It is guaranteed for one year, and the price is one hundred dollars. A large impetus to the home use of motion pictures is expected to result from the introduction of this machine.

DIRECTORY OF NEW THEATRES

CALIFORNIA

The Rex theatre at Vallejo was closed recently for two weeks, during which time extensive improvements were made by Mr. Smith, owner of the house.

The Santa Fe Theatre on Grove street, Oakland has been opened again after having been closed for several weeks, George W. Foster, Jr., being the new owner.

IOWA

O. P. M. Littlejohn of Laurens has purchased the moving picture theatre at Tipton, and has taken immediate charge.

October 1 is the date set by the proprietors for the completion of the new moving picture theatre being erected in Palmer. The house will seat about 700 persons.

Messrs. Critchell and Sears have opened the Colonial theatre at Grinnell. This theatre will have a lot of competition, as Grinnell is a college town and there are other houses there.

Out of the little town of Delhi comes a peculiar complaint for not having a moving picture show. The town, which supports nearly 450 persons, has no electric lights. By December 1 it is expected that this essential will be installed when the picture show will be opened. In the past moving pictures have been given there under the direction of the Rev. Carl Skinner in the basement of the Methodist Church.

Messrs. Kress and Buchacker, who own and operate the Opera House at Millard, have closed it for some time while making repairs. The time of reopening is not yet set.

The Empress theatre at Malvern has been taken over by C. W. Schmidt, formerly of Hartington, Neb. Mr. Schmidt owned and managed the Lyric in the Nebraska town, but sold it recently to W. A. Bowker. Mr. Schmidt has taken immediate charge of his new property.

Thomas Reiner, manager of the Olympic theatre at Lenox, announces that he will have to cut out showing pictures two night out of the week, as on Tuesday and Thursdays his theatre is turned into a skating rink. Just so there is something going on every night, Lenox citizens are satisfied.

Dr. J. M. Fredericksen and S. Hoien have purchased the picture show at Ringsted from Armand Madsen. Other business connections forced Mr. Madsen to relinquish his theatre.

Messrs. Don and John Preston opened their new theatre, the Crescent, recently. Part of the program during the winter will be vaudeville and the rest will be moving pictures. The owners claim that for its size the Crescent is one of the best houses in Iowa.

George H. Peterson of Story City has purchased the Isis Theatre at Jewell from C. L. Allen. Mr. Peterson is manager of the Grand Theatre at Story City, having conducted that place for the past two years. He will still run the Grand, operating both places. Although he will reside in Story City, the Isis will be under his direct management. Mr. Allen plans to continue in the motion picture business elsewhere and is figuring on securing a location in some other town.

C. Sperbeck has purchased the Princess theatre at Reinbeck from John Wilkens and Son.

August D. Paulsen has purchased the Pastime theatre at Schleswig.

Clyde Eddington has purchased the Majestic theatre at Ossian from David Jacobson.

Charles Chapman has leased the Masonic Opera House at What Cheer. Harry Simpson is building a new moving picture house at McGregor.

W. W. Cocroft has purchased the moving picture theatre at Rock Valley. George Graves has purchased the Gem theatre at Coin.

F. C. Schroeder has purchased the Majestic theatre at Wellman.

Bruce Jones wil open a new picture theatre at Keswick, Iowa, in the near future. Willis Oaks has purchased the Star theatre at Shannon City.

J. R. Battersby has sold the Auditorium theatre at Lewis to Mr. Frost.

KANSAS

E. Van Hining opened the new Best theatre at Independence, Friday, Aug. 18, to large patronage.

MAINE

A new theatre just completed at Presque Isle, is to be managed by A. Nadeau.

Under the promotion of James W. Greely a new company has been formed to take over the Jefferson theatre at Portland. Mr. Greely will manage the theatre which will run pictures exclusively.

The Seashore Property at Old Orchard will have a changed aspect next year, as F. G. Staples has sold it to Boston parties. The price named was $60,000, and it is declared that the new owners will tear down many of the present buildings and erect a dance hall and picture house combined, a midway and observation balcony.

MARYLAND

The motion picture theatre known as the Baltimore, at 3205-7-9 Fait avenue, Baltimore, has been purchased from George Kircbner by the Broadway Theatre Company, which is conducting the Broadway Theatre on South Broadway. It is expected that the improvements, which consist of remodeling and renovating the premises, will be completed by Sept. 9, at which time the playhouse will open. John Hannibal was the attorney for Mr. Kirchner and Morris A. Rome represented the Broadway Theatre Company.

MICHIGAN

The following theatres are now under construction in Detroit:

New Madison, Broadway and Witherell streets, facing Grand Circus Park. Architect, C. Howard Crane. Contractor, Schmied-Sisman Company. Seating capacity, about 2,500. Open about December 1. Owner, John H. Kunsky, Inc.

Iris theatre, Grand Boulevard and Joseph Campau avenues. Now being erected and to be completed before the end of the year.

Hugo Scherer has let the contract for a new theatre to be on West Elizabeth street, near Woodward, with entrance on Adams avenue, facing Grand Circus Park. The lessees will be A. J. Gillingham, of Detroit, and John P. Harris of Pittsburgh. Will seat about 2,000 people, and will be completed about February 1.

New theatre being erected at Mack and Holcomb avenues ready by the first of January, for the Del—The Amusement Company.

Colonial theatre, for Hoffman Bros., Woodward and Sibley streets which will have a policy of motion pictures and vaudeville. Ready about February 1.

Another theatre for Thomas Lynch, adjoining the present Catherine tbeatre, Chene and Catherine streets.

Tbe Grand Circus Theatre, 301 Woodward avenue, Detroit, is now under tbe management of the Woodward Theatre Company who have reopened same and made some improvements. This enterprising theatre company now controls the Rosebud, Comique, La Salle, Woodward and Pallister theatres—the Grand Circus making their sixth house. The Grand Circus will play new pictures daily.

Paul Schlossman, who already controls a number of theatres in Western Michigan, is having plans prepared for a new one to be constructed in Muskegon. C. Howard Crane, Dime Bank building, Detroit, is the architect.

MISSOURI

Frank F. Tracy, proprietor of the Royal theatre, St. Joseph, has remodelled his house. Some very exquisite decorating and refinishing have put the theatre on a basis far higher than ever before.

E. J. Ragland has sold the Orpheum theatre, Lexington, and is going to Kansas City.

NEBRASKA

Goldberg Brothers, erecting the new Sun theatre on Farnham street, Omaha, predict that their house wil be ready for occupancy about October 1. The Sun has been modeled after the popular Majestic in Detroit. It will show feature productions, it is expected.

J. E. Schlank has sold the Hopp theater at Omaha to Hugo F. Bilz.

Frank Harris has sold his theatre at Belvidere to H. D. Niblack and Williard Morgan.

F. P. McCord has opened a new picture house at Belvidere.

M. J. Downes will open tbe Crescent theatre at Kearney soon.

George Sinclair has purchased the Elmoreck theatre at Overton. W. C. Heiden will build a new theatre at Thayer in the near future.

Schoenbeck and Kennovsky will open a new picture house at Snyder soon.

Work has commenced on the rebuilding and renovation of the Lyrick theatre, which was partially destroyed by fire recently at Aurora.

Jordon and Simonson have leased the Star theatre at O'Neill.

OHIO

The Northern theatre, 584 North High street, Columbus, has been leased to the De Luxe Theatre Company of Lima.

The Manhattan theatre, at Superior avenue N. E. and East 105th street, Cleveland, after being closed during the summer months, has opened for the season with new ideas, new management and an entirely new program. Paramount pictures will be shown every Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, starting September 7. The Manhattan has been thoroughly cleaned and renovated and put in first-class condition for the coming season. F. E. Johnson, for two years manager of the Metropolitan theatre and for the past year at the New Y theatre, will be the manager.

TRIANGLE PLAYS

Pictures to be Released Week of Sept. 24

TRIANGLE - Fine Arts

LILLIAN GISH in

"Diane of the Follies"

As a modern picture of the stage and matrimony this latest TRIANGLE PLAY is sure to arouse considerable enthusiasm. Men will enjoy it. Women will love it, for among other things 67 beautiful gowns of the very latest fashion are displayed to say nothing of the $75,000 worth of jewels worn by Miss Gish.

TRIANGLE - Kay Bee

W. S. HART in

"The Dawn-Maker"

This week exhibitors are again offered the opportunity of presenting that premier star, W. S. Hart, in a big virile story of the great Northwest — the story of a quarter-breed Indian who fell in love with a white girl. Hart's characterization of the typical American Indian is a piece of work that will long be remembered.

TRIANGLE - Keystone

Little need be said to you of the value of Keystone Comedies. You know their true worth, the way the public enjoys them, and their drawing power. Keystones are released only through the Triangle Film Corporation.

TRIANGLE - Keystone

You appreciate that a program to be well balanced—to give the maximum amount of entertainment — must contain good comedies. For years Keystone Comedies have been universally declared the master laugh-makers.

"With a Triangle Play Your House Will Pay"

TRIANGLE PLAYS

W. S. Hart in "THE DAWN-MAKER"

The popularity of W. S. Hart — his great drawing power and his success—has never been questioned.

Exhibitors will welcome the appearance of this TRIANGLE star in his latest success, "The Dawn-Maker," a picture different from any in which he has appeared, which will add even more to his popularity.

If you are not running TRIANGLE PLAYS why not look into the matter now?

SELL SEATS

WILLIAM A. BRADY, in addition to being the Director General of World Pictures, is the personal booking manager for every contract exhibitor.

YOUR responsibility does not end with applying for WORLD SERVICE. True, you are relieved of vast responsibility, and you know it has been transferred into most capable hands. YOUR PROBLEM IS TO SELL SEATS. You say that you have amusement to sell. Of course. But stop to think! Ten people may secure more amusement out of a picture than a hundred. YOUR JOB IS TO SELL YOUR FIVE HUNDRED OR A THOUSAND SEATS, as the case may be, and KEEP them sold, day after day, night after night.

YOUR problem is to sell seats just as surely as the retailer's problem is to sell his stock of goods. The successful retailer knows that the life blood of his business depends upon a quick turn-over. SELL TODAY'S STOCK TODAY.

NOW, today's unfilled house means a loss that can't be made up. IT IS WATER GONE OVER THE DAM.

WITH World Service, you not only secure the services of William A. Brady as Booking Manager, but the most earnest efforts of our entire organization in helping you sell YOUR SEATS.

How can an advertiser continue advertising? By giving YOU value.

The Greater VITAGRAPH

The Best—In Abundance—

GREATER Vitagraph has increased its capitalization to twenty-five million dollars for two reasons:

First, to provide the exhibitors of the United States and Canada with productions of maximum drawing power.

Second, to present such productions—in abundance.

How thoroughly this policy is to be followed, is evidenced by the announcement that during the next few months, Vitagraph will release:

Three E. H. Sothern Pictures
Eight Anita Stewart Pictures
Eight Earle Williams Pictures
Eight Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno Pictures
Eight Lillian Walker Pictures

In both the quality of its releases, and the quantity of that quality, Greater Vitagraph again respectfully invites exhibitors to try to match its offerings with the output of the entire motion picture field.

VITAGRAPH

The Greater VITAGRAPH

Coming Features of Greater Vitagraph

VITAGRAPH has admittedly a greater assemblage of stars—stars by reason of their proved ability and popularity—than any other film producing organization.

In forthcoming productions will be seen such widely known screen favorites as

Anita Stewart	Lillian Walker	Naomi Childers	James Morrison
E. H. Sothern	Antonio Moreno	Marc MacDermott	Charlotte Ives
Edith Storey	Peggy Hyland	S. Rankin Drew	Evart Overton
Earle Williams	Charles Richman	Lucille Lee Stewart	Adele Kelly
Alice Joyce	Dorothy Kelly	Huntley Gordon	Joseph Kilgour
Harry Morey	Barney Bernard	Virginia Hammond	Josephine Earle

Among the releases in which these, and other Greater Vitagraph players will appear, are the following:

The Most Famous Actor of the Modern Stage

E. H. Sothern

Supported by the Popular English Favorite

Peggy Hyland

In

"The Chattel"

Paul West's splendid drama of a marriage that was born in sordidness and ripened into beautiful fulfillment.

The Master Drama of a Super Criminal

"Through the Wall"

The Great Mystery Story by

Cleveland Moffett

Featuring

Nell Shipman, William Duncan and George Holt

"The greatest detective drama ever produced on the stage or the screen."

Barney Bernard

Creator of "Abe Potash" in Montague Glass' Play "Potash and Perlmutter"

In a new drama of Jewish life

"A Prince in a Pawnshop"

A tenderly beautiful story of a man who loved his neighbor as himself.

A Twelve-Part Super Serial

"The Scarlet Runner"

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Featuring the screen's biggest drawing card

Earle Williams

Twelve episodes, each a complete story.

Twelve beautiful heroines, twelve splendid love stories, twelve baffling mysteries, twelve rousing adventures, twelve times the punch of the ordinary serial.

A London Vitagraph Production.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's World-Famous Mystery Story

"The Firm of Girdlestone"

Featuring one of England's Foremost Actors

Charles Rock

Supported by Beautiful, Accomplished

Edna Flugrath

Formerly Premier Danseuse, Metropolitan Opera House, New York.

The Vitagraph Favorite

Lillian Walker

In

"The Blue Envelope Mystery"

A beautiful picturization of Sophie Kerr's entrancing mystery story which was published seriallyi n The Woman's Home Companion and read by nearly three million people.

A Stupendous Sequel to "The Battle Cry of Peace."

"The Battle Cry of War"

By J. Stuart Blackton and Cyrus Townsend Brady.
Produced under the Personal Supervision of Commodore Blackton.

Interpreted by a company of many thousands, headed by ALICE JOYCE, HARRY MOREY, NAOMI CHILDERS, JAMES MORRISON, JOSEPH KILGOUR, PEGGY HYLAND, BOBBY CONNELLY, WALTER McGRAIL, EDWARD ELKAS and TEMPLAR SAXE.

Wonderful as was "THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" both as a spectacle and as a money-maker for exhibitors, "THE BATTLE CRY OF WAR" with its clarion call to the slumbering spirit of preparedness, its superb cast and masterly production, surpasses all previous achievements.

VITAGRAPH

The Greater VITAGRAPH

Unequalled in their Box-Office Value

PROMINENT in the casts of other productions, are these Vitagraph favorites, whose hold on the hearts of screen audiences assures the success of their every appearance:

Bobby Connelly	Edward Elkas	William Dunn	William Shea
Arline Pretty	Eulalie Jensen	Adele de Garde	Gordon Gray
Frank Daniels	William Duncan	Anders Randolf	Walter McGrail
Rose Tapley	Mary Maurice	George Holt	Harry Northrup
Charles Wellesley	Charles Kent	Brinsley Shaw	Francis Morgan
Julia Swayne Gordon	Billie Billings	Templar Saxe

The offerings chosen for these players, some of which are listed below, indicate the supreme quality of Greater Vitagraph productions.

E. H. Sothern and Edith Storey

In

"An Enemy to the King"

By Robert N. Stephens

Most of Mr. Sothern's original company has been engaged to support him in the screen production of this, his greatest stage success.

Antonio Moreno and Naomi Childers

In

"The Devil's Prize"

Written and Produced by Marguerite Bertsch

A powerful modern story, a Faust-like play; not an allegory, but a tense, gripping drama of contending human passions —A second, "Law Decides".

Peggy Hyland and Evart Overton

In

"The Enemy"

By George Randolph Chester

From the serial published in Hearst's Magazine and read by nearly four millions. It is the most wonderful argument ever brought against the common enemy—drink.

Lillian Walker

In

"The Dollar and the Law"

By Irvin Cobb

Produced with the cooperation of the American Bankers Association. This first photoplay written by Irvin Cobb, a drama of the use and abuse of money, is one of the most realistic life-portrayals ever filmed.

America's Daintiest Actress

Anita Stewart

In

"The Girl Philippa"

By Robert W. Chambers

Over five million people read this story as a serial in Cosmopolitan Magazine. With charming Anita Stewart playing the role of Robert W. Chambers' most lovable heroine, the wonder-film comes into being.

Marc MacDermott and Naomi Childers

In

"The Selling Price"

Written and Produced by Charles J. Brabin

Marc MacDermott, in a dual role in which double exposure has been carried to perfection, is here cast in the strongest drama of his career.

E. H. Sothern

Supported by

Charlotte Ives

In

"The Man of Mystery"

By Archibald Clavering Gunter

An unusual drama of a man who came back from the Valley of the Shadow, to live again among those who thought him dead.

William Courtenay and Lucille Lee Stewart

In

"The Ninety and Nine"

By Ramsey Morris

A splended revival of one of the greatest stage successes of this generation.

Another Super-Serial in Preparation

"The Secret Kingdom"

By Louis Joseph Vance.

Featuring the Distinguished Actor

Charles Richman

The story of a struggle for a throne; tense situations in which the fate of empires hangs in the balance; beautiful, thrilling, compelling—each episode a gem of production—the whole a diadem of film perfection.

VITAGRAPH

(V-L-S-E)

The Greater VITAGRAPH

The Greater Vitagraph

A six-part
Blue Ribbon Feature

The story of a loveless marriage and a woman's unyielding faith

HE was dead, she believed, and though her heart had gone with him, she gave herself in soulless, legal marriage to another. But closely as she guarded the secret of her first marriage, treachery and a relentless fate laid bare the pitiful story.

And with the revelation came the knowledge that her first husband, the man whose love she treasured above all else, lived and claimed her.

Gone was the secrecy, the pretense, the deceit. In its stead stood the glaring truth and outraged convention. Above the wreck of these lives could the call of a man to his mate find its answer?

"At the Ainsley Ball"—

The eighth episode of the wonderful BEATRICE FAIRFAX series is a pictured story of beauty, grace, romance, mystery and daring.

It is magnificently costumed and splendidly staged.

The ballroom scene is one of unsurpassed brilliancy.

The auto chase with Harry Fox in a flying leap from car to car is a culmination of thrills.

Each episode of BEATRICE FAIRFAX is a complete story — each story a volume of love and romance.

Each episode features some famous screen star in addition to the regular cast.

What other series ever featured such a group as this?

Olive Thomas
Elaine Hammerstein
Betty Howe
Nigel Barrie
Mae Hopkins
Mary Cranston

Other famous stars to be selected for future releases.

Gentlemen:

Permit me to congratulate you upon your recent production "Beatrice Fairfax".

While I was quite certain of its wide popularity, I was not quite prepared for the result of its success on the first presentation on August 30th. Despite the intense hot weather we did capacity business at both matinee and evening performances and am quite satisfied in my mind that the excellent box office receipts was not the result of the ordinary feature shown that day, judging from the constant phone inquiriee when "Beatrice Fairfax" is to be flashed on the screen.

Wishing you every success, I am,

Yours very truly,

S. A. Morass.

Gentlemen:-

The writer witneseth a private screening of your first Golden Eagle Feature, "Jaffery", and wishes to.congratulate you upon same.

"Jaffery" is a great novel, but a greater picture in which charactere turn to life in the most vivid and interesting manner.

It has a big "Punch" and a happy ending which will hold any audience, and I am sure will make money for the exhibitor.

If this is a criterion of the Golden Eagle Features to come I am sure that great success awaits your service.

With best wishes, I am,

Very truly yours,

Mr. Exhibitor:—

When you receive from our branch managers, this week, announcement of General Film Service program for Autumn and Winter, you will receive the equivalent of a certified check covering the expenses of your theatre and allowing a comfortable margin for profits, that will carry you well into the Spring months of next year. This statement is backed by all our resources and the oldest, largest and best producing concerns in the film industry.

Picture theatre patrons will indorse this guarantee.

A program has been arranged for you that no competitor can approach from a viewpoint of Quality, Variety and Consistency.

When we compare General Film Service program, for this Autumn and Winter, to a certified check covering your expense and providing for a margin of profit, we are conservative.

With General Film Service (now supplying more than 6000 exhibitors) these results are certain.

Important!!

Feature producers have doubled on their own tracks in giving you glowing promises of masterpieces, exhibitor "service," and other glittering generalities. Yet it requires but one question to cut beneath the blaring adjectives. It is a simple query -- but its logic is that of the pocketbook. How many exhibitors are making more than expenses? ARE YOU?

Or are you slaving day after day just to pay the landlord and the exchange bills -- hoping against hope that by some miracle conditions may change? Why has exhibiting reached such a state?

Here's why: Because you are defying every rule of successful merchandising, because you are paying too much for your service, BECAUSE YOU HAVE GONE FEATURE MAD!

Look at the proposition coolly. It is undoubtedly all right to run real features occasionally -- but seven days a week of back-breaking rentals leads only to absolute ruin -- it is BUSINESS SUICIDE!

You say you must have something to advertise. Right -- but why have you allowed yourself to be BLUFFED into thinking that it is length and a profit-stealing rental that make advertising value? STARS, UNUSUAL TALKING POINTS, SATISFACTORY PRODUCTIONS make advertising value and a variety programme selected with these points in mind gives you triple the punch of the mediocre five reeler.

Try it out with "Grant, Police Reporter," the new one reel series -- each a complete story -- which will be ready October 20th at General Film offices. "Grant, Police Reporter," will give you STARS whom picture patrons know and like -- daring George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby. It will give you STORIES -- by Robert Welles Ritchie -- for which we are paying more than many feature scenarios cost. It will come to you at a one reel rental -- service cost will decrease and profits increase.

YOU CAN'T MAKE A SILK PURSE OUT OF A SOW'S EAR!!

And you can't make a newspaper, or an Exhibitor's house organ, bright and breezy unless you have the right stuff, unless you are open to ideas and suggestions.

We can learn from many, many sources, and we can get "hunches," valuable "hunches," from experts whose business it is to study ideas and to present them properly.

The proper "hunch" is Selig Pastepot And Shears, the weekly clip sheet that has put the move in the movies. It is the one best bet for the newspaper editor, the exhibitor, for the editor of the theatre program, or house organ. It's free, write us for it.

To make artistic photoplays there must be modern studios and laboratories, star players, and versatile directors.

The Selig Polyscope Company has all of these—modern studios in Chicago and Los Angeles, the largest motion picture zoo in the world, hundreds of red-blooded stories penned by the world's most accomplished writers, and star players to enact these stories.

"In the House of the Chief" is a three reel feature drama with Eugenie Besserer. Released in General Film Co.'s regular service on Monday, October 2. This production contains the very best efforts of the Selig Co.

"The Canbyhill Outlaws" is a Western drama with Tom Mix. Released in General Film service on Saturday, October 7.

And then there's The Selig-Tribune, the world's greatest news film, released in General Film service every Monday and Thursday. Original posters and other ideas of The Selig-Tribune are continually imitated, which is the sincerest form of flattery.

SELIG'S
THE COUNTRY THAT GOD FORGOT

A five-part drama of the arid West featuring

Thomas Santschi and Mary Charleson

"THE COUNTRY THAT GOD FORGOT" tells a vitally human story of the master passions, threading a series of exciting scenes with an intensive psychological study of a woman's soul.

THE COUNTRY THAT GOD FORGOT

is a story "Different from any that has been read—it grips at the elemental life that is in each one of us"—"very well directed and sustained." Thus writes conservative James S. Mc Quade, veteran reviewer, from whose pen praise is praise indeed.

In offering this splendid Selig Red Seal Play we believe we are presenting an attraction of unusual box-office value. If a strong, novel story, spirited action and stirring scenes count for anything—and we believe they do—"The Country That God Forgot" will fill your theatre.

To exhibitors seeking better service and better photoplays:

To faciliate the production of better features and to give exhibitors the best service, Essanay has entered a distributing organization to be known as the KLEINE—EDISON—SELIG—ESSANAY SERVICE.

Quality rather than quantity will be Essanay's aim. Features of five to eight reels will be released at irregular intervals, but of sufficient frequency to place before the public annually a great number of stars and desirable productions.

Besides new features, all those formerly released through V. L. S. E. can be booked through the new organization, including "The Sting of Victory", "According to the Code", "That Sort", "Sherlock Holmes", "The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row", "Charlie Chaplin's Burlesque on Carmen", "The Havoc", "The Discard", "Vultures of Society", "The Misleading Lady", "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines", "A Daughter of the City", "The Alster Case", "The Raven", "The Crimson Wing", "The Man Trail", "The Blindness of Virtue", "In the Palace of the King", "The White Sister", "The Slim Princess" and "Graustark".

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION. 68 EXCHANGES

VOL. I. SEPTEMBER 30, 1916 No. 3.

Moral: Big Profits For Exhibitors at Mutual Exchanges

EVER hear the story of John Doe? John had been running a theatre for a long, long while. He thought he understood his business pretty well. But he found he was running one of those "up and down" houses—good one day, bad the next. He tried and tried to find out what was the matter.

John got the idea somewhere that just so long as he had a film in his projecting machine he was giving a picture show. John was booking this, that and the other thing—anything he could pick up in fact, because it was cheap. His patrons never knew what kind of a show they were going to see. He had no established stars. He didn't make his house known as the home of good pictures. It was all hit or miss with John.

Big Money in Series Idea.

And then, one day, John happened to be in the city and dropped into the Mutual film exchange to order some carbons. The manager of the exchange noticed John. John was asked his name and where he was from. Was he using Mutual service? No? Had he considered the possibilities of building up a steady trade with Mutual Star Productions? Had he thought of the box office value in the series idea—in the presentation of stars like Mary Miles Minter, Helen Holmes, Richard Bennett, Charlie Chaplin, William Russell and all the others? John confessed that he hadn't. Soon John was in the projection room looking over a few of the five-reelers. He found them good. They were not only better than the features he had been showing, but they gave him a chance to bring the same star back soon in another production. The more he thought of that possibility the better he liked the idea.

Today John knows what ailed his theatre. He knows the value of having a fixed policy. All his patrons know exactly the grade of goods John is offering. His house is known as the home of Mutual films, just as the clothing store across the street is known for the line of men's suits it sells. John is making money. His business is good now every night. He makes it a point to visit his exchange every few weeks. He always comes home with a new idea that makes him ten times as much as the trip to the city cost him.

There are a lot of exhibitors today in business who are still like John was before he saw the light. Any or all of them will profit by a visit to the nearest Mutual exchange. The latch-string is always out at all sixty-eight of the Mutual exchanges.

J. D. Walker Buys Foreign Rights to Chaplin Films

J. D. Walker, famous film renter of Great Britain, has just paid the Mutual Film Corporation $500,000 for the British rights on the Chaplin comedies. Mr. Walker has formed Walker's Mutual Chaplins Ltd. to handle the exploitation of the Chaplin film abroad and Charlie bids fair to become as popular there as he is in the United States. To close the deal Mr. Walker sent Frederick Bolton of London to this country to conduct the negotiations with John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation. The price secured by Mutual is believed to establish a record for film transactions. The Walker territorial rights take in the British Isles, India, Burma, Ceylon, Siam and Africa.

"East Is East"

The next Florence Turner Mutual Star Production, entitled "East Is East," was written by Captain Philip Hubbard, a well known English officer. It was directed by "Larry" Trimble, who was responsible for the direction of other Turner films.

William Russell's next Mutual Star Production bears the title, "The Love Hermit." It gives the athletic William a wonderful opportunity to display his ability.

Charlie Chaplin in "The Count" established a new record for comedies in Chicago, running for four straight weeks in downtown theatres. During the same period he appeared at other houses in former successes.

Russell and Holmes in Two Big Mutual Star Productions

WIDELY different in character, yet each a masterpiece in its way, are the two Mutual Star Productions this week. One is a newspaper story featuring William Russell. The other is a railroad drama starring Helen Holmes. One pictures a political campaign and a fight against graft and corruption. The other depicts the fight of a new executive to make the railroad of which he has charge a paying investment. Both of them will thrill and satisfy the patrons of any theatre.

"The Torch Bearer."

In "The Torch Bearer," a five-reel drama, William Russell appears as the owner of a metropolitan newspaper who has set out to clean up his city. He seeks to rout the crooks and grafters who control politics. Of course the "gang" threatens to "get him." He swears in his whole staff as special police and goes on with his fight. Janet Dare, a Western girl, who comes to live at the newspaper man's home, plays no small part in the stirring tale. How she falls into the clutches of the politicians and is later rescued—how the grafters are finally caught in their own trap, and how the reform candidate finally wins the election form a story that will hold any audience spellbound. This is the fifth of the William Russell Mutual Star Productions made by the American Film Co., Inc. All five are now ready for booking.

"The Manager of the B. & A."

Helen Holmes makes her fifth appearance in a Mutual Star Production in "The Manager of the B. & A." This Signal feature was written by Vaughn Kester. In the past Signal has produced some sensational railroad stories. This one is even better. During the action of the play one thrill piles upon another. A roundhouse is completely destroyed. The watermains of a city are cut. There is a big railroad strike. An entire town is threatened with fire. No water is available. A special train dashes from a distant city with fire apparatus. It has to run through a blazing forest. A huge engine explodes before one's very eyes. "The Manager of the B. & A." runs at express speed from start to finish. It doesn't once slow down to whistle. The theatre showing it is bound to be on the main line, with a clear right of way, rushing with the throttle wide open to big box office receipts. Four other tremendous Helen Holmes Mutual Star Productions are available at all sixty-eight Mutual exchanges.

Dwarf minds always doubt the vision of giants. The last man to acknowledge the wisdom of another is his competitor.

We are not advertised by our loving friends, but by our envious rivals.

A LETTER FROM MISS KITTY GORDON (THE HON. MRS. H.H. BERRESFORD) TO THE EXHIBITORS & PUBLIC

Imitation is not only the sincerest form of flattery.

It is the better part of wisdom, the source of all improvement.

Columbus discovered the West Indies.

His imitators opened up the American continent.

When Mr. Lewis J. Selznick organized the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation he expected to be imitated. More, he hoped for it. He knew his idea would be a failure if others did not adapt it to their own uses.

He has already expressed his appreciation of the compliment paid his judgement by Miss Mary Pickford and Mr. Adolph Zukor in organizing the Mary Pickford Film Corporation.

It is my turn to thank Mr. Selznick for giving me the opportunity to enlist under his banner at the head of my own company, the Kitty Gordon Film Corporation.

He blazed the way and it is up to every motion picture star to follow the sure road he has pointed out to artistic prestige and financial success.

To my friends the exhibitors and public who have found merit in my program pictures I wish to give assurance that my future productions, beginning with the picture now under way, an adaptation of one of Richard Harding Davis' great novels, "Vera, the Medium," will exceed their most sanguine hopes.

And each of my productions will be marketed through the great chain of exchanges established by Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, Inc.

Sincerely,

Kitty Gordon.

Dear Sir:

It is with regret that I am compelled to give you notice to cancel my Metro service. I can honestly say that your pictures are the best that I have ever shown in my theatre and my patronage is of the same opinion.

Under these conditions it may seem strange to you that I discontinue Metro but as my seating capacity is limited and your pictures are so good I find it does not pay as the majority of the audience sit in to three or four shows and will not leave, consequently I cannot get as many people past the ticket window as I do when I have on a poor picture.

Truth is stranger than fiction, but as explained above I find this step necessary.

Wishing you and your excellent programme continued success and with best wishes, I beg to remain

Yours very truly,

PROTECT YOUR DAUGHTERS!

The producers have succeeded in portraying the infamous methods employed by the White Slave Traffickers, at the same time conveying to the public a sincere and powerful message on this timely topic. Moreover, with praiseworthy tact they have studiously avoided every temptation to cheap sensationalism, without in any way weakening its dramatic power.

With tremendous dramatic force, this picture sets forth the career of a young girl, who yielding to the wiles of masquerading villainy in a moment of weakness, is drawn deeper and deeper into the meshes of her vicious associates, but finally is the instrument of their complete undoing.

¶ If you are a Maker of MERITORIOUS productions we will supply you with a market that will bring you maximum returns.

¶ The AMERICAN STANDARD plan of film distribution is built on the principle of co-operation; a process requiring nearly two years in the building, and NOW A PROVEN SUCCESS, through actual operation.

¶ We have a complete system of independent exchanges covering the entire country and reaching into foreign lands. Each unit of this vast organization of distribution operates on a basis whereby it is paid in proportion to the business it does and not by the amount of time it consumes in its work.

¶ We believe an organization should be paid only what it earns, whether it be the exchange, the distributor, or the manufacturer. Hence, reversing the order, the manufacturer must make GOOD pictures to ensure good returns; the distributor must have a complete working system of exchanges for the proper exploitation of those pictures, to secure its returns; and, each individual exchange must be a bee-hive of activity, capably managed, properly equipped, and have a large following, for only through these essentials can it earn a goodly profit.

Some Truths About Pictures

WE are pleased to give over this page, this week, to Frank J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, Indiana, who in an open letter to the national association of the industry, says some truths worth knowing about pictures and the picture business.

MANY of his tersely expressed views coincide closely with satements made from time to time upon this page. But we publish them, not to call attention to this fact but because they sum up the long and practical experience of an exhibitor who has also travelled much and talked freely with other exhibitors and who is a sincere believer in the organization of the industry as a whole.

We italicize important passages:

"THESE are the four principal objections to the motion picture to-day:

"First. The use of cigarettes by the great stars, who appear in the eyes of children as heroes. Less use would make them just as great.

"Second. Nudity. Much is unnecessary.

"THIRD. The theme of infidelity and unfaithfulness between husband and wife in the eternal triangle. Censorship is always advocated by persons past the meridian of life and they resent their children seeing this form of story so frequently. The picture story in times past mostly started with love's young dream and ended in a happy marriage. Now it generally starts at the marriage altar and ends at the grave. People want recreation and not study. Ninety per cent. are pleased with pictures that make them happy and contented. If you will talk to people who are not going to picture shows you will find one reason why the box office receipts are dwindling.

"FOURTH. What is particularly disappointing and annoying to the public is the fact that they have no way of knowing what kind of picture they are going to see. A new form of publicity is needed. Clean pictures should be advertised as clean pictures—a vampire as a vampire. Up to now publicity tends to bring out the sensational features only. If we have a picture that will appeal to the church-going people we ought to say so and get them to come. If it is a picture that bumps the line let them know it and they will not criticise.

"WE are all influenced too much by the experience of the legitimate stage and Broadway standards. A film that passes on Broadway without criticism will often raise Ned in a tank town. Under the present system Mr. Exhibitor is forced to run a picture whether or not—because it is in line on the program and the exhibitor cannot help himself even though it ruins the business for him.

"POP corn is worth five cents a sack the world over but we are still buying and selling film like horse traders. Whoever is the best trader cleans up on the other. A film whether good or bad should have a price on it which should be quoted upon release. Exhibitors could then do their own buying instead of present continual dickering and bickering. He could buy more and not overbuy and buy better to his needs and could buy ahead and have his program filled up for weeks and months ahead.

"THERE should be a credit system to eliminate the dead beat and encourage good pay exhibitors by giving cash preference.

"There should be a universal method of paying for service which, in my opinion, should be cash in advance, but not deposits. There should be a universal form of contract or as near that as we can get.

"IN conclusion, I would like to see some pictures made that would be particularly suitable for the whole family, in fact, the function of the moving picture was to entertain the whole family. That is how we made our money and that is how we will make it again. But it can't be brought about spasmodically and nothing would ruin this business more easily than an upheaval in which everybody changed their policies at once, but if we get together once a month and talk over the things that pertain to our business and really and truly 'lay the cards face up' we would soon accomplish a great deal."

WE need the long show and the short show; the one reel and the five-reeler. Every manufacturer should specialize in a certain way and then the exhibitor can specialize, in his daily program. One day he can cater to one class of people and the next day to another class and in that way you will get all the people into the show.

"Therefore, I reiterate, that if the exhibitor and manufacturer around the same table take up questions effecting the whole industry, censorship will soon cease; programs that appeal to more people will develop; more people will go to picture shows; expense and overhead will be lessened; manufacturing and exhibiting costs will be cut down and we will all prosper again as we did in the good days gone by."

VOL. XIV September 30, 1916 No. 13

Bully for the Newspapers!

SEVERAL newspapers throughout Michigan have taken offense at the caption, "No Children Allowed," or "No Children Admitted," in connection with the showing of certain films.

It is the contention of the publishers that these captions are not used because of the fact that the pictures are unfit for children as much as it is to arouse curiosity among the older folks.

Several times recently pictures bearing these captions have been refused any newspaper reading matter and publishers have refused to accept advertising.

ONE paper explains itself in the following editorial: "Whenever you see the sign 'Children Not Admitted' over a theatre door, you are supposed to know instinctively that something which will shock the modesty is being exhibited there.

"Most of our theatre managers appear to be plain boobs. History proves that the American people are clean, that they will not for long pay to see indecent dramas or indecent pictures. If the managers were not boobs, they would not attempt to show the indecent picture.

"For the honor of your own women, avoid those theatres that use the indecent, the filthy, the shameless and the red light district as a lure. Life is pleasant, men and women are good.

"Why drop into the gutter with the gutter snipes of the moving picture world when you can dwell on the heights with the good and the beautiful?"

THIS is timely and valuable advice. The "No Children Admitted" sign should be used as rarely as a declaration of martial law, in other words, only when there is the strongest and most unmistakable provocation for so doing.

And the attitude of the newspapers who have refused advertising for such pictures should be most emphatically endorsed by every self-respecting exhibitor.

THE maker of indecent pictures, and the exhibitor of them will both find that, in the long run, they are playing a losing game. And it may also be said that the exhibitor who tries to make a picture suggestive or salacious by his advertising of it will sooner or later find that he has injured his own box-office and cut in two his receipts.

WE have "get-rich-quick" men in the ranks of the exhibitors, precisely as we have them in Wall Street. Such exhibitors always play for quick money and easy money, and to their mind, it is the sensational, the "border-line" picture that brings it.

So it does—for a time.

But when the reaction sets in—and it always sets in—the house that dealt habitually in the lurid, ultra-frank picture might just as well be quarantined by the Board of Health; the townsfolk will not avoid it any more completely.

IT is perfectly true that you can get a bigger crowd to see a fire than to watch a sunset.

And there are actually exhibitors who prefer to set their theatres on fire, in every sense but the literal one, with inflammatory pictures, to the more reliable, steadier (though slower) attraction of the substantial, well-built story that will bear recollection and bear re-exhibition.

IF there were no other reason than that every suggestive picture is an official invitation to censorship, that would be enough to keep every clear-headed, sound-minded exhibitor from permitting one to appear on his screen.

There is, fortunately, the more fundamental reason of self-preservation, business self-preservation, to teach the exhibitor how to choose between quick, uncertain money, and slower but, in the long run, surer money, and more of it.

That reason is that the exhibition of indecent pictures is managerial suicide, simply because the vast majority of the American people do not care to see and will not deliberately go to see such pictures.

Make Your Lobby Pack Your House

WITH this issue we introduce to the exhibitor the remarkable lobby displays of Mr. Kashin.

A descriptive and illustrated article appears under the department heading: "Live Wire Exhibitors."

Further articles, illustrating and describing in detail Kashin lobby displays of pictures in several services will appear hereafter and exclusively in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

WE unhesitatingly pronounce these displays the best picture theatre advertising that has come to our attention and we have searched diligently for just this sort of service for our readers.

We believe that these displays are applicable to most any theatre and are within the means of most any exhibitor and then consistently and intelligently used they will turn most any losing house into a successful one.

This is a large but, we believe, a logical claim, as our readers will find who follow and apply the ideas set forth in this very interesting and valuable series.

National Association of the Industry Is Active

During the Week Many Meetings Were Held and Branch Committees Organized—Gatherings Attended by Members in All Departments of the Business—Forty-five New Members Secured at One Session

THE activities of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry during the past week were many and varied, consisting largely of meetings and organization of the various branch committees. These were made up of gatherings of the producers, distributors, representatives of the exchanges, the supply and equipment men, the Executive committee and the general division.

Much of the time and energies of the association were taken up with a plan whereby the united strength of the industry could be brought to bear against an existing evil condition of affairs in a manner that would have had a lasting and telling effect, but at the last moment these plans had to be abandoned for the time being.

A small but enthusiastic meeting of the Fifth or Miscellaneous Class of the association was held on Thursday afternoon, September 14.

William A. Brady, president of the association, was present, and opened the meeting with a brief address, in which he urged for Class 5 the same "get together" spirit which has dominated the meetings of the other branches of the association. William A. Johnston presided as chairman.

Change Name of Class 5

A motion was passed changing the name of Class 5 from the Miscellaneous Class to the General Division. The following committees were appointed: Executive Committee, William A. Johnston, Arthur James, Julian M. Solomon, Jr., Nat G. Rothstein, Fred J. Beecroft, Thomas G. Wiley and Eugene F. Licome. Committee on New Members, P. D. Gold, Elmer J. McGovern, R. M. Vandivert, J. A. Milligan, John W. Grey, Albert Strauss and C. J. Giegrich. Committee on Rules and Regulations: A. H. Battey, E. L. Masters, Samuel H. Spedon, Harry L. Reichenbach and P. D. Gold. William M. Seabury was made an ex-officio member of this committee.

The Executive and New Members committees will later on be enlarged to include eleven members.

It was also carried on motion that the chairman of the Branch Committee be made ex-officio member of each of the foregoing committees. The appointment of a Grievance Committee was postponed until the next meeting of the General Division.

The meeting of the Executive Committee has been called for Tuesday evening at 8.30, September 19, at the offices of the association. The Committee on New Members met on Friday, September 15. An aggressive campaign for new members has been laid out. A representative will be appointed in each of the offices of all the prominent concerns in the business to secure new members.

At a meeting of one of the divisions during the week over forty-five new memberships were secured. The meetings scheduled for the coming week are as follows: Monday at four o'clock a meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Monday at eight o'clock an adjourned meeting of the Producers' Branch Committee, class one: Wednesday, meeting and luncheon at the Hotel Astor at 12.30 of the distributors and exchange men to complete organization; Thursday at eleven o'clock the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors, and Thursday at 2.30 o'clock a general membership meeting.

During the week the association gave its hearty indorsement of the methods that are being put in force by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New York for the defeat at the primaries of Senator Cristman, the father of the Cristman-Wheeler Censorship Bill, which was vetoed by Governor Whitman after it had passed the State Legislature last winter. The league has come out in favor of the candidacy of Theodore Douglas Robinson, and in order to aid in his election has had slides shown in the theatres of twenty-five towns in that district during the past week. These slides bear the photograph of the league's candidate and a direct admonition to vote for him on primary day. The exhibitors' support is regarded a strong asset.

Samuel Goldfish Resigns as Chairman of Lasky Directors

He Also Leaves the Executive Committee of the Company, But Remains a Member of the Directorate and Retains His Stock Interests

SAMUEL GOLDFISH has resigned as chairman of the board of directors and also as a member of the executive committee of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Mr. Goldfish, however, retains his position on the board of directors.

In response to a request for a statement regarding this decision, Mr. Goldfish said:

Samuel Goldfish

"I have contemplated retiring from the active management of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for some time in order to mature certain personal plans which are of great importance to me, and which I could not mature if I continued as one of the executives of the company. I could not, however, see my way clear to resign as an officer of the corporation until the grave matters arising out of the adjusting of details between the two corporations, which merged only recently into the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, had been completed.

"It is, of course, a matter of great regret to me that serving the corporation and going on with these plans, of which I can say nothing definite at the present time, became inconsistent. From the time of the beginning of the Lasky Company to now, my heart and soul were in the work which I started quietly and unostentatiously only about two and one-half years ago.

"I am very proud of what has been accomplished, first by the Lasky Company, and since by the larger and more important corporation into which it merged with the Famous Players Film Company a few months ago, and proud too, of such share of its success as my associates have been good enough to credit to my endeavors. My confidence in its future is amply evidenced, I think, by my retention of all of my stock interests in it."

After receipt of Mr. Goldfish's resignation as chairman of the board of directors, and a member of the executive committee of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, the board of directors issued the following statement:

"Although Mr. Goldfish's resignation did not come as a complete surprise, it was received with great regret and accepted, because the board felt that any request that Mr. Goldfish continue longer as an executive of the company would be unfair to him, in view of his statement that his work with the company would interfere with the maturing of his personal plans.

"Mr. Goldfish's earnest and conscientious efforts, first on behalf of the Lasky Company, and since its organization, on behalf of this company, have earned for him the esteem and good will of all his associates, and in accepting his resignation, the board, collectively and as individuals, expressed to him their best wishes for and confidence in his future."

WARD ON ROAD FOR UNICORN

W. D. Ward, Detroit manager for Unicorn, made a flying trip over his territory, lining up fall bookings. He expressed himself as greatly pleased with the additional business he secured.

"BRIDE AND GLOOM" FROM CHRISTIE

Director Al E. Christie is making the last scenes for the first special two-reel comedy release by the Christie Film Company, through independent exchanges contracted with, the date of the release having been fixed for Thursday, October 26.

"Bride and Gloom," is the attractive title given the story, but also one that fits the tale told in the film. It is a story of many laughable situations, dealing as it does with the rivalry between a bookkeeper of middle age, taken by Eddie Barry, and a young secretary played by Harry Ham.

Billy Rhodes is the maid they both seek, but cupid throws the dart at the feet of the secretary, and he wins in a walk. But once the marriage ceremony is completed Gloom steps forth. The lonely bookkeeper tries to drown his sorrow in drink, and then he receives a mysterious present —a folding bed—with a note from the groom, stating "here is an article we will not need, so are sending it to you as a present." The groom had found his bride detested folding beds, and he arranges for the expressmen to take it. Then he is called out and the girl friends of the bride put her to sleep in the bed and close it up.

Thus the bed with the contents and letter is taken to the bachelor's apartments and after a lively chase, explanations, and unexpected comedy, situations, everything is righted and Mr. Bookkeeper is last seen vowing no brides for him, as the bed closes and stands him on his head.

Mr. Christie has used all new sets, properties and costumes in this subject.

HEALTH BOARD ORDER IN PITTSBURGH HOLDS UP "MENACE"

"The Yellow Menace," which was to have been released in Pittsburgh on September 4, has been held up as a result of the health board order, prohibiting children under sixteen years of age to attend the theatres. Manager Harry Lande of the Quality Film Company announced this fact and states that the first episode will not appear until September 11 or later.

Several important bookings of the story had to be canceled as a result of the health order, but the exhibitors see the advantage in the later date and readily acquiesced.

The serial is booking rapidly in Pittsburgh, and bids fair to be one of the serial successes of the day.

Sydney Ayers Is Dead in Oakland, California

Pioneer Actor in Screen Drama was with the Selig Company for Three Years, the American Company at Its Santa Barbara Studio for a Year, and with Universal

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Oakland, Cal., Sept. 14.

A PROMISING career was cut short by the death of Sydney Ayers, following an illness of several months from a complication of disorders due to a nervous breakdown, at the Merritt Hospital in Oakland to-day.

Mr. Ayers had been with the Selig Company for three years and with the American at Santa Barbara for one year. Later he went to the Universal, where he remained for three years, playing leads and directing all his own pictures. The great strain of acting besides producing these pictures for Universal finally caused the breakdown that resulted in his death.

Mr. Ayers was regarded by the Universal as one of the promising and talented directors in the employ of the concern.

He was the son of James H. Ayers, a pioneer Oakland business man, and started his theatrical career at the age of seventeen, joining the Lewis Morison's Company in the presentation of "Faust." He played many roles in companies in the East, returning to Oakland about eight years ago, when he became leading man for Ye Liberty Stock Company.

After several engagements at Ye Liberty Theatre he toured the Orpheum Circuit with a number of his own sketches, and from there went into the moving picture field, joining the Selig Company in Los Angeles in 1910 as leading man.

When playing with the Selig Company he married Anna Franck, a Los Angeles society girl and noted beauty.

He is survived by his widow and one child, Baby Ann Ayers, and two sisters, Mrs. A. Homer and Mrs. Howard Doane, of Oakland. He was 35 years old.

Sherman, in New York, Tells of "Crisis" Marketing Plans

State Rights Basis East of Chicago—West of That City He Will Book It Independently with Traveling Companies—Canada Goes Outright

H. A. SHERMAN, president of Sherman-Elliot, Inc., the largest state rights buyers in the United States, arrived in New York Saturday afternoon after completing arrangements for the purchase of the Selig production of "The Crisis." The price paid for the rights for the United States and Canada was a quarter of a million dollars.

Mr. Sherman when seen by a representative of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, said relative to the manner in which he would dispose of this mammoth production of Winston Churchill's celebrated novel: "I will dispose of it by state rights for all of the territory east of Chicago. For the western territory I will handle it in the same manner as I did 'The Birth of a Nation' and 'Ramona,' that is, book it independently with traveling companies to the regular theatres throughout that territory. For both of these productions I have had seven traveling companies out, and the way business is going they will be out for two or three years yet.

"As to the Canadian rights, I have not made up my mind as yet, but they will probably be sold outright. In my opinion 'The Crisis' is the equal in every way of 'The Birth of a Nation.' It has a big story, is replete with action from start to finish, has been wonderfully produced and directed, and contains some fine photography."

Mr. Sherman has arranged for an invitation performance of the picture at the C. and H. theatre for some day early next week. For the purpose of carrying on the vast quantity of business that will develop as a result of his purchase of the rights to this picture, he has opened offices on the seventeenth floor of the Candler Building. This is in addition to his offices in St. Paul, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Kansas City and Denver.

ARTHUR HOOPS DIES SUDDENLY

Arthur Hoops, the actor, died suddenly last week of heart disease in Long Island City. Mr. Hoops was motoring from New York to Bayside, L. I. While passing over the Queensboro Bridge he became ill and his chauffeur hastened with him to St. John's Hospital, Long Island City. The stricken man died before the automobile reached the hospital. Mr. Hoops was 46 years old.

General Film Announces Fall and Winter Programs

Kalem's "The Girl from 'Frisco" Is to Be Increased from Fifteen Episodes, as First Planned, to Twenty-five—Lubin Loses Its Identity as Far as New Productions Are Concerned—Producing Companies Agree to Use Their Topnotch Stars in Dramas and Comedies

ALTERNATING WEEKS BEGINNING OCTOBER 1st.

Melies	3 single reel	comedies		2 single reel	comedies
	1 two "	drama		1 single "	drama
(5)			(6)	1 three "	drama

There may be some slight changes in this program. Beginning the latter part of October, Kalem, according to present plans, will discontinue one reel of comedy, substituting therefor a one reel serial drama entitled "GRANT, THE POLICE REPORTER." This is along the same lines as the "HAZARDS OF HELEN" SERIES. Also later in October, Melies plans to discontinue one reel of comedy, substituting a one reel drama, featuring one of the most noted stars in the world.

THE complete details of the fall and winter program of the General Film Company contain two important disclosures, one to the effect that the Kalem production of the "Girl from 'Frisco" series is to be increased to twenty-five episodes instead of fifteen as first planned, and the second is that the Lubin Company loses its identity and individuality on the General Film Program in so far as new productions is concerned.

Any new short length pictures that the Lubin Company may produce in the future for release by General Film will come through the Vitagraph Company, and will bear the name of Vitagraph. It is possible that some of the short length successes of the past will be reissued under the name of Lubin, otherwise this company, one of the oldest in the business, will be missing from the program this fall and winter.

The formal announcement of the company is as follows:

"Each of the manufacturers now releasing new films through General Film Service will continue to do so on the fall and winter program. Not only have they agreed to continue, but each has a specifically pledged that where improvement is possible in their productions it will be forthcoming. This improvement is not to be confined to pictures alone but to posters, etc., which they are to furnish and which will be brought to a state of complete perfection.

"There is planned a continuance of serials, "The Girl from 'Frisco" is demonstrating that this feature of our program is a big one, and one calculated to attract patronage. In dramas and comedies the manufacturers have agreed to use their top-notch stars.

"A system of the strongest kind of cooperation from the home office will be inaugurated immediately. No detail connected with a branch office will be considered as not being of enough importance to warrant attention from the home office. There has been established in our advertising department a bureau intended to cooperate directly with the exhibitor. An increased appropriation has been made for a comprehensive advertising campaign calculated to best serve the interests of exhibitors. This plan is flexible, and where especial advertising should be done to stimulate business in certain territories at certain moments, it will be done."

American Film Reduces Number of Producing Companies

Change Is Due to Policy of Mutual Releasing Organization, Which Provides for Feature Pictures with Well-Known Legitimate and Screen Stars as Principals

Los Angeles, Sept. 16.

WITH the policy of the Mutual releasing organization which provides for feature pictures with well-known legitimate stage and screen stars as principals, a big change has been made necessary at the studios of the American Film Company at Santa Barbara. By this change it will not be necessary for this producing company to maintain as many producing companies and the number of directors and players has been reduced.

At the present time there are five companies under the direction of William C. Dowland, Edward Sloman, James Kirkwood, T. N. Heffron and C. Rae Berger. Mr. Dowlan is in charge of completing the last subject which will offer Richard Bennett as star. This has been titled "The Higher Good," and is a problem play by Clifford Howard, editor of the American scenario department. Scenes in which Mr. Bennett appears are being made first that he may return to New York to take up an engagement there on the stage.

A sequel to the serial "The Diamond from the Sky," is being made under the direction of Edward Sloman, and has as its principals, the players who took part in the original thirty episode subject. This list includes William Russell, and Charlotte Burton as leads, Eugenia Forde, Tom Chatterton, Rhea Mitchell and several others.

The third Kolb and Dill comedy is an adaptation of this pair of comedians' stage success, "Peck o' Pickles," and the direction is by T. N. Heffron. May Cloy, Josephine Clark, Marie Van Tassell, Burdell Jacobs, Frank Thompson, and other American players are cast for this picture. A small town set has been built for "Peck o' Pickles," and a pair of very clever actors for it are trained rats, who aid to introduce a number of very laughable comedy situations.

Winifred Greenwood, Ed. Coxen and George Fields who have played together in more than three hundred American pictures, are now at work in their last for this company, which is being made by Director C. Rae Berger. It has been titled "A Voice of Love."

"Esther of the People" is a five-reel picture just completed by Director Frank Thorne, which has Helen Rosson in the name part, and Franklyn Ritchey and Tom Middleton in the principal roles. Mary Miles Minter is working in scenes for "Faith," under the direction of James Kirkwood, and the supporting cast includes Margaret Shelby, Gertrude LeBrant, Clarence Burton, Bessie Banks, Lizette Thorne and others.

In the past few months a number of marked improvements have been made at the American plant which means more efficient production conditions and improvements for the films. The addition of a large tract of ground for use of exterior sets, and the building and equipping of a large interior stage adds greatly to the producing facilities. This studio has long had the reputation of being one of the most attractive on the coast, and players have found it ideal in many respects.

ENGAGEMENT OF W. S. SMITH AND MISS BELT ANNOUNCED

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, Sept. 6.

Announcement of the marriage of W. S. Smith, manager of the Hollywood Vitagraph studio, who is brother of Albert E. Smith of the Vitagraph Company, and Laura Belt, daughter of Archdeacon Belt of Toronto, has recently been made, and the couple have been congratulated by their many friends of Filmdom. Mrs. Smith, formerly served Mr. Smith as his private secretary.

The Famous Players Film Service, Inc., of Cincinnati, distributors of Paramount Pictures in that district, W. C. Bachmeyer, manager, has added a publicity and advertising department and placed J. Maurice Ridge at its head.

HOLMES ASSEMBLES PICTURES TO BE RELEASED BY PARAMOUNT IN WINTER

Burton Holmes, who has been taking the weekly "Easy Chair Journeys," of trips around the world for Paramount Pictures Corporation, has been spending the past two weeks at the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures studio in Chicago, assembling his latest pictures and writing titles for the material he gathered during his summer's travels, which will be released through Paramount during the coming winter.

The new pictures that Mr. Holmes secured this summer, were recently seen at a private showing of Paramount officials, and are deemed to be the most beautiful scenics and travel pictures that have ever been collected by the company. Many of these will be released during this winter season.

KLEINE, EDISON, SELIG AND ESSANAY TO APPEAR IN FULL IN NAME OF RELEASING COMPANY

Unless plans are radically changed, the official title of the latest of filmland's combinations will be the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Company. It had been suggested that the initials of these companies be used, but motion picture exhibitors and others immediately protested. One of the best known and most influential of motion picture exhibitors wrote:

"The names of Kleine, Edison, Selig and Essanay are names to conjure with, for they stand for years of experience, for dependability, for success and for art. Each one of these names is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. Why hide them with initials?" William N. Selig and George K. Spoor have both expressed themselves in favor of utilizing the full names of the companies interested.

His Duties Will Consist of Keeping in Touch with the Twenty-three Branches of Company by Personal Visits for Enlarging Service to Exhibitors

THAT the V-L-S-E, as the selling department of Greater Vitagraph is determined to keep pace with the possibilities for enlarged service to the exhibitors, which the concentration of its efforts in the interests of one company permits, and that no step is to be neglected that will make for the highest degree of efficiency of its selling organization, is evidenced in the appointment by General Manager Walter W. Irwin of Joseph S. Partridge as Special Representative of the home office.

Joseph S. Partridge

It will be the duty of Mr. Partridge, than whom no one is better acquainted with the needs of the exhibitors of America, to keep in constant touch with the twenty-three branches of the Vitagraph V-L-S-E by personal visits, and to see to it that everything that will make for the greatest good of the exhibitors, and consequently for Greater Vitagraph, is being done.

The large experience which Mr. Partridge has had in the film industry, the wide acquaintanceship which he possesses, and his practical knowledge of all that goes toward the upbuilding of an exchange and its customers, makes his appointment of especial interest.

There is probably no exchange manager in the country better known than he. For a number of years he was associated with the General Film Company in an investigating capacity. He was afterward made special representative of that company for the Dominion of Canada, and subsequently transferred to the Pacific Coast. He went to V L-S-E, taking charge of the New York office at its inception, since which time it is doubtful whether there is an exchangeman in the city as well liked by the exhibitors. On August 25, he was given a rising vote of thanks at an exhibitors' meeting, held in New York City.

Mr. Partridge, of course, will make the home office of Vitagraph V-L-S-E his headquarters, but will be almost constantly on the road doing constructive work at the various branches of the V-L-S-E, and seeing to it that the selling policies as well as the operating efficiency of these offices are furthered to the best interests of all concerned.

He is succeeded as manager of the New York branch, by George Balsdon, Sr., another film man known to all who have been in the industry for any length of time. Mr. Balsdon has been manager of the Boston branch of the V-L S-E, where his conscientious service and responsiveness to the requirements of exhibitors, won for him a large and loyal following.

Having himself been an exhibitor in Pittsburgh, when he entered the film business, and afterwards general manager of the poster and advertising bureau of the General Film Company, he is most happily qualified to work with and for the exhibitors in the New York territory.

He has been with the V-L-S-E since its formation. To him was entrusted the opening of the offices of that company in Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Minneapolis.

J. L. Reardon, who has been assistant branch manager at Boston, has been appointed by Mr. Irwin as the manager of that office. Mr. Reardon is a young man who has made a remarkable record in the Boston territory, and who has the confidence of all the exhibitors in that territory.

Three Photodramas Completed in Studios of William Fox

Theda Bara Returns to Vampire Roles—The Latest Farnum Picture, for Release on the 25th, Is from the Pen of a Los Angeles Dramatic Critic

THREE new photoplays were completed last week in the William Fox studios, two in the East, one in the West, starring Theda Bara, William Farnum and Virginia Pearson. Miss Bara's picture marks her return to "vampire" roles. The direction was in charge of J. Gordon Edwards.

The latest Farnum photoplay, "Fires of Conscience," released for September 25, shows how a strong man meets a strong man's test of honor. The scenario was written by Henry Christeen Warnack, a Los Angeles dramatic critic. Oscar C. Apfel filmed the picture and obtained some wonderful bits of night photography in the San Bernardino Mountains, in the Silver Lake district.

In the cast with the Mr. Farnum are Nell Shipman, Gladys Brockwell, Willard Louis, H. J. Barrows, Henry J. Hebert and William Burress.

The picture is Mr. Farnum's fourteenth photoplay for the Fox films.

More than one of the actors in the Pearson screen drama spent many a weary hour at the costumers getting the proper sartorial effect as the setting is laid in a Scotch village. Walter Law and Glen White share the laurels in the supporting cast.

The dictionary is honored in signal fashion in the new George Walsh photoplay now being made on the Pacific Coast, as Noah Webster's book of words has a part of prime importance to the action of the picture.

In Frank Lloyd's initial production for William Fox, paintings valued at more than $100,000, will be on exhibition. The collection was obtained from the homes of several wealthy residents of Southern California, and two genuine Corots are included in the oils. The portraits and landscapes were used in a setting representing the interior of a large art gallery. More than two hundred feet of the big stage in the Hollywood studio were included in the "set."

In the cast with Miss Suratt for her new picture is Joseph Granby, who has just joined the William Fox forces. He joined the Castle Square players in Boston when he leaped from the theoretical to the practical.

He has been on the stage for over eleven years to date.

WORLD RE-EDITS YOUNG PICTURES

The eight re-issues of Clara Kimball Young photoplays announced by the World Film Corporation and first offered to the regular patrons of that concern are in demand. All these pictures have been re-edited and re-titled.

Pathe Will Blanket Whole Country with Publicity

Two Newspapers in Every Important City Will Carry "The Shielding Shadow" Advertising, Totaling 25,000,000 Readers a Week—In Addition to Advertising in the Dailies, Billboards in Nineteen Cities and Painted Sign Boards Will Be in Use

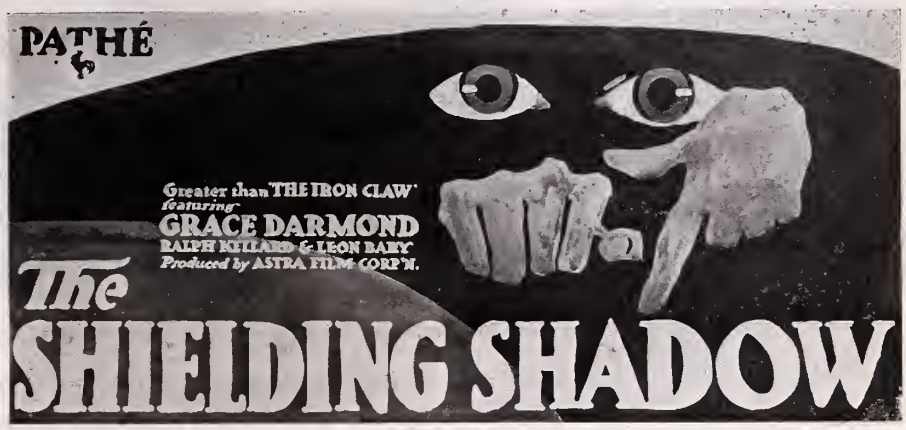
PATHÉ has instituted an advertising campaign on "The Shielding Shadow" which sets a new mark in the history of motion pictures, according to an announcement just issued by J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager.

"The Shielding Shadow" was produced by the Astra Film Corporation, under the direction of Louis J. Gasnier and Donald Mackenzie from the scenarios by George B. Seitz, author of "The Iron Claw."

Two newspapers in every important city of the country will carry "The Shielding Shadow" advertising. Allowing three readers to each copy (newspapers generally claim four), this means that more than 25,000,000 people will read about "The Shielding Shadow" each week.

In addition to newspaper advertising, there will be billboards in nineteen of the largest cities and painted sign boards in New York, St. Louis, Kansas City, Niagara Falls and Newark. The locations in New York were carefully selected by the secretary of the American Poster Company, who is giving this campaign his personal attention. In other cities the locations were chosen by the exchange managers in accordance with the desires of the exhibitors from a carefully prepared list furnished by the American Poster Company.

Among the newspapers already included in the campaign are: Atlanta Journal, Buffalo Times, Springfield Union, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Dallas Journal, Indianapolis Star, Jewish Daily Warheit, Philadelphia North American, Pittsburgh Press, Altoona Times, Baltimore American, Albany Times-Union, Boston Globe, Cincinnati Photoplay Journal, Louisville Herald, Columbus Monitor, Denver News, Kansas City Post, Minneapolis News, Newark Call, New Orleans Item, New York World, Omaha Bee, St. Louis Times, Salt Lake News, Fitchburg Sentinel, Greenfield Recorder, Trenton Times, Richmond Evening Journal, Worcester Post, Syrcause Journal, Syracuse Post Standard, Atlanta Constitution, Buffalo News, Boston Post, Dallas News, Charlotte Observer, Louisville Times, Cleveland Press, Houston Chronicle, Houston Post, Denver Post, Des Moines Tribune, Des Moines Capital, Kansas City Star, Minneapolis Tribune, Newark News, New Orleans Times-Picayune, New York Journal, Omaha World-Herald, Philadelphia Evening Ledger, Philadelphia Bulletin, Pittsburgh Chronicle, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Salt Lake Telegram, Seattle Times, Seattle Star, Washington Star, Washington Times, Baltimore News, Detroit News, Detroit Journal, Chicago Tribune and St. Paul Pioneer Press.



Pathe's "24 Sheet" for Their New Serial "The Shielding Shadow"

List of Billboard Cities

The cities in which there will be billboards are: Atlanta, Buffalo, Charlotte, Chicago, Dallas, Des Moines, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Milwaukee, New York, Brooklyn, Omaha, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Portland, St. Louis, Washington, Baltimore.

Billboards have been designed with a space for the name of the theatres and the dates they will show the picture.

The newspaper advertising campaign has been prepared with the needs of the exhibitors and the tastes of the motion picture public uppermost in mind. G. A. Smith, serial publicity manager is in charge of the arrangements of the campaign with the special cooperation of J. A. Berst.

Pathe's policy is to create business for its exhibitors. By means of newspapers, billboards and painted signs, it is doing so, reaching every resident and every visitor in all of the large cities. The exhibitor in the small town benefits by the prestige thus lent to the pictures which he presents. In addition, every possible advertising aid is furnished by the company.

Experience has shown that window cards are great business getters, therefore, there will be window cards on "The Shielding Shadow" playing up in a striking manner, the mystery which will interest more photoplay fans than the mystery of the Laughing Mask in "The Iron Claw."

In addition, there will be the following advertising matter on "The Shielding Shadow."

Advance portrait one sheet of Grace Darmond, sets of five slides, including three on "The Mystery of the Shielding Shadow," one, three and six sheet posters for each release, colored lobby display photographs, twelve to a set, attractive booklets which will be substituted for heralds on the first two chapters—these booklets are printed on good quality stock and are illustrated with colored photographs of Grace Darmond, Ralph Kellard and Leon Bary.

They contain a general story about "The Shielding Shadow" and the story of the first and second chapters. They will be issued in envelope size for mailing. For the remaining chapters of "The Shielding Shadow," there will be two colored heralds, envelope size for each release, 22 by 28 photographs of a scene from each week's release, 22 by 28 photographs of Grace Darmond, Ralph Kellard and Leon Bary, one and two column newspaper cuts of scenes and stars for each chapter, canvas banners 10 by 3 feet, advance twenty-four sheets, novelties. There will also be a campaign book giving the exhibitor a complete advertising and publicity campaign with reproductions of the advertising matter in order that he may see what he is getting and know how to use it.

PLAGUE BAN ORDER KEEPS ADULTS AS WELL AS CHILDREN FROM PENNSYLVANIA THEATRES

While the managements of the motion picture theatres of Pennsylvania have cooperated without any opposition with the State Health Department in its efforts to check the spread of infantile paralysis by closing the moving picture places to children under 16 years of age, the order of the department has materially affected the receipts of the theatres. The loss is not alone due to the exclusion of small children who attended the theatres unaccompanied by older persons, but thousands of adults have been kept from going to these places of amusement because they could not take the children along.

Two Knickerbockers to Alternate with Present 3 Reelers

This Plan Will Give the Company a Weekly Release on the General Film Program—First Feature Will Be "The Better Instinct"

IN addition to the present three-reel Knickerbocker Star Feature released by the Melies Manufacturing Company every other week through the General Film Company, a new series of two-reel productions will be released to alternate with the present three-reel features.

This will give a Knickerbocker production on the General Film Service every week, beginning with the releases in October.

The first of the new features will be "The Better Instinct," featuring Jackie Saunders, the versatile Balboa star, assisted by Frank Mayo and Lillian West, directed by Bertram Bracken under the supervision of H. M. & E. D. Horkheimer.

Lucy Manley, a sweatshop worker portrayed by Jackie Saunders, is tempted by Marie, her fellow worker, to choose an easier path to life's pleasures. The girls attend a dance where they are followed by two cadets. Ted Gordon, a drunken derelict, saves Lucy in time.

Mrs. Gordon, who has adopted philantrophy among the lowly in an effort to find her son, who has been driven from his home through his love of drink, is robbed of her purse by Marie, who uses Lucy as her tool to accomplish her theft.

In escaping from pursuit with the purse, Lucy darts into a tenement house, and arrives in time to prevent Ted, who is in a delirious state from drink, from committing suicide. With the stolen money she hires a physician. Lucy's conscience dictates the return of the purse. In the room, she recognizes a portrait as that of the man she has just left in the physician's care, and thereby reunites the family and becomes one of its members by marriage. The release date is set for October 6.

The second Knickerbocker release of the month will be "From the Deeps," with Joyce Moore and Daniel Gilfether, and will be in three parts.

The sister of Mollie Roberts is betrayed by Jim Henderson. He flees with his wife when the girl dies. To escape from the past Mollie leaves for another town, and accepts a position as singer in a coast resort. She meets Joe Hardy, who has fallen in with evil companions. Hardy and the gang attempt a robbery. Two of the men are caught, but Hardy escapes. Henderson, who has joined the detective force, follows Hardy but loses him in the chase that follows.

The captured thieves are put through the third degree to discover the whereabouts of their companion. Through a ruse, Henderson obtains a confession. Henderson obtains a confession. Henderson locates Hardy in the cafe and arrests him. Mollie confronts the dumfounded detective, and demands his release as the payment of her silence. Together Mollie and Joe go to a new town to begin a new life together. Release has been set for October 13.

The third Knickerbocker feature of the month will be "Hearts and Hills," in two parts, featuring George Larkin and Margaret Nichols.

John Austin, a wealthy bachelor, seeks to regain his health in the country. He makes friends with Jess, the little hill girl, who falls in love with him. Austin has an attack of illness, and Jess stays with him all night. Because he has compromised the girl he marries her, but he tires of the hill life and returns to the city on his recovery.

Heartbroken Jess leaves her home and becomes an assistant in a small sanitarium. Her brother swears to kill Austin if he meets him again.

Austin's gay life palls on him, and he decides to go back to the hills and his wife. He finds the shack deserted, and when he goes to her brother for information he is attacked by him, and shoots him accidentally in a struggle for the revolver. The shot is heard, and the villagers are about to hang Austin when Jess arrives on the scene.

Tom confirms Austin's statement that the shooting was accidental. Jess forgives Austin on her brother's recovery, and he finds that he really loves the girl. This is released October 20.

The fourth release has not yet been announced, but it will be a three-reel production, produced as were the others under the supervision of the Horkheimers at the Balboa studio.

RUDOLPH DE CORDOVA, METRO, WEDS ALICIA RAMSEY, WELL-KNOWN DRAMATIST

A twenty-year old romance culminated last week in the marriage of Rudolph de Cordova, author and dramatist, and Alicia Ramsey, who has for several years collaborated with him in the writing of dramatic productions. Mr. de Cordova is now a member of Metro Pictures Corporation's staff of scenario writers, and assisted in adapting Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" for the screen version in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are starred.

When Mr. de Cordova first met Mrs. Ramsey in London she was the wife of his intimate friend, Cecil Ramsey. He has always remained unmarried. Two years ago Mrs. Ramsey became a widow, and he was at liberty to declare himself.

The ceremony was performed at 8:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Cora de Cordova Sanville, sister of the bridegroom at 260 Riverside Drive in the presence of a few relatives and intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. de Cordova will be out of the city only a few days on a wedding trip, and will return to make their home in New York.

Dudley to Release Westerns Through Unity Exchanges

First Two Features Are Entitled "Humanizing Mr. Winsby" and "Land Just Over Yonder," Both from Stories by Kyne, Saturday Evening Post Writer

M. B. DUDLEY, president and general manager of the Dudley Motion Picture Manufacturing Company, has made arrangemntes with the Unity Sales Corporateion to release the features produced by his company.

The Dudley Motion Picture Manufacturing Company is a newly formed organization and will specialize in Western dramas. The first two features are entitled "Humanizing Mr. Winsby" and "The Land Just Over Yonder," both picturized from the stories of the well-known Saturday Evening Post writer, Peter B. Kyne. Mr. Kyne's stories need no introduction to the public, as he is unquestionably one of the best known writers of short stories on the Saturday Evening Post staff. Both of these stories have appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

The Dudley Motion Picture Manufacturing Company will produce one, five or six-reel feature each month, and these will form a regular release on the Unity program.

Mr. Dudley's last picture, prior to the forming of his Company, was "Panama and the Canal from an Aeroplane."

Mr. Dudley is enthusiastic over his new plans for the distributing of his pictures and believes that by specializing in Peter B. Kyne's stories, he can produce features that will have a tremendous popular appeal. "It will be our aim," said Mr. Dudley, "to produce feature pictures that have behind them a strong story and plots full of red-blooded action. We have engaged capable companies of actors who will be able to handle their parts successfully and put all of the necessary power into the telling of the story on the screen.

"We were impressed with the plans which the Unity Sales Corporation have formulated for the distribution of their features. They have practically built up their own exchanges throughout the country, and it will only be a short while before they will be opening their own exchanges who will handle their features exclusively. This will give us the maximum of efficiency in distribution and all our Company has to worry about, is the production of good features."

Russell Organizes Monarch Photoplay Company

He Finishes "Common Sense Brackett," Speaking Stage Success with Richard Golden, and Will Release the Picture on a State Rights Basis

BOB Russell, well-known for many years in the motion picture industry, has organized the Monarch Photoplay Company, Inc., and is its president. He has just finished the first of a series of feature films, which the new organization will offer on the state-rights basis. It is the ever popular "Common Sense Brackett," and is the first screen production of a play in which the star was Richard Golden. As a play it had a full season's run in New York and also in Chicago, playing all over the United States.

This picture is in six reels and was taken in the real country among the sort of people Common Sense Brackett knew, on the shores of the picturesque Lake Sunapee, near George's Mills, New Hampshire. As usual, Mr. Russell has chosen his company from among the better players for the screen. Many of the players have been retained for the next feature on which Mr. Russell will start work immediately.

It includes William Fredericks, formerly with Famous Players; William Sorelle, who has played with Marguerite Clark and other well-known stars; Barbara Gilroy, who was featured with Thanhouser; Bradley Barker, a prominent leading man; Mildred Gregory, who has played important parts with Lubin and others; Dallas Fitzgerald, Walter Hiers, the famous "fatboy," and many others. "Common Sense Brackett" was produced for the stage by Henry W. Savage, who it is said, had contemplated making a photoplay of it when he learned that Mr. Russell had started on the picture.

"THE COUNTRY THAT GOD FORGOT" SHOWING ON THE 16TH

At a meeting of exchangemen to represent after September 16 the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Company releases, the Selig Company shows the new Selig five-reel drama, "The Country That God Forgot." All were loud in praises of this drama of the West, which features Tom Santschi, George W. Fawcett and Mary Charleson. The meeting of the exchangemen was held in Chicago, on Sunday, September 10.

A JULES VERNE STORY IN PICTURES FROM HERALD FILM

The Herald Film Company will release on October 1, an adaptation of Jules Verne's well-known novel "Around the World in Eighty Days." The picture will be in six parts, and will be booked direct to the individual theatre. An extensive advertising campaign has been planned in which great emphasis has been laid on the general price of fifty dollars per day to exhibitors. The picture will only be booked in one theatre in cities of less than 100,000 population and in cities of greater size the territory will be protected according to the number of days which the picture is booked, thus giving the exhibitor protection also.

IF "THE VAMPIRES," GAUMONT, IS A PICTURE GOOD ENOUGH FOR KING ALFONSO, YOU SHOULD WORRY

The interest created by the first episodes of "The Vampires, or, the Arch Criminals of Paris," which the Gaumont Company will release this autumn as a Mutual series, may be well understood, by the royal command of the King of Spain, to have the remaining episodes shown ahead of their release dates. King Alfonso, who is noted for democratic traits, witnessed the first three episodes as they were projected at regular intervals at the leading motion picture house of Madrid.

By this time His Majesty and the Queen were following the story with such keen interest that the royal pair decided to exercise the royal prerogative and order a command showing. Instead of waiting as his subjects had to do, Alfonso devoted two entire evenings to the remaining episodes. A room in the palace was used for the showing and a number of guests were invited informally to be present.

KEEN CARTOON CORPORATION IS PREPARING TO RELEASE 500 FOOT "PEN COMEDY" WEEKLY

The Keen Cartoon Corporation is preparing to release a five hundred foot "pen comedy" weekly. Animated cartoons, as they are generally known, are not new, but the idea of producing a complete story consistently and humorously illustrated is probably unique in animated cartoon work.

The Keen Company's first picture will be released in the latter part of October. The exact date will be announced later.

The early releases will deal with the affairs of one, Henry W. Zippy, although the Keen Corporation does not intend to adopt any one series, but has originated a variety of comic characters with the idea of providing something new with each weekly release.

The Keen Corporation has taken spacious quarters on the eleventh floor of the Godfrey Building 729 Seventh avenue, New York, and installed complete and up-to-date equipment.

NIGH'S MAKE-UP FOOLS INSURANCE AGENT

William Nigh, the director who shares stellar honors with Irene Howley in "Life's Shadows," a coming Metro production, plays the role of a small town lawyer who is about fifty-five years old. Mr. Nigh spends three hours coloring his own hair and working it into the crepe hair and a wig he wears. Even in the close-ups the gray hair looks natural, and it was difficult for any one ten feet away from Mr. Nigh to discover that it was not his own hair.

An insurance agent, who called to get a check for the second payment on a twenty-year policy, was dumfounded when he met Mr. Nigh in his dressing room. On the insurance papers, Mr. Nigh had taken out the policy a year before, his age was given as thirty-seven years. Mr. Nigh felt so complimented by the agent's remarks that he took out an additional policy of $5,000 more.

"The Light That Failed" from Pathe on October 15

First Picture Founded on a Story by Rudyard Kipling Is a Gold Rooster, Produced by Edward Jose, and Follows Closely the Details of the Book

TO Pathe goes the honor of being the first to release a picture adapted from a book by Rudyard Kipling. On October 15, "The Light That Failed," a five-reel Gold Rooster Play produced by Edward Jose, will be for the first time shown.

Edward Jose to whom was entrusted the exacting task of giving the book a proper interpretation, selected for his picture a noteworthy cast consisting of Robert Edeson, Jose Collins, Lillian Tucker and Claude Fleming. Mr. Edeson plays Dick Heldar, the hero; Miss Collins is Bessie, the fiery untamed and conscienceless girl of the streets; Miss Tucker is Mazie, thoughts of whom filled Dick's whole life and Claude Fleming is Torpenhow.

Robert Edeson and Jose Collins (Pathe)

Some picturesque effects were secured by Mr. Jose in this picture, among them several scenes showing a long line of camels outlined against the sky. Hundreds of extras—British soldiers and tribesmen, were used and the picture has real atmosphere.

The story of the book is followed closely. Dick Heldar, an artist, at an exhibition of his war paintings meets his childhood sweetheart, Mazie. His hope of winning her love is frustrated by his model Bessie, whom he has found weak and starving on his doorstep, and who shows her lack of gratitude by trying to stab him. Mazie, seeing the model in Dick's arms and not knowing that the man is trying to take the girl's knife from her, breaks with him.

Dick finds that he is going blind and rushes work on his masterpiece in order to finish it before the darkness closes in on him forever. The work is finished and the artist goes blind. Before others can see the picture Bessie destroys it in a spirit of vengeance. Dick, learning that his friend Torpenhow plans not to return to his army life in Egypt in order to look after the blind man, leaves for Egypt himself, first writing Torpenhow and Mazie.

They follow him and find him, perched on a camel, under fire from the tribesmen's bullets. Mazie rushes to him and later they are found dead in one another's arms.

Advance Film of the Waltons Is Famous Players Plan

All Paramount Exchanges Will Receive Strips of "The Quest of Life" for Showing Before the Regular Release Date, September 25

IN THE belief that the screen itself is the best way to advertise motion pictures, the Famous Players Film Company intend to issue an advance strip of film of Maurice and Florence Walton, the internationally celebrated dancers, who will make their photoplay debut in "The Quest of Life," released on the Paramount Program September 25, for all Paramount exchanges, to be exhibited in advance of the presentation of this subject. The film will contain one of the famous dances of these terpsichorean stars.

The Paramount Pictures Corporation recently reported to Adolph Zukor, President of the Famous Players Film Company, that after the announcement that Maurice and Florence Walton were to make their initial appearance on the screen, the various branch officese of that organization received insistent demands from Paramount exhibitors regarding the release date of their introductory film vehicle. These exhibitors stated that their patrons had read the announcement and desired to know exactly when they could see the pictures.

Mr. Zukor is then reported to have said, "Since they are so interested in the presentation of these dancers on the screen, I will give them a little surprise—a sample of what they are going to get. We will therefore send out a strip of film showing one of the dances which these stars have made famous in the United States and Europe that will yet be different from the dances which they enact on the screen in the course of "The Quest of Life."

Accordingly, the film was prepared and is now being shipped to the various exchanges. "The Quest of Life," as has already been announced, is not merely a dancing picture, as it contains a strong dramatic story, with the presentation of the Apache and society dances.

Another odd feature connected with the presentation of this subject is the fact that Maurice and Florence Walton are as anxious to see the picture as appear to be the Paramount exhibitors and their audiences.

PATHE CLUB HAS SUCCESSFUL OUTING AT CONEY ISLAND AND BRIGHTON BEACH

Members of the Pathe Club and their guests, to the number of 130, spent a very enjoyable afternoon and evening at Brighton Beach on September 9. Three big auto busses and several touring cars were used to take the party down and back.

The afternoon was devoted to the amusement of Coney Island. Dinner had been arranged for at the Hotel Shelbourne at Brighton Beach, the entire gallery having been reserved for the occasion. Dancing concluded what every one voted to have been a perfect day.

Among the associate members present were E. D. Horkheimer of Balboa, George A. Powers, T. C. Wiley, Harry Mittenthal and Harold Davis. Patheites from out of town were H. M. Osborne, manager of the Philadelphia office, Manager Epstein of the Albany office, Manager Abeles of the New York booking office and Manager Rheinlieb of the Newark office.

Club president J. A. Berst had taken an active interest in the outing, which explained to a large degree its success. The committee on arrangements included P. A. Parson, J. W. Kyle, F. C. Davidson and E. J. O'Connor.

EDWARD JOSE TAKES A SHORT VACATION—WILL DIRECT PEARL WHITE ON RETURN

Edward Jose, after sixty continuous weeks of work producing pictures for Pathe, during which time he has been hardly able to call an hour his own, is taking a week's vacation. On his return Mr. Jose will resume the direction of "Pearl of the Army," the new serial which Astra is producing for Pathe. Pearl White is starred in this serial.

Carlos Leases More Ground for Fox Studios

General Western Representative Takes Plot Across the Street from the Hollywood Stages for Accommodation of the Eight Companies

Los Angeles, Sept. 16.

GENERAL WESTERN REPRESENTATIVE A. CARLOS has found the two big studios of the William Fox organization to have insufficient stage space to accommodate the eight companies now working, and has leased grounds immediately across the street from the Hollywood studio where new stages will be built. This ground covers an entire block, and, if necessary, a greater portion of it can be secured.

At the present time, however, but one stage is being built. This will be 60 by 160 feet, but the construction is such that additional stage space may be built adjoining. The additional stages will be inclosed to bar out the ever-interested public. The new stage will contain a traveling roadway and other comedy securing apparatus.

Two Fox companies are absent from the studio. Richard Stanton and Players, numbering thirty in all, are still in the vicinity of El Paso making scenes for the international boundary story. Their work there has been delayed by rains almost daily, and their absence, which at first was expected to consist of but ten days, will be stretched out to two weeks or more.

The second company went to Sacramento, Cal., to secure water scenes. In this party, which is under the direction of Frank Lloyd, there are sixty-seven people. The principals are Gladys Brockwell, George Webb, William Clifford, Hershall Mayall, Carl von Schiller, Jim Farley, Ray Hanford, Ed. Alexander, and others. The story has Eastern and Far North atmosphere, and the former will be secured at San Francisco and along the Sacramento River.

Essanay-Chaplin Revue of 1916 Through General

Picture Will Be Released in Five Reels—"His New Job," "The Tramp" and "A Night Out" the Company Considers His Best from Its Studios

PRESIDENT GEORGE K. SPOOR of Essanay will present Charlie Chaplin in the Essanay-Chaplin Revue of 1916. It will be in five reels, and released through the General Film Service.

What were deemed by producers, press and public as the three greatest pictures in which he had appeared for Essanay were selected for the review. They are, "His New Job," "The Tramp" and "A Night Out." Those of the trade to whom has been made known Mr. Spoor's plan have grown enthusiastic over it.

"His New Job" is the picture he made when first obtained by Essanay. The Essanay-Chaplin Revue of 1916 is a selection of what that company believes his greatest work.

Bookings for this feature are now being recorded in all branch offices of General Film Service.

According to Essanay officials, the popularity of Essanay-Chaplins still holds and there is no diminution in the number of prints in daily use. In fact, not a day passes in the Essanay laboratories in which no new copies of his pictures are not manufactured.

A HELEN HOLMES PRODUCTION LEADS MUTUAL ON THE 25TH

Helen Holmes, in a star production entitled "The Manager of the B. & A.," leads off the Mutual Film Corporation's schedule of releases for the week beginning September 25. A second Mutual Star production, entitled "The Torch Bearer," featuring William Russell, is set for release on September 28. Next in importance among the week's releases from Mutual is the fourth number of the "Fantomas" series, under the title of "The Crook Detective." This will also be released on September 28.

In "The Manager of the B. & A.," Leo Maloney, whose career with the Mutual has been so successfully bound up with the railroad pictures in which Helen Holmes has appeared, has an opportunity for good work.

William Russell plays the role of the aristocratic son of a line of Boston "blue bloods" in his characterization of John Huntley Knox, the young and aggressive editor of the Boston Star in "The Torch Bearer," from the American Film Company, Inc.

Charlotte Burton plays the role of Janet Dare, while Marie Van Tassell and Margaret Nichols appear as John's mother and sister. The remaining roles are played by Harry Keenan, Alan Forrest, Dick La Reno, Harvey Clarke and Nat Watt, popular Mutual players, all.

FRANCHISES ON UNICORN GIVEN MANY PRODUCERS

A number of franchises have been given producers for releases on the Unicorn program. General Manager Schlank states that he does not contemplate increasing the number of reels released each week, but that more two and three-reel subjects and a smaller amount of one-reel films would make up the programs.

Seven and Eight Reel Productions Planned by Arrow

Basis Stories of the Subjects Will Be from the Pens of Famous Dramatic and Fiction Writers—Chief Among These Authors Is Hall Caine

W. E. SHALLENBERGER, president of Arrow Film Corporation, announces that he has signed contracts and completed arrangements, whereby Arrow will, in the next twelve months, produce in addition to its five-reel pictures, a number of seven and eight-reel special features and two serials, the basic stories of which include some of the best-known novels and stage plays of world-famous authors or else material written by them especially for Arrow.

Chief among these writers is Hall Caine, the Manx author whose books have been published in twelve different languages and have sold, in the United States alone, into the millions of copies. Other famous authors who have written or now are working on stories acquired by Arrow are Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, who has fifteen successful novels, much magazine fiction, and the ultra-dramatic "Who's Guilty?" series to her credit; Mrs. Maravene Thompson, who wrote, among her other literary triumphs, "The Woman's Law," which was Arrow's first five-reel feature; William Hamilton Osborne, whose Saturday Evening Post stories have attracted wide attention to this lawyer-author, and a number of others.

Stories, the exclusive world photoplay rights to which have now been acquired by Mr. Shallenberger, will be produced in the motion picture length which is warranted solely by the dramatic value of the material. Some will be only five reels in length, others seven, some eight, and at least one of them ten. This length will not be accurately determined until the picture is finally assembled, titled, and cut.

Arrow does not intend to abandon, totally, the production of program features. But Mr. Shallenberger feels that it is best not to agree to make nothing but five-reel productions, turning every available plot into 5,000 feet of film regardless of whether it should be told in 3,000 or 7,000 feet. For the same reason, the number of episodes in Arrow's serials will not be determined until the complete scenario has been made of the whole story.

In addition to the acquisition of these stories of world-famous authors, Mr. Shallenberger has brought to the United States, to appear in a number of Arrow pictures, Derwent Hall Caine, son of the Manx author and himself a famous London actor-manager. Derwent Hall Caine, who has produced and starred in several of his father's plays on the English speaking stage, will be seen in the same parts in Arrow's film version of these new masterpieces.

Derwent Hall Caine's American debut will be made in an eight-reel Arrow production of one of his father's best-known books. It is anticipated it will be ready for the market in about three weeks. Following this, he will be starred in a five-reel American picture of remarkable dramatic strength which Mr. Caine has helped to prepare for the screen.

Vitagraph Will Present English Stars in Few Weeks

On October 9 Public Here Will See Its First London Release, "The Firm of Girdlestone,"—Later on "Caste," with Sir John Hare, Will Be Presented

STARS of the London stage are beginning to take strategic steps preparatory to advancing to share some of the honors gained by the American stage stars. This is a bit of advance information just reelased by the Greater Vitagraph organization. On the ninth of October, Vitagraph's first London made release will be "The Firm of Girdlestone," a story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of the character of Sherlock holmes. In the cast appear the names of Charles Rock and Edna Flugrath. Mr. Rock is one of the most popular stars on the continent, and has played prominent parts in the "House of Temperley," Dickens Christmas Carol, "The Taming of the Shrew" and the "Sins of Society." He has also appeared in "England's Menace," and many other productions. Miss Flugrath was at one time with the Edison Company. At sixteen years of age she was premier danseuse at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

Later on Vitagraph will present the film-version of "Caste" with Sir John Hare, in the role of "Old Eccles," one of his greatest characters. He will be supported by Peggy Hyland, who has just played her first Vitagraph picture as leading lady with E. H. Sothern.

Commodore Blackton, when in Washington last week expressed himself as follows: "I regard as of great importance the productions of the English stars we will present in this country."

ARE EXHIBITORS TO PAY EXPRESS AND TRANSFER CHARGES?

It is understood on good authority that a letter was mailed yesterday to New York City exhibitors, advising them that an important group of exchange men in the New York territory had agreed that exhibitors should pay all express and transfer charges hereafter on film returned to the exchanges.

The letter, it is understood, advised that this ruling would take effect September 25. No exchange man in New York City would comment upon this ruling.

With the Exhibitor

This Department is designed to include all news of exhibitor organization and welfare, national, state and local; news items of exhibitor activities; and letters from exhibitors, constructively critical and dealing with any important trade problem. We invite correspondence

PITTSBURGH THEATRES RAISE ADMISSION PRICES

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 16.

MANY of the theatres in this part of the city are boosting the price of admission, so that there are few of the five-cent theatres left. That Pittsburgh is one of the cheapest theatre towns in motion picures has been proved to be a fact, and many of the owners of the theatres are afraid to boost their prices for fear that all of the theatres in this section will not do the same.

As a result of this back pulling of the managers the prices have been held down to the extent that many of the theatres are not doing much more than breaking even on the investment.

As a result of a conference several of the managers of East Liberty theatres have boosted their prices, and are now on a ten-cent basis. The Rex theatre in Penn avenue, East Liberty, has gone to ten cents, as has the Penn theatre at Penn avenue and Butler street.

These two sections are important ones in this city, and should have been playing to higher prices long ago, but the managers could not get together on the price, and as a result the price was held at five cents until this latest move. It is said that there are a number of other theatres in that section which will soon raise their prices as a result of the higher rental prices for films and greatly increased overhead expenses.

HOUSE MANAGERS AND ASSISTANTS IN PHILADELPHIA ORGANIZE SOCIAL BODY

The Motion Picture Employees' Association is a new organization which has just been formed in Philadelphia. It is composed primarily of house managers and assistants. The society meets twice a month at 2131 S. Fifth street.

At the first meeting the election of officers resultd as follows: President, Samuel Kaplan, assistant manager of the Regent; vice president and secretary, David Lodge, of the Ruby; treasurer, Joseph Baker, of Trenton, N. J.

The association has for its objects, sociability amongst its members. Already plans are underway for the first big entertainment, which will take the form of a masquerade ball to be given Halloween night at Eagle's Hall, Broad and Spring Garden streets. Part of the proceeds of the ball will be given to charity.

Many surprises are being planned by the management. It is hoped to have some of the prominent screen stars present and novel souvenirs are promised the guests.

Cleveland League Holds Meeting and Hears Wage Report; Committee Appointed to Take Charge of Pay Demand

Special to Motion Picture News.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 16.

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors League held its regular meeting on Tuesday.

The most important business was the reading of the report of the committee of five appointed to take charge of the increased wage demanded by the operators. The operators won their fight for a $3.25 weekly increase, thus bringing the minimum wage scale up to $20.75 a week. The committee reported that it held three meetings with the operators' union; one at the Union headquarters; one with Mr. Owen, secretary of the Federation of Labor, and a third with the grievance committee of the operators' union.

The result of the discussions at these meetings failed to convince the operators of the injustice of their demand. But failing to make the League committee come to their terms, they approached individual exhibitors, threatening strike and boycott if their demands were not met. After an exceedingly dull summer, the exhibitor had little inclination for upholding a plan that might close his theatre at this season, so he agreed to the increase but at the same time, no longer recognizing the closed shop.

The early part of August, the League appointed a committee consisting of D. S. Schumann, S. Simpson, Sam Bullock, W. J. Slimm, and George Heinbach to determine on some plan for organization on the political progress of the League. This committee drafted a plan which it sent to the national headquarters for approval and assistance. As no answer has as yet been received from the national headquarters, a motion was made and carried that a letter be written urging this matter to be brought to the attention of the national association and tended to at its next meeting.

Massachusetts Exhibitors Will Join National League; Members Unanimously Vote for Association Merger

Boston, Sept. 16.

A VERY spirited meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts was held on Thursday, September 7, at Beacon theatre building, Tremont street, Boston.

It was unanimously passed that the directors legalize the vote passed at the last meeting, that the organization join the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. This local organization is to be called the Massachusetts branch.

It was voted that the present members in good standing, be registered as members of the new organization.

The following officers were temporarily elected: E. H. Horstmann, president; R. W. Drown, 1st vice president; P. F. Lydon, second vice president; H. A. Gilman, treasurer; H. I. Wasserman, secretary.

The following Board of Directors were appointed: E. H. Horstmann, F. J. Howard, R. W. Drown, Jacob Laurie, P. M. Lydon, G. M. Clark, H. A. Gilman, and H. I. Wasserman.

A committee of two, H. I. Wasserman and Jacob Laurie, were appointed to seek suitable quarters in the vicinity of the film district.

Other important matters were taken up, such as appointing a committee to see the Mayor, Honorable James M. Curley, with the view of reducing the Sunday licenses. A committee was also appointed to see Chief Plunkett with the view of modifying the strict censorship on Sunday pictures, and other hardships imposed on the exhibitors.

Later, the above committee reported that a favorable conference was held, and certain modifications were made in the stringent laws."

NOVEMBER 6 IS DATE SET FOR FOURTH BRONX BALL

The fourth annual entertainment and ball of the Cinema Exhibitors Association, Bronx Local No. 2, M. P. E. L. of A. will be held on Monday, November 6 (Election Eve), 8 p. m. at Hunt's Point Palace, 163rd street and Southern Boulevard, Bronx. Bronx subway to Simpson street station.

There will be a grand march of photoplay stars led by Madame Olga Petrova and all the photoplay artists will positively attend. This affair promises to eclipse all previous entertainments of the association and the following committee is hard at work: Henry Cole, chairman; J. Bolte, H. Pollak, A. Levy, N. Scheinberg, and President J. J. Whitman, ex-officio.

At the last annual ball more than 4,000 were present and the coming affair will be bigger than any of the pervious entertainments held by the association, as the committee has been assured of the co-operation of manufacturers and photoplayers.

Exhibitor Complains of Treatment by Inconsiderate Releasing Companies

Rolla, Missouri, Aug. 25, 1916.

Wm. A. Johnston, Esq.,
New York City.

My dear Sir:

I read with much interest the two letters you published in your September 2nd issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, regarding Federal tax and the manner that releasing companies are treating exhibitors.

The Federal tax having been scttled by the Senate for the time being, I wish to back up the letter of Mr. H. L. S. Robinson of Bedford, Va. He has the right spirit to make a good exhibitor, which, notwithstanding the releasing companies, there are more "good" than "bad" exhibitors.

I have been in the game a little over three years, long enough to see that the releasing companies "are killing the goose that lays the golden eggs" for them.

Not so long ago, advertising matter was free, express was paid one way, and we were extended a line of credit. Now every film company charges an exhorbitant rate for paper, force exhibitor to pay express both ways, pay in advance, and several of them demanding a deposit.

Had the releasing companies improved their service, according to the extra charges, it would have been for the betterment of the business, but the paper (from some of them) comes out in the same old ragged condition. The photos may or may not come at all, and should they come, the advertising clerk has been too careless to see that they belong to the picture you have ordered; the films booked and paid for will come, providing the releasing company received them back from the previous exhibitors; they may or may not have been examined; all haphazard, no system; their one and only idea is to charge, send your bill, get the money, and then let you hold the bag.

The exhibitors of to-day, owing to competition, have to invest more money for buildings and equipment, more money for pictures, as patrons' tastes have improved, and must charge the same prices of admission as of old, while the releasing companies are gouging them on all sides.

The only method of release from this petty tyrany of the releasing companies is for exhibitors to be honest in their dealing with the film companies, and pick out from the bunch those who are giving us the squarest deal, for organization amongst all the small exhibitors seems almost an impossibility.

I trust you will see fit to publish this letter in your invaluable MOTION PICTURE NEWS, as I know it will be read by the majority of motion picture interests.

Thanking you for the great opportunity of using your valuable columns for the exhibitor as well as the releasing companies.

Yours, etc.,
FRED W. SMITH.

State Convention of New Jersey Exhibitors Set for October 4; Mayor of Newark to Address Gathering

THE following notice has been sent out to all the exhibitors in the State of New Jersey:

Dear Sir: A convention for the purpose of effecting an organization of the exhibitors of the State of New Jersey has been called by the Hudson and Essex County organization for October 4, 11 A. M., at Achtelsteller's Hall, 842 Broad street, Newark, New Jersey. It is imperative that all of the counties in the state be represented, and that you attend as matters directly affecteing your business will be thoroughly discussed, such as the abolition of the deposit system; the reduction of electric light and power rates as has been accomplished by the New York exhibitors; the correction of arbitrary practices by some of the film exchanges and the submission of a comprehensive, political and legislative program for the coming season.

Mayor Thomas L. Raymond, of Newark, will make the opening address and such men as William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry; Lee A. Ochs, president of the M. P. E. L. of America; W. W. Irwin, general manager of V.L.S.E.; W. Stephen Bush of the Moving Picture World; William A. Johnston of MOTION PICTURE NEWS and H. H. Hill of the C. and C. Electric and Manufacturing Company, will address the meeting on topics of vital interest. The gubernatorial candidates of New Jersey have been invited.

A luncheon will be served in which you are invited to participate. If unable to attend, please be sure and write a letter to Secretary F. J. Leschke, 967 Summit avenue, Jersey City, N. J., stating whether you are in accord with the movement and wish to join a state organization.

By order of H. Charles Hespe, president of the Hudson County Exhibitors, and B. Stern, president of the Essex County Exhibitors.

[Signed] F. J. LESCHKE, Secretary.

LUCAS VISITS CAPITAL CITY FOR TRIANGLE

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.

Arthur Lucas, general district manager for Triangle, was a recent visitor in the Capitol City. He found Triangle matters in tiptop shape under the local management of J. H. Butler, but declared that the offices were only temporary and would be moved as soon as more suitable quarters could be secured.

As Mr. Lucas was a former local exchangeman in Washington he took occasion to visit several of his former associates and friends. Film circles generally always welcome the periodical visits of Mr. Lucas.

From his offices at 708 Thirteenth street, Mr. Butler is making Triangle productions more popular with the picture patrons and more possible with the exhibitor. Washington is well represented with these features, is is also the territory under the control of the local office.

BRING SUIT TO STOP THEATRE DEAL

George W. Mercer and Walter St. John are the defendants in a suit filed in the District Court, Des Moines, Ia., recently by Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Rathbun, the controversy arising from a deal wherein Mercer and St. John sold the Rathbuns the Alamo theatre there, now operated by Grace Wiley.

The plaintiffs charge that they paid $3,600 for the theatre, $500 cash, some real estate and $1,880 in notes. The suit is for the purpose of restraining the defendants from disposing of said notes, the Rathbuns claiming that the place was not worth more than $500.

EXHIBITORS AND EXCHANGE MEN IN DETROIT HOLD MEET

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 16.

Exhibitors and exchange managers to the number of fiftten met at the Griswold Hotel, Tuesday afternoon, September 12, and decided to drop the idea of a joint organization, but to have committees from each branch work together for the uplift and protection of the motion picture business in Detroit and Michigan.

New York League Develops Plans for Ball in November—Committee of Arrangements Makes Contract to Decorate Garden

AT a meeting held last week, New York Local No. 1 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, made further plans in connection with the ball to be given under the auspices of the National body, in Madison Square Garden, New York City, on November 29. A committee of arrangements was appointed, and this body has already contracted with G. H. Masten and Company to decorate the interior of the Garden at a cost of $6,000.

Producers and accessory manufacturers have already given assurance of their support and some have gone so far as to contract for space at this early date. These include, V-L-S-E, Nicholas Power, Precision Machine, General Decorating Company, Masten and Company, Charles Mayer, B. S. Moss, Lewis J. Selznick, Excelsior Illustrating Company, and Al Harsten.

The committee of arrangements follows: General Committee, I. N. Hartstall, L. F. Blumenthal and William Hilkemeier; Reception Committee, Lee A. Ochs; Arrangement Committee, I. N. Hartstall; Entertainment Committee, L. F. Blumenthal; Ticket Committee, William Hilkemeier; Floor Committee, Chas. Steiner; Badge Committee, Otto Lederer; Decorations Committee, Chas. Haring; Music Committee, Gus Koenigswald; Press, Publicity and Program Committee, Thos. Howard; Master of Ceremonies, S. H. Trigger; Invitation Committee, C. R. Martineau, and Wardrobe Committee, Ben J. Lyons.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

"The 'News' wishes to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything in fact done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to send for publication the successful ideas that he has worked out, also to come to us for suggestions or information. Address the Editor."

Making Lobby Displays An Exact Science

YOU, as an exhibitor, would be interested to meet a man who had reduced the problem of lobby display well nigh to an exact science; who could produce two or three complete—and original—lobby displays for as many features a week; and who could make his theatre the standard in his city for well-dressed, strikingly dressed lobbies, wouldn't you?

There is at least one man in the business who has done this, and is doing it, week in and week out. He's doing it so well and so consistently that it can hardly fail to be an assistance, and an inspiration to any exhibitor who is still groping for some sure way of making his lobby a magnet for patrons with every new picture.

M. Kashin, publicity manager of the Midway theatre, Montreal, P. Q., is the man in question.

The theatre he is associated with is located at one of the busiest corners in the Canadian city. It seats 1,100 persons, and the first show is given each day at ten o'clock in the morning. The Midway's patrons are chiefly French and English. The program is usually changed three times a week, feature comedies and short topicals being the constituents of the programs.

An excellent illustration of the manner in which Mr. Kashin converts his lobby into a pictorial advertisement of the current feature is to be found in the display he arranged for "Shoes," the recent Bluebird feature. A glance at the views shown on this page of the theatre front dressed for the occasion ought to give the wide-awake exhibitor some useful information.

The lobby is forty feet wide, with a depth of fifteen feet. The lobby display proper occupies, usually, ten or fifteen feet of the total width, leaving ample room around the entrance and exit.

M. Kashin

In the Bluebird display, as in all of his other work, the main features are always constructed of cardboard, built up at the necessary points to give thickness and depth. The sole exception in this instance are the shoes which are visible beneath the swinging doors in the center of the set. These are "practical" shoes, which Mr. Kashin was able to use in his work through the co-operation of one of the nearby merchants.

Probably the most ingenious feature of the display is the figure of Mary MacLaren, the heroine of the picture, rising out of the huge shoes which stand on either side of the central doors. The shoes are of tinted cardboard, but the figure of the actress was cut from a one-sheet supplied by the Bluebird exchange, mounted on cardboard and deftly joined to the top of the shoe. Mr. Kashin has resorted frequently to this ingenious and inexpensive method of featuring the star of a picture, and always to the outspoken satisfaction of his patrons.

The front of the theatre is always tastefully framed with lettered and painted signs in harmony with the main lobby display and calling attention to it. Above the entrance is to be found a banner announcing the picture and carrying some terse, striking phrase calculated to arouse the interest of the passer-by and make him stop to inquire into the nature of the attraction within.

And the most attractive feature of Mr. Kashin's method, to the average exhibitor, will be the fact that none of these lobby displays costs him more than fifteen dollars. They can, of course, be done more elaborately, and the same effects could be produced in much more expensive materials. But the small exhibitor, who must make every dollar he spends in advertising go the limit, may rest assured that he can do what Mr. Kashin has done for fifteen dollars or less. Many of his displays have cost little more than ten dollars.

Some of his devices have been novel to a striking degree. For "The Fireman," one of the recent Charlie Chaplin comedies, Mr. Kashin built a fire-engine, completely equipped, out of heavy cardboard, as the central feature of his display. The body was tinted with aluminum paint, the wheels red with gilded rims.

On the running-board stood Chaplin, in the garb of a fireman, axe poised on his shoulder. To give realism to the work, the wheels were kept revolving, and steam poured forth from the smoke-stack.

Costly as the last two effects may have seemed, they were, said Mr. Kashin, the most inexpensive part of the layout. The steam was furnished by a kettle of water set upon a little electric radiator behind the engine. The wheels he connected, by the aid of his house electrician, with an electric fan motor. Needless to say, the display drew crowds and held them during the two days of the picture's showing.

Despite his own fertile ingenuity, Mr. Kashin makes constant use of the lobby frames and posters furnished by the exchanges. The frames always form a part of every display, though a subordinate part, and they are set into the ensemble in such a manner as to add strength to it, without distracting the attention of the spectator from the high lights of the set.

"I have only two guiding principles in the construction of my lobby displays," said Mr. Kashin the other day. "The first is to grasp the theme and spirit of the feature I have to advertise, and visualize it as a lobby display. This simply means that you must go deep into the picture until you come to the big, simple, underlying theme of it. Then work that over in your mind until you can see the setting that is the embodiment of the theme. When you have reached that point, you are ready to build.

"My second principle is to be sure I have got something that the man in the street will remember after he has turned the next corner.

"A lobby display may be perfect and artistic, but if the passer-by forgets it, when it is out of sight, then your display is a failure. Many a time I have destroyed my own work and started afresh because I couldn't convince myself that it would not be forgotten too soon."

We have illustrated only one of Mr. Kashin's lobby displays with the present article. Others will follow in this department each week for an indefinite period. His work is too good and too important to be passed over with a single notice. Both Mr. Kashin and Motion Picture News are enthusiastic over the opportunity here afforded to offer other exhibitors throughout the country the benefit of his achievements.

EXHIBITOR'S HOUSE PHILOSOPHY

Remember that your business has a lot of "news" in it that your local paper will be glad to print in co-operation if you use its advertising columns.

When anything happens by which you can get the name of your house into print, see that it gets in the paper.

Never make a change of policy without taking the public into your confidence.

It is easier to start right in a new theatre than it is to change the wrong policy of an old house.

To send the youngsters home merry and bright is a better advertisement than sending them away pondering over the problems of a melodrama.

ADVERTISES FREE SHOWS TO "LIBERTY" FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN

When R. R. Perkins, manager of the Ozark theatre, Burlington, Ia., decided to run the serial "Liberty," he made up his mind to get a flying start.

The day before the first showing he ran a half page ad, announcing a free show for ladies. He also advertised a free show for kids in the afternoon.

During the show Mr. Perkins announced that all of the kids who waited outside after the show and joined in the parade would receive a pass to the second episode the following week. Not a kid left. Everyone of them stayed with the result that a parade of 700 children was soon on its way through the streets of Burlington. At the head were two cowboys on ponies, and Uncle Sam, a soldier carrying a banner, a bass drummer—and then those 700 kids. Mr. Perkins, on a bicycle, rode alongside and kept the crowd waving flags which he gave to each one.

"Of course," said Mr. Perkins, "The second week I had a lot of passes come in, but on the third Friday the kids came and paid their money to see that picture."

FEATURE A DAY WITH HEAVY ADVERTISING IN DAILIES

The Pageant theatre, 5851 Delmare boulevard, St. Louis, has opened its doors for the fall season with an entirely new policy in its program. A. E. Morelock, the manager, began the first week with a revival of V-L-S-E subjects, running a feature each day, and advertising heavily in all the daily papers.

After the first week each feature will run an entire week, but the advertising will continue to be heavy, for it has been satisfactorily proved that advertising pays, and the house has literally been packed to capacity at each performance ever since the opening.

LEVIN SHOWS PLAIN SLIDES

Joe Levin of the new Fillmore street theatre, San Francisco, is trying novel effects in the way of slides. He has discarded all the gingerbread stuff and shows simple and artistic slides.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

Lenore Ulrich Returns to Screen in a Morosco for Paramount in Week of October 2; 34th Travel Series from Holmes Is Also Released

THE Paramount Program for the week of October 2, marks the return to the screen of Lenore Ulrich in her first Morosco production for this season, and also brings forth the second Famous Players production in which Valentine Grant appears.

This week also marks the introduction to the motion picture industry of Paramount's first single-reel comedy.

Lenore Ulrich returns to the screen this season in three productions, the first of which, released this week, will be "Intrigue." Valentine Grant will be seen in the Famous Players production of "The Daughter of MacGregor," a Scotch character piece written by Miss Grant herself.

Paramount's small features consist of four single reels for this week, and will include the 34th edition of the Paramount Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen; a Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Picture, the 35th of the series of "Trips Around the World," entitled a "Scotch-Irish Reel"; a Paramount Bray Cartoon, "O. U. Rooster," by C. L. Glackens and a Paramount Comedy produced by the United States Picture Corporation, "Nearly a Deserter."

Paramount's magazine-on-the-screen, the Pictographs, contains four subjects this week, the first of which will be the beginning of a series of "Safety First" pictures, which will show in minutest detail, how people can safeguard themselves from injury in many unique ways. It also includes the story of "What Became of the Spinning Wheel," with which the grandmothers of days gone by spent many hours spinning out the wool into cloth.

Another interesting subject is that of "How Great Lake Freighters are Handled," showing that it is possible to load one of these great steamers of our Lakes, a 600 footer, in twenty minutes. The concluding subject is "The Four Footed Aristocrats," showing what has been accomplished by the eugenic breeding of cats and dogs.

Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures take an interesting trip to a portion of Scotland and Ireland.

"O. U. Rooster," a Paramount-Bray Cartoon, is from the pen of C. L. Glackens, and is undoubtedly one of the best bits of animated cartoon this well-known cartoonist has done.

"Nearly a Deserter," is the first single-reel Paramount comedy to be released by this distributing organization since its inception two years ago. It was produced by the United States Picture Corporation, and tells a story of how a tramp endeavored to gain a fifty dollar reward by passing a "pal" off for an army deserter, only to be caught in his attempt, during the interim of which many unique complications arise. Some of the most clever trick photography yet accomplished for the screen is shown, and the picture is full of surprises from start to finish.

Special lithograph paper, publicity and advertising, has been arranged for each of the five-reel features on the program, and the single reels that are issued this week for the exhibitor's aids, which is a part of the campaign Paramount has inaugurated to help the exhibitor and his theatre.

Ivan Special Feature Is Entitled "Enlighten Thy Daughter," Set for Release in October; All Star Cast Is Picked for Subject

FOR the past half year Ivan Abramson has devoted every spare moment of his time to the development of what he says is the master effort of his career. Taking a theme the subject of which treats of the follies of ignorance and the results sustained by the fact that sufficient enlightenment is not furnished the young by their parents, he has put six months' work into the development of it as a photoplay.

There are eight principal acting roles in the new play, each one of which is as important as the next, and each giving the artist chosen to play the part ample opporunity to display artistry and character delineation in its portrayal.

A cast is being assembled of artists of both the legitimate and the silent stage, each one a star, it being the purpose of the producer to film a drama with a distinctive all-star cast.

Contrary of the usual custom, this play will not be released as a regular Ivan feature, but will be exploited as a special feature employing all methods of publicity to create both exhibitor and audience demand. Its length will be a minimum of seven reels.

October is the month set for its premier at a leading Broadway theatre which will be specially engaged for a long period to house "Enlighten Thy Daughter."

SAFETY FIRST SERIES IN PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS, THE MAGAZINE-ON-THE-SCREEN, AT EARLY DATE

The movement of Safety First which has swept over the entire country during the past few years, is being taken up with renewed force by the Paramount Pictures Corporation through their magazine-on-the-screen, the Paramount Pictographs, and beginning in an early release, they will issue a series of screen articles, telling more than fifteen million Paramount patrons how they can safely do the ordinary things of life and eliminate the ever-fearful accidents that happen day in and day out through the year.

These series of pictures begin by telling of the little things that cause the biggest accidents and bring forth the greatest thrills, and will continue through its series by taking up such catastrophes that really crush people so terribly that they are beyond being thrilled.

"PRUDENCE THE PIRATE" STARS GLADYS HULETTE AND WILL BE SEEN ON PATHE PROGRAM OCTOBER 22

"Prudence, the Pirate," starring Gladys Hulette, will be the second Thanhouser feature released through the Pathe exchanges in October. October 22 is the date upon which "Prudence" will have her first public showing. Florence La Badie in "The Pillory" is to be Thanhouser's first October release.

The director is William Parke and the author is Agnes C. Johnston.

Prominent in "Prudence" is Panthus, the ugliest pup in the world, who was rescued from the New Rochelle dog pound and turned into a first rate moving picture actor.

The feature is a comedy drama about a little girl with piratical ambitions, who sets sail in the good ship Bucket of Blood, and captures a house boat. An exciting fire aboard the Bucket of Blood is one of the features.

"GETTING BY" FROM "V" ON SEPTEMBER 25

On Monday, September 25, the General Film Company will release a Vitagraph one-part comedy made at the Bayshore studio by Director Robertson. It is entitled "Getting By" (no double meaning intended), and features Huntly Gordon and Shirley Moore.

On Friday, September 29, Hughie Mack is seen in the comedy offering "She Who Last Laughs." This is another large scene production from the script by himself and Graham Baker. Patsey De Forest and the rest of Semon's "Sea Lions" support Hughie.

"Three Pals" Heads Mutual Releases for Week of September 18

"THE Three Pals," the five-part comedy drama which heads the Mutual Film Corporation's program of releases for the week of September 18, as a Mutual Star Production forms a vehicle for the talents of the widely famed character comedians, C. William Kolb and Max M. Dill. At the same time it is giving the two actors, whose experience on the stage has taken them to every city in the country, their second appearance on the Mutual program under their contract with the American Film Company. The first Mutual screen release in which they appeared was "A Million for Mary."

May Cloy, who played the role of Mary at eighteen, in the first Kolb and Dill picture, is cast in the role of Mary Markham in "The Three Pals." Mary is a girl who elopes with a worthless scoundrel, and by so doing gets herself cut off in her father's will, and finds herself in all sorts of difficulties, which the artless old couple, Mike and Louie (Kolb and Dill) determine to help her out of.

The comedy drama was put in scenario form by Al Santell, and directed by Rea Berger, whose ability as a director was proved in the feature starring Audrey Munson, "Purity" and in "A Million for Mary."

Anna Little as a boy will delight the eyes of her many admirers in the five-part Mutual Masterpicture of the week, "Land O' Lizards." The setting, as usual in the photoplays in which Anna Little and Frank Borzage appear, is in the western country, this time located near a stream which is rich in gold.

Miss Little and Mr. Borzag are supported by a cast composed of Harvey Clark, Laura Sears, Perry Banks, and Jack Richardson. Mr. Richardson is seen again, of course, as the villain. This time as Buck Moran, the leader of the Bar C band of outlaws. He is the first one killed in a fray with the valiant stranger in defense of Bobbie.

"Land O' Lizards" was written by Kenneth B. Clarke, the short story writer, and directed by Mr. Borzage himself. It will be released on Monday, September 18.

"The Mysterious Fingerprints," the third episode of "Fantomas," will go out as a Gaumont-Mutual product on Thursday, September 21.

"A Flaw in the Evidence," a Thanhouser production, and "The Father of Her Child," a screen offering from the Horsley studios, compose the week's two-part releases and appear on Friday and Saturday, September 22 and 23, respectively.

A "Beauty" comedy will find its way to the public on Tuesday in "The Stinger Stung," a one-reel laugh maker in which Orral Humphrey as the editor of The Beeville Stinger gets himself into all sorts of scrapes with the ladies of two rival aid societies, with the local political boss and with the loafers club, who finally railroad him out of town.

In support of Mr. Humphreys appears Rea Berger, George Clancy, Bessie Banks and Lucille Hard.

The Vogue comedy release of the week is "Paste and Politics" with Paddy McGuire again to the front in the leading role of bill poster.

"Movie Struck" offers George Ovey, the Horsley comedian in a one-reel Cub comedy of Friday, September 22.

The remaining releases of the week consist of the Mutual Weekly, No. 90, and "See America First," Gaumont, both set for release on Wednesday, September 20, and the screen edition of "Reel Life," The Mutual Magazine, by the same company, will appear Sunday, September 24.

"THE PILLORY," WITH MISS LA BADIE, IS A THANHOUSER, FOR OCTOBER 8 RELEASE

A blow at bigotry is delivered in "The Pillory," a Thanhouser feature starring Florence La Badie, which will be released through the Pathe exchanges on Oct. 8.

The story, by Philip Lonergan, tells of the injustice resulting from the fanatical acts of an intolerant woman who, with the literal words of the Bible as her authority, casts stones at an unfortunate woman who is trying to atone for a sin.

The feature gets its title from a denunciation scene, splendidly staged by Director Frederic Sullivan, in which a narrow minded woman places one who has sinned, upon a social pillory, as cruel as the pillory of the middle ages.

Florence La Badie is a country girl who battles staunchly for her unfortunate mother, played by Marie Shotwell. Others in the cast are Ethyle Cooke, Marie Haynes, George Marlo and Yale Benner.

PAULINE FREDERICK COMPLETES "TWIN SISTER" ROLE

Pauline Frederick has just completed her first "twin sister" role in the Famous Players production "Ashes of Embers," which was directed by Joseph Kaufman. It is perhaps the most difficult role that Miss Frederick has played on the screen, because she must indicate the totally different characteristics of these two women without employing so much make-up as to spoil the probability of their being mistaken for each other.

One of the sisters, Laura, is absolutely without conscience and even goes so far in the gratification of her own ambitions as to force her gentler sister to go to jail for a theft which she commits. Agnes, the peace-loving sister, is a drudge who gives a large portion of her earnings to the gilded Laura until those contributions prove unequal to the demands of the ambitious girl, and the tragedy of the theft is precipitated.

Thus far the dual role presents no great difficulties as the use of contrasting make-up would render the distinction of the two personalities quite patent. But later in the story Agnes is forced to impersonate her sister, on threat that she will be remanded to prison again. The resemblance in these scenes must be so marked that there can be no doubt of the deception of Laura's elderly husband into the belief that he is actually mistaken in thinking that he has caught his wife in a cafe with young Leigh.

Frank Losee, Earl Fox, Maggie Halloway Fisher, Herbert J. Frank and Jay Wilson appear in support of Miss Frederick in this exceptional production, which is to be released on the Paramount program, September 21.

THIRD "FANTOMAS" EPISODE AND THREE SINGLE-REELS FROM GAUMONT IN WEEK OF THE 17TH

The Gaumont contribution to Mutual for the week beginning September 17 is made up of three single reel releases, and the third "Fantomas" episode, "The Mysterious Finger Print." "The Mysterious Finger Print" will be released September 21. There are two more episodes to follow. It is interesting to note that this series is to be followed by "The Vampires, the Arch Criminals of Paris" in nine episodes of three reels each.

The first single reel of the week is "Reel Life," No. 20. This release of September 17 deals with subjects such as one would expect to find in a high-class magazine. First in importance is "Training Our Merchant Marine Officers," views on the New York State school ship Newport. A second section shows how a designer of gowns, drapes his creation from bolts of material.

"See America First," No. 54 is released September 20. It takes spectators upon a trip of rare beauty through the mountains of New Hampshire. Attached to it is one of Harry Palmer's humorous cartoons. It is called "Nosey Ned Commandeers an Army Mule."

The third release of the week is The Mutual Weekly, which is manufactured by the Gaumont Company.

"Flower of Faith" Is Second Gold Eagle Series from International and Features Jane Grey and Frank Mills, Supported by All Star Cast

THE International Film Service, Inc., will offer as the second of its Golden Eagle Features, the five-reel drama, "The Flower of Faith," by Charles T. and Frank Dazey, the former the author of "In Old Kentucky." It was especially produced for the International by the Suburb Pictures Corporation, Arthur Jacobs, president. Jane Grey is starred in the photoplay and Frank Mills is featured. They are supported by an all-star cast.

"The Flower of Faith" is a story of love and hate, of a girl's faith in the Almighty, and a man's unbelief, of a community of fanatics inflamed to insanity against him, and the vengeance of God meted out in His own way when the mob tries to vent its vengeance.

The film was photographed in the striking scenery along the Delaware Water Gap, and the action of the stay is supposed to take place in any small American community.

Jane Grey, the star of "The Flower of Faith" is one of the best known screen and legitimate actresses in the country, and is peculiarly fitted to impersonate the self-sacrificing, faith-abiding Ruth. Her greatest previous successes were "The Little Gray Lady," "Let Katy Do It," "Waifs," "Man and His Angel" and "The Test.' On the legitimate stage she was leading woman in "The Concert," "Is Matrimony a Failure?" "The Conspiracy," "Newly Married," "Cordelia Blossom" and "Kick In." Her latest success was as Miranda in the Century theatre production of "The Tempest.'

Frank Mills was leading man for Olga Nethersole, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Mrs. Fiske, Elsie Ferguson, Mary Mannering and Eleanor Robson, and supported Sir. Herbert Tree and Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson. In motion pictures he was starred in "The Golden Claw," "The Edge of the Abyss," "The Moral Fabric," "The House of Mirrors" and "Circumstantial Evidence."

Percy Helton, who plays Tom, is the boy character actor who created such a sensation in the leading role of "Young America." He is at present starring in "Yankee Doodle Dick."

Albert Travernier, as Ephram Judson, the evangelist, made his greatest picture success in "The Devil's Garden." He is at present appearing in the all-star production of "The Flame."

Fourth "Fantomas" Episode and Three Single Reels from Gaumont for Week of September 24

"Lake Placid" in Gaumont's "See America First," No. 55

AN average of a reel a day from its studios and laboratories each week is the present Gaumont contribution to Mutual Service. They comprise the three single-reels released by Mutual, and an episode of the Gaumont "Fantomas" series. "The Crook Detective" is episode Number Four in this three-reel series. It will reach the screen September 28, as part of the film released by Gaumont the week of September 24. "The Crook Detective" gives some of the most vivid scenes from the life of Fantomas, the world's greatest criminal.

The first Gaumont single-reel release of the week is Reel Life, the Mutual Magazine in Film. It shows how to read one's life by means of the lines in the palm of the hand, then how a man whose arms have been cut off at the elbow makes a living by writing calling cards, and an interesting series of views of a baseball game played by marionettes, giving each of the plays in a world's series game last season. This is in Reel Life No. 21, released September 24.

The second single-reel is "See America First," released September 27. It takes spectators on a beautiful trip through the Adirondacks, a long time being spent at such well-known places as Saranac and Lake Placid. On the same reel is a Gaumont Kartoon Komic.

The third release of a single-reel is the Mutual Weekly.

OCTOBER 20 IS DATE SET FOR "CODE LETTER"

The Kalem Company announced last week that Friday, October 20, had been decided on as the date for the initial release of the new series of newspaper life by Robert Welles Ritchie. Advance reports from the General Film offices indicate that this episode, "The Code Letter," will start off with a list of bookings placing the series among the most successful ever released by Kalem.

"A Hero by Proxy" Is Set for Release by "U" in Week of September 25

TWO Universal Special features and a five-reel Red Feather are released on the Universal program for the week of September 25. Carter De Haven appears in "A Hero by Proxy," a two-reel episode of the "Timothy Dobbs—That's Me" series in which he is supported by Robert Milash, Ruth Clifford, Hayward Mack and C. Casey. During the week of September 25, episode seven of the Universal special feature serial, "Liberty," will be shown. This two-reel episode, "Liberty's Sacrifice," features Marie Walcamp, Eddie Polo and Jack Holt.

On Monday, September 25, Dorothy Phillips and Lon Chaney will co-star in the special Red Feather five-reel drama, "If My Country Should Call," which was adapted by Ida May Park from the story by Virginia Terhune Van de Walter, and was produced by Joseph De Grasse.

Prominent in the cast besides the principals are Helen Leslie, Adele Farrington, Frank Whitson, Jack Nelson, Albert MacQuarrie, Carl Von Schiller and Gretchen Lederer. On the same day Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Priscilla Dean, will be seen in "Model 46," a Nestor comedy in one-reel written by Tom Gibson and Charles J. Wilson, Jr., and produced by L. W. Chaudet. Gretchen Lederer and Fred Gamble managed to steal time from another picture in order to appear in "Model 46" with Lyons, Moran and Miss Dean.

On Tuesday, September 26, W. V. Mong and Claire McDowell co-star in "Husks of Love," a three-reel society drama which will be released under the Gold Seal brand. Written and produced by William V. Mong, the cast also includes William Carlock, Nellie Allen, Laura Lyle and Mrs. Bertram Grassby. There will be no release under the Victor brand on this date.

The two-reel L-Ko comedy, "A Surgeon's Revenge," in which Dan Russell is featured, will be released on September 27. On the same day, No. 39 of the Universal Animated Weekly will be released. The Animated Weekly obtained some wonderful views this week of the great Quebec bridge disaster in which many lives were lost. Jack Cohn's Animated man caught the hoisting of the bridge and its drop into the depths of the St. Lawrence River with hundreds of workmen clinging to it.

On September 28, King Baggot will be featured in "The Lie Sublime," a two-reel heart interest drama in which he is supported by Edna Hunter and Frank Smith. The picture, which was written by Harry Ditmar, and produced by Henry Otto, will be released under the Big U brand. Mrs. Slattery, A. Von Baussen and Joseph Granby also play important roles in it. "Behind the Scenes in Japan," as seen by Dr. Dorsey, the noted traveler, will be released under the Powers brand on the same date. There will be no Victor release on Thursday of the week of September 25.

"The Shadow Sinister," a Big U drama, written by Al Russell and produced by A. W. Rice, is the feature of September 29. Jane Bernoudy, George C. Pearce, Lloyd F. Whitlock and James Farley play the principal roles. There will be no release under the Imp and Nestor brands on this date.

On September 30, Rex de Rosselli will play the principal role in "A Jungle Hero," a Bison two-reel animal drama written by L. Hutton and Jay Hunt, and produced by Jay Hunt. Golda Caldwell, Colin Chase and Stafford Pemberton appear in support of Mr. de Rosselli. On the same date, Gale Henry, William Franey, Lillian Peacock, Milburn Moranti, Charles Conklin and Harry Mann appear in "The Inspector's Double," a Joker comedy written by Harry Wulze and Charles J. Wilson, and produced by W. W. Beaudine. There will be no Laemmle release on this date.

"Ashes of Remembrance," a Rex drama written and produced by Allen Holubar, will be released on October 1 with Allan Holubar and Betty Schade in the principal roles. Paul Byron, Helen Leslie and J. F. Evers appear in support of Holubar and Miss Schade. On the same date the Victor drama, "In the Laps of the Gods," featuring Lee Hill and Madge Kirby will be released. The play was scenarioized by Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude, and produced by Donald MacDonald. E. P. Evers, Alice Hastings and Marguerite Foss appear in the same picture.

During the week of September 25, there will also be released four subjects which have just come in from the coast, and for which titles have not yet been chosen. One, a two-reel drama, will be released under the Imp brand, while the other one-reelers will be released under the Big U, Rex and Laemmle brands.

MURDOCK ASSIGNED TO HAM AND BUDD FORCES

The latest step in Kalem's plans to assure "all-star" casts in all of its short length productions was taken last week with the assignment of Henry Murdoch, who has been featured comedian in Sis Hopkins and Ivy Close comedies to the Ham and Bud forces working at the Hollywood, California, studio. Murdoch completed the journey from Jacksonville to Hollywood last week and has already started to work on his first subject in the new ranks, and this will be released immediately on its completion.

The acquisition of Murdoch gives the one-reel "Ham Comedies," an unusually strong quartette of stars in Ham, Bud, Ethel Teare and the newcomer. Kalem saw Murdoch's possibilities when he was on the vaudeville stage and induced him to make his screen debut in the popular Sis Hopkins Comedies, where he played principal roles in support of the famous Rose Melville. His work as an acrobatic comedian brought him into quick popularity and in the Ivy Close Comedies which followed the Sis Hopkins subjects, he has been co-starred with the English beauty.

Releasing only four productions a week on the General Film program, Kalem officials are proud of the proportions reached by the roster of stars which includes Marin Sais, True Boardman, Helen Gibson, Ivy Close, George Larkin, Ollie Kirkby, Ham, Bud, Ethel Teare and Henry Murdoch.

SELIG MAKES BOOKING CHANGE IN ITS PICTURES FOR GENERAL IN WEEK OF OCTOBER 9

A change has been made in Selig bookings in General Film service for the week of October 9. "Converging Paths," a two-reel drama, will be released on Monday, October 9. This film will take the place of "The Temptation of Adam," formerly announced for October 9. On Saturday, October 14, the Western drama, "A Mistake in Rustlers," will be released. It is an exciting drama of the West with Tom Mix taking the leading role in one of his last characterizations so far.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

FINISHING touches are being put on "Less Than the Dust" this week and present indications are that Mary Pickford's first play for Artcraft Pictures Corporation will be ready well in advance of the October date set for release. The work of cutting and assembling will begin at once, and then rapid progress will be made on the preliminary set of prints which the sixteen exchanges in the United States and Canada will require at once. This first shipment will total eighty prints of the Hector Turnbull story, which has been produced under the direction of John Emerson.

For the filming of the big spectacular scenes of the play a complete replica of a modern city of India was erected on Long Island. The manuscripts called for a cast of nearly principals. Temporary barracks and commissary were constructed for the comfort of the hundreds of extras whose services were required in the large ensembles and for the convenience of Mr. Emerson and his staff.

In spite of the convenience afforded by their being on the ground at all times the demands of the story kept them in service several weeks and helped to swell the total cost of "Less Than the Dust," and make it one of the most expensive short features ever produced. When cut and assembled "Less Than the Dust" will provide an evening's entertainment.

Henry B. Walthall is now on his third trip to the Manitouwish waters of Upper Wisconsin in pursuit of the knowing muskie. On his first trip he caught several. On the second he took his brother along to show him how it was done, and didn't catch anything. Now, in order to stop the latter from laughing at his failure as a fisherman, he has made another trip. When he returns to the Essanay studios preliminary work on his new play will be complete and work of construction will commence.

Richard C. Travers and Marguerite Clayton are starting work at the Essanay studios in a new two-reel production, "Borrowed Sunshine."

Harry Dunkinson will soon be seen in a two-act Essanay comedy, for which he furnished the idea. The corpulent comedian has been an ardent swimmer all summer, and he conceived a comic plot on a none too efficient nor intrepid life-saver who saves no lives but gets a lot of credit. The picture is entitled, "The Lifesaver."

On account of the infantile paralysis in New York, W. Christy Cabanne, the director who has just joined Metro, did not bring his wife and children with him when he came East from California. Mr. Cabanne has taken a home in Englewood, N. J., where he will live as soon as his family arrives. His two children are Vivien Christy Cabanne and Florence Turner Cabanne.

Harbaugh Takes Company to Steel Mills

Carl Harbaugh, the director who recently joined the Metro staff of producers, and who is directing Nance O'Neil in "The Iron Woman," a picturization of the novel of the same name written by Margaret Deland, took his company of players to Bethlehem, Pa., where many of the important scenes were photographed in a big steel plant there.

World Film Director Emile Chautard is spending several days in Washington, D. C., with Doris Kenyon, Gerda Holmes, Frederick Truesdell and Ralph Delmore, principal members of the cast supporting Robert Warwick in "The Man Who Forgot."

Gail Kane, Arthur Ashley and twenty other players in "The Man She Married," a new World-Brady photoplay in the making, were the guests of Peter Winchester Rouss one day last week on board his yacht Winchester, said to be the fastest privately owned vessel afloat. Scenes were taken in the vicinity of the Seawanhaka Yacht Club. Mr. Rouss is a son of the late Charles Broadway Rouss, who amassed a large fortune by conducting his business along lines directly against accepted commercial principles. He was rated as eccentric, but "got there just the same."

Niles Welch, who achieved wide popularity as a leading man with Metro and who was featured with Mary Miles Minter, Ann Murdock and Ethel Barrymore, has returned to that organization, and is now being filmed in a feature production with Frances Nelson, under the direction of W. Christie Cabanne.

Welch was with Metro for about a year, and he will long be remembered for his work in "The Royal Family," "Emmy of Stork's Nest" and "The Kiss of Hate." When the World Film produced "The Crucial Test," with Kitty Gordon, Welch was especially selected by William A. Brady to play opposite her. Following his World engagement, Welch went with Universal, and played opposite Mary Fuller and Violet Mersereau.

McGill Again in Harness

Lawrence B. McGill, the Arrow-Pathe director, who has been spending the past several weeks at his ranch at Waldo, Flor., has returned to New York to resume directing. McGill left for Florida immediately after completing the "Who's Guilty?" serial, with Anna Nilsson and Tom Moore. While at Waldo he completed a new concrete house on his ranch, and built a studio, which he plans to use during the winter months.

Three Scenes from Consolidated Film Corporation's New Serial "The Crimson Stain Mystery"

Mme. Petrova, the Metro star, used her beautiful country home near Flushing, L. I., for many of the scenes in "Extravagance," the big five-part Metro feature now in production. While the players were at work there, Mme. Petrova entertained her leading man, Arthur Hoops, and her director, Burton King, at luncheon. In the studio Mr. King reproduced the interior of Mme. Petrova's sun parlor. Mme. Petrova brought her parrot and her blue Persian cat Sultana to town to "work in the set."

Edward Brennan, the popular leading man who has appeared in many Metro productions, has returned from Kansas City, where he directed a big feature picture depicting the history of that State. Mr. Brennan is now working with Mme. Petrova.

Dare-Devil George Larkin has started on his task of giving Jacksonville, Flor., a weekly thrill in the staging of the different episodes of "Grant, Police Reporter," the new one-reel Kalem series. One of the thrilling scenes of "The Code Letter," the initial episode of the series, calls on Larkin to let himself down hand over hand on the rope of a painter's scaffold from the roof of a skyscraper.

When he is in mid-air, the other rope supporting the scaffold is cut by an accomplice of the man he is pursuing, and Larkin swings through the air, escaping death by grabbing the rail of a fire ladder at the end of his swing. The scene was staged in the heart of the business section of Jacksonville and caused a temporary suspension of business. The event was described by the Jacksonville Metropolis as follows:

"Hundreds of people gathered in Julia Street this afternoon in front of the Hotel Mason and saw George Larkin, Kalem player, risk his life in the production of a vivid scene for a moving picture.

"Larkin held to a painter's ladder with his hands, six stories from the pavement, while a confederate cut the rope, which held one end of the ladder from the roof of the Everett Hotel. Larkin swung backward toward the ground while the crowd watched with bated breath the one remaining rope hold the artist fast."

Roscoe Arbuckle, the Triangle-Keystone star, is just completing a new Keystone comedy over at the Fort Lee studio, in which the entire studio was transformed into the interior of a theatre, and the setting for the stage, procenium arch and all was the equal of most any moving picture theatre in New York. Besides an orchestra of twenty pieces partially concealed behind banks of palms at one side of the stage, a stream of running water poured down a paper mache mountain on the opposite side of the stage.

The new Keystone feature will be completed within a few days, and will be the last to be made in the East by Mr. Arbuckle before returning to the Pacific Coast, where he will continue to make Keystone comedies in the studio at Los Angeles.

Sidney Olcott has resigned from the Famous Players directorial staff. This announcement will come as a big surprise to the many admirers of Mr. Olcott's creative genius.

During his engagement with the Famous Players, Olcott produced some very successful pictures, among them "Madame Butterfly" and "Poor Little Pepina," with Mary Pickford; "Diplomacy," with Marie Doro; "Seven Sisters," with Marguerite Clark, and "The Smugglers," with Donald Brian. He also directed Hazel Dawn and, latterly, Valentine Grant in the Irish subject, "The Innocent Lie." He has just completed a Scotch story, "The Daughter of MacGregor," with Miss Grant.

Censor from Ohio Visits Fox Studio

Florence Feldman, of the Ohio Board of Censors, visited the William Fox studios in New Jersey last week.

Theda Bara has completed her seventeenth picture under the William Fox banner. The direction was in charge of J. Gordon Edwards, and the photoplay marks Miss Bara's return to "vampire" role.

Joseph Granby, who taught the fundamentals of the drama for years before he went on the stage himself, is now a member of the William Fox photoplayers. Mr. Granby has a role in the new Valeska Suratt picture now being filmed. He was born in Boston, and joined the Castle Square Players when he jumped from the theoretical to the practical drama. He was on the stage for eleven years.

Mrs. Vernon Castle, star of the International Film Service's preparedness serial, "Patria," is mourning the loss of a gold emblem of the British Royal Flying Corps, of which her husband is a member. Mrs. Castle was at Newport last week, where several of the scenes of "Patria" were made. After the completion of one of the scenes, Mrs. Castle missed the emblem, which she had worn constantly since it was presented to her by her husband on the night they danced before the Queen Mother of England, early last spring. The loss was reported to the police of Newport, who are making every effort to find it.

Several new "sets" have been made for the new Valeska Suratt picture, now being filmed in the William Fox studio at Cliffside, N. J. Particularly gorgeous is a drawing room setting finished entirely in black and white checks, with black and white panels in the wall.

Three leading men will support the little Metro star, Viola Dana, in her forthcoming photoplay, entitled "The Gates of Eden." These are Edward Earle, Bob Walker and Augustus Phillips.

Shakerism is the central theme of "The Gates of Eden." The pictures have been taken in one of the few Shaker villages remaining in the United States. There are not more than twelve of these communities left. Shakers do not believe in marriage, and they enforce celibacy among their members. "The Gates of Eden" deals with a tragedy in the lives of two young people who loved each other truly, and craved the human happiness that was their right, but which they were denied by the rigid tenets of the sect to which they belonged.

Virginia Pearson's new picture for William Fox was completed last week, and will be released in a short time. Because the photoplay is laid in a Scotch village more than one of the actors in the cast spent many a weary hour at the costumers getting the proper sartorial effect.

Cast in Support of Bushman

A cast of favorite players has been engaged to support Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the Metro-Quality play, "A Diplomatic Romance," which Mr. Bushman himself is directing with the assistance of P. Thad Volkman. Prominent among these is Helen Dunbar, Henri Bergman, William Davidson and William Mandeville.

Two important additions have been made by the International Film Service, Inc., to the cast producing the various episodes of the photoplay series, "Beatrice Fairfax," in the persons of Olive Thomas and May Hopkins. They will appear in the support of Harry Fox and Grace Darling, who have the principal parts.

The Vitagraph star, Naomi Childers, who has just finished work in three feature pictures for the Vitagraph, is spending a two weeks' vacation in her home city, St. Louis. Miss Childers intends to visit her old friends and at the same time become acquainted with the motion picture patrons of that city, after which she will return to the Vitagraph to resume her work.

Florence La Badie, the Thanhouser star, is now working under the direction of Frederic Sullivan in "Divorce and the Daughter," a feature to be released through the Pathe exchanges. The story is by Agnes C. Johnston, author of "The Fear of Poverty," "The Shine Girl" and "Prudence, the Pirate." Miss La Badie is supported by J. H. Gilmour, Edwin Stanley, Kathryn Adams, Sam Niblack, Zenaide Williams and two children, Ethelmary Oakland and Arthur Levine.

Little Bobby Connelly, of the Vitagraph Players, who will soon be seen in the Barney Bernard feature film, "A Prince in a Pawnshop," is the subject of a novel now on the bookstands, entitled "Sonny Jim," the part which Bobby played in a number of pictures for the Vitagraph. The illustrations throughout are pictures from his film and form a most attractive addition to the book.

Rosemary Theby (Vim)

Earle Williams, the Vitagraph star who has been resting for a few days after finishing work on the motor series, "The Scarlet Runner," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, and which is scheduled for release October 2, and every succeeding Monday until the twelve episodes have been released, is preparing for work in a feature film, the title of which has not yet been decided.

Vincent Serrano, of Thanhouser; Eugene Moore, his director; Leo Wirth, his assistant; Thomas A. Curran, Helen Badgley, Carey Hastings, and other members of the company have returned from Block Island where they have been making scenes for "A Modern Monte Cristo," a feature by Lloyd Lonergan that will be released through Pathe.

Mr. Serrano and Helen Badgley, especially, were glad when the work was finished. Little Helen, who is only seven years old, had to fall overboard from a schooner in a storm, and Mr. Serrano was the hero who leaped overboard and swam ashore with her. The picture was taken in a real storm, which rocked the camera so furiously that six retakes were necessary before the camera hit the big scene and held it.

Ross Heads "V" Camera Department

An item of trade interest is that W. A. Ross has been appointed head of the camera department at Vitagraph. Mr. Ross had for a long time been cameraman with Director Ted Marston at the studio.

Dorothy Green (International)

The work of rebuilding the French village blown down in the big storm of September 2, is progressing on the Long Island location under the direction of Vitagraph technical directors. Owing to the destruction wrought by the wind and the magnitude of the set it will not be restored completely for use in filming "The Girl Philippa" until about October 1.

This village covers several acres of ground, and is very elaborate, including as it does a long street, several side streets, and a market square. Director S. Rankin Drew was seriously impeded in his task of providing the battle scenes for this Robert W. Chambers story by the damage done, and a large pecuniary loss was suffered by Vitagraph besides.

Anita Stewart, the featured star of this production, has returned to her Long Island home, "The Wood Violet," after two weeks spent in the mountains recuperating from her recent attack of typhoid fever.

An illustration of the infinite pains taken to insure accuracy in the various details of the great spectacle of American military preparedness being produced by Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, of Vitagraph, expert model makers were sent aboard one of the battleships of the United States Navy for the purpose of sketching the actual workings of a modern gun turret. It is from these sketches that the model and actual turret for the picture will be constructed.

TOP OF UNION TERMINAL BUILDING IS OBTAINED FOR GARRICK STUDIOS

Jacksonville, Sept. 16.

The Garrick Studios Company and the Southeastern Film Corporation have secured a ninety-nine-year lease of the top of Union Terminal Building, in this city, which they will make into the largest studio in the world, with a floor space of 67,000 feet. The building is 635 feet long by 111 feet wide, and can accommodate twenty-five companies working at the same time.

Mr. Garrick has a corps of scenic artists and carpenters at work now getting the building in shape for the remodeling which will be carried on at once, and which is hoped to be ready for the fall influx of motion pictures companies to this city about November 1.

The studios will be situated on top of a five-story building, built entirely of concrete and reinforced steel, and free from the worry of city life. Double passenger elevators will be installed direct to the studio, and the plans which have been drafted by the Donaldson and Conn Construction Company of Jacksonville, show a wealth of artistic and mechanical detail that will greatly facilitate the work of visiting companies.

Richard Garrick, manager of the Garrick Studios Company, has secured a lease on the Gaumont studio in South Jacksonville, which the company will use until the mammoth plant is completed and ready for occupancy. The Southeastern Film Corporation will produce, release pictures and run theatres, and numbers as its officers some of the most prominent men in Florida and New York.

Why not get together with all the exhibitors in your community. Why not place your cards face up on the table and say this:

"Gentlemen, big features are draining us of our life's blood. They are taking every nickle of our receipts because of their tremendous cost. We used to make money—big money—with regular service shows and we can do it again. And at a lower rental cost! There's no reason why the feature exchanges should profit by our desire to put each other out of business. Program service never was as good as it is right now—let's get together and pass a resolution to return to the regular program that never failed to please our patrons. Let's resolve to get together, live and let each other live!" The day you pass this resolution will mean the dawn of a new prosperity for you—

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, Sept. 16.

GERALDINE FARRAR, after completing her work in the twelve-reel subject made by Cecil B. de Mille for Jesse L. Lasky, has departed for the East, to take up another engagement. The picture it is prophesied at the studio, will be the greaest de Mille has yet produced from point of size, settings and talent. The cast contains more stage and screen stars than any previously made motion picture of this size. The title for the picture has not been selected, there being several under consideration.

Miss Farrar appears in the role of Joan of Arc, supported by Wallace Reid, Hobart Bosworth, Theodore Roberts, Tully Marshall, James Neil, Horace B. Carpenter, Charles Clary, Raymond Hatton, Larry Paton, C. H. Geldert, Mrs. Lewis McCord, Lillian Leighton, Ernest Joy, Marjorie Daw, William Koch, and more than fifty others known upon the stage and screen. In all more than four thousand people took part in the production which required more than thirty large sets for interiors and exteriors, and will need five more before other scenes are completed.

De Mille will spend about a month making the scenes, and it will be fully a month more before the film is cut, tinted, colored sections made and ready for release.

Research work for this film has required the services of several people under the direction of Elizabeth Brock McGaffey for almost a year past. Jeanie McPherson prepared the scenario, combining the various versions of the life and romance of Joan of Arc. The many elaborate sets were made under the personal direction of Wilfred Buckland, and the photography was in charge of Alvin Wyckoff.

Members of the Lasky executive staff, and those who took part in the Cecil de Mille twelve-reel feature starring Geraldine Farrar, presented the prima donna with a beautiful silver hand mirror, the last day she worked at the studio.

The making of the last scene for the picture, that which will serve to introduce the star in the film subject, was the appropriate time selected for the presentation by Director Cecil de Mille. All members of the Lasky staff gathered on the big stage to see Miss Farrar bow to the audience in real life, and after rehearsals when she called to her maid for her mirror and make-up box, she received the beautiful tribute from the friends she has made at the studio.

On the back of the handle of the mirror is an engraving of Miss Farrar as she appears as Joan of Arc. Above this on the mirror proper is an inlaid fleur-de-lis of gold extending the full width of the mirror. About this are the names of those who took part, engraved from their own handwriting. On the front of the handle are the names of the executives of the studio, at the top of which is Cecil B. de Mille. In all there are more than one hundred names on the mirror.

"The Vagabond Prince"

Prince Tonio and Fluffy are the roles taken by Harry B. Warner and Dorothy Dalton, respectively, in "The Vagabond Prince," Warner's fifth screen starring vehicle, which although filmed two or three months ago, has just been completed at the Ince studios, and shipped East to the factories. The prince is a young nobleman, who comes to America for adventure and falls for Fluffy, a dance hall girl, after numerous adventures, many of which take place in an atmosphere of San Francisco's celebrated Barbary coast.

Warner has a reputation as a boxer, which he upholds in this film when he fights Charles K. French and another good-sized actor. Warner's rain of blows kept the two men active, and on their toes during the making of the fight scene. One of the very unusual scenes shown in this which was made when an accident happened shows most of the cast gathered about to celebrate the wedding of the principals with a liquorish feast. In the midst of the scene, an extra girl tapped the plug of a keg of beer, and the explosion that followed, gives a genuine rainstorm scene. J. Frank Burke, Charles K. French and Katherine Kirkwood all have good parts in this story by J. G. Hawks, which was photographed by Dal Clawson. Charles Giblyn is responsible for the direction.

Victor Schertzinger, who went East with Thomas H. Ince early in the summer to have charge of the musical program of the New York primier of "Civilization," was given a hearty welcome by members of the producing staff when he returned to the Ince Culver City studios last week. He brought with him the information that the Peace March, portions of which form part of the incidental music for "Civilization" is one of the popular musical hits of the day, and being played in the high-class hotels and cafes. While in the East, Mr. Schertzinger and Ince collaborated in several compositions for new musical shows. Lina Abarbanell is using three selections in John Cort's production of "Florabella," two are being popularized in Ziegfield "Follies," two by Burt Williams, and Grace Le Rue is singing two in vaudeville.

The salary rate for extra people was given a material boost by Business Manager E. H. Allen, of the Ince studios, last week, when it was found necessary to engage fifteen geisha girls for scenes in a roof garden. To get the correct atmosphere, Director Charles Miller, who needed such players for a sob sister story starring Bessie Barriscale, insisted that girls from Los Angeles tea gardens be secured. Investigation brought out the fact that they drew more salary than the ordinary extra girls employed at studios, and consequently would not leave their positions until assured of pay equivalent to what they would earn should they remain in their regular positions. This picture will be completed shortly, and Miss Barriscale will then be granted a four weeks' vacation.

William S. Hart and his horse-opera troupe from Inceville frightened the natives of Culver City one night last week, when he shot up the town from the studio. The scenes made on an interior setting at the studio required enough shooting for a Mexican attack on a village, and the chief of police and a score or more villagers rushed to the studio with thoughts of murder or riot foremost in their minds. "John Law," who stands guard at the front gate, sent them home, assuring them it was nothing but another scene being made.

All of the principals of the Ince Culver City studios, with the exception of Business Manager E. H. Allen, who was busy signing weekly salary checks, were used as extras in a court room scene made by Director Charles Miller. All regular members of the stock company not playing scenes were sent to Inceville to take part in war stuff being filmed by Reginald Barker. At this time Miller needed a number to fill a court room, and so every office in the administration building, men from the shops and women from the wardrobe department, were quickly costumed and put in the scene.

Frank Keenan, Howard Hickman, Monte M. Katterjohn, Lanier Bartlett and Cameraman Otis M. Gobe occupied seats in the front row. Director Raymond B. West and Superintendent of Production David M. Hartford played the part of lawyers, Director Walter Edwards filled a chair at a counsel table, and Art Director Robert Brunton and William Desmond were court reporters. Bessie Barriscale, star of this picture, was thereby given the highest salaried supporting cast that any picture player has ever had.

The twenty Ford machines, property of the Ince plant, were this week converted into Red Cross ambulances of the type used in the present European war, and as such did duty in the war scenes made under the direction of Reginald Barker at Inceville for the production which serves as the second starring vehicle for Clara Williams, who appears as a Red Cross nurse. More than five hundred people daily took part in the battle scenes made in the trenches on Inceville plateau.

"Tri-Star Combination Director"

Raymond B. West has become known as the "tri-star combination" director. He last week made the final scene for an Ince Triangle play which offers Dorothy Dalton, Enid Markey and Howard Hickman as principals. This is a drama of the vampire type, in the making of which Miss Dalton has gone after the honors of sirens of the screen. West is now ready to begin the filming of a psychological story with Miss Dalton, Charles Ray and Louise Glaum. Monte M. Katterjohn prepared the scenario from a story by Alice P. Brown, and the Ince staff author claims to have written into the working script the largest and most costly cafe sets yet made for the screen. Other important players in this production will be Margaret Thompson and Charles K. French.

C. Gardiner Sullivan, chief of the Ince scenario department, last week wrote an original Southern story in which Frank Keenan will be starred under the direction of Walter Edwards. In it the character actor takes the role of a miserly mill owner, and the plot is said to contain the most powerful situation ever presented in an Ince subject. Mr. Sullivan is spoken of as the most prolific author for the screen, he having written about forty original stories for the Triangle program in addition to reading and passing upon every script received at the big Ince plant. Perhaps his greatest success is "Civilization."

"The badest bad-man" ever seen on the screen is the way Monte M. Katterjohn speaks of the role he has created for William S. Hart, which is shortly to be filmed. It is said to be of the type of "Hell's Hinges," which was written by C. Gardiner Sullivan.

Enid Markey is to have a starring part in a college life story, she taking the role of a chorus girl. A big supporting cast has been chosen to support the principals, which includes such prominent Ince players as Howard Hickman, Margaret Thompson, Charles Gunn, J. Frank Burke, Louis Durham and others. The story is by John Lynch, author of several Ince subjects and one of the most recent additions to the scenario staff.

Director Otis Turner has completed his first Fox subject, which stars George Walsh and Juanita Hansen, but no name for this has been selected. Mr. Turner will immediately take up another subject in which these players will have the featured parts.

Director R. A. Walsh will shortly take up the filming of a picture which will offer Harry Carey in the leading role. Monroe Salisbury, who is best known for his work as Allesandro in "Ramona," has been engaged by General Representative Carlos and will play in the Walsh picture.

Oscar C. Apfel is shortly to begin the filming of a story dealing with the lives of people of the best and lowest social circles. Reid Heustis, publicity writer at the Fox studio, is responsible for the story. The only player selected is Eleanor Crowe, whom Mr. Apfel thniks is destined for stardom.

The two Fox comedy companies have completed two subjects each, and beginning last week took up additional ones, each company retaining its former personnel. At the studio it is stated Fox comedies will not be released for several weeks yet, so it will be possible for the companies to get far ahead of the program and thus be in better position to make subjects of a higher quality.

Scenes Showing Specially Built House Erected on Location and Afterward Burnt Down for an Episode of Kalem's "Girl from 'Frisco" Series

A number of very large sets are being prepared under the direction of Technical Director George Grenier at the Fox studios. One of these represents Chinatown and is being built for a Walter Reed comedy. Another represents a Mexican village, and there are between thirty and forty adobe houses which Director Richard Stanton will "shoot up" upon his return from El Paso. Stanton's production also requires a mammoth ballroom set of sufficient size to accommodate seven hundred people.

Morris to Leave for East

M. Morris, who since the coming of the Fox producing organization to the west coast has served as studio auditor and accountant for the west coast exchanges, has been recalled to the New York office where he will do similar work. Mr. Morris will leave as soon as a substitute arrives in Los Angeles. On the way east he will make a tour through the coast and middle west states visiting Fox exchanges. In the east Mr. Morris will do special work for Fox.

Roy McCray and Rube Miller of the Vogue organization have been sitting up nights figuring out additional thrills for an ammunition factory two-reel comedy. Ben Turpin in this will be seen riding all kinds of projectiles, and it is feared his earthly career will end in the explosion of the big ammunition factory.

Teddy, a very well trained dog who came to Los Angeles on big time vaudeville, has been engaged for one picture to be made by Director Henry Kernan and company. The dog foils a big robbery by dashing away to the ocean with a stick of dynamite in his mouth, and chases the criminals so close that they go over a cliff in a barrel. Paddy McQuire, who claims the distinction of never working behind a ribbon counter, is destined to pull some of the comedy for this two-reeler. Arthur Moon will be the lover and Gypsy Abbott takes the part of the sweetheart.

Ninety days were needed for the filming of a two-reel Keystone titled "She Loved a Sailor," which was completed last week. Hugh Fay takes the part of an inventor who perfects shoes that will enable a person to walk on water, and the most trying scene for the company was the one which showed people from a wrecked ship walking on the water to land. This is said to be the most difficult story ever filmed by a Keystone company. Twenty-five thousand feet of negative film was exposed in the making, and it required sixteen days for Director Victor Herrman to complete the cutting. Members of the producing staff who witnessed the film at the studio prior to its shipment claim it will be the greatest released from the Mack Sennett comedy foundry. The remarkable photographic effects secured for this picture are credited to Fred Jackman.

Director Clarence Badger has completed the filming of the Keystone titled "The Danger Girl," which features Gloria Swanson as the girl who disguises as a boy to prove to her brother and sweetheart that the vampire is only vamping with them. Reggie Morris takes the part of the brother and Bobbie Vernon is the sweetheart. One of the big thrills in this is the wild ride of Bobbie Vernon in a hotel bus which ends with a dash through a ten-foot plate glass.

Felix Joins Keystone Stock

George Felix, late of the vaudeville team of Felix and Barry, has been added to the Keystone Stock Company.

Harry Edwards has finished the subject which stars Fred Mase as the fire chief in "A Lover's Might." Harry Gribbon is the police chief, the heavy, who sets fire to the mayor's home that he may rescue the mayor's daughter, but the fire chief, Fred Mace in his original role, a rival for the hand of the girl, wins by rescuing her. One of the big scenes is that of the firemen's ball, which, by the way, was a regular night for all members of the Keystone producing staff.

Exposed negative stock received at the Los Angeles laboratory of the Signal Film Corporation from Director J. P. McGowan and the Helen Holmes Company now working at Arcata and Eureka, Cal., which has been developed, shows some very unusual sea pictures made possible by a recent wreck of the ill-fated passenger steamer Bear at Cape Mendocino. On the day these scenes were made for the second episode of the "Lass of the Lumberlands" serial, according to letters from players, a high sea was running, and it was dangerous for everyone who participated in the scenes. Every feature of life-saving was demonstrated by members of the crew, who remained on board even though the boat has been aground for several weeks. The ship will be known as the Marathon in the serial.

Director McGowan and company were given permission to make scenes in all parts of the boat, including the chart room and the wheel house, ordinarily sacred aboard any vessel. Another coast passenger steamer in the harbor was used to secure scenes of the boat underway, and these were shot as the City of Eureka crossed the Humbolt bar of the Eureka harbor, which is acknowledged the roughest harbor entrance on the west coast.

Signal Players Now Are "Lumberjacks"

Practically every male member of the Signal Company has been initiated and is now a full-fledged lumberjack. They have all taken part in a log jam on Mad River and one by one have received the ducking which comes to the tenderfoot. The old-timers at the lumber camp daily have great sport with the players when they arrive back at the little hotel bedraggled and water oozing from every seam of their clothing and boots. Everyone who has attempted to ride the logs has sooner or later come up looking like a bath sponge in good working order.

Director J. P. McGowan has completed the first and second episodes of this serial and is now working on the third. Foggy weather continues to delay activities, but as there are ideal locations in and about Arcata the company is willing to sacrifice in order to secure the good atmosphere effects.

In a few days the Signal players will make the boards of the Eureka Opera House creak in the presentation of "Paid in Full," the Eugene Walters drama, for a charity benefit. Will Chapman is in charge of rehearsals and the personnel of the cast will be as follows: Helen Holmes appears as Emma Brooks; J. P. McGowan, Joe Brooks; Will Chapman, Captain Williams; Paul C. Hurst, James Smith; Kathrine

Gypsy Abbott (Vogue)

Goodrich, Mrs. Harris; Florence Holmes, Betty Harris; S. A. Sues, Sato, and Ford Ingersol Beebe, A. T. Mosphere.

Four five-reel productions were commenced at Universal City this week, two of which are from stories supplied by F. McGrew Willis and Walter Wood of the hyphenated firm of Willis-Wood.

Lloyd B. Carleton is intrusted with the direction of "The Devil's Die," which consists of an allegorical prologue and epilogue to a modern drama, the same principals taking part in each. It is the story of a woman aiding the man she learns to love to right himself in the eyes of the world when, because of his carelessness, he has caused losses to the poorer class who deposited their money in a bank he conducted in the tenement district. The allegory shows Life's alchemist making a mortal form, to which the Devil adds love of self. A dominant role is that taken by Adele Farrington which is of the vampire type. Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnson have the featured parts, she appearing as the woman and he the banker. Richard Morris takes the two roles of the "Devil" and the heavy of the story, and other support are William Canfield, Miriam Senby, Arthur Hoyt and C. Norman Hammond.

The second Willis-Wood story is being filmed by William Worthington, and will offer Franklyn Farnum in a dual role and Agnes "Brownie" Vernon in a featured part. This story has been titled "In Love," and it deals with the romance of a wealthy westerner who goes East and there falls desperately in love with the daughter of a well-known family. Crooks find one of their class who closely resembles the westerner and plan that he shall induce the girl to elope with him, and they will then hold her for a ransom; but their plans are all overcome, following a series of new situations. Barny Furry, Claire McDowell, Helen Wright and Arthur Hoyt are members of this cast.

"The Price of Silence," the story by W. Carey Wonderly, has been adapted for the screen by Ida May Park and is now in production in the hands of Director Joseph DeGrasse. Dorothy Phillips has been selected to play the part of Helen, whose sweetheart, Jack Mulhall, is killed on the eve of their wedding, and she becomes the mother of a fatherless child. The greater part of the plot has to do with the trials of the girl to hide her past and to perpetuate her happiness after marriage to another. In later years the woman's daughter, while at school, falls in love with a youth and they elope. The mother thinks the youth to be her own son, but the nurse who took charge of her first offspring confesses that at death of the woman's child she substituted her own son that the allowance continue to her. Vola Smith will play the ingenue role, Frank Whitson the husband, Jay Belasco the college youth, Lom Chaney the heavy, Ed Brown and Evelyn Selbie.

The fourth five-reel picture is "The Lie," being filmed under the direction of Charles Swickard, but recently added to the U producing staff, following engagements with Thomas H. Ince and at the Horsley studios. "The Lie" is an original scenario by J. Grubbs Alexander of the U staff and gives to Hobart Henley the roles of two brothers, one of which had been kidnapped in babyhood by a Chinese and taught to hate every member of his own family. He becomes addicted to the opium habit, and his Chinese master forces him to persecute his own brother, who has but recently married. In a fight the husband is injured and loses his memory, which he does not recover until weeks later when struck on the head by a falling vase. This happens at a time when the unknown brother takes his life after making a confession. Gertrude Selby is the leading woman in this photoplay and others having parts are Charles G. Braden, Robert Clark and Mina Cunard.

William V. Mong is filming a three-reel comedy drama, "An Old Soldier's Romance," and he and Harry Holden are playing the featured parts. An inmate of a soldiers' home, with a keen liking for children, inherits a big fortune and takes his pal of the home to live with him. The two old men decide to help the world by caring for several orphans, and when the babies are brought to their mansion the servants leave, all of which makes it necessary to secure the aid of a supposed widow as "mother" for the little ones. The woman proves to be his missing son's wife, and he is able to restore him to his former position in life and otherwise add to the happiness of those near him. Nellie Allen is the "mother" and others in the cast are Charles Dorien, Lou Short, Wadsworth Harris and A. E. Witting.

Roberta Wilson and Charles Pearley are

Mary Miles Minter in "Dulcie's Adventure" (American-Mutual)

the leads of a two-reel picture cast for the story titled "The Quitter," being produced by Burton George from scenario prepared by Alice Von Saxmar, a U staff author. Hayward Mack, Nan Christie, T. D. Crittenden, Harry Schenck and Babe Sedgwick make up the cast.

A character of the cave man type, taken by Director Millard K. Wilson, is the principal one of the two-reel subject "Little Moccasins" he is now producing. It is the story of a westerner falling in love with an eastern girl of wealth who went to his land to recover her health. When she snubbed him, he stole her away from her mother and sweetheart and took her to a distant cabin presided over by an Indian woman, where fresh air and plenty of exercise made possible the recovery of her health. When she is returned to her mother the sweetheart organized a posse to avenge the misdeed of the uncouthed westerner, but the girl finds she has come to think more of the rough man of the wilds and prevents the posse carrying out its plan. Edith Roberts is the girl, Malcolm Blevins the sweetheart and Louise Hutchinson the mother.

A Vampire with a Heart

A vampire with a heart is shortly to be seen on the screen in the two-reel U story "The House of Cards," being made by Director Walter Morton. The wife brings the thief of hearts to the home the vampire has broken up at a time when the husband calls to see his child. Realizing that she has robbed the husband of a true wife and happiness with his child, she refuses to accept his further attentions. Charles Cummings, Jessie Arnold, Louise Owen are the principals and others in the cast are Rex Roseli and Gertrude Messinger.

Director Douglas Gerrard is playing the featured part in a one-reel subject, "The Keeper of the Gate," that of a monk who longs for a bit of the worldly joys and leaves his post to participate in a carnival of the villagers. There he falls madly in love with a dancer. The first rays of the morning sun cause him to realize what he has done and he returns, to find another in his garb at the gate, who proves to be the Christus, and who disappears upon the return of the monk. Ruth Clifford is the dancer and Albert McQuarrie the Christus.

Donald Macdonald has just completed directing a one-reel gangster story, which gives Lee Hill the leading part, that of a detective, who makes it possible for a daughter of a ganster to lead a straight life, despite the efforts of the father's former associates to prevent it. The story provides a number of big fight scenes. Charles Mailes plays the role of the gang leader and Clyde Benson appears as one of the principal lieutenants. Brownie Vernon is the girl. Macdonald will next direct Leah Baird, supported by Lee Hill and Lois Wilson, in "The Better Woman."

"Tony Plays Ragtime" is a one-reel character story of the violinist of a cheap cafe, which gives Bugner Larton the name role. Others appearing in this story, written and being filmed by Maxwell Ryder and Jack Cunningham, are John Connoly and Claire McDowell.

Fred A. Kelsey has just filmed "The Spanish Woman," with Leah Baird in the leading part, that of a Mexican woman who weds an American, and is content to kill herself and child in order to induce the Mexican troops to imbibe food that has been poisoned that she may avenge the murder of her husband. Hector Sarno appears as the heavy, Franklyn Farnum as the husband and Charles Pearly in a character role.

A comedy drama of one reel is in production under the direction of Harry Millarde, titled "Romantic Rosalice's Romance." In this a novel reading professor and a stenographer who indulges in the same pastime are brought into a romace not of the printed page. Flora Parker De Haven, Calvert Carter and Paul Byron play in this picture.

John McDermott has been directing the dream of husband and his wife, in which each see the cause of their unhappiness. Both are placed on their right foot for a new start for connubial bliss. Ed Sedgwick is the hubby and Betty Shade the wife.

Nine one-reel comedies were put in production during the past week. Three of these were filmed by P. C. Hartigan, in both of which Ernie Shields appeared in the featured part. "Hearts and Watches" was written by Charles J. Wilson and is a mix up of the manager who secures a watch and gives it to his stenographer when it was intended as a gift to his wife from one of the manager's assistants. The passing of the present is done by a pawnshop ticket. Hartigan produced this comedy of 83 scenes in five and a half hours. Another one is "A Prehistoric Discovery," with Lord Helpus delving about in an Indian graveyard for relics, which starts a chase with many of the braves taking part. A clever dog is used to help the lord escape, which is accomplished by the canine holding one end of a rope in his mouth while his master walks across a canon on it. The third consists of the attempts of this same character in discovering oil by the aid of an oil hound. The title is "Lord Helpus Discovers Oil."

"Open Windows"

William Beaudine had the task of his sweet young life in directing "Open Windows," a one-reeler by Charles Wilson, in which a husband employs a friend to disguise as a notorious second-story man and enter his home to steal his wife's jewelry, that she will be more careful to keep the house locked. The plans go astray, for the real burglar goes to the home first and the wife, having learned of her husband's plans, royally entertains the visitor by serving him lunch and placing all her valuables where he may get them without trouble. The usual Joker company cast appears in this.

A series of "Sweedy" comedies is being made from stories by Harry Wulze, each of which give the featured part to Wallace Beery, who is in charge of direction. The first is "Sweedy's New Job." Another one-reel picture made by this company, which has Belle Bennett for leading woman, is titled "The Janitor's Jamboree."

The city council passing an ordinance prohibiting the posting of bills on fences, barns or other stationary objects, causes the village billposter to find new avenues for advertising when a one-night stand advance agent comes to town, and so he pastes the lithos on cows, horses, moving vans, and even the back of the constable who is to force the law. All of this is a part of the one-reel Pat Rooney comedy "Pat Evades the Law," produced by Robert A. Dillon. It all ends in a chase, with the billposter in the lead, hotly pursued by the manager of the show, the manager's wife, the constable and his daughter, but the last seen of the brush is when it slides down the side of a fast moving freight.

Carter de Haven, who has played under the direction of a dozen or more directors at U City, is now administering to himself the cares of a director, for he is filming a two-reel picture in which he plays the lead. The title of this is "Chip o' the Old Block." At Universal City the director when taking up the filming of a subject is advised the amount of money that it must be produced for, and De Haven, finding he was running ahead of the appropriation, took the company to his home in Hollywood last week, where he moved the furniture from the house and used it on the lawn for a set in order to keep down the expense.

Henry McRae is now busy with the filming of a five-reel subject which will have Jack Kerrigan and Edith Johnson in its leading people. The title is "The Pirates of Panama," the scenario being an adaptation from the William McLeod Raine story of the same title prepared by William Parker of the U scenario staff.

Jack Conway, who has directed Kerrigan in his past three pictures, will next film "The Mainspring," with Ben Wilson and Francelia Billington in the leading parts.

Little Molly Malone, recently discovered by Director George Cochran to be a pleasing leading woman, is playing a leading part opposite Jack Nelson in the two-reel drama "The Little Outsider."

Fronzie Gunn, who has been an extra girl for the past six months at Universal City, is this week given her first big opportunity, she being cast for the leading role in the two-reel drama "The Forbidden Game," being filmed by Director Harry Millarde.

Phillips Smalley has completed the taking of scenes for the five-reel picture "The Girl That's Down," and Roy Stewart, who played the featured male part in this, has been selected by the director to play in future productions. Mr. Smalley was very much pleased with Mr. Stewart's work, and the actor was so highly complimented after the finished picture was viewed that he was very much embarrassed—some test for an actor.

They're Up and Doing in Philadelphia Exchanges

EDWARD KRAUPA, proprietor of the Monarch Film Company at 1220 Vine street, Philadelphia, has just acquired the rights to all the Miller Brothers 101 Ranch releases which are produced in Bliss, Oklahoma. The territory includes eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia. Mr. Kraupa expects to have eight five-reelers a year from the 101 Ranch. The first of these, "Exposition's First Romance," is now on its way East and will be ready for bookings about October 1.

Robert Lynch is sure the exhibitors in his territory have found out "the play's the thing" by the avidity with which they are booking his latest Bluebirds. One hundred and ten exhibitors regularly using the Birds is the record at present writing.

C. V. Carrick, district manager of the Interstate Film Company, is taking a trip around the exchanges with Clarksburg, West Virginia, as his objective point. Chicago and Pittsburgh were included in his itinerary.

Manager Koerpel of the World was found smiling over a message that had just come from the newly reopened Regent theatre. "If such business keeps up on "The Dark Silence" with Clara Kimball Young, people will break down our box office in their mad rush for tickets."

A new departure in the World exchange is the contemplated fitting up of a cozy reception room for all exhibitors who drop in. Comfortable chairs, desks, telephones, even a stenographer's service, are all to be placed freely at the disposal of the film guests.

The offices of the International Film Service were visited last week by Charles W. Goddard, distinguished playwright and scenario writer. Mr. Goddard has many successful serials to his credit and assisted in the "Mysteries of Myra" for the International people. "The Perils of Pauline" is also his work. "The Ghost Breaker" and "The Misleading Lady" are other well known works of Mr. Goddard's pen.

Harry F. Grelle, general manager of the entire territory of the Supreme Film Service, has returned from his western trip.

The Supreme, of which George J. Berhoff is Philadelphia manager, having outgrown its present quarters in the few months of its establishment in the Quaker City, will move next week to larger offices at 256 N. Thirteenth street.

Mr. Grelle will in a few days again be on the wing to install the managers in St. Louis and Kansas City. In the latter city one of the best known film men throughout that section has been secured, whose name will shortly be announced.

Milton D. Krandall, ex-newspaper man and well known in Pennsylvania filmdom, has been appointed special representative from Pittsburgh.

Mr. Grelle has just bought the Pennsylvania rights to the "Christian," already well and favorably known throughout the states.

"Where are my Children" continues to draw throngs at Atlantic City, the Cort theatre having had to rebook it eight separate times.

Manager O. F. Bower was busy last week sorting out Paramount contracts—twenty-five in the past week to be exact. All the Paramounters are eagerly looking forward to the day of remeoval to the new film building at 1219-1223 Vine street, where more roomy quarters will be had. Donald E. Allen has been appointed roadman for eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey. Although new to the film business Mr. Allen is making quite a success of the venture.

Lasky's "Victory of Conscience" passed the censors after some eliminations were made in accordance with the board's requirements and showed to good houses at the Stanley on September 14th, 15th and 16th.

Harry F. Scott, Kleine's manager, having just returned from the conference in New York was busy as a bee getting ready for the changes in the office where, on September 16th, all the Selig and Essanay releases are to start being booked through the Kleine office here. The new releases will start in their new home October 1.

Earl Booth, former World Film representative, is now with the Louis J. Selznick productions, of which Ben S. Cohen is general manager.

While Leon B. Netter goes to Pittsburgh to open his new offices for the Masterpiece Film Attractions, James M. Ashcroft, assistant general manager, will have charge of the Philadelphia exchange.

L. J. Berman of Washington, formerly connected with V-L-S-E and World Film companies, has been appointed roadman for Masterpiece.

T. J. Flynn, former district manager of the Automatic Ticket Selling and Register Company, has connected himself with the Masterpiece Company. The business of the office has been so much increased, it is found necessary to enlarge present quarters.

Mr. Netter announces that Annette Kellermann in "Neptune's Daughter" has until further notice withdrawn from bookings.

"Purity" continues to attract interest and incidentally big business all over New Jersey, where it is shown minus censorship. Fiber and Shea played this picture at the Bayonne, N. J., Opera House and then had a large return patronage.

At the Criterion in Atlantic City "Purity" began an indefinite run on September 3 by showing 1400 more entrances than on the previous record.

The New Film Corporation whose offices were at 1339 Vine street has gone out of business. Philip Greenberg, manager, will return to New York, his former home.

The new Mary Pickford Film Corporation will open a Philadelphia exchange in a prominent part of Vine street. Boyd Cunningham, formerly manager of the Mutual office in Washington will have charge of this exchange.

Manager Given of Triangle has just signed the State theatre of Trenton to use Triangle program exclusively. This theatre has for the past three years been using another prominent program.

Manager J. S. Hebrew of V-L-S-E does not anticipate any present changes in office arrangements due to the shift of the companies in the program.

Vitagraph is expected to retain the quarters at 229 N. Twelfth street, while the releases of the other companies will be handled through another exchange.

It is anticipated that the Kleine office in Philadelphia will in the future manage the output of Selig, Edison and Essanay. Harry Scott, Kleine manager, was called to New York for a conference at which definite plans for the future were to be formulated.

George H. Beihoff, newly appointed manager of the Supreme Feature Film Company, on the very first week of his incumbency booked "The Dumb Girl of Portici" for forty days, through the Stanley Booking Company. This is an unusually large transaction, involving as it does about $4,000. While the theatres showing this picture are not definitely decided on, it is known that three of them will run for at least a week.

Manager Sweigert of International finds business on "Beatrice Fairfax" exceptionally good in spite of continued warm weather and the paralysis situation.

W. E. Smith, president of Famous Players Exchange, is motoring in his car all through the New England States. The tour will end near Lake Placid, N. Y., where Mr. and Mrs. Smith have been spending the summer at the Placid Club.

WARNER BOOKS "PURITY" IN 2 THEATRES

J. L. Warner has booked the film "Purity," at the Empress theatre in San Francisco, and at the Garrick theatre in Los Angeles.

KLEINE EXCHANGE MANAGERS MEET IN CHICAGO

An important conference of George Kleine exchange managers was held in Chicago on Sunday and Monday, September 10 and 11. Branch managers of the Kleine offices from the West, the South and the Central West gathered to discuss plans for launching the regular fall sales campaign and to talk over problems affecting each individual exchange.

On Monday, all the managers were guests at a noonday luncheon given at the University Club and following the meal, M. E. Smith presided over a business meeting that lasted well along into the afternoon, and resulted in bringing out many new ideas by which exhibitors in all territories will benefit.

In attendance at the meeting were Messrs. Buckwalter of Denver and Salt Lake City; Ragland of New Orleans; Edmunds of San Francisco and Los Angeles; Rosenberg of St. Louis; Wuerz of Dallas; Ratz of Indianapolis; Hardcastle of Atlanta; Reavey of Cleveland; Graham of Minneapolis; Nathan of Detroit and Jenner and Fox of Chicago.

INCREASE OF BUSINESS IN PARAMOUNT'S SEATTLE TERRITORY

Herman Wobber, manager of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, San Francisco, distributors of Paramount Pictures, recently spent three weeks in the Seattle territory, which is under his supervision, and returned stating that the business of the Paramount theatres, in that section is far better this year than at the same time the year before. During this same period, G. A. Metcalfe, president of the Metcalfe Supply Company of San Francisco, installed in that district new equipments in a large number of Paramount houses.

Fall Business in Omaha Territory Is Excellent and Managers of Exchanges Report Bright Outlook for Coming Months

WITH the first of September—or at least as soon as danger of the strike was over—renewed life was noticed about the exchanges in Omaha, reflecting the advent of fall business among the exhibitors throughout the territory. Nearly every exchange manager had just completed tours over the territory, the exchanges had been brushed up, all the goods overhauled and the force of workers primed for the rush.

Within the first two weeks of September, notwithstanding the delay caused by threats of a strike, business jumped to a plane higher than that reached at any time during the month of September, 1915. Before the end of the month arrives, business will be far above any record reached in that section of the middle west, the managers say.

"It was fine in the south," said B. J. Abrams, special representative of the Melais Manufacturing Company of New York. Regular programs, features, all are enjoying an early season's business that is highly satisfactory. Mr. Abrams says the Knickerbocker features and Vim comedies are selling better than ever in the Omaha territory.

Manager C. W. Stombaugh of the General Film exchange in Des Moines, says he did not lose an account during the hot weather, and since the first of September he has gained a number. There are more exhibitors, and all are paying more for pictures, he says. In a number of the larger Iowa towns the theatres are opening on Sunday. Manager Stombaugh was in Omaha to confer with Manager C. W. Taylor of the General here regarding plans for future business.

R. C. Herman, branch manager of the Mutual at Sioux Falls, S. D., became so delighted with prosperity, says Manager Max Weisfeldt of the Omaha branch, that he couldn't go without someone to whom he could constantly sing his happiness. So on October 3 he is to be married, and his stenographer in the Mutual office will be the bride.

Ed Brocker, Mutual booker in Omaha, has been spending his spare hours looking for a house. He, too, is to wed soon. Fred Solomon, another Mutual booker, is the proud father of a son—"A second Charley Chaplin, sure," he says—and he, too, is in the optimism band wagon.

"'Fantomas,' because it is only a five-week series, and because it is alive with thrilling episodes, is enjoying a red-hot sale throughout the Omaha territory," says Weisfeldt of the Mutual. Exhibitors, because of its brevity, seem to accept it more readily. Not that they are tired of serials, but a shorter one sells quicker." Weisfeldt and his assistant manager, C. E. Jones, have been taking a series of automobile trips through the territory, and had everything lined up for the big rush that came right after the first of the month.

B. N. Judell, according to word received in Omaha, has purchased the rights of the new picture, "Purity," in Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and the Dakotas. Mr. Judell is the special representative of the Mutual in that territory. Although he is charging an unusually high price for the picture, he expects it to be widely known.

J. H. "Curley" Calvert, has seen the business of the Bluebird exchange in Omaha jump 100 per cent. since he took the managership several weeks ago. Jerry Abrams, general field man of the Bluebird from New York and designated by Calvert as "one of the finest scouts it was ever my good luck to meet," is in Omaha now installing a new system of booking and collections. As soon as he leaves, says Calvert, a system of advertising that will leave everybody in the middle west with a better idea of the merits of Bluebird pictures, will be started.

"Harry Hyman, my star road man, has just completed a swing through Nebraska and Iowa, during which he was picking up a general report of conditions, as well as business," said Manager Ph. Goldstone of the World exchange in Omaha. "Hyman found every exhibitor in Nebraska lining up for more and better pictures. In Iowa he found a number of Sunday opening nights, and there, too, the exhibitors have prepared for and are enjoying the first rush of fall business. Many improved houses were seen in both states. Without exception the exhibitors are adopting progressive methods in pushing their pictures. Cut-throat competition is not so noticeable as this time last year."

"The Pathe comparative figures show Omaha holds its place well to the front, where it stayed even during the hot weather," said Manager Kirk. "We have just finished overhauling the exchange, checking up and getting ready for the fall business. We are glad we were ready, too, because it has started now, and with a vim.

First of Sixty-Day Meetings for Universal District Managers Announced by Hoffman Two Months Ago, Set for the 15th

THE first of the sixty day meetings for the district managers of the Universal which were announced two months ago by M. H. Hoffman, general manager of the Universal Exchanges, will be held on September 15 at the Sherman House in Chicago. This first meeting promises to be an extremely interesting and important one, for aside from announcing in his invitation thirty-five general topics for discussion, Mr. Hoffman has several more or less revolutionary plans which he intends to announce and put into effect at that meeting. For obvious reasons it is impossible to even hint that these are before the meeting. The district managers of the Universal Exchanges, all of whom have been invited, are as follows:

Claire Hague, with headquarters in Toronto, Art Schmidt with headquarters in Buffalo, George Weeks with headquarters in Detroit, V. R. Carrick, general manager of the Interstate Exchanges with headquarters in Philadelphia, William Oldknow with headquarters at Atlanta, Maurice Fleckles with headquarters in Chicago, R. C. Cropper with headquarters in Kansas City, and M. L. Markowitz with headquarters in San Francisco.

Mr. Hoffman, general manager of exchanges, and his assistant, E. H. Goldstein, will also be present. In all probability the meeting will last three days, September 15, 16 and 17.

In speaking about the meeting in Chicago, Mr. Hoffman explained that this was the first of the regular meetings of this kind which he intends to call every two months. "There will be,' said Mr. Hoffman "a great many matters of unusual interest coming up at this meeting, so many in fact that I have informed the district managers that it would be well to prepare for a stay of at least three days. I have sent out a list of matter upon which I want reports and which will be thoroughly discussed. Nearly all of these matters are things which inevitably came up during the course of business and are not of an emergency nature in any way. In fact that is not the character of the meeting. It is rather for mutual benefit, an exchange of ideas and experience, and to discuss ways and means of taking care of the new and increasing business which has come to the Universal exchanges during the past few months. I will also have one or two interesting announcements to make.

KLEINE EXCHANGE IN KANSAS CITY TAKES OVER ESSANAY AND SELIG RELEASES

A. C. Melvin, Kansas City, Mo., manager of the George Kleine exchange, returned from Chicago recently with the news that the George Kleine exchange has taken over the Essanay and Selig releases.

The V-L-S-E exchange, which formerly handled these releases, will now handle exclusively Vitagraph pictures.

A committee of Oklahoma exhibitors and exchangemen stopped in Kansas City recently to visit F. L. Kiltz, manager of the Mutual Film Corporation. The committee consisted of the following: T. Boland, J. Sinopoli, E. C. Mills, and B. H. Powell. The committee is on its way to New York to see about settling the strike of all men connected with the business in their section of the country.

Charles "Kid" Nichols, representative of the George Kleine exchange, is now in the city handling the serial, "Gloria's Romance." About fifteen theatres have already taken on the serial, and Mr. Nichols is expecting a big business.

C. W. Harden, manager of the Kansas City exchange of the Metro service, has gone to St. Louis on business.

DEMBOW EXPECTS BIGGEST FOX SEASON IN PHILADELPHIA

Interest is all agog in the first showing in Philadelphia of the Fox "Daughter of the Gods," with Annette Kellermann. This widely heralded picture is now at the censor's office.

In view of the fact that the National Board of Review not only saw nothing to cut, but gave the film much favorable comment, no difficulty is expected in Pennsylvania.

Although the time and place for the first appearance of this release have not been definitely decided, there is no doubt that in the near future it will have a long run in Philadelphia at a prominent theatre.

Manager George Dembow of Fox reports a tremendous hit for "Under Two Flags" in that region. It is already the most popular Theda Bara picture that has ever been shown there and the most successful Fox release in months around the Quaker City. Mr. Dembow confidently expects the biggest season ever had on Fox subjects.

HARDEN AND NEWMAN ACTIVE IN KANSAS CITY SCREEN CLUB AFFAIRS

Charles W. Harden, chairman of the house committee, and Frank Newman, president, of the Screen Club of Kansas City, have not ceased their work following the opening of the club. They are busy completing the minor details of the decorations, and planning activities that will keep the members interested. A Fotoplayer is being installed by I. H. Case, agent for the instrument in Kansas City territory.

There is already a piano in the rooms, and dances are being given frequently. Friday night is to be ladies' night, and there will be dancing regularly then. The membership committee is planning now to seek members among the exhibitors outside of Kansas City.

Sheridan, Manager for Pathe in Des Moines, Plans to Install Publicity Department, the Second Inaugurated in That City in a Month

L. A. SHERIDAN, manager of the Des Moines Pathe office, has decided to install a publicity department. Watching the good work of Howard Jameyson, Kansas City, publicity manager of the Pathe, has instigated the thought and it will soon be a reality, according to Mr. Sheridan. The Pathe executive will soon make a trip to Kansas City to get a man for this position, he says. If Mr. Sheridan does install such a department it will be the second exchange in Des Moines within a month to put in such a department. The Universal there recently opened a publicity department, installing Charles Stevenson, also a Kansas City man, as manager.

For real co-operation with the trade journals, R. C. Li Beau, local manager of the Des Moines Film and Supply Company, distributors of the Paramount, is right in the front ranks. If he has nothing when the representative of any magazine calls, he thinks up something and then calls up the representative. In this way he not only boosts Paramount, but gets notes about his exhibitors printed.

Although he has not been in his office for nearly three weeks, Nicholas Amos, Iowa manager of the Bluebird pictures, reports that his pictures are going in great style. Many of the small town exhibitors are booking Bluebirds, while those in the larger cities are also taking to them eagerly.

A visit from C. R. Seelye, general publicity manager of the Pathe in New York is soon expected by L. A. Sheridan. And when that distinguished visitor arrives he will probably decide the question of whether Mr. Sheridan will install a publicity department or not.

Stanley Mayer, who travels in Iowa for the Paramount, recently played the star role in what might have been a good movie plot. Mayer had placed his traveling bag on the floor of the station in Omaha. He stepped to the ticket office about thirty feet away to buy a ticket and when he returned his valise was gone. He looked around and discovered a slouchy looking individual lugging it up some nearby stairs. Mayer gave chase and caught the fellow. After an investigation it was found that the same person had got away with three valises in the same depot the preceding night. "I guess if it hadn't been so heavy he would have got away with mine, too," said Mayer. "As it was he was all in from carrying it up a flight of stairs."

Mrs. William O'Hare, assistant to D. B. Lederman, manager of the Laemmle Film Service, has been away from her desk for the greater part of the week on account of sickness. Her absence was keenly felt, as several of the stenographers will testify.

"Shielding the Shadow," the Pathe serial, it going great in Iowa, says L. A. Sheridan, Pathe chief. "A lot of houses are booking this picture of ours and we believe it will prove a winner in all respects," recently said Mr. Sheridan.

Artcraft Pictures Corporation Opens Central Distributing Office for Canada at 12 Queen Street, East Toronto

WITH its exchange system in the United States fully developed, Artcraft Pictures Corporation has invaded Canada with a central distributing office for Canada at 12 Queen street, East, Toronto. Artcraft Pictures Corporation, Ltd., has been organized especially to handle the new Mary Pickford productions in the Dominion, and announcement of the name of the Canadian representative is expected in the near future.

Rapid progress has been made in the organization of exchanges in the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast territory, Arthur S. Kane, Artcraft representative there, has drafted C. M. Simmons from the Mutual to be San Francisco manager. Mr. Simmons will make his headquarters at 443 Pacific Building with Mr. Kane, and will cover California, Nevada and Arizona. T. Y. Henry is in charge of the Denver office at 1440 Welton street, and will distribute the Pickford pictures in Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Wyoming, and a slice of Nebraska on the western border. In Seattle, H. G. Rosebaum has left Triangle to act for Artcraft in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

The Chicago and Minneapolis exchanges are as originally announced under the supervision of Max Goldstine, who makes his office in Chicago. He has selected Ben E. Drum to manage the Minneapolis branch. Mr. Drum was formerly assistant manager for V-L-S-E in that territory and was snapped up by Artcraft as soon as Mr. Goldstine learned that he would be receptive to an offer.

Walter E. Greene, president of Artcraft Pictures Corporation, reports the closing of an unusually large number of contracts for bookings of the Mary Pickford productions in the more prominent theatres of the country. He mentions offhand the Strand in New York, Keeney's in Brooklyn and Newark, the Gordon theatres in Rochester, N. Y., New Haven, Conn., and Worcester and New Bedford, Mass., the Walnut in Cincinnati, Portola in San Francisco and Stillman in Cleveland. The last named is a new house, which announces that it will open in October with "Less Than the Dust," the first picture Mary Pickford has made since she became an independent star with Artcraft as her distributing agency.

Charles S. Goetz, assistant manager of the New York exchange, spent all last week in western New York.

FATHER OF BEN SIMPSON DIES IN KANSAS

All of the many friends of Ben Simpson, San Francisco, manager of the Triangle Film Corporation will sympathise with him in his bereavement in the loss of his father, Judge B. F. Simpson, who died on the 10th of August, at his home in Paola, Kans.

CUPID, UNAWED BY SUMMER WEATHER, INVADES PHILADELPHIA SECOND TIME IN THE SEASON

Again has Cupid invaded the ranks of Philadelphia filmdom. For the second time this summer has a young exchange manager become a Benedick. Herbert Given, the twenty-four year old manager of Triangle, was married on September 2 to Mae Cooke, who for three years has been chief telephone operator at the Stanley Booking Company's offices.

The honeymoon was spent at Cape May as the guests of Carl Sulke, proprietor of the Cape May Casino. Mr. and Mrs. Given are now residing at 6242 Chestnut street.

The popularity of the young couple was attested by the number of beautiful gifts. Mr. Stanley Mastbaum presented a handsome dining room set to the bride. The office force at the Stanley Company gave flat silver. From Triangle there came a coffee service, while a table cover was the choice of the young ladies of that office.

Herbert Given, who is said to be the youngest exchange manager in the country, has had a rapid rise in the moving picture profession.

Starting as office boy with the Lubin Film Service in 1908, young Given rapidly rose to stock clerk, and later when the Lubin Company was absorbed in the General went with that firm as booker. From there he went to the Famous Players as assistant to W. E. Smith. When this exchange took on the Paramount program, Mr. Given was made exchange manager, which position he kept for some time. Recently he came to the Triangle as efficiency expert, and in a few weeks was appointed manager which post he now holds.

COHEN APPOINTED GENERAL MANAGER BY SELZNICK, WITH HEADQUARTERS IN PHILADELPHIA

Ben S. Cohen of New York has been appointed general manager of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, Lewis J. Selznick, president.

Mr. Cohen's headquarters will be in Philadelphia, his territory including Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia. The exchange has acquired 1339 Vine street and is already installed, although the first picture will not be released until October 1.

When it was definitely announced that Nazimova, Mary Garden and Kitty Gordon would also be seen under the Selznick banner much interest was manifested by Philadelphia exhibitors, eighteen of whom called the very first day of Mr. Cohen's tenancy to see about booking films.

Jack Flynn, head booker of the World Film office, will be assistant to Mr. Cohen. Other assistants have not yet been appointed.

PALMERTON IS ADVANCED TO CHARGE OF SHORT REEL DEPARTMENT

Don Palmerton, chief shipping clerk in the shipping department of Paramounts San Francisco Exchange, has been promoted to supervision of the short reel booking department of the exchange, taking the place made vacant by Vernon Moore, who has been named the publicity director of the exchange.

Goff Off on Extensive Trip for V-L-S-E—He Will Make Known Possibilities of Its Service to All Exchange Managers

FOR the purpose of making certain that the sales representatives of the Vitagraph V-L-S-E thoroughly understand the possibilities for enlarged service and progress which are open to them, by reason of the absorption of the V-L-S-E by the Greater Vitagraph, A. W. Goff, assistant general manager of the V-L-S-E, left last week for a tour of the offices of that organization as far west as the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Goff's trip is primarily to outline the plans which are being devised by the V-L-S-E, as the selling department of Greater Vitagraph, for added co-operation in behalf of the exhibitor.

Incidentally, Mr. Goff will also outline the campaign of advertising, publicity and sales, helps which is to be employed to aid exhibitors in making the most of Greater Vitagraph's superserial, "The Scarlet Runner," which is to be released on October 2, backed by an unparalleled publicity campaign in all of the newspapers published in the principal cities of the country.

Commenting upon the effect of the absorption of the V-L-S-E by the Greater Vitagraph, Mr. Goff said, before leaving:

"I doubt if the sales manager of any other company that has ever undergone a change in ownership, such as we just have, has ever started out on a trip, as I shall take, so free from any concern regarding the line-up of his organization.

"It is a remarkable commendatory upon the policy of building a permanent organization and advancing employes strictly from the ranks, and on the basis of merit, which General Manager Walter W. Irwin instituted with the inception of this organization, that the change in the directorate of the V-L-S-E has not made necessary a switch in any department or any office of our organization.

"We remain absolutely intact, with the same men at the helm, and the same men on the firing line as were there before Vitagraph took over the V-L-S-E.

"It seems to me that there is something mighty significant for the exhibitor in such loyalty, and such unshaken confidence as this indicates."

Mr. Goff will visit Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Salt Lake City, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, and upon his return, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

ZIERLER TO CELEBRATE ON THE 23D THE ANNIVERSARY OF HIS THIRD YEAR WITH UNIVERSAL

Sam Zierler, manager of the Twenty-third Street, New York, Exchange, is to have an anniversary. On September 18 he will have been with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company for three years.

In September, 1913, he was hired by M. H. Hoffman, then manager of the Twenty-third Street Exchange, as a booker. Soon he became chief booker, and later was promoted by Mr. Hoffman to be his assistant in the Twenty-third Street Exchange. Last year he was appointed manager of the exchange, in which he began his Universal work. This was not the first moving picture work, however, in which he was engaged, for he had already learned the rudiments of the business from such firms as the Mutual, Empire, Metropolitan, and Paramount exchanges, and with William Steiner.

KOPPIN FILM COMPANY, LICHTENSTEIN, PRESIDENT, WILL HANDLE UNITY FEATURES IN MICHIGAN

George Lichtenstein, the head of the Koppin Film Company, a well-known distributing exchange of Detroit, Michigan, was in New York the past week and arranged with the Unity Sales Corporation to handle its features and comedy releases for his territory.

While in New York, Mr. Lichtenstein saw "The Marriage Bond" and "The Lottery Man" and the first two of the "Tweedledum" comedies, all to be released on the Unity program, and immediately completed arrangements to distribute these features in the state of Michigan. While in New York, Mr. Lichtenstein will also book other big features for his company, and expects to take all the Unity program releases.

Washington, D. C., Regrets the Departure of B. C. Cunningham, Manager of Mutual in That City, Who Goes to Philadelphia for Artcraft

IT was with regret that Washington, D. C., learned of the resignation of B. C. Cunningham, manager of the offices of the Mutual Film Corporation there to assume the management of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation exchange in Philadelphia. Mr. Cunningham has been associated with the Mutual for more than four years serving in Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

Mr. Cunningham has done much for the standardizing on a high plane of the motion picture business and amusement. At three different times he has found it necessary to enlarge the Washington offices to meet the demands of the exchange. The most recent being the present commodious quarters, which have been especially equipped at Mr. Cunninghams direction.

"In leaving the Mutual," said Mr. Cunningham, "I am rather proud and gratified that the business is at top notch, and that I have just given this company the finest exchange in Washington."

In locating in Philadelphia, Mr. Cunningham will not altogether sever his connections with Washington, as the two cities will have close relations in the Mary Pickford pictures under the Artcraft banner.

One Iowa Town Hits on Plan to Open on Sunday, Regardless of Old Fogyism; Exchanges Consider It a Precedent for Other Places Burdened with Blue Laws

THE exhibitors' fight in Iowa against the steadily increasing move for Sunday closing of motion picture theatres, is attracting the attention of the middle west. Last week's developments saw a new situation that startled even the most experienced motion picture men.

At Mason City, Ia., there is one of those old moth-eaten ordinances, found in almost every Iowa town, prohibiting shows on Sunday. But there is a big demand for the Sunday shows. The council could not, with good grace, repeal the ordinance, because an element in the city would object. Then this happy scheme was decided upon.

Every Sunday the motion picture theatres stay open, openly violating the law and delighting hundreds of people who want to see pictures on Sunday, and on every Monday the exhibitors visit the Police Court and pay a fine of $5 and costs.

"We make more on Sunday than any other two days put together. The $7.50 is not such a heavy tax, and it is better than staying closed," said one of the four exhibitors. Exchange men who have been over the territory say the same plan may be followed in other towns.

In Missouri Valley, Ia., the exhibitors bent before the demands for Sunday closing and agreed to close. A case against C. C. Carragher of the Palm, Clear Lake, Ia., who was arrested on a charge of running his theatre on Sunday, was dismissed and Carragher still stays open on Sundays.

The Royal, at La Mars, Ia., decided to face the law and open on Sunday. After advertising the Sunday show the council at a special meeting threatened to revoke the theatre's license and it failed to open as advertised.

A hot fight has been staged at Atlantic, Ia. Petitions were circulated and signed by several thousand people, demanding that the shows close on Sunday. Counter petitions were circulated. The fight was carried before the city council and into the courts in a number of instances. It is still undecided.

Committee of Pittsburgh Film Men See Health Officer Relative to Order Excluding Children Under 16 from Picture Theatres

A COMMITTEE representing the motion picture men of the Pittsburgh district recently went to Harrisburg, where they called upon Dr. S. G. Dixon of the Pennsylvania State Board of Health, relative to the exclusion of children under sixteen years of age from the motion picture theatres. This committee represented all of the motion picture men of the Pittsburgh district, and they had a long conference with the state official.

In speaking of the trip G. W. Sahner, one of the members of the committee said, "We had no idea of getting the State Board of Health to rescind its order excluding children under sixteen years of age from the motion picture theatres. That would be foolhardy in the extreme. Our main object was to acquaint Dr. Dixon as well as the politicians with conditions in the motion picture business. We understand there will be a bill introduced in the next session of the State Legislature providing for the exclusion of children under sixteen from picture houses at all times. Our visit to Harrisburg at this time was to protest against a bill of that kind, and it will undoubtedly have the desired effect. Dr. Dixon assured us that the quarantine would be lifted just as soon as the schools opened.

The committee which went to Harrisburg consisted of M. Kornblum, G. W. Sahner, A. J. Barthell, F. J. Herrington, Al W. Cross, M. Feitler and Matt Rapp.

Several mass meetings will be held in that city as a result of the action of this committee, and it is said that as a result much good will be done for the motion picture business there. This is a wide-awake committee and one that will be able to make things hum after they once get the motion picture men here interested.

PENNSYLVANIA CENSOR BOARD MAKES FAVORABLE REPORT TO UNIVERSAL

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has received the list of subjects condemned by the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors for the period ending June 30. Ellis P. Oberholtzer, secretary of the board, attests to the statement that the Universal out of 382 reels of film condemned by the board, only had five photoplays put under the ban.

The Universal pictures condemned by the Pennsylvania Board were "His Weakness," a Powers picture; "The Nihilist" and "Outside the Gates?" Rex releases, "Traffic in Souls," a Universal feature, and "Where Are My Children?" another special Universal feature.

While the Universal does not for a moment question the wisdom of the Pennsylvania board's action in the case of "Traffic in Souls" and "Where Are My Children?" it points out the fact that both pictures have received the unqualified indorsement of the clergy in New York and every other State in the Union where they have been shown to selected audiences of mature judgment.

THEATRES IN FORT WAYNE, IND., HARD HIT BY PARALYSIS BAN

The managers and owners of motion picture theatres in Fort Wayne, Ind., have come to realize to the fullest extent the meaning in "what would the world be without children?" The patronage at the downtown theatres in Fort Wayne has fallen off considerably, a general decline of twenty-five per cent. being reported, while several of the smaller theatres in the outskirts have closed their doors until October 1, the date when the order of the Board of Health of the city barring children under sixteen expires. The order was issued to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis.

WAR TAX NETS $50,000 A MONTH IN ONTARIO

According to the Hon. T. W. McGarry, provincial treasurer, The Amusement War Tax, in force in Ontario, has been bringing in so far an average of $50,000 per month. This is well up to expectations and some are confident that in the winter months the treasury will benefit to an even greater extent. The treasurer's estimate at the time the graded tax was initiated was that the annual revenue from this source would be $600,000.

CHARGE EXHIBITOR WITH SUNDAY VIOLATION

Herbert Dwyer, proprietor of a motion picture theatre at Dunkirk, Ind., recently was placed under a $100 bond in the Circuit Court for Sabbath desecration. Dwyer is charged with following his usual vocation by operating his theatre on Sunday. The charge was filed by David Johnson, a member of the City Council of Dunkirk.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

In view of the current popularity of politics, several leaders in the motion picture industry are arranging to take a hand in the game. Their present plans are a tour of several of the more important states, opposing the candidacy of congressmen and other officials who have identified themselves with the attempt to foist censorship on the public. A feature of the tours is to be the appearance of and speeches by a number of noted picture actresses.

The scenario editor of one of the big eastern companies received the synopsis of a scenario, entitled "The Flivver" by telegraph, last week. The synopsis consisted of about fifty words, telling the plot succinctly. The editor showed it to several directors, but none was interested. The last one he showed it to suggested that he reject it, and telegraph it back to the author—collect.

"Charity" is the name of the new nine-reel picture, on which Frank Powell has been working for the last six weeks. The production is now finished, and a trade showing is promised with a few days.

Mae Murray, the Lasky star, who has been at work at the Famous Players studio for the last two months, is to return to the coast. While here she appeared in "The Big Sister," and while that was in production a new story was selected for her, with a western setting. Mae is hoping some one will give her a commutation ticket between New York and Los Angeles as a Christmas present.

Tony Kelley has completed a scenario of Augustus Thomas's famous play "The Witching Hour," which the Frohman Amusement Corporation will put into production immediately. George Irving is now selecting the cast for the new picture, which will be an elaborate and extensive productions—seven reels, maybe.

J. Cunningham Flinn, the light-footed Lasky press representative, has been in Chicago for a week past. There, among other things, he met Geraldine Farrar-Lou-Tellegen, and escorted her back to New York.

H. H. Van Loan now possesses seventy-six neckties (76—count 'em—76) all bought for him by his wife, the pulchritudinous Gertrude Cameron, estwhile of Pathe Freres. The other night Stanley Olmsted bought a tie against which he revolted upon its first appearance around his neck.

"Come over to my hotel and trade it in," offered Van Loan.

Harold Lockwood, Metro-Yorke Star, and His New Limousine

Stanley was conducted to Van's necktie wardrobe, pawed over 75 of the 76 and chose the seventy-sixth. He is now wearing it every day—the green one with the purple and yellow dots.

N. B.—Neither Olmsted nor Van Loan wrote this. Charge it up to Arthur Jacobsen of the Universal publicity department. Arthur doesn't know anything about it.

With the completion of his contract for work in Fine Art Triangle Films, DeWolf Hopper this week started on a motor trip with his family to New York. He has been at the Fine Arts studio for one year, and appeared in a number of successful photoplays, which constitute his screen career to this time.

Tully Marshall is also leaving the Fine Art studio, and in the future will be affiliated with the Lasky producing organization.

Censorship has bobbed up its snaky head in a town of six hundred souls called Ephrata, in Washington, where the members of the town council have notified Manager Chester Roark of the Kam Theater, that his license will be revoked if he shows additional episodes of the "Iron Claw" serial. In an official letter, by the town clerk, Manager Roark is "forbid the public exhibition of these pictures," and while the letter purports to give a complete account of the council proceedings, no cause is given for the action. The local paper carries a column editorial pointing out the irregularities of the officials' action, and the manager, F. C. Quimby, of the Seattle Pathe exchange is doing everything possible to show the officers their mistake.

The Bayside Bugle

"Bigger, Busier, Brighter Bell Ave." Bayside, L. I., September 23, 1916.

EDITORIAL

The time has now come when the season generally ends, and the summer residents begin to move back to their city habitat, but we note with pride and satisfaction that few of our residents are leaving our midst to resume the comforts of the city streets. Some of course, are going, as usual, but these are mostly people who do not really appreciate the benefits of the out door and country life, being what one of our fellow townsmen calls "limousine motorists," meaning people who ride in closed cars thereby not tasting the real joys of riding. For those who move out of Bayside this weather, and all others such, we are sorry, but there are plenty left to have a good time this winter.

LOCAL NEWS

—Frank Powell and wife were callers on the Ralph Deans last Sun. eve., eating supper and then playing stud poker, in which Ye Ed. also took a modest hand.

—Report hath it that the Bayside s. and r. club is to have another beefsteak down at Jim McKenna's soon.

—Bill Sherill, wife and Son Jack were out for a visit to the H. Reichenbach's, last Wed. eve., Bill staying all night because he couldn't get a tire fixed, and indulging in a little game of stud poker at Norm Gould's house, in which Ye Ed. also took a modest hand.

—Harry Hilliard, Frank Alldworth and Cliff Bruce were hobnobbing about town last Sun. aft.

—The Bruces, Cliff and Mrs., and son Gock, expect to move into N. Y. City for the winter months.

—J. Goldfrap and family have moved from Bayside.

—Ralph Dean and wife were calling over across the tracks, Mon. eve., they being parties to a small game of draw poker, in which Ye Ed. also took a modest hand.

—Harry Reichenbach drove out to Lake Ronkonkoma on the Motor Parkway, Sat. eve. for dinner, he making 45 miles per hr. on some stretches of the road by his own count.

—Bill Johnston and wife are back from a two weeks' trip to the mts.

—Geo. Irving has finished work on his last picture, "The Conquest of Canaan," and is ready to commence on the "Witching Hr."

—Rand White, who works for 1 of our esteemed contemporaries, was driving his new Buick down Bell ave., the other night.

—News are a trifle shy this wk.

—Tom, Geraghty, of the Metro company, was calling in Bayside, last wk; he stayed real late in order to enjoy a game of poker in which Ye Ed. also took a modest hand.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

William N. Selig was in New York for a few days last week, leaving on Thursday for Chicago.

M. Kashin, publicity manager of the Midway Theatre, Montreal, P. Q., returned to Canada Saturday after a visit to New York.

Casper W. Schults, of Riordan and Schults, exhibitors of Little Falls, N. Y., was in town last week for several days. Mr. Schults was called here to consult with the National Association in regard to their plans for sending the campaigning party into Herkimer and Fulton Counties, N. Y.

Louis R. Lurie, of the Rialto Theatre on Market street, San Francisco, is preparing to make a flying trip to New York on business.

Fred B. Murphy, Eastern division manager, and J. E. Willis, Western division manager, Unicorn Film Service, were in New York last week, to consult with General Manager Schlank.

Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, and Mrs. Sheehan returned to this country on La Touraine, arriving Wednesday, Sept. 13.

David Horsley arrived in New York City Thursday last.

Mr. Fisher has arrived from South Africa via Australia.

SUPERIOR PREPARED TO MAKE TITLES

Manager Robert A. Brackett, of Superior Films Company, Los Angeles, has sent out to the trade announcements of the company's preparedness for making titles of all kinds, and the installation of a complete laboratory equipment. The title making machine is one made by Mr. Brackett himself, and contains a number of convenient attachments that will make possible many new effects in titles. It provides for trick work of a type absolutely new.

The Superior Films studio is located in the Knickerbocker building, two squares from the business center of Los Angeles, and in addition to the above equipment is prepared to make all kinds of motion picture films, the studio attached having all kinds of settings, properties, and the only indirect artificial light system in a west coast studio.

MACHUGH IS BACK WITH MOSS

Arthur E. MacHugh has rejoined the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation in the capacity of advertising manager and press agent. Mr. MacHugh will be located at the main offices of the company, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

Frohman Is Pleased with "The Conquest of Canaan"

Company Officials Consider Picture the Best It Has Yet Brought Out—Two Thousand People Are Shown in Some of Mob Scenes and Locations Are Unique

CHARACTERIZED by large sets, unique locations, absolute fidelity to detail and showing the actual usage of over two thousand people, the Frohman Amusement Corporation's production of "The Conquest of Canaan" now complete and ready for the market, may prove to be, by far, the best yet of the Frohman features.

"What Happened at 22" and "Jaffery" showed marked improvement, respectively, over any previous Frohman productions and now, according to everyone concerned, "The Conquest of Canaan" represents the best work of Director Irving and his producing staff.

The role of Joe Louden is suited to Jack Sherrill's particular ability, while Edith Taliaferro lends to the part of Aeriel, the winsome personality that won her so favorable a standing in her work in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Young Wisdom," etc.

For the exterior situations Technical Master Ralph Dean arranged with the civic authorities at Mineola, Long Island, for the use of the principal streets and municipal buildings for several half Saturdays. The court house, post office, fire department buildings, police station, county and city jails and various city office suites were all used to good advanatge. The populace, in response to an invitation, assisted in various ensemble scenes to such an extent that perfectly natural effects resulted and the stereotyped mob scenes have been improved upon to no mean extent.

The entire company journeyed to Trenton, N. J., where a number of scenes were staged at the head of an old bridge, across the spot Washington was supposed to have made his memorable crossing. The bridge is over a century old and formed an admirable background for numerous situations.

The production is in six parts. The story in itself, in book form, extended four hundred pages and Director Irving stuck as close to Tarkington's tale as the camera necessities would permit.

An extra large cast of principals features the production.

Edith Taliaferro, Jack Sherrill, Ralph Delmore, Ben Hendricks, Marie Edith Wells, Walter Heirs, Geno La Motte and George Melville, all have important parts, while over two thousand people were used in all.

The releasing arrangements will be announced by the Frohman company within the next few days.

Alice Brady Refuses Many Offers of Stage Engagements

Popular Actress Declines Propositions from Cohan and Harris, Oliver Morosco, John Cort, the Shuberts and Her Father, to Remain with "Those Dear Movies"

ALICE BRADY will not be seen upon the speaking stage for some months to come. Miss Brady has recently declined propositions from Cohan and Harris, Oliver Morosco, John Cort, the Messrs. Shubert and other producing managers, including her father, William A. Brady. The manager last mentioned wanted her for a new play by Owen Davis which he expects to place in rehearsal following the comedy by Montague Glass and Jules Eckert Goodman, now in preparation, but when Miss Alice had stated her case he was satisfied with its business wisdom.

"You see," said Miss Brady, "I am going along so famously in moving pictures that I think it would be poor judgment to interrupt my progress at present. It would be different if I had any considerable time on my hands between productions, for of course a stage hit stimulates the demand in the studios and increases one's value—particularly if that value happens to be a trifle uncertain.

"But this case does not apply to my situation, at present anyway, I am very happy to say. When one picture is finished I scarcely have time to draw a long breath before another begins. I had only eight hours' rest between 'The Gilded Cage' and 'Bought and Paid For,' and now a single day follows the latter before I begin on the next play, which I hear is to be called 'Loneliness.'"

"What does stage experience amount to as compared with what you get in the pictures? When you are making ready for a stage play you rehearse for a given time, going over the same ground day after day until you are as perfect as you ever will be. Then, full of ambition and excitement, you come up to your first night and perhaps make a big hit.

"Then what happens? You go on doing the same thing in the same way, night after night for months—and what do you get out of that?

"Experience? Nothing of the sort. You have ceased to operate your creative faculties and permitted yourself to become a machine—a very fine machine, perhaps, but a machine.

"With the pictures, on the other hand, when you come to your first night you are finished with that particular affair, and you begin all over again upon a totally different proposition. It is just one character after another, one set of requirements following upon the preceding set—constant change."

"Child," said Mr. Brady, "you are wise beyond your years. Go your way. I will find somebody else for the Owen Davis play, or if he won't agree to that, I will get him to hold the production back."

LOEW TO USE "CRIMSON STAIN" IN EIGHTY HOUSES

Marcus Loew has booked "The Crimson Stain Mystery" made by Consolidated, and will present it for the first time in Greater New York on Thursday, September 21. In addition to this, Mr. Loew stated that he was so well pleased with the picture that he intends to use it in more than eighty houses.

Film News From Foreign Parts

La Belle Otero, Famous Dancer, To Be Filmed Abroad

Special to Motion Picture News.

Paris, Sept. 1.

INFORMED by Mr. Fred of the Fred Monopole that they have succeeded in getting La Belle Otéro to sign a contract to be filmed, I took the first opportunity to call on our Spanish diva and requested her to grant me an interview for the Motion Picture News.

I am pleased to say that the interview was granted most immediately and that I was received at the Villa Maud in Bougival, a beautiful little country place right on the Seine near Paris, with such affability and grace by Madame Otéro that the two hours I spent with her seemed to me a few minutes.

"I was surprised to find that you have left your beautiful hotel," I said.

"I have given my hotel to be used as an hospital for wounded soldiers, right at the beginning of this terrible war," Madame Otéro told me. "I am living since at this villa, but hope to be able to return soon to my own home. I feel quite sure that this horrible war will be over before the end of this year. I have absolute faith in cards. I am Spanish, you know. Well, up till last month, not one of my 'Réussites' succeeded, but since the last few weeks, every one succeeds. Will you see one?"

"Of course I will," was my answer, and if I was such a strong believer in "Réussites" as Madame Otéro, I would say, "Yes, the war will be over at the end of this year."

Declined Spanish Comedies

"You know, Madame, what I came to see you for?" I said.

"Oh, yes, you want to know why I never consented to be filmed, do you?"

"Yes," I said.

"Well, it is very simple. I have had all sorts of offers and propositions. They wanted me to be filmed in some Spanish dramas, in some comedies, but I absolutely declined to do it until Mr. Fred came to see me and he submitted to me a scenario which immediately captured me. He calls it 'La Vie de la Belle Otéro,' just the thing I want. We are going to Madrid, Barcelona, Seville and some other well-known Spanish places. I am to appear in my life, in my country and with my original surroundings. The scenario is most interesting and I am delighted with it. I was offered much larger salaries for a film, but I have accepted 50,000 francs for the one film, as it is just the very thing.

"I am well known all over the world. I do not doubt that the film will be a great success. I for myself am going to do my best for it."

Madame Otéro has offered me a photograph of herself which I am pleased to reproduce for the readers of the Motion Picture News.

I have called to see Mr. Dussaud, our great engineer, who just made the interesting discovery of the "cold light," and have asked him to give me some particulars for the readers of the Motion Picture News of his great discovery, and here are Monsieur Dussaud's words:

Mlle. Otero

For the "Cold Light"

"For many years I have been making all sorts of experiments with regard to the 'cold light,' and I am happy to say that my discovery has been crowned with success. Monsieur le Professor Branly, who submitted it the other day to the Academie des Sciences, has proved the great value of my invention.

"With regard to the kinematograph, my new invention does away altogether with any danger of inflaming the film and we obtain even a stronger light than the present one used for the projection of films, but the light is, as I said, absolutely cold; it will be possible to project the films on celluloid without any danger, or else from a photograph on paper. Another big advantage of my discovery and of great interest to the cinemas will be, that all films will be seen in a bright lighted room. My cold light possesses such power that pictures will be seen quite distinctly on the screen, the theatre fully lighted.

"We have tried it the other day in private and can assure you that the pictures were very distinct in spite of all the windows being open in the daytime.

"You will agree that my invention will totally change the cinemas. There are many thousands of people who object to sit down in the dark for a couple of hours. Soon you shall be able to show your films in the bright daylight. No doubt it will greatly improve the cinemas."

Gustav Kaczka.

CHRISTIE COMEDIES WILL HAVE NEW KIND OF TITLE

Photographic titles which show action and are suggestive of the name of the comedies, are to be used on all Christie comedies consisting of two reels. This new effect that will improve the titles, will be to the first release of this size, "Bride and Gloom," according to statements made this week by Al E. Christie, head of the Christie Company.

This feature will be accomplished by a double exposure process, which will give a plain field in the center of the frame for the type matter, and then allow a border around all four sides for suggestive motion pictures.

The second Christie Comedy Company under the direction of Horace Davey is this week filming, "Pretty Baby," in which a forgetful novel reading wife leaves her child in a department store, and wheels off a cab containing the child of the negro doorman. The mistake is not discovered until the father of the white child takes several friends home to see his son, and then learns that his own precious one has been lost at the ribbon counter. Betty Compson appears as lead in the role of Mrs. Newlywed, Neil Burns as the husband, Stella Adams the colored wife, and Dave Morris the doorman.

CIRCULATION OF NATIONAL SUNDAY MAGAZINE IS 2,500,000

Owing to a typographical error a recent issue of Motion Picture News contained the statement that the circulation of the National Sunday Magazine, in which the next Pathe serial featuring Pearl White will be published, was 500,000. The correct figure is 2,500,000.

Picture-Group Advertising is McClure Plan

Publishing House Entering the Field Intends to Push Its First Seven Releases by National Advertising, All at Once—First Subject Is Entitled "Envy," with Ann Murdock; the Second, "Pride," with Blinn; the Third, "Sloth," with Nance O'Neil, and the Fourth, "Greed."

IN the first announcement relative to the pictures of the McClure Publications is found an indication of the future picture producing policy of this concern. The first picture to be released will be called "Envy," and will have Ann Murdock in the stellar role; the second will be called "Pride," with Holbrook Blinn; the third is "Sloth," with Nance O'Neil; the fourth is "Greed," and so on until all of the seven deadly sins have been portrayed on the screen. Each play is to be complete in itself and will stand on its own feet, but all seven form a group that can be advertised together.

It is the belief of this concern that a picture in order to be successful must be nationally advertised, in order that all of the people of the country may know all that there is to know about it and so make up their minds as to whether they desire to see it. This is naturally impossible with every five-reel feature, as the gross income of one picture would be much less than the amount of money required to exploit it nationally. Therefore the only solution is the grouping of pictures in such a manner that this vast amount of money required for national advertising may be a legitimate and profitable expense.

A forthcoming article in McClure's Magazine will say: "Most bad pictures lose money, many fairly good pictures lose money, but every extraordinary picture makes money and in large quantities. The drama with a really big star based on a big idea is always welcome. The drama that is fully advertised nationally so that all of the people will know what it is like and why they will like it, is sure to be profitable.

"The best example of the sure-fire success of the extraordinary picture is the so-called motion picture serial, which is advertised all over the world in magazines, newspapers, on billboards and by mail until everybody who is interested in such a picture knows that it exists and where and when it can be seen.

Public Welcomes Advertised Picture

"If it were possible to give the ordinary five-reel feature the same degree of publicity the man who produced it and exhibited it would make so large profits that he could afford to make better and better pictures. But with a single feature the entire receipts obtained for it would not justify the producer in investing several hundred thousand dollars in educating the public as to its nature and subject matter. There is no doubt that the motion picture public is tired of going to see plays that it knows nothing about, and that it would welcome some way of finding out in advance just the kind of play and production they may expect. The public will welcome the advertised motion picture.

"So it has remained for a publishing company entering the picture field to solve the commercial difficulties of advertising a feature play so that all the world can know whether it wants to see it or not. In these days it is not enough in the picture business, or in the button business, or any other business for that matter, to make a good product and let it go at that. It must be advertised in order to make it successful.

"No one of the seven plays that are to be released in the first group of McClure pictures is big enough, although each is a magnificent production, to justify a national advertising campaign, but all seven taken together are bigger from a financial standpoint than any spectacle or serial picture that has been produced, and for that reason can be advertised everywhere. The motion picture of the future is to be the advertised picture."

Frank Tells Object of "It May Be Your Daughter"

Author and Producer of Picture for Moral Uplift Society States That Purpose of the Film Is to Warn Girls Against Certain Evils

Two Gripping Scenes from "It May be Your Daughter" (Moral Uplift Society)

ALEXANDER F. FRANK, the author and producer of "It May Be Your Daughter," the forthcoming production of the Moral Uplift Society, stated in a special interview with a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS that his sole purpose in writing and producing this picture was for the purpose of pointing out and presenting in a strong, forceful manner the evils and dangers which surround young girls at the present time.

"This is not a sex picture in any way, shape or manner," he said. "There has been no attempt to incorporate into it any sex appeal. It contains nothing that is salacious, lascivious or in the least bit off color. It does present, however, in a strong, forceful manner the dangers which may befall any innocent young girl, who has been left ignorant by the neglect of her parents.

"It has been produced purely for a moral and uplift purpose, and its main feature is a vivid presentation of the penalties, the danger and the suffering that inevitably result to those who stray from the path of innocence and virture to follow the false glitter of the white lights.

"The picture contains nothing to which exception may be taken. It is entirely different from anything of this kind that has been staged before, in that it is put out purely as an illustration and a preachment against the temptation that many young uninformed girls are constantly meeting, and pointing out to them the horrible result that is bound to follow, if they be weak enough to give way to that temptation.

"One may talk and one may write forever, but when a thing is once seen it is not forgotten. That is the object that I hope to accomplish with this picture.

The picture will be shown privately in the near future for the purpose of obtaining opinions and criticisms. Those making up the cast are Hugh Thompson, Peggy Sweeny, Charles Hallock, Virginia Campbell, Edith Thornton, Harold West, Dorothy Gwynne, Caroline Lee, Helen Jordan, Joseph Baker and Charlotte Edwards.

BOSTON THEATRE BOOKS "THE YELLOW MENACE"

Boston, Sept. 16.

The Boston theatre, the largest house in New England, has changed its policy and booked a serial for the first time, "The Yellow Menace," starting there Labor Day. Margaret Gale, who is featured in the cast with Edwin Stevens, was scheduled to appear in person at the Boston on Labor Day afternoon.

A representative of the Boston theatre viewed all sixteen of the episodes of "The Yellow Menace" before the serial was booked. Other theatres taking the film for the first run are the Princess, Hartford; Poli's, Worcester; Central Square, East Boston, and the Royal, Lowell.

Cobe Opens Unity Executive Offices in Chicago

"Growth of Our Business Compels Us to Make That City a Distributing Centre," Declares Official; "Move Enables Us to Keep in Close Touch with Exchanges"

THE announcement from the Unity Sales Corporation's office that Andrew J. Cobe has opened executive offices for the company in Chicago, speaks volumes for the development of this organization in the space of a very few months. Ever since the purchase of "The Yellow Menace," the sixteen episode serial produced by the Serial Film Company, Mr. Cobe and the Unity officials have felt the need of executive offices in Chicago to supplement the activities of the New York office, and the present announcement of the opening of the office at 207 South Wabash avenue, is the realization of an ambition which has been in the minds of all interested in the Unity Sales Corporation for some months.

Mr. Cobe plans to spend a greater part of his time in the Chicago office, and will look after practically all the matters that affect the distribution of the pictures released on the Unity program.

Chas. W. Allen, the president of the company, and Arthur Rosenbach, secretary, will still continue to be actively in charge of the New York office and all the pictures for the program will be bought in and shipped from New York. The advertising and publicity departments will remain in New York as before.

"The establishment of a Chicago office for my Company," said Mr. Cobe, "was made absolutely necessary by the tremendous growth which we have experienced during the past few months. I have told the trade early in the summer that they should keep an eye on us, because we were coming along and were sure to realize our ambitions and develop a big distributing organization. The success we have had in handling 'The Yellow Menace' has given us a chance to establish exchanges in many centres, and before very long we will have our own distributing exchanges in all parts of the United States. At present we own The Unity Film Service, our New York exchange, Unity Film Service exchanges in Atlanta and Houston for the South; we have just established a Unity Pictures Corporation, through Harry Rathner, which constitutes an exchange in the Minneapolis territory; we arranged last week with George Lichtenstein of the Koppin Film Company of Detroit to handle our features in his territory, and we have several other deals under way now, which will give us an interest in or control of exchanges in all other distributing centres of the country.

"The growth of our business absolutely compelled us to open an office in Chicago, because of a great saving in time in handling of the many important details of distribution. Chicago is the logical big distributing centre and it gives us an opportunity to keep in closer touch with our exchanges. There are so many big cities that can be reached in one night's travel from Chicago, that we can keep in closer personal relations with the distributing exchanges and find out so much better in this way what kind of features the big towns of the country want.

"I expect to make many trips in the next few months between New York and Chicago, because all the pictures which we buy for our program will be bought in New York, and all details of their distribution will be handled in Chicago. Our organization is growing so rapidly that we cannot take care of all the mass of business details and reach the proper efficiency in distribution in any other way except through the establishment of branch offices."

Casting for Two Ivan Subjects Nearly Completed

"The Sex Lure" Will Be Directed by Edmund Lawrence, and "Enlighten Thy Daughter" Is to Be Put in Work by Abramson

AS soon as negotiations are closed with several screen and stage stars to enact principal roles in the two next Ivan plays, entitled "The Sex Lure," and the special production, "Enlighten Thy Daughter," work on these features will commence.

"The Sex Lure" will be directed by Edmund Lawrence, who has been specially engaged to direct feature productions for the Ivan Company.

Ivan Abramson has completed the working scenario "Enlighten Thy Daughter," on which he has been engaged for the last six months, and all parts in the story will be enacted by an all-star cast under Mr. Abramson's supervision.

The Ivan Studio in New York has been a scene of much activity in the erection of special sets required to properly stage the various exterior scenes required by the scenarios of these next Ivan plays.

"Enlighten Thy Daughter," when completed, will not be released as a regular production, but will be exploited as a special production, and all sorts of exhibitor publicity aids and newspaper advertising will be used to interest the public at large in attending houses at which this feature may be shown.

The Los Angeles studio of the Ivan Company, under the direction of W. A. Norton, is at present busily engaged at work on a special feature to be released by the Ivan Film exchanges. No title for the drama to be produced by the Los Angeles studios has as yet been announced by the company.

Gaumont Issues Bulletin to Aid Program Selection

Publication Is Designed to Help Exhibitors, Societies, Schools and Clubs Wishing to Secure Pictures Other Than Photodramas

THE efforts of both exhibitors and societies, schools and clubs to secure entertaining motion pictures, other than photodramas, will be made easier by the weekly publication of a bulletin of Gaumont single-reel releases. Hitherto, it has been necessary for the person making up a special program to search through back files to find suitable material out of the three Gaumont single-reel releases. Now all information about these pictures may be had by simply referring to the Gaumont bulletins.

The preliminary bulletins, containing a list of subjects in "See America First" and "Reel Life," has already been issued. The weekly bulletin will give the contents of these current single-reels and also of the current issue of the Mutual Weekly. By keeping a file of these bulletins, finding any subject that has been released by Gaumont in Mutual Service will be only a matter of a few minutes.

The Gaumont bulletins are being supplied by Mutual branch managers, and through the branches they are distributed to exhibitors and others interested in film of this nature. With these three reels each week, the Gaumont Company has the special field well covered. "See America First," the scenic, has also upon the same reel a humorous Gaumont Kartoon Komic, animated by Harry Palmer. "Reel Life," known as the Mutual Magazine in Film, bears the same relation to a high-class magazine that the Mutual Weekly bears to a newspaper.

THE STATE REFUSES TO PAY FOR THEATRE TICKETS OF JURYMEN

Can a jury in a district court while sitting in a case go to moving picture shows at the expense of the county while resting? No. At least so say the authorities of Scott County, Iowa. While auditing the books of that county the auditor found an item that the supervisors made out—twenty tickets to take a murder jury to a show. Besides commenting on the excessive size of the jury, the examiner decided that the "movies" was no place for a murder jury, and he refused to allow the warrant.

Dominion Exclusives, Limited, handling Fox Feature Photoplays Supreme for British Columbia, has removed its offices to the Orpheum Theatre Building, 765 Granville street, Vancouver, B. C. The move to larger quarters was made the first of September.

Lasky "Joan of Arc" Will Be Seen on Broadway

Geraldine Farrar Will Be the Star in Elaborate Production Directed by Cecil DeMille from a Scenario by Jeanie MacPherson—Picture to Be Released in Fall—Cast Includes Tully Marshall, Hobart Bosworth, Theodore Roberts, Charles Clary and James Neil

A FILMED version of the story of "Joan of Arc," it was announced last week, has been completed under the direction of Cecil B. DeMille, with Geraldine Farrar in the title-role.

This production, which has held Miss Farrar's exclusive services for three months this summer, will be presented by Jesse L. Lasky this autumn.

Tanned by the California sun and looking the picture of good health and vivacity, Miss Farrar returned to New York from Hollywood enthusiastic about "Joan" and of the belief that as a motion picture drama and spectacle, Mr. DeMille's latest production will rival or surpass anything that has heretofore been seen on the screen.

Probably no theme of which a woman is the central figure in all the world's history is so well known or universally loved as the story of "Joan of Arc," the French peasant girl who aroused a sleeping nation to a frenzy of patriotism and won lasting freedom for France from the yoke of English rule. The scenario was written by Jeanie MacPherson.

Miss Farrar was asked how she happened to select "Joan" as a character for the motion picture, never having played the role in grand opera. Miss Farrar said: "I believe the spirit and personality of Joan of Arc are more alive to-day than at any time during the past three centuries. She was the very symbol of freedom and the incarnation of hatred against political slavery and bigotry. For years I have had an ambition to sing Joan in some great opera based on the story of her life. When Mr. Lasky asked me last winter how I would like to do a picture production of Joan, I was delighted with the idea and enthusiastic for the opportunity.

"There is something so very different about creating a role for the camera and creating a part for the opera. The two arts are not so closely allied as one would think. With the opera there are weeks of preparation to be sure, and then comes the premiere. It is true that great latitude is allowed on the operatic stage for the development of character and to the broadening of effects.

"But after all the fundamentals of the performance continue the same in its various repetitions. The past summer has been a revelation to me. For nearly three months many hours every day and sometimes far into the night I have been living this role.

Watch Story Develop into Big Production

"We have all watched the story develop from an idea into a massive production. I think Mr. DeMille has done wonderful things, and I believe the scenario by Miss MacPherson to be a revelation to those who doubt that a long picture must rely on its spectacular features to the exclusion of its heart interest.

"It is true that throughout this picture there are various extraordinary spectacles, such as the battle scenes in the siege of Orleans, but one never loses sight of the central figure, her hopes, her ambitions, her disappointments and her failures."

Cecil B. DeMille

Cecil B. DeMille's first attempt at a production of some length. As director-general of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, he directed a number of five-reel feature plays for the Paramount Program, including the three photodramas in which Miss Farrar appeared at the Lasky studios a year ago. These were "Carmen," "Temptation" and "Maria Rosa." Mr. DeMille for months has been preparing the story of "Joan of Arc."

Knowing the reverence in which "Joan" is held by the thousands who have studied and admire her character, Mr. DeMille has been particularly careful to adhere closely to history. It happens that the present day is particularly fortunate in having access to details of the life of Joan of Arc, as it is the only story, according to Mark Twain, of the human life which comes to us under oath, the only one which comes to us from the witness stand.

The official records of the great trial of 1431, and the process of rehabilitation of a quarter of a century later, are still preserved in the national archives of France, and they furnish with remarkable fulness the facts of Joan of Arc.

The cast which supports Miss Farrar was selected by Mr. DeMille and includes many well-known players of the screen, some of whom have starred on the screen in their own right. Prominent among these are Hobart Bosworth, who appears as the hero; Theodore Roberts, Tully Marshall, Wallace Reid, Charles Clary, Horace B. Carpenter, James Neil, Mrs. Lewis McCord and others.

Private Showing of "Common Law" on Sept. 22 at St. Regis

Invitations Sent Out by Selznick for View of Clara Kimball Young Pictures in Ballroom of Famous N. Y. Hotel—Governor Whitman Guest of Honor

WITH Governor Whitman and Mrs. Whitman as guests of honor, a private showing of Clara Kimball Young's production of "The Common Law" will be given Friday evening, September 22, in the ballroom of the Hotel St. Regis, Fifth avenue and Fifty-fifth street, New York.

Doris Grey (Thanhouser)

Only two hundred and twenty-five invitations have been issued by Miss Young and Lewis J. Selznick for this function. Those invited include the dramatic editors of all the New York daily papers, the editors and reviewers of the trade press and personal friends of the heads of the company. The picture will be shown in seven parts and afterwards a buffet supper will be served and Miss Young will receive the guests.

Mr. Selznick has spared no effort or expense to put the production on the highest possible plane, even calling in Herbert Kaufman, to assist in the preparation of sub-titles.

"At an all night session at the Solax studio last week the picture was found to be so perfect in continuity and pantomine as to require fewer sub-titles than any seven-reel production ever marketed," said Mr. Selznick. As every one knows, this is the highest possible compliment that could be paid the director."

"AUTOMATIC" BULLDOG IS MASCOT OF OMAHA SCREEN CLUB

The Omaha Screen Club, since the opening of the Movie Inn, holds almost daily meetings. Recently the exhibitors and exchangemen have been discussing another Screen Club dance. They have a mascot—a bull dog that growls, barks, wags its tail, but doesn't bite. It is automatic.

Mr. William A. Johnston,

My dear Mr. Johnston:-

I believe you have done a real service to the producer, the director and the exhibitor in gathering together such information as is contained in your Studio Directory and making it available for every one who has occasion to use such information.

For many years I have felt that there should be some such handbook in existence. The Director benefits by it, the actor and actress profit by it, and it is altogether an important step in the process of stabilizing and standardizing of the motion picture, to those outside the field as well as those within it.

With the wealth of information your last Studio Directory contained as a working basis, I see no reason why you should not be able to issue an authoritative encyclopaedia of the screen. You deserve the support and co-operation of every producer in the business, and Itake pleasure in extending to you my best wishes for your success.

Sincerely yours,

D W Griffith

New York City.

Dear Mr. Holland,

Referring to your note about the new edition of the Motion Picture News Directory, I wish to tell you that I am very glad you are getting out a new edition.

The old one has proven of great value to me in casting my pictures and definite cases came up in The Conquest of Canaan, where, if the name had not been in the directory, the actor would not have been called to my mind, and, therefore, would not have played the part, so I am sure of its great value to both the director and the actor. Especially is this true when the actor's picture is shown near the name, as we can then easily associate the name and the face and immediately get in touch.

It is much easier when the actor gives his permanent address and telephone number so that no time is lost in getting him.

Wishing you great success for the new issue, I am,

Yours very truly,

George Irving

P. S. Many thanks for your compliments on "Jaffery".

Victor Moore, until recently a Lasky star, is now at his summer home, and has been spending his time fishing and hunting, being an ardent sportsman. He now feels ready to resume work. Among his Lasky successes were "Snobs," "Jimmy Fadden" and "The Clown."

He has arranged with Sam Tauber to be his personal representative. Mr. Tauber is prominent as a promoter of publicity, and as an author and scenario writer. His recent work was "Phantom Fortunes," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, with Barney Bernard as star.

Mr. Tauber has in preparation a series of one and two-reel plays for Mr. Moore to star in.

Winners of "Beauty and Brains" Contest in New York

Eleven Stunning Girls, from All Parts of the Country, Will Remain in the City Until World Film Gives Them Tryouts for Screen Careers

THE eleven winners of the "Beauty and Brains" contest, conducted by the World Film Corporation in conjunction with the Photoplay Magazine, arrived in New York City on Thursday, September 12, ready to undergo the tests which may or may not earn them a year's contract with the World studios. The girls, who hied from all parts of the country, are stopping at the Hotel Marie Antoinette, where they will be guests of the World Film Corporation for the period of two weeks.

The winners of the Beauty and Brains contest lead a field of candidates that numbered in the tens of thousands. The "brain" part of the contest was introduced by William A. Brady, who declared that he wanted girls who possessed intelligence combined with beauty for his pictures. Consequently each contestant was required to send a letter with her photograph that the judges might determine the winners on the merits of each requisite.

The board of judges included Lillian Russell, Julian Johnson, William A. Brady, Kitty Kelly, Sophie Irene Loeb and Arthur H. Spiegel. The following eleven girls were finally decided upon as the winners of the contest: Vivian Suckling, Winnipeg, Man.; Estelle Claire Judy, McKeesport, Pa.; Lucille Zintheo, Spokane, Wash.; Florence Gray, Seattle, Wash.; Claire Lois Butler Lee, Wichita, Kansas; Peggy Bloom, Orlando, Fla.; Alatia Marton, Dallas, Texas; Phyllis C. Curl, Roxbury, Mass.; Mildred Lee, Kansas City, Mo.; Lucille Satterthwait, Waynesville, N. C., and Helen Arnold, Louisville, Ky.

Mr. Brady in speaking of the contest said, "The main idea of this contest was to discover such talent and bring it to the screen to fill the breach caused by the scarcity of young actresses who possess real ability and attractive personality. But we did not want mere beauty, which means nothing beyond visual gratification. To be of real usefulness the girls who are to relieve the scarcity of worth-while youthful material must have intelligence. So the terms of the contest called not only for photographs, but written expressions of the reasons impelling the senders to desire a motion picture career."

The girls hail from various occupations. Two of them have been telephone operators, one is the daughter of a hotel proprietor who acted as his housekeeper, another comes from a brief career on the stage, several are singers, and one is an amateur champion swimmer.

Another Director Is Added to the Lasky Staff

Robert Leonard, with Universal for Last Four Years, Since Leaving the Legitimate Stage, Is the New Member—Myrtle Stedman Also with the Company

Los Angeles, Sept. 16.

THE producing staff at the Lasky studio was again increased this week by the addition of another director, which increases the number to eight, and at the studio, it is stated, that still another director is shortly to be added.

Robert Leonard, who has been with the Universal since leaving the legitimate stage about four years ago, is the new member of the Lasky staff. Mr. Leonard left the Universal about three weeks ago upon the completion of "The Eagle's Wings," a patrotic story of a timely nature. Mr. Leonard has produced a number of very successful photodramas, in many of which he himself appeared, playing featured parts with Ella Hall. Mr. Leonard's engagement with the Lasky Company began Monday of this week, but as yet no story has been assigned to him; and, therefore, no cast has been selected. He will spend a few days in studying the Lasky producing policy before beginning his first subject.

Other new faces at the Lasky studio are Myrtle Stedman, Morosco star, who has been loaned to the Lasky organization for one or more pictures. In the first she will be co-starred with Sessue Hayakawa.

Nell Shipman has been specially engaged by General Manager Hoffman at the Lasky studios, to play the lead in support of Lou-Tellegen in his third Lasky picture. The play, no title of which has been announced, is of Spanish origin.

The co-starring vehicle of Tom Meighn and Anita King, "The Heir to Hurrah," adapted from Paul Armstrong's stage play of the same name, will shortly be completed by Director William C. de Mille. The photodrama was written by Beatrice de Mille and Leighton Osmun.

Mabel Van Buren, Lasky leading woman, was granted a week's vacation, which she will spend by appearing in the featured role of local stock production.

Cleo Ridgely, who has been playing opposite Lou-Tellegen, is also away from the studio for a month. This is partially due to the fact that Mr. Tellegen's next picture requires a fiery senorita, and Miss Ridgely being a decided blonde, it was necessary to engage another leading woman.

Spurin, Well Known English Film Man, in New York

Long Associated with Ruffell's, One of the Largest and Most Successful of the British Distribution Organizations, He Lately Formed His Own Company for the Release of Twenty-six Features a Year, at the Rate of Two a Month—Pictures Will Be Selected from Best Obtainable Here and Abroad

ROSCOE C. SPURIN, one of the best-known motion picture men in England, who has been publicity manager for Ruffell's, one of the largest and most successful of the English distributing organizations, or renters, as they are called over there, arrived in New York last week, and is stopping at the Waldorf.

Mr. Spurin resigned from Ruffell's to organize a film renting company of his own. He has become associated with one of the wealthiest men in the British Isles, and will commence releasing pictures about the first of November.

When seen by a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, he said: "My plans are not sufficiently matured to permit me to talk in great detail at the present moment. This much I can say, however. My organization in England is completed, and we are ready to start work as soon as I return. For the first year I expect to release about twenty-six feature pictures, or two each month.

"These pictures will be the best that can be bought both in this country and abroad. I do not care how much a picture costs, but it must be of a quality commensurate with that cost. When a picture bearing my trade-mark appears in England, the fact that it does bear that trade-mark will mean that it is the best picture that can be obtained, that it is the best that is on the market.

"I am now buying the English rights to American pictures. I have concluded some contracts, and others are still under consideration. I am on the market for any production if it is clean and high class and of the best quality. It must be clean, however, it must be a picture that any young girl, or young boy for that matter, can see without it bringing a blush to their cheek. It must be a picture which I, as a father, would not be ashamed to have my young daughter witness.

To Be Known as Roscoe's Exclusives

"These pictures will be known in England as Roscoe's Exclusives, and in line with the foregoing statement they will be censored by me before they go out. I will not consider any but high-class pictures that are clean and without the least suggestion of anything that is the least bit off color.

Mrs. Roscoe Spurin

"I have taken as my trade-mark a windmill, and that mark will not only appear on every picture that I handle, but on every piece of advertising that is used to exploit it. Inside of a year wherever that windmill is seen, will be seen the best pictures that are on the market.

"My whole idea for success in this new venture is founded on quality and on guaranteed quality. I will not only tell my customers that they are getting the best that there is, but I will guarantee hat the pictures which they book through me will be the best that can be obtained. I shall conduct my business in just the same manner as any reputable house dealing in other commodities. If my customers are not satisfied with the pictures as I represent them they are at perfect liberty to return them and get their money back. When I guarantee the best that can be obtained, I will live up to that guarantee in every way, shape and manner."

During the fifteen months that he was in charge of the publicity department of Ruffell's Mr. Spurin was responsible for some of the cleverest as well as the most profitable advertising and publicity work that the motion picture business in England has ever seen. He was the inventor of the Metro Parrot, and created the brilliant series of advertisements which have made such a success for these pictures on the English market.

He has five of his sons serving at the front with the British forces. His eldest boy, who was recently invalided home from Gallipoli, recently qualified as a first-class bomb and musketry instructor, and looks forward to receiving his commission very shortly. His second son, Roscoe, who also went through the Gallipoli campaign, and is now somewhere in Greece, has already received his commission, while Robert, the youngest member of the family, has been for fifty days in the trenches taking part in the "Big Push."

Before returning to England, Mr. Spurin expects to cable for his wife to come over just for the purpose of showing her the sights of New York. He anticipates giving her a week filled to repletion of typical New York hustle, and then they will both take the steamer for the other side.

"YELLOW MENACE" PUT IN STRING OF KOPPIN HOUSES

All of the theatres operating under the Henry S. Koppin Company, including the Grand Circus, Rosebud, Woodward, and La Salle, will show "The Yellow Menace" serial. Manager Jesse Fishman, of the Standard Film Service, Inc., at Detroit, says that bookings are coming in better than he anticipated. He is getting splendid co-operation from exhibitors, although comparatively little effort has been made as yet to sell it through the state.

The Detroit Journal, a leading afternoon newspaper, is running the story in its columns. The first shownig of the serial in Detroit is at the Grand Circus theatre, recently taken over by the Koppin interests, of which Bert Williams is general manager.

MUTT AND JEFF OFFICE OPENS IN NEWARK

Due to the many requests of exhibitors in Northern New Jersey for Mutt and Jeff and Hans and Fritz, animated comedies, the Mutt and Jeff Film Company has opened Jersey offices in Proctor's Palace Theatre Building, Newark, in charge of R. S. Clarke. Mr. Clarke, who is well-known among the exhibitors of that territory, predicts a bright future for Mutt and Jeff and Hans and Fritz Animated Comics.

MEMBERSHIP OF CLEVELAND CLUB IS SIXTY-FIVE

At the regular monthly meeting of the Cleveland Screen Club last week, the following were elected to membership: E. M. Mandlebaum, G. H. Gardner, I. Grohs, Max Schachtel, W. C. Watson, A. H. Abrams, L. C. Thompson, J. D. Mooney, J. D. Kennedy, C. A. Meade, August Illg and George Schade. This brings the membership up to sixty-five.

UNIVERSAL TO FURNISH BUSSES FOR EMPLOYEES DURING CAR STRIKE IN NEW YORK

Universal employees have been notified that in the event of the spread of the transportation strike on the New York subway, elevated roads and surface lines, a bus system will be put into operation. All employees have been requested to send in their addresses so that a regular service can be established.

Joe Brandt, Nat Rothstein, Burton Rice, Hy Gainsborg, and other Universal officials, have put their automobiles at the disposal of the newly established "transportation committee," and hereafter no Universal employee need walk in from Elizabeth, N. J., the wilds of Hoboken, or from Far Rockaway to 1600 Broadway.

Publicity Limelight Blazes Pitilessly on Horne

Director of Kalem's "Girl from 'Frisco," Regarded by Fellow Screen Producers as in Sure-Fire Class and a Quiet Worker, Is Now "Shown Up"

THE success of Kalem's series of the West, "The Girl from 'Frisco," featuring Marin Sais and True Boardman, has resulted in bringing Director James W. Horne into the rays of the calcium. Horne, regarded by his fellow screen producers as in the "sure-fire" class, has, however, been seldom found in the limelight of publicity.

In addition to his current series, "The Girl from 'Frisco," Horne will be remembered as the producer of Kalem's popular "Stingaree series from the stories by E. W. Hornung," "The Social Pirates" series by George Bronson Howard, and a number of multiple reel successes including "The Barnstormers" and "The Pitfall." Judging from its reception by exhibitors and fans, "Stingaree" is probably his greatest success, though "The Girl from 'Frisco," now in the seventh week of its career bids fair to run the series by the creator of "Raffles" a close race. In both producteions Marin Sais and True Boardman are the featured stars.

Director Horne is a native of California and a real product of the stage, as he was a member of the Belasco-Mayer stock company at the Alcazar in San Francisco when only thirteen years old. Stage work carried him to New York and Chicago many years later, his last engagement in the spoken drama being in the role of Bragdon in the Cohan and Harris production of "Brewster's Millions."

He entered photoply work with the Kalem Company four years ago as a scenario writer, being sent to the Glendale studio. In a little over a year of this work Director Horne showed such ability that he was given the directorial reins. He soon established himself as one of the most artistic of screen producers, his attention to detail being a particularly strong point.

Under the direction of Mr. Horne work was started last week on the ninth episode of "The Girl from 'Frisco," which is titled "The Web of Guilt." For the eighth episode, "A Battle in the Dark," the producer secured some unusually striking fire scenes by burning a three-story Glendale residence to the ground.

The director was fortunate in learning of a house which the owner was preparing to tear down. By offering $3,500, many hundreds higher than the nearest bid of a wrecking concern, he secured permission to stage his private fire with the house as the offering. The Glendale fire department stood by to prevent possible spreading of the blaze, while it was also necessary to place a large bond to cover the latter contingency. The scenes were photographed by a battery of four cameras at night and furnish a spectacular climax to this episode.

Pathe Builds Strong Sales Force in Big Cities

Company Reorganizes Exchanges in Chicago, Minneapolis, Cleveland, and Boston—A. W. Smith, Jr., Formerly Assistant Manager in New York, in Charge of Western Massachusetts

PATHE is building a strong sales organization. The Chicago, Minneapolis, Cleveland and Indianapolis exchanges have been reorganized with a view to getting higher efficiency than has ever been obtained in the past. Now comes Boston.

Here is the line-up for New England. E. J. Farrell has been engaged as manager. He has been General Film manager in Boston for a number of years. A. W. Smith, Jr., formerly assistant manager of the New York exchange, is in charge of the western Massachusetts territory. H. I. Goldman, who for two years has been building up business in Connecticut and Rhode Island, will handle these two states and also eastern Massachusetts in conjunction with J. J. Donnelly.

A. Bevan, formerly General Film manager at Albany, will be located at Bangor, Maine, while in the Boston office will be F. J. Cavanaugh as assistant manager, R. C. Kinney, a young Harvard man, who for two years has shown himself to be an excellent salesman, and F. A. Grady, who resigned as manager of the World Boston office to pay particular attention to Pathe serials.

Farrell's appointment has certainly pleased the exhibitors in New England. Many telegrams have been received by the Pathe home office and C. R. Seelye, who went to Boston to install the new manager, reports a lame arm from shaking hands with exhibitors and exchange men who wanted to congratulate him.

"JAFFERY" MEETS WITH SUCCESS

"Jaffery," the first of the Golden Eagle features of the International Film Service, Inc., which has just been released, is meeting with success.

Harry Davis, of Pittsburgh, sent the following telegram last Thursday to the general offices of the International:

"'Jaffery' broke all records for attendance both afternoon and evening on our first day's presentation in the Grand Opera House. This, in spite of intense heat and threatening rain. Distinctly a one hundred per cent. picture. Give us more like it."

Frederick Clement Weber, president of the Lord Calvert Theatres Company, Baltimore, controlling some of the best theatres in Baltimore, sent the following letter:

"The writer witnessed a private screening of your first Golden Eagle feature, 'Jaffery,' and wishes to congratulate you upon same.

"'Jaffery' is a great novel, but a greater picture, in which all the characters turn to life in the most vivid and interesting manner."

J. Warren Kerrigan, Louise Lovely, Hayward Mack and Maud George in Various Scenes from "The Social Buccaneer," One of the Forthcoming Features from Bluebird for Exhibitors' Fall Programs. To be Released on October 16.

NINE MEN WILL HAVE HAND IN "THE WITCHING HOUR"

Nine men will have a hand in the Frohman Amusement Corporation's production of "The Witching Hour." Augustus Thomas wrote it, Anthony Kelly scenarioized it, George Irving will direct it, C. Aubrey Smith and Jack Sherrill will play in it, while Professors Munsterberg and Hyslop, two noted psychologists will suggest treatments for the hypnotic elements in it, and "Pauline," the noted hypnotist, will teach Irving, Smith and Sherrill the mysteries of hypnotism. Ralph Dean, the ninth, will build the production. The play will require three months to produce.

FITZMAURICE WILL DIRECT "HUNTING OF THE HAWK"

"The Hunting of the Hawk" is the name of the photoplay on which George B. Seitz of the Astera Film Corporation is working at the present time. The picture will be directed by George Fitzmaurice, and William Courtenay and Lillian Greuze will be starred in it.

Bluebird Is Going to Prove That Shakespeare Was Right

"The Play Is the Thing," and Not Names, Contends General Manager Hoffman, Who Lays Stress on the Company's Plan to Put Gripping Story in Each Picture

BEFORE departing for Chicago last week, where he will attend a meeting of Bluebird exchange managers, M. H. Hoffman, general manager of Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., gave out a statement concerning the recent determination of Bluebird to make "the play the thing." For several months, during the warmest weeks of the year, Bluebird has put its policy to the test, under the most exacting conditions, and has proven to the satisfaction of the management that stars are not essential to program success. This conclusion is drawn from Mr. Hoffman's statement, which follows:

"During the first six months of Bluebird we tried the ancient plan of advertising start and names, and, having given the scheme a thorough test we decided to abruptly depart from the beaten path and, accordingly, began forthwith to advertise our plays as the basis of Bluebird's claim to public patronage. Summer was not a time most manufacturers would have selected to try out a radical policy—but we had faith in our conviction and wanted to have one policy undergo the severest possible test, right at the outset.

"Using only one newspaper of national circulation, centering our efforts upon making the best pictures it was humanly possible to turn out, and casting the parts to the best possible advantage, regardless of whether or not the player was a star or even a well-advertised name, we have proven that Shakespeare was right. With Bluebird the play will always be 'the thing.'

"We employ artists who have been with us under the old system and cast them to the best advantage; but when there is a role to be played requiring somebody outside of the Bluebird stock forces to play it, we hire the player to fit the play.

"Our release for October 16 is an instance of playing artists who have names. J. Warren Kerrigan and Louise Lovely have each been lone-stars in earlier Bluebirds—they play opposite in 'The Social Buccaneer.' The release for October 9 is 'The Chalice of Sorrow,' the leading lady being Cleo Madison, who has never appeared in a Bluebird before. On October 2 'Wanted—A Home' will have Mary Mac Laren as its leading lady. This girl was created as a star by Bluebird, when Lois Weber discovered her as the ideal type to play the lead in 'Shoes.' October 23 will have 'The Heritage of Hate' as the release, William Quinn having been selected as leading man because we thought he could best play the role, giving no thought to whether he had made a name for himself upon the screen or elsewhere.

"The foregoing instances are cited as covering our ideas of casting a play—after the play has been decided upon for a Bluebird release. The public, by the letters they write, agree with our purpose and the exhibitor of Bluebird's is reaping an advantage that our publicity campaign gives to the theatres where Bluebirds are shown. We are going right ahead, with ample proof in hand that our policy is the correct one for us to pursue."

"Dulcie's Adventure," with Miss Minter, Ready October 2

Subject Is First Picture Directed by Kirkwood for American Film Company and Will Be Released on the Mutual Program

"DULCIE'S ADVENTURE," the second of the Mary Miles Minter features produced by the American Film Company, Inc., for release through the Mutual, has been completed, and will go out to the public on October 2.

James Kirkwood, the director, may be depended upon, of course, to get the most that can be gotten out of a picture. "Dulcie's Adventure," his first Mutual offering, is no exception.

The most painstaking care has been given to the costuming and the setting of the picture. Whether in the garments of a poor lonesome little white girl, not allowed to play with the neighboring pickaninnies or the "poor white trash," in the antiquated hoop skirts deemed fashionable by her Aunt Netta, or in her gorgeous imported white satin wedding gown which crowns the picture, Mary Miles Minter is perfectly gowned.

There are many touching scenes, including both the little Dulcie at home in her sunny southland, and the sad little Dulcie away on her enforced adventure in search of a millionaire. There are the stolen games with the white children of the neighborhood, only to be discovered and reprimanded by the two aunts; there is the scene where Dulcie must return the pet squirrel given her by the grocer's boy and her only companion; there are the plans for her enforced marriage to a man much older than herself.

TRADE SHOWING FOR COMEDIES ABOUT OCTOBER 1 IS KEEN PLAN

The Keen Cartoon Corporation, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York, is releasing about Nov. 1, a five hundred foot comedy per week.

The first four releases are about completed and a trade paper showing will be given about Oct. 1.

The organization has in its employ some of the best cartoonists obtainable, who are preparing each story.

OLD TIME FRIENDS VISIT PRESIDENT LAEMMLE AT "U" CITY

Two interested visitors at Universal City, a few days ago were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barber, of Oshkosh, Wisconsin, old friends of President Carl Laemmle of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, who were his guests at the film capital for an afternoon.

Before Mr. Laemmle became such an important figure in the film world he was in business in Oshkosh, and Mr. and Mrs. Barber were his friends. While going over the big stages they talked over the old days in the Badger State.

Accompanying the party also were Mrs. L. F. Martin, and Mrs. A. M. Shenk, of Calexico, California, whose husbands operate the gin mills in the cotton belt of the Imperial Valley.

A Galaxy of Stars Shine in Film Sky of General Program

Twenty-five Will Appear During Week of September 25-30—List of Pictures Starts Off with Selig's "Power of the Cross," Followed by "Getting By," a "V"

IN General Film Service program for the week September 25-30 the actors and actresses listed in the pictures are among the most noted in the film world and their names emphasize General Film Company's policy of featuring distinguished stars in pictures of short length. Among some of the names noted in this program for the week mentioned are:

Nell Craig, Marguerite Clayton, Sydney Ainsworth, Tom Mix, Lillian West, Neil Hardin, Harry Myers, Rosemary Theby, "Plump" and "Runt," Huntly Gordon, Inez Seabury, Claire McDowell, Marin Sais, True Boardman, Shirley Moore, Virginia Kirtley, Robyn Adair, "Pokes" and "Jabbs," Helen Gibson, Ivy Close, Ethel Teare, "Ham" and "Budd," Gertrude Robinson, John Junior, Hughie Mack.

A Selig two-part drama, "Power of the Cross," will be the first picture shown in the week's program. In this Virginia Kirtley and Robyn Adair are featured. Huntly Gordon and Shirley Moore, Vitagraph, will get the spot light next in a one-reel comedy, "Getting By." Next will come the Selig-Tribune pictorial covering all the important news of the world in graphic manner. "The Sunbeam," a Biograph single reel drama presenting Inez Seabury and Claire McDowell, will close the program for that day.

"Peter, the Hermit," an Essanay two-part comedy-drama presenting John Junior and Nell Craig, will be the first picture screened Tuesday, September 26. "Bumping the Bumps," a one-reel Kalem comedy with Ham and Budd and Ethel Teare as funmakers, will be next. "The Wedding Gown," a two-part picture by Biograph featuring Gertrude Robinson, will be shown as the last picture of that day.

The following day "Dreamy Dud Has a Laugh on the Boss," a caricature and a short length scenic production, will be Essanay's offering. This will be succeeded by a Vim one-reel comedy, "Artistic Atmosphere," with Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby in the titular roles. Then will follow the eighth episode of "The Girl From 'Frisco," "A Battle in the Dark." Marin Sais and True Boardman are headliners in this Kalem production as in others of the series.

On the following day, Thursday, September 29, Selig-Tribune will have the post of honor and will be first shown. This will be followed by the always funny Vim comedians, Plump and Runt, in a one-reel comedy, "The Reformers."

What may appear to many as the strongest picture of the week's program will be the first picture screened Friday, a Knickerbocker three-reel drama, "For the Governor's Chair," presenting Neil Hardin and Lillian West. Ivy Close will be seen next in a Kalem one-part comedy, "Rival Artists." Hughie Mack will follow in a one-part comedy, "She Who Last Laughs." Then just to round out the day with a laugh a Vim comedy in one part, "Tangles Ties," with Pokes and Jabbs featured, will be shown.

For the first picture Saturday, September 23, Essanay selected Marguerite Clayton and Sydney Ainsworth in a three-part drama, "Twin Fates." An episode of Kalem's "Hazards of Helen" series, "The Death Swing," featuring daring Helen Gibson, will be the next picture shown. The day and the week's program will close with a Selig one-act drama, "The Raiders," featuring Tom Mix.

Two in Support of Nazimova Appeared with Her in Vaudeville

Gertrude Berkeley Was in "The Two Orphans" and "Soul of Broadway," Directed by Brenon—Nila Mac Is to Have Previous Role in Actress' Company

IN the cast which will be seen in support of Nazimova in the Herbert Brenon photodramatic production of "War Brides," to be released through Lewis J. Selznick in October, there are two members of the vaudeville company which appeared with this star in her successful tour. One of these, Gertrude Berkeley, never has appeared in moving pictures except under Mr. Brenon's direction, and had decided to retire from stage and screen, when Nazimova and Mr. Brenon induced her to return to play her big part in "War Brides," that of the aged mother. Miss Berkeley appeared under the Brenon direction in "The Two Orphans" and "The Soul of Broadway." Nila Mac also was in Nazimova's company, and will have her previous role. Robert Whitworth, another member of the cast, has been with uch stars as Sir Henry Irving and Forbes Robertson, and recently has been featured by the Vitagraph. William Bailey has been in pictures for nine years, with Essanay, Fox, Metro, and with Universal as a director.

Theodora Warfield was one of the mermaids in Mr. Brenon's spectacle, "A Daughter of the Gods."

Richard S. Barthelmess has been acting in pictures in his college vacations; his mother coached Nazimova for her American debut, and he has known the star almost all his life. Ned Burton, who will play the part of the captain, was in vaudeville eighteen years, in the team of Burton and Brookes, was with Julian Eltinge in "Cousin Lucy," and last season played Senator Murphy in "Potash and Perlmutter."

Charles Bryand, Nazimova's husband, is realistically cast as her husband in the photodrama. Charles Hutchinson and several other well-known players, will complete the array. This week the entire company went to Lake Waramang, Conn., to make a number of the pastoral scenes, which will lend relief to the story.

Hearst Plans to Exploit "Scarlet Runner" in Dailies

Picture Made by Vitagraph Will Be Featured in His Neswpapers Throughout Country and Handled as Syndicate Proposition to Other Publications

"MORE good news in store for the exhibitors who have come to expect great things from the Greater Vitagraph," was General Manager Irwin's remark upon the completion of negotiations, whereby metropolitan newspapers all over the country will exploit "The Scarlet Runner," as a fiction feature.

"William Randolph Hearst, after hearing favorable reports of 'The Scarlet Runner,' was willing to enter into a contract to feature it in his newspapers throughout the country and handle the syndicating of it to other newspapers, both in the large cities and the smaller towns."

The most representative paper in Washington, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Richmond, Norfolk, Buffalo, Indiana, Louisville, Syracuse, Milwaukee, Omaha, Detroit, Minneapolis, Portland, Seattle, Dallas, Denver, and Salt Lake City, have signified their willingness to make this serial with Earle Williams in the leading role a success. They will be supported in their endeavors by hundreds of smaller dailies and weeklies, which will receive "The Scarlet Runner," in plate or mat form from the Western Newspaper Union, whose head office is in Chicago.

Every V-L-S-E branch manager is hustling to sign additional papers for this feature.

"TOLL OF JUSTICE" READY IN WEEK OR TEN DAYS

It is reported from Miami, Florida, that Walter Miller, who first gained screen prominence in Biograph pictures, has surpassed the form he has shown in his previous successes, in the Florida Feature Film Company's second five-reel production entitled "The Toll of Justice."

Mr. Miller has appeared in many successful features since he made his first bow on the screen with the Biograph Company.

In "The Toll of Justice," Mr. Miller is supported by Irva Ross. "The Toll of Justice" will be ready for release in a week or ten days.

UNICORN IN KEITH AND LOEW HOUSES

Unicorn films are being shown in the Keith and Proctor circuit, and on the Loew circuit, through contracts made by Manager H. M. Davis, of the New York branch.

HUMMING BIRDS, EAGLES AND TURTLES SHOWN IN METRO TRAVELOG

The current weekly release of the Metro Travelog, which is of an educational nature has been endorsed by some of New York's foremost educators, including several members of the Board of Education, who saw the feature at a private presentation. William L. Finley, State Biologist of Oregon, who is engaged in photographing some studies of nature, prepared two of the subjects in the feature. One of these is called, "Humming Birds at the Pumps" showing how these interesting little birds feed their young by pumping their food into them.

Bird Life as Shown in Metro Travelogs

Professor Finley has also succeeded in obtaining many other little touches that are delightful to look upon. Young eagles are photographed in their home in a tall yellow pine tree on a mountain side, while the mother eagle hovers around. Two cameras were used to obtain these pictures, and one is on the ground where views of the cameraman in the tree top can be seen.

One of the eagles is shown where the bird resented the intrusion, which nearly resulted in the cameraman falling a hundred feet on the rooks. Another interesting subject is "The Great American Green Turtle." The turtle is shown in his habitat around Key West, and his journey from the sea to the soup tureen.

N. J. BAUMER IS ELECTED VICE-PRESIDENT ROTHACKER FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

On Wednesday, September 13, at a special meeting of the board of directors of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, N. J. Baumer was elected vice-president.

Mr. Baumer, for a great many years, has been president and director of Matzene studios, which are the largest and foremost in portrait work in America.

Under Mr. Baumer's personal direction during the past seven years, over one hundred thousand negatives were made of celebrities including practically all men of national American reputation, thirty-two of the English nobility of London, and all of the stars and settings of the Chicago Grand Opera Company of which he is appointed the official photographer.

The Pathescope projecting machine was first marketed in the Central West by Mr. Baumer, who organized, owned and directed the Pathescope Company of Chicago. While Mr. Baumer retains the presidency of Matzenes he has disposed of his Pathescope holdings to the new Pathescope Central Corporation, and will devote his entire efforts, time and attention to his official duties with the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company.

N. J. Baumer

Mr. Baumer is a recognized authority on studio lighting and artistic illumination, and has reason to assume that his efforts in the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company's new studio will surpass his best efforts in portrait work which made Matzenes the undisputed leaders in still photography.

"Fall of a Nation" Booked for Showing in Russia

In First Week of November the Dixon Spectacle Will Appear in Petrograd—This Will Be Followed by the Distribution of Ten Prints Through the Empire

THE first of the season's great spectacular films to be shown within the European war zone will be "The Fall of a Nation." Thomas Dixon has arranged for a showing of his American war picture at Petrograd, Russia, the first week in November. This will be quickly followed up by the distribution of ten prints throughout the Empire, so that before the Russian "little Christmas" (which falls twelve days later than our own big Christmas) the soldiers in the Czar's armies will be viewing it in the towns and cities adjacent to the fighting line.

The production, in the custody of an American traveler to Russia, left New York on the Norwegian-America liner Bergensfjord September 18. The circuitous and formerly extremely dangerous route is via Kirkwall, Orkney Island; Bergen and Christiania, Norway; thence around the Gulf of Bothnia by rail to Karungi, and finally the two-day rail journey through Finland into Petrograd. Since the lull in the submarine campaign this route has offered reasonable security to passengers and goods, taking up about fifteen or sixteen days in the trip from New York to Petrograd.

Fast work was done by the National Drama Corporation in providing Russian titles for the story as well as publicity specially suited to the Russian requirements. The war has caused a great interest in things American throughout the land of the White Czar. America as a source of monetary and military supplies looms large. American banking houses are opening branches over there, and most large steel and rail-making firms have established permanent representatives. Closer industrial relation means also an awakening as to transatlantic art and literature. The Russian for the first time is anxious to learn the American angle towards world problems, and works like "The Fall of a Nation" will tell him.

Another production of the Dixon spectacle is booked for early shipment to Australia. Probably the manager in charge of this will be Jordan Dixon, the playwright's son, who has been in charge of the Dixon studios and laboratory at Los Angeles now being used by William Fox. With the Spanish production which opened for a tryout in a Buenos Aires suburban theatre on September 15; the Portuguese production which goes on in Rio de Janeiro about the same time; new productions now preparing for France and Italy, and the fifty prints released by the Greater Vitagraph (V-L-S-E) throughout the United States and Canada, "The Fall of a Nation" will probably have a larger world-circulation than any other serious drama of its time.

The obvious reason for the extraordinary demand is the nature of the subject-matter. "The Fall of a Nation" appeals equally to all nationalities, since the tragedy of national ruin and wreckage is the universal spectre erected by the world war.

"IDLE WIVES" TO FOLLOW "IS ANY GIRL SAFE?"

"Is Any Girl Safe?" closed its engagement at the Maxine Elliott theatre Saturday night. It is followed by another production called "Idle Wives," adapted from the novel of the same name by James Oppenheim.

The picture was produced under the direction of the Smalleys. Lois Weber is the unfortunate wife who has nothing to do, and the husband is played by Phillips Smalley. Mary McLaren also has an important part. The picture is put out by the Anti-Vice Motion Picture Company.

SAN DIEGO EXHIBITOR WEDS

Special to Motion Picture News.

San Diego, Sept. 16.

Grant Austin Bush, manager of the Broadway and Superba theatres, was married recently in Los Angeles to Esther Laurentine Mugan, formerly of Chicago, who has been an associate editor of the Santa Fe Magazine.

FRANK CURRIER ENGAGED BY METRO TO SUPPORT EMILY STEVENS, WAS WITH JULIA MARLOWE

In the cast of Emily Stevens' new Metro-Rolfe production, "The Wager" is Frank Currier, whose wife, Ada Dow Currier, was Julia Marlowe's first dramatic teacher. Mr. Currier was associated with R. E. J. Miles in bringing Miss Marlowe to the attention of the critics and public at a special matinee performance of "Ingomar," and later, when she had proved her worth as a star, organized the company headed by Miss Marlowe, in which Joseph Haworth was her leading man in "Romeo and Juliet," "The Hunchback" and "Twelfth Night."

Mr. Currier began his stage career at the age of ten, as callboy of a Boston theatre.

He has been in motion picture work for three years, appearing in Vitagraph productions for the most part, and was associated with Ralph Ince before joining the Metro forces. In the Rolfe studio he has renewed his acquaintance with Viola Dana, with whom he appeared in "The Poor Little Rich Girl," playing the organ grinder, and with Lyster Chambers, Emily Stevens' leading man in "The Wager," who was a fellow-member of "The Deep Purple" company.

CHICAGO HEADQUARTERS FOR EXPLOITATION OF "CRISIS"

The city of Chicago will probably be the principal headquarters for the exploitation of the Selig film, "The Crisis," written by Winston Churchill. Plans are in the making for an elaborate publicity campaign. It is rumored that "The Crisis" will be booked in the principal cities of the United States after the methods observed in booking the greatest stage attractions, and that special bands and orchestras will accompany each film.

H. A. Sherman, of Minneapolis, who represented a syndicate in the purchase of a half-interest in "The Crisis" for the United States and Canada, will probably open headquarters in Chicago. Michel Mowschine, a Chicago composer, has completed a musical score for the exhibition of "The Crisis."

HERALD GETS RIGHTS TO "THE PRIMA DONNA'S HUSBAND"

The Herald Film Corporation announces the acquisition of "The Prima Donna's Husband," starring Holbrook Blinn, Clara Whipple and Kathryn Browne Decker, produced by the Triumph Film Corporation, under the personal direction of Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden for the entire State of New York and Northern Jersey.

"The Prima Donna's Husband" was shown some time ago to a specially invited audience, including the press of New York. Booking arrangements can be made immediately.

UNIVERSAL EXHIBITORS TO GET WATTERSON, BERLIN AND SNYDER MUSIC FOR THEIR PICTURES

Watterson, Berlin and Snyder, the New York music publishers, located in the Strand Theatre Building, New York City, have consented to provide any exhibitor using Universal films with orchestrations of their popular selections. M. Winkler, who writes the music program for the Universal, is using a number of these in comedy selections, and will set more of them in view of this fact.

Any exhibitor who wants Watterson, Berlin and Snyder music can obtain it by writing to Harry Cohn, of Watterson, Berlin and Snyder, stating whether piano parts, or orchestration parts are wanted and if the latter, what orchestra parts. This is entirely free and due to the arrangement made with the Universal.

HOCKING IS MADE MANAGER OF ALBANY UNICORN EXCHANGE

Lawrence Hocking, better known to the trade as Lonzi, formerly manager of General at Boston and New Haven, has been appointed by Fred Murphy as manager of the Albany Unicorn exchange.

Also Dan B. Leader, president of the exhibitor's league of Maine and formerly manager of the Empire theatre, Portland, has been appointed by Mr. Murphy as Unicorn manager at Bangor for the State of Maine.

Sam Moscow has returned from Syracuse and is in New Hampshire for the Unicorn.

SIEGEL ACQUIRES NORTHERN NEW JERSEY RIGHTS TO "YELLOW MENACE"

S. O. Siegel, general manager of the Brown Film Service Company, located in the Strand Theatre Building, at Newark, N. J., concluded arrangements last week with the Unity Sales Corporation, whereby he acquired for his exchange the exclusive rights to "The Yellow Menace" serial for Northern New Jersey.

Mr. Siegel immediately arranged to have Margaret Gale, the attractive heroine in "The Yellow Menace," come over to Newark on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday of the past week, while the great Elks celebration was in progress, to ride in the parade throughout the city in a big seven-passenger "Yellow Menace" automobile. The car was decorated in bright yellow streamers, and attracted a great deal of attention throughout the city.

LETENDRE LEAVES WORLD TO TAKE CHARGE OF PLAYERS' PERSONAL PUBLICITY

T. E. Letendre, for the past eight months associated with the publicity department of the World Film Corporation, has severed connections with that concern to take charge of the personal publicity of several stars, including Robert Warwick, Mollie King, Emile Chautard and Irving Cummings. He has taken up offices on the third floor of the Heidelberg Building, corner of Broadway and Forty-second street.

A feature of his publicity service will be a weekly news-letter to Sunday newspapers on photoplay conditions in New York. Over one hundred newspapers have already subscribed for this service. Mr. Letendre is also the New York representative of a number of French newspapers.

GILMORE REPORTS BIG BUSINESS

W. J. Gilmore, general manager of the Animated Cartoon Exchange, 1339 Vine street, Philadelphia, which handles the world famed animated comedies of Mutt and Jeff and Hans and Fritz, reports big business in his territory. The Animated Exchange has the exclusive rights to Mutt and Jeff and Hans and Fritz in Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Southern New Jersey, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia.

"THE COMBAT"

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

"THE Combat" conforms to all of the well known rules of a good, acceptable melodrama. It has an intricate well worked out plot, the action is exciting, the interest well sustained, and the suspense well carried out. It depends entirely on the interest created by the plot action rather than upon character development for its success and this is as it should be in an offering of this kind.

The story was by Edward J. Montagne and was produced under the capable direction of Ralph W. Ince, with Anita Stewart in the leading role. The direction was beyond cavil. Mr. Ince has again demonstrated his ability not only to stage a picture in the most effective and picturesque manner but to incorporate unique and unusual features. In order to obtain a purely incidental effect he causes a fast moving railroad train to jump the track and become wrecked in the ditch. It was not so very long ago that a mechanical sensation of this kind was made the outstanding feature of a whole production. Now, however, it is used merely as an incident.

He obtained another good effect by the manner in which he showed the battle of conscience in one of the leading characters. This he achieved by means of triple exposure photography, showing the character, his better and his evil self, the two spiritual entities striving for control of the physical.

His locations were particularly well selected, especially those in the northern part of Canada showing the hero battling for life in the rugged Canadian wilderness. All of these scenes were of great scenic beauty. His interiors were equal to the standard set by his exteriors and the lighting and photography were up to the accepted Vitagraph standard. Taken as a whole it is a mighty well staged picture.

Anita Stewart has gained such a well deserved reputation in her screen work that further comment on her well known ability seems more or less futile. Sufficient to say that in this production she lives up to that reputation in every way, shape and manner. John Robertson plays opposite as Phillip Lewis, the district attorney, and Richard Turner is Graydon Burton, the other man in the triangle. Winthrop Mandell as Herman Slade is acceptable in the heavy role, and Virginia Norden plays a minor part well.

The story develops a tense dramatic situation. Muriel Fleming and Graydon Burton are secretly married previous to his departure for the gold fields to make a fortune. As he is about to return to civilization he is arrested and accused of murder. The train on which he was to depart for the east is wrecked and he is reported killed. At the trial seeing that things are going against him owing to the false testimony of Slade, a renegade lawyer, and one of his partners, he escapes by jumping through the window. Far in the wilderness he eludes pursuit and finally reaches the border.

In the meantime Muriel, reading of his death in the paper, at last accedes to her mother's coercion and marries Philip Lewis, a wealthy lawyer and the district attorney. Her maid steals her former marriage certificate and Slade, who has returned to New York, blackmails her. Burton, who has also returned, by a mere coincidence appears at the meeting between Slade and Muriel. He forces a confession of murder from the former and turns to go when Slade attacks him with a knife. Muriel picks up a gun, kills Slade, and then escapes from the house.

Burton is arrested and keeping silence, is convicted of the murder. Lewis as prosecuting attorney obtaining the conviction. Before the trial, however, he has obtained information enough to force a confession from his wife. Later he is elected Governor and Muriel on the eve of Burton's execution accuses her husband of being his murderer. Then follows the battle of conscience. The better self finally wins, Burton is pardoned, Lewis consents to a quiet divorce and Muriel and Burton enter upon their delayed cycle of love and happiness.

"HER SURRENDER"

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IVAN ABRAMSON in the writing of "Her Surrender" has departed quite radically from the style of production that he has heretofore adhered to. Here Mr. Abramson ventures into the fields of medical science, basing his picture on a theory of his own. He claims in his picture that with the transfusion of blood from one body to another, love can also be transplanted. Scientifically, Mr. Abramson admits that he may be all wrong, but dramatically, he says, such a theory is powerful.

The Momentous Question

In passing we might call Mr. Abramson's attention to the fact that a drama gains its power through the picturization of life—by the setting down of things as they are. The farce is the one sort of play that can be unreal and still entertain. So it might have been to better purpose had Mr. Abramson based his picture on a scientific reality—then there would have been no doubt about the conviction carried by the story.

In approaching this original point in his story the author builds a drama throughout the duration of four reels which manages to hold the interest in a mild sort of way, despite the insertion of various scenes that have no direct bearing on the picture proper. At this point he introduces the blood transfusion episode. A girl has been wounded and a poor boy steps to the fore and offers some of his blood to save her life. The operation is successful but afterwards the girl discovers that she has no more love for her affianced husband. The blood of the poor boy running in her veins, she cannot help but loving him and so the picture ends, rather unhappily for the majority of the parties concerned.

As for the fabric as a whole and apart from the manufactured science of Mr. Abramson, it measures up rather poorly alongside of the same author's former works. We have a sneaking feeling that a much better vehicle could have been created for the introduction of the love transfusion affair, and there are some inconsistencies in the direction that Mr. Abramson would not be expected to make.

Another all-star cast was assembled to enact the principal roles in the picture. Anna Nilsson as the girl, Wilmuth Merkyl as her jilted fiance, and Harry Spingler as the boy she finally loves do creditable work. In addition there are Rose Coghlan, William H. Tooker and Frankie Mann, each exceedingly good in roles of importance.

"THE DAUGHTER OF MACGREGOR"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

"THE Daughters of MacGregor," has two stars, Valentine Grant and her dog "Lady," and it is hard to say which makes the most favorable impression, Miss Grant with her "chic," "piquante" attractiveness and her winning attractive personality, or "Lady" with her astute canine cleverness. The winsome magnetism of Miss Grant is made apparent at the very beginning of the picture and holds true to form all the way through. She pleases by the very naturalness of her being.

Besides being the star she is also responsible for the story, which by the way is a very clever piece of character drawing. Slight as to plot, it sets forth in simple narrative form the incidents in the life of a young Scotch lassie. Much of the early part of the picture is taken up with the necessary introductory details establishing the identity, characteristics and psychology of the principal characters. When Donald MacGregor decides to take unto himself a second wife his daughter Jean decides that she cannot longer live at home. Her departure is hastened by some slanderous scandal spread by her future mother-in-law. Running away accompanied by "Lady" she meets with an itinerant showman and his wife and works for them until she has accumulated money enough to go to her uncle in America. He is the foreman in charge of a gang of lumber men in the yellow pine forests of Florida, and Jean is the means of discovering and helping to break up a gang of lumber pirates.

Winston, a wealthy young Englishman, who was the innocent cause of the scandal clouding Jean's name, arrives in the camp on an inspection trip for his father and the love story commenced in Scotland reaches its conclusion midst the pines of Florida.

Too much praise cannot be given Sidney Olcott for the manner in which he has staged this picture. He has made realism and humanism the keynotes of the production. The picture is replete with those subtle appealing little incidents that serve the purpose of making a picture different, of causing it to stand out in contrast with the general run of motion picture plays. Many of these little touches he has achieved with Miss Grant in company with her dog. "Lady" is not only a mighty fine intelligent dog but a clever actress as well.

Sidney Mason pleased greatly as Winston; Arda La Croix did a fine bit of character work as Donald MacGregor; Helen Lindreth did equally as well as Miss McGrim, the trouble causing mother-in-law; Edward Davis was strong, forceful and brutal as Robert MacPherson, the boss of the lumber camp, and Daniel Pennell pleased as Bull Grogan. The lighting and photography were up to the usual high standard of the Famous Players Company with some especially good scenic effects.

This picture has a direct appeal and for that reason if for no other will undoubtedly please any audience, irrespective of its race, color or condition of servitude. It is a picture which, if properly advertised, will fill a theatre and send the audience away pleased and enthusiastic.

"WANTED—A HOME"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE Smalleys contribute the Bluebird feature of the week and again their star is Mary MacLaren, this time in a story written for her by Lois Weber. It sets forth the adventures of a friendless girl who is obliged to resort to deception to gain herself a home. However, she comes through with flying colors because after hearing her sad story a young doctor decides that it will be just as well for her to become Mrs. M. D. and gain a home for life.

The End of Mary's Stay in Gorman's Home

The adventures of the young lady smack of a certain suspense that would probably be stronger were they compressed to a greater extent and also if Miss MacLaren had put more animation and variety in her performance. In "Shoes" she was aptly cast and her slow expressionless performance went very well with the character of the picture, but here she has a role that might have been materially enhanced by a little show of versatility. But instead she plays the whole picture in a tone that is somewhat too monotonously slow for complete enjoyment. We are quite sure that no real person, no matter how depressed, goes about in such a forlorn state of mind as Miss MacLaren would have us believe.

The Smalleys' production is as usual of the best sort. The settings are all appropriate, the atmosphere in the various phases of the picture is realistic and the scenes handled with care. The lighting and photography are praiseworthy.

The cast assembled to support Miss MacLaren includes, Nanine Wright, Grace Johnson, Marian Sigler, Charles Marriott, Jack Mulhall, Dana Ong, Ernie Shields and "Kewpie" Morgan.

Three Scenes from Famous Players', "Reward of Patience," Featuring Louise Hoff

"THE REWARD OF PATIENCE"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Reward of Patience" makes an exceedingly attractive photoplay, mainly because of the charming personality of Louise Huff in the role of Patience, a little Quaker girl. The story, which was prepared specially for the star, is the work of Shannon Fife. It is a simple "eternal triangle" plot without much elaboration—but in its simplicity lies its chief charm. Robert Vignola has given the story an appropriate and picturesque setting and it is gratifying to note that he has not overdone those scenes laid in the Quaker village.

The picture contains many delightful little comedy touches, one that kept a Strand audience in convulsions for a full minute. It came when Patience in her Sunday school class requested a pupil to tell her who led the Israelites into Canaan. And the youngster answers, "Please ma'am, it wasn't me. I just moved here from Iowa last week." If such innocent humor is appreciated so much on the screen, it is a wonder that more of it is not utilized. In addition there is the usual baby and his bath administered by the star, which incident always seems to be greeted by the happiest of smiles.

After a chain of light and interesting scenes, Patience is disclosed as serving in the capacity of private secretary in the home of the man she loves. He is married to a society girl, who becomes bored when her husband devotes so much time to his business. The wife elopes with an admirer, the yacht is wrecked and both are drowned, and so Patience at last receives the love of the man she has always so greatly admired.

Miss Huff makes an appealing character of Patience. John Bowers is an adequate hero and Lottie Pickford a good heavy. Others are Kate Lester, Gertrude Norman and Adolph Menjou.

"THE SCARLET RUNNER"

(Episodes Five, Six and Seven—Vitagraph—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THE fifth episode of this new automobile series is called "The Jacobean House," and as to plot and the manner in which it is worked out, is well up to the standard of the previous episodes. A speeding up of the action would not detract in any way from the attractiveness of these pictures. There are times when they drag considerably but this is more than compensated for in the well known popularity of the star.

Christopher Race is summoned to discover the cause of a series of mysterious robberies that are occurring in a large old-fashioned house used as a private hotel. He discovers a secret passage way between the first and second floors and after permitting himself to be robbed waits in this passage to discover the thieves. He captures them as they are hiding their loot in a large chest and forces a confession, thereby gaining great praise for his detective ability.

The sixth episode is called "The Mysterious Motor Car," and deals with another slight incident furnishing Race with an opportunity to display his detective ability. A motor car is found in the ocean by a group of fishermen. Race and a policeman believe that it points to either suicide or murder. At the police station they learn that it is the same car that was abandoned on a lonely road only a few days before. Race is commissioned by a newspaper to solve the mystery. He finds the owner of the car but he escapes to London and Race follows. Later it develops that the whole affair was only a love spat between the mysterious man and his fiancee, the former hoping that the semblance of an accident would bring her back to him. Race disgusted with his detective ability, decides to devote all of his future efforts to the Scarlet Runner only.

In the seventh episode called "The Red Whiskered Man," he is commissioned by a wealthy man to aid in bringing a valuable diamond from the jeweler. There are supposed to be three packages, one in the possession of Jacobs, the faithful servant of the merchant, the other in the possession of the wealthy man's nephew and the third in the possession of the latter's fiancee. By a series of incidents a celebrated diamond thief takes the place of Jacobs the servant. By a trick the nephew and his fiancee are held up by the thief's accomplices while Race escapes. When all the characters are finally brought together again it develops that there were four packages instead of three and that Race carried the fourth one in which reposed the stone.

These three episodes have been staged in the same effective manner that characterized the first four and while the action is not so rapid they have been handled in such an artistic and finished manner that this fault is not noticed to any great extent. Earle Willaims in the leading role scores as usual and it is his attractive personality that will do much toward making this series a success. The lighting and photography were up to the usual standard.

Those constituting the supporting companies were Zena Keefe, Walter McGrail, Josephine Earle, Harold Forshay, Raymond Walburn, Bettie Howe, Nellie Anderson, Arthur Robinson, Billie Billings, Thomas R. Mills, and Alexander Kyle.

"THE CHATTEL"

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

BREVITY is one of the most valuable essentials in the art of fiction writing and it is also one of the most valuable in the art of picture making, although few producers seem to realize the fact. The Vitagraph company has realized this fact in "The Chattel," so since the private showing given a while ago they have reduced its footage from something over six thousand feet to something under five thousand. To say that the picture profits by the condensation would be putting the case mildly.

"The Chattel" in its abbreviated form takes on a certain life that it did not possess when burdened with so much excess footage. Perhaps the main change effected is the cutting out of many scenes which before followed the climax. In the original production these scenes were tiresomely drawn out whereas now they are enjoyable. The fire scene which, it will be remembered, was introduced to unite the husband and wife and which fell quite flat, has also been benefited by cutting.

As a result of the revamping given the picture, E. H. Sothern's first screen appearance may be heralded with more enthusiasm. We mentioned in the previous review that his name was undoubtedly a box office asset. But the exhibitor knows that getting his patrons inside his house is not the only consideration. It's getting them out again without endangering his own life and getting them back the next time that counts some. In its present state "The Chattel" will send patrons away satisfied that they have been entertained, which if our judgment is worth anything, they would not have been when that other reel was scattered throughout the production in minor lengths.

"THE PILLORY"

(Thanhouser-Pathe—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

AN average picture is "The Pillory," carrying a certain amount of appeal and pointing a moral which adds considerably to the strength of the piece. Its nature can best be learned by the telling of the story, so here it is.

In a small country town there lives a nameless girl who is cared for by her aunt who treats her harshly, condemning her for the sin of her mother. With her aunt's death she is driven from home by the housekeeper, a straight-laced, hatchet-faced woman whose business is spoiling the pleasure of others. The girl gets in bad company in the city and is the victim of a frame-up which brings her to court. Her accuser, the real guilty lady, breaks down when questioned by the judge's wife and confesses the other's innocence. The judge's wife learns that the girl is her own daughter and adopts her. With the announcement of her engagement, the hatchet-faced one from the country comes to town and tells the judge and all his guests the real truth about his wife and her illegitimate daughter. A separation comes and mother and child go into the slums to work for the poor. The judge refuses to forgive his wife until he learns that she has been mortally wounded by a stray shot. The daughter marries and goes on doing settlement work.

The Girl Takes the Stand in Her Own Defense

The moral of the story is brought out quite clearly and is enforced by a number of subtitles that quote the Bible. It is plainly, "Don't judge people by what they have done, but by what they are doing." This might be said in a manner more delicate but the facts of the case are there.

The production was in charge of Frederic Sullivan, who has done a job betwixt and between. Mr. Sullivan can handle scenes in which a few principals appear to good effect, but when it comes to a bigger bit where a number of supernumeraries take active part he is inclined to wax unrealistic, mainly because he has all his people register the same emotion or act in unison. A more careful consideration of these scenes and his pictures would be better rounded.

Florence La Badie is the star of "The Pillory" and her support consists of Marie Shotwell as the mother, George Marlo as her fiance, Marie Haynes as the hatchet-faced one, and Nellie Parker Spaulding, Ethyle Cooke, Yale Benner and James Seeley.

"THE GIRL FROM 'FRISCO"

(Kalem-General Film—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THE eighth episode in this well conceived series of a modern western girl is called the "Battle in the Dark," and is well up to the quality that has characterized the series from the beginning. The picture contains some unusually good night photography showing the destruction of a large ranch house by fire. The action throughout is exciting, reaching a climax in a stirring fight between the ranch owners and a band of Hindoo laborers. To add to the excitement and suspense the fight takes place in the burning building and the defenders are not only menaced by the bloodthirsty crowd of fanatics without, but by the falling timbers from the burning house above.

Madge Merrilies, the daughter of a wealthy ranch owner, comes to Barbara Brent in great trouble, saying that a Hindoo, named Madah Singh, has acquired a mysterious control over her father, and is gradually obtaining his whole fortune. Barbara decides to spend a few days at the ranch to see what she can accomplish.

She soon discovers that the Hindoo has a beautiful young girl imprisoned in the house with whom he is deluding the ranch owner relative to his mysterious powers of communicating with the spirit world. Barbara discovers the means by which the hoax is worked and effects the release of the young girl, acquiring at the same time the money box containing all of the money which the alleged mystic has been able to obtain from the ranch owner.

Madah Singh soon discovers the loss and invading Barbara's rooms makes off with both the girl and the money. In the struggle he throws the lamp on the bed, setting fire to the place. He escapes in an automobile pursued by Barbara on horseback.

During all of this excitement Gungha, the leader of the Hindoo laborers, has been trying to knife Madah Singh. As the latter escapes in the automobile Gungha secrets himself on the extra tire on the rear of the car and at a lonely spot in the road climbs over and kills his enemy. As a result the car is ditched.

Previous to entering the house Gungha has instructed his band that if he does not return in fifteen minutes that they are to attack. John Wallace and Barbara's father arrive just before this attack and prove valiant defenders. At the crucial moment, just as they are about to be overcome by both the fire and the invaders, the cowboys from Wallace's ranch rush in to the rescue. The Hindoos are beaten off and the defenders are viewing the smoking ruins of the ranch house from a distance when Barbara rides up with news of Madah Singh's death and returns the stolen money.

Marin Sais and True Boardman in the leading roles are pleasing, the latter proving beyond cavil that he knows how to handle his fists. He is a protean fighter in this picture. Others in the cast were Frank Jonasson, Ronald Bradbury, whose characterization of Madah Singh could have been greatly improved upon; Karl Formes, Jr., Josephine West, Gypsy Santoris and Edward Clisbee. The direction, lighting and photography were up to the standard that has characterized the whole series.

"THE INTRIGUE"

(Pallas-Paramount—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

LENORE ULRICH is featured in this exciting story of European intrigue written by Julia Crawford Ivers and staged under the direction of Frank Lloyd, and it is needless to say that she is thoroughly pleasing. She is wasted, however, in a picture of this type as it provides her with little or no opportunity to act, the interest being centered in the unweaving of the plot rather than the people who are interpreting the various parts.

The Victory

The story is interesting and exciting in parts, in other parts an attempt has been made to achieve that subtle human touch but without any great measure of success. Guy Longstreet, a Young American inventor, devises a new gun whereby he can control wireless emanations of electricity. He tries to sell it to his own government but it refuses to consider it. He then goes to Europe and interests one of the warring powers. The Baron Rogniat is commissioned to come to this country to investigate, with power to purchase. The president of one of the other warring nations commissions the Countess Sonia Varnli to prevent the sale.

The Countess causes her maid to impersonate her while she comes over in the steerage. By a set of incidents she attracts the attention of both Longstreet and the Baron, the latter offering a place in his household as a maid. In this manner she is able to learn all of the details of the manner in which the sale is progressing. The Baron determines to cheat Longstreet not only out of his money but to take his life as soon as the secret of the gun is discovered. Sonia warns him and they are able to circumvent the Baron and his minions. During the course of their acquaintance, romance has been getting in its deadly work and this last adventure serves the purpose of disclosing their mutual love.

Frank Lloyd has staged the picture in a most capable and efficient manner with due attention paid to the demands of realistic detail. In most cases he has kept the action moving at a lively tempo and has kept the interest well sustained.

Cecil Van Auker handled the part of the young American inventor in an able and convincing manner, while Howard Davies made a most favorable impression as the Baron Rogniat. Others in the cast were Herbert Standing, Florence Vider, and Paul Weigel. The photography was most excellent with several scenes of especially meritorious work and the lighting was in every case acceptable.

Exhibitors will make no mistake in booking this attraction. It has a star who can be widely advertised playing in an attraction that will hold the interest of the audience and send it out of the theatre pleased with that which it has seen.

"THE DARK SILENCE"

(Peerless-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

KEEN admiration must be expressed for the manner in which Paul West has developed and treated this story. It starts off in a familiar stereotyped manner and so continues for about three reels. Then suddenly it changes and becomes transmogrified from the ordinary into the unique and original. This is indeed admirable work and as such deserves commendation.

Love Interrupts Painting

The story opens in the Latin Quartier of Paris and discloses Mildred Snow, an attractive young art student, being rescued from a burglar by Dr. Martinez, a celebrated eye specialist. Later he introduces his friend Derwent Ainsworth, a titled young Englishman, studying sculpture. Mildred and Derwent fall rapidly in love and the day is set for their marriage.

Then Derwent receives word from his sister Sibil that his father is dying, and leaving a note for Mildred with his friend Martinez, hurries home. Martinez, madly in love with Mildred, withholds the note and intercepts her mail, so that she is led to believe by the wily Spaniard that her lover is faithless. Too unhappy to care what becomes of her, Mildred agrees to go away with Martinez.

At this period Derwent returns and hearing that his sweetheart has deserted him, joins the army, after effectually beating up Martinez. Mildred returning from the railroad station, finds out the truth and joins the Red Cross. Several battle scenes are shown and then the inevitable happens. Derwent is wounded in action and loses his sight. Mildred under an assumed name nurses him back to health. The visit of his sister Sibil shows the foolishness of her former suspicions. Then Derwent insists on taking his nurse, with whom he has fallen in love, home to England with him. Shortly they are married, Mildred maintaining her silence and being married under a false name.

Now comes the unusual part, the redeeming thread of originality. Dr. Martinez has achieved great success in restoring the sight of soldiers blinded in action and Sibil appeals to him to save her brother. This he consents to do as an atonement. Mildred is torn with a great struggle fearing that if her husband discovers her identity he will turn from her. Still she urges Martinez to go ahead and restore his sight if possible. This he is able to accomplish. He then confesses to Derwent and the accepted reconciliation follows.

Clara Kimball Young in the leading role pleased as usual. For an accomplished actress of her calibre the work she was called upon to do was not of the character to tax her energies. She was pleasing at all times and rose to the emotional climaxes with a spontaneity and realism that was most effective. The two male roles were handled by Edward T. Langford and Paul Capellani, the first as the young hero, and the other as the villain. Capellani was also the director of the production, and it is unfortunate that he is not as good an actor as he is a director. Much of his work as an actor he would not accept as a director, were some one else playing the part.

Nothing but praise can be vouchsafed for the manner in which he staged and produced the picture. He made realism the keynote of his settings and locations and in addition displayed his artistic judgment to great advantage. His detailing was good and he also managed to get the best that was in his cast registered on the screen. Others in the cast were Jessie Lewis, as Fifine, a model, and Barbara Gilroy as Sibil, both of whom handled minor parts well. The photography and lighting were up to the average. Taken as a whole it is a human appealing story well staged and acted, a picture that should prove successful both from a box office and artistic standpoint.

"INHERITED PASSIONS"

(Hamilton—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"INHERITED Passions" was produced by Gilbert P. Hamilton with Dorothea (once Dot) Farley in the role of principal importance. Mr. Hamilton's productions will be remembered as being one of the chief mainstays of the old Warners' Features program, and if one goes further back he will find his name down as producer for Biograph, Essanay and other companies.

"Inherited Passions" was made for the masses and in another period not so long ago it might have been labeled "The Curse of Drink." Miss Farley herself prepared the scenario from a newspaper story by Jack Wolf. The story sticks close to detail and outlines with sensational realism the life of a girl who inherited her father's passion for liquor as well as his terrible brutality. That element in the father's makeup is impressed upon the spectator several times, the two most furious being when he beats his wife into such a pulp that she dies shortly afterwards and again when he maltreats his daughter into a state of unconsciousness.

The life of Masie, the daughter of the drunkard, is not happy and therefore Mr. Hamilton has introduced few humorous or light touches throughout the picture's duration. He has some very fine western scenes incorporated in the picture which act as the only relief from the tragedy of the girl's life. Plunging into the middle of it we find her as a cabaret dancer who has met a cowpuncher. The cowpuncher wants her to be his wife and she agrees. Out west, however, she soon tires of the sameness of her existence and during the roundup she deserts him. Repenting her action when she gets half way to the city, she writes asking him to forgive her. He never receives the letter as it is lost in the mails.

Back in the city she takes the easiest way out of all her troubles and lives illegally with a wealthy society man. On learning of his marriage she makes public his true character. Later she goes back to the cabaret as scrub woman and here her husband finds her, taking her again to the west, where she dies.

Miss Farley in the role of Masie gets in some excellent acting, although when it comes to looking pretty it must be confessed she can not rank with the average motion picture actress. William Conklin plays her father while others in the cast are Mrs. Farley, Beatrice Van and Frank Newburg.

Mr. Hamilton's direction is adequate in proportion to the material he worked with. In the matter of detail his work is excellent. The settings are fair and the camera work good. Distinctly for the masses, "Inherited Passions" would create an even stronger impression providing some of the footage were eliminated. As a five-reeler we would have no hesitation in recommending it as excellent entertainment for the class of people for which it was produced.

"THE RETURN OF 'DRAW' EAGAN"

(Triangle-Ince—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Return of 'Draw' Eagan" is the return of William S. Hart to the picture of all the wild and woolly west. Again he is the bad man who turns good because of a girl, again does he prove his prowess with his fists and his two six shooters. In fact the picture sets Mr. Hart off to his best advantage and Mr. Hart rises to meet every situation offered him with the fascinating ease for which he is famous.

Though it is a Western and though it contains some situations of familiar character, the story by C. Gardner Sullivan is original as a whole, while the treatment accorded it by author and director is of the best sort. In the story there is plenty of suspense and plenty of thrills and the production sets forth some realistic pictures of western life in the rough. Next to "The Patriot" it is the best thing Mr. Hart has done in a long time.

Eagan at Yellow Dog

"Draw" Eagan is a bandit with a price on his head and when the picture opens he is obliged to disperse his band and hide for a time. When he shows himself again it is in Muscatine. Here he displays such fearlessness in resisting the town terror, that he attracts the attention of the leading citizen of Yellow Dog, a neighboring settlement. The citizen requests that he come to Yellow Dog and act as town marshal, and subdue some of the more rambunctious inhabitants of the place.

Eagan consents and quickly brings the town of Yellow Dog to order. Then there is his romance with the daughter of the leading citizen, his realization that his past life makes him unworthy of her. Then there reappears on the horizon Arizona Joe, a member of his old band. Joe by threatening to tell of Eagan's past, has the run of the town until the leading citizen complains. At last Eagan decides to face the music and give up the girl. Joe tells of his past and is promptly sent to his hereafter by the marshal. The girl is heartbroken, but even her hero's past is not sufficient to eclipse her love for him and so they live happily ever after.

Opposite Mr. Hart appears Margery Wilson. Miss Wilson and her brown eyes reform the bad man and it's no wonder—with one look she could convert the worst of them all. She it was who appeared as Brown Eyes in "Intolerance" and we hope she will appear many times again. Robert McKim is again the villain as Arizona Joe, Louise Glaum has her familiar role of a dance hall girl, while J. P. Lockney is the leading citizen.

"MANHATTAN MADNESS"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS in another winner. Which short statement ought to suffice for a review of "Manhattan Madness." In fact it is, but merely because such a small collection of words might be lost in the shuffle it remains for more to be written.

We can tell you that Douglas Fairbanks has the sunniest and most contagious personality that ever flickered across the screen, that as an all-around athlete Douglas Fairbanks puts Jim Thorpe way back stage, that Douglas Fairbanks is the best actor of the silent drama, that the Fine Arts producers know just how to present Douglas Fairbanks to the public; but then we can also tell you that water is usually wet, that babies aren't given a diet of absinthe, that the picture business is beyond its infancy, and a lot of other things that you know as well as we do. The thing is that Douglas Fairbanks in "Manhattan Madness" is a winner, as we remarked before.

In the Mysterious House

This time the star appears as a westerner with a college education, who pooh poohs New York because it is slow. His friends after hearing their great and more or less honorable city belittled by the speech of the westerner, fix up a little surprise for him. But you are not told it's a frame-up at all until the end—that's where the suspense comes in. All you know is that Douglas has a fast and furious time in a house with a supposedly Russian agent, his colleagues and the girl he holds in his power. After Douglas learns he has been tricked he walks off with the girl and turns the laugh on his friends.

For the feminine side of the picture there is Jewell Carmen and a prettier and more attractive young lady would be hard to find. For the rest, and the rest have little to do, nothing but the best can be said.

"WHERE LOVE LEADS"

(Fox—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY E. DRAW

IT does seem a great pity that so much money is still wasted in producing a scenario which has not the slightest merit, is unconvincing and utterly devoid of all interest and story. No director can hope to make a good picture without a really strong story.

The first reel portrays scenes in a club dressing room, college

The Fight on the Staircase

dormitory and the annual contest between the rival college teams, all of which are well done. The remainder of the production is then taken up with sensational flights, desperate encounters, flights over roofs, chases down fire escapes, police rescues, and the raid of a white slave establishment.

In this "storyless" production Ormi Hawley is the redeeming feature. Her performance as the young girl is admirable, and again seventeen years later, as a mature woman she again does justice to her role.

The supporting cast, which includes Rockliffe Fellowes, Royal Byron, Charles Craig and Dorothy Rogers is quite capable.

Marion Barstow is influenced by her parents to marry Sir Rankin Chatsworth, although she is in love with a younger man. Seventeen years later Marion has been neglected by Sir Rankin, who had tired of her soon after the honeymoon. Her only consolation is her daughters, Kathleen and Rose. Marion's mother has written, begging her to send the girls to America. Unfortunately Marion makes the sad mistake of entrusting her two daughters to Camille, a white slave agent. Camille cables to a confederate to prevent the grandparents from meeting the steamer on its arrival.

The girls, however, are rescued by Richard Warren a newspaperman who had been Marion's sweetheart before she was forced to marry the nobleman. The former lovers are united and all ends well.

"THE WINNING PUNCH"

(Triangle-Keystone—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ONCE again does Keystone come into its own with a whirlwind of new gags and trick effects, that places "The Winning Punch" in the winning class. The main feature of the picture is a burlesque boxing bout, quite the cleverest and most humorous bit of work we have seen in a long time. The cameraman has done his best here too and his manipulation of the crank has certainly resulted in a series of uproariously funny scenes.

Outside of the fight the picture is just as worthy. The producers have concocted what appears to be a new Ford joke, when a fat man is kicked out of a bar, collides with the car and sends it whirling across to the other side of the street. And of course there is the usual amount of incidental funny business perpetrated in the course of the action that in the present instance is quite original.

Slim Summerville as the champion boxer gets many laughs due to his elongated physique and his inborn sense of humor. Bobby Dunn, as his opponent, is a little fellow who we remember having seen in extra parts not long ago and who does exceptional work in this prominent role. Peggy Pearce is the girl and Jerry Linder and Billy Hauber appear in other parts.

"HIS LYING HEART"

(Triangle-Keystone—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THERE are no tricks of acting or production in this two-reel number starring Ford Sterling, and its laughs for the most part will be caused by the subtitles which are written in a fairly good humorous style. Neither Sterling nor other members of the cast do anything remarkable in the way of comedy acting, while the story offers few situations of the sure-fire variety.

The plot concerns a dream indulged in by a husband who has neglected his wife to pay court to a manicurist. In the dream he marries her and straightway she fills his home up with barbers and other manicurists and he himself gets little opportunity to see her. Waking finally, he decides to make up with his spouse and all ends well.

Glimpses of the Forthcoming Fox Feature, "Where Love Leads," With Ormi Hawley Leading the Cast

Sterling and Charles Avery directed and others in the cast are Vivian Edwards, Louella Maxam, Joey Jacobs and Joseph Singleton.

"BLIND JUSTICE"

(Dansk Biograf Company—Seven Parts)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

AT the Strand theatre on Thursday morning a representative audience was present at the private showing of "Blind Justice," of which Benjamin Christie was the author, producer and leading man, and saw a masterpiece of foreign make. For an hour and a half they sat as if spellbound as the film unwound, and at the end were most generous with their applause. And the film well deserved it.

Superb photography, masterly acting on the part of the principals, an exceedingly interesting plot with many tense situations,

"I Insist on Giving the Keys to the Doctor in Person"

all helped not a little. But what impressed one most was the attention paid to the minutest detail, whether in interiors or exteriors, that some American producers would do well to emulate. To bear out the title the story deals with the present day tendency to convict and punish on purely circumstantial evidence.

Strong John, though innocent, is convicted and sent to prison for murder. He escapes and in seeking a haven for his baby boy in the home of a wealthy family is discovered and recaptured. Swearing vengeance on the daughter of the house, he is led away. She is also the victim of circumstantial evidence, being really in sympathy with Strong John. She was in the act of bringing food for his baby when discovered, and by threats made to show his hiding place.

Fourteen years later Strong John is released for good behavior, a wreck of his former self and his mind a blank. Picturing his child as he left him, his first thought is a toy for the baby, and at the first toy store he buys a teddy bear.

At the orphan home where the child had been taken by the authorities on his imprisonment, he learns that the infant had been adopted by a veiled woman soon after its arrival there. The shock brings back to him his oath of vengeance.

He makes elaborate plans to carry out his revenge. He does not know that his proposed victim is the adopter of his child, only that she has since married a doctor and is living near by. By a telephone message he lures the husband doctor to a lonely hamlet, and overpowering him he ties him to a chair. In his hurried departure he has forgotten the keys to his medicine case and his wife sends the adopted son after him with the keys.

Arriving at the hamlet the son demands that he see the doctor to deliver the keys in person, and is soon a prisoner also, locked in a closet, while Strong John goes on his mission of vengeance.

With the aid of a pocket knife the son cuts a hole in the closet and under the direction of the bound man in the chair and with the aid of a cane, pulls the telephone from the table and holds it close to his foster-father's mouth, so the latter can call for help and direct the police. The police arrive at the mansion in the nick of time and shoot Strong John just as he is strangling his victim. Before he dies he learns that his son is in good hands and also that the perpetrator of the crime for which he had been imprisoned has confessed, exonerating him. Everything is cleared up and he passes away happy at last.

Benjamin Christie, director general of the Dansk Biograf Company of Copenhagen, Denmark, is to be congratulated, and special commendation might be given Martha Sanger for her rendition of Ann, the girl in the story.

VALKYRIEN IS TO HAVE HER OWN PRODUCING COMPANY, FOR PICTURES BASED ON MYTHOLOGICAL SUBJECTS

VALKYRIEN, the Danish star, is to have her own producing company under the title of Valkyrien Films, Inc. "Diana," a classic feature photoplay in multi-color effect, in which Valkyrien made her initial star debut on the American screen, was instrumental in interesting capital on behalf of the youthful titled star. She has been starred in eight such features during this her first year on the American screen. Her proposed producing company will be devoted exclusively to classic feature plays based on the episodes of Greek, Roman and Scandinavian mythology. Valkyrien's first offering on her own program will be a seven-reel classic entitled "Venus," the scenario of which is already finished.

The youthful star has already secured a staff of producing specialists. Memo Misu, the Roumanian director, producer of "The Miracle," "Phantome," "Titanic" and "David and Saul," has been secured to direct Valkyrien, while her husband, the Baron Dewitz, the screen connoisseur, will be regisseur and in charge of costumes, settings and staging. Two European cameramen have been engaged, and a scenic painter will take charge of the embellishing of the classic interiors.

The new organization will have no studio whatever as all classic action takes place in the open.

MAJESTIC THEATRE, BOISE, IDAHO, IS SOLD TO BROWN, SEATTLE

AN important deal in Boise, Idaho, theatrical circles was negotiated Sept. 6, when the Yates estate sold the Majestic theatre to H. J. Brown of Seattle and Spokane. The Majestic theatre is one of the largest in the city, having a seating capacity of 900 and all modern theatre equipments. Mr. Brown has had much experiance in pictures, having booked some of the first films made, in this country and in England.

Of late he has been an exhibitor in Seattle and Spokane, having put the Hippodrome of the latter city on a paying basis. L. R. Love, the retiring manager, has had charge of the Majestic for the past two years and the house has prospered under his management. There will be no change in policy at present, Fox, World, Pathe and V-L-S-E productions continuing to be shown.

Tabloid Reviews for the Busy Exhibitor

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Rival Artists." (Kalem. Fri., Sept. 29.)—Frank Howard Clark is the author of this single-reel Ivy Close comedy which has several amusing situations depending largely on the contrasts in temperament between an artist and a house painter. Ivy Close pleases as usual and the comedy element is in the capable hands of Henry Murdoch. Others in the cast are Arthur Albertson, Robert Ellis and William McKey. The photography and lighting are up to standard.

"Battle in the Dark." (Eighth Episode in "The Girl from 'Frisco" series. Kalem. Wed., Sept. 27.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Bumping the Bumps." (Kalem. Tues., Sept. 26.)—Ham and Bud pursue their amusing adventures in this single-reel comedy, this time as rivals for the affections of the same young girl. Bud is successful, but Ham, nothing daunted, procures the outfit of a phrenologist and when Bud's prospective father-in-law insists that he have his bumps read before he will give his consent, Ham is right on the job, and has Bud sent away to an insane asylum. The unexpected return of the phrenologist straightens things out and Ham is sent away in disgrace while Bud reclines in the arms of the fair young lady.

"The Death Swing." (Kalem. Sat., Sept. 30.)—Another one of the daring exploits of Helen Gibson supplies the sensation in this single-reel offering of the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series. This time in order to catch a runaway freight train she hangs suspended from a rope over the track and as the train passes beneath drops down to the roof of a freight car. The train is stopped just in the nick of time to avert a head-on collission. The picture has been produced under the capable direction of James Davis.

"The Honey Moon Car." (Vim. Wed., Sept. 20.)—Rosemary Theby and Harry Myers are effective in this single reel comedy dealing with a pair of newlyweds who are forced to take a chaperon with them on their outomobile wedding tour. Several amusing incidents happen on the road in which the chaperon is made to play the goat.

Artistic Atmosphere. (Vim. Sept. 27.)—The most effective bit in this single reel offering, featuring Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby, is a baby that can be made to laugh or cry at will. The picture has been well staged with some effective settings and clear distinct photography. The comedy situations are brought about by a young wife who believes that it is necessary to instill an artistic atmosphere in the home, but when this self same atmosphere is responsible for her husband losing his position, he goes to an orphan asylum and adopts a baby, saying that she can devote her artistic energies to the cultivation of the baby's voice.

INTERNATIONAL

"Beatrice Fairfax." — (International 7th Chapter.) "A Name for a Baby."—This Episode is not a strong story, neither does it contain the rapid action so noticeable in the previous chapters. It has interest, however, and wil no doubt satisfy a female audience as it deals with the unforunate girl who has fallen by the wayside burdened with a child whose father is about to marry another woman.

The theme has been treated both delicately and artistically. The situations are cleverly worked up and had a stronger story been written this would have been a really good chapter. The settings and photography are excellent, so too is the interpretation rendered by Harry Fox and Grace Darling.

Possibly this will get by, but more attention should certainly be paid to the building up of stronger stories.

Hearst-International News Pictorial, No. 73. (Tues., Sept. 12.)—Citizen sailors of Boston, Mass.; manoeuvers of Utah Battery, Nogales, Ariz.; Hughes in New England towns; new life preserver tested, Chicago, Ill.; track meet, Newark, N. J.; fashions; baseball game, New York, between Giants and Yanks; President Wilson says good-by to prominent Washington people leaving on vacations, Washington, D. C.; scenes from Salonika, Greece; sailors killed on wrecked cruiser Memphis brought to National Capital for burial.

Hearst-International News Pictorial, No. 74. (Fri., Sept. 15.)—$50,000 fire, South Boston, Mass.; Missouri National Guard on border; Hughes at Lewiston, Me.; fashions; football training at Harvard and University of California; views from Salonika, Greece; outdoor opera, San Francisco, Cal.; locomotive smash-up for entertainment of crowd, San Diego, Cal.; scenes in connection with New York City's traction strike.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

Tangled Hearts. (Centaur. Sat., Sept. 16.)—An exceptionally strong story which has been well directed and acted. The situations are well worked out, the photography is excellent and it is a picture which will please any audience.

Margaret Gilbert, who is about to elope with the son of a millionaire is expelled from school. Nan her elder sister tries in vain to make the young girl mend her ways but without avail. Al does not wish to follow in his father's footsteps and become a lawyer, so in anger one day his father informs him that unless he resumes the study of the law he must not expect any further support from home.

Disregarding his father's wish, Al secures a job as a chauffeur in the house of William, Nan's fiancé, who is about to spend a week-end at his sweetheart's house. Here Al again makes love to Margaret but is detected by William and dismissed. Margaret confesses to William that Al is her husband, and with pity for the girl William takes her in his arms. Nan seeing this seeming affectionate pose is distressed, but all troubles are eventually smoothed away by William.

The cast includes Margaret Gibson, William Clifford, Alva Blake, Nan Christy.

Doctoring a Leak. (Vogue. Sun., Sept. 17.)—This is one of the best comedies seen for some time. It has everything to commend it and Ben Turpin is exceptionally good.

Ben who has come to mend Dr. Kripples broken pipe wastes his time making love to the maid. He goes downstairs to turn the water off. A few minutes later another plumber arrives and thinking that the water is turned on proceeds to turn it off though in reality he is turning it on again. Instead of getting on with their work Ben and Rube pose as the doctor, finally the real plumber arrives and opening a sewer outlet in the cellar washes Ben and Rube right off the house. The cast includes Ben Turpin and Rube Miller.

Reel Life. (Mutual Magazine.)—These pictures show various points of interest along the historical Alamo River, the mission at San Antonio where the revolutionists intrenched themselves early in 1836 and fought to their death for Texas' independence, monuments erected in memory of David Crocket and Col. James Bowie, famous Texas pioneers, and various others connected with the early history of the section.

"Learning the inside of baseball," a subject that might be called a "Special sporting section," forms another part of this popular release. Such masters of the great American pastime as Christy Mathewson and Jeff Tesreau show how the ball is held in flinging their elusive curves and drops. There are also pictures showing the right and wrong way to run bases, field various batted balls, and the correct methods of standing at the plate when facing a pitcher.

"See America First." Gaumont.)—Pictures taken along the new Columbia River Highway comprise this, the fifty-second issue of See America First. The construction of this highway opens to tourists one of the most beautiful stretches of scenery in America, a combination of river, forest and mountain views that are picturesque in the extreme. On the same reel is a comic cartoon in humorous fashion with the antics of a shark and whale, animated by Harry Palmer.

"Jerry and the Blackhanders." (Cub. Fri., Sept. 15.)—This is just an average comedy and one which is certainly not up to the usual Cub standard. Here and there one may get a laugh, but there is nothing to commend the production.

Having stolen a blind man's accordion, Jerry sits under his sweetheart's window and serenades her. The girl's father siezes a vase and hurls it at Jerry's head, but unfortunately it falls upon the head of Hank, the innocent gardner. In fleeing from the irate father Jerry falls into the hands of the "blackhanders," and he is compelled by them to carry a blackmailing letter to a wealthy merchant. After many tussles Jerry is finally blown into the air by one of the infernal blackhander machines only to land in the path of two policemen who are searching for him.

The cast includes George Ovey, Jefferson Osborne, Janet Sully, Claire Alexander, George George, Abe Lincoln, Gordon MacGregor.

"Unconscious of All But Love" from "The Honeymoon Car"
(Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby—Vim)

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC

Pathe News, No. 74. (Wed., Sept. 13.)—Women at industrial labor, Dartford, Eng.; bridge over St. Lawrence River at Quebec, Can., collapses; field day of Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, Trinidad, Col.; funeral of five sailors, lost on U. S. S. Memphis, Washington, D. C.; animated map showing tightning of Allied ring around Teutons; Hughes at Nashville, Tenn.; coats for winter; prune crop, San Jose, Cal.; sophomores vs. freshmen, University of California, Berkeley; national track meet, Newark, N. J.; Lafayette day celebrated, Fass River, Mass.

"Luke and the Mermaids." (Rolin.)—In the matter of plot this Lonesome Luke comedy is slightly inferior to other of the Rolin releases, although some innovations in the way of production will quite eclipse this shortcoming. Luke and his pal dream of seeking the briny depths and meeting there a flock of mermaids, clad in one piece bathing suits. There adventures with the girls and several sons of Neptune are funny though disconnected. Atmosphere has been added to the ocean-bed scenes by taking them through a glass tank in which varieties of fish are always moving about. The usual cast appears in support of Harold Loyd.

"The Grip of Evil." (Balboa. Two reels. Sixth Episode.)—"Mammon and Moloch," another episode in the Balboa series, brings in the Mexican situation. The hero goes to the border and discovers that bullets made in his factories are supplied the Mexican rebels. This supplies one question on which he ponders in the final scene while another results from the lies told him by a vaudeville artist (Jackie Saunders), who for some reason or another is doing newspaper work on the border. Roland Bottomly doesn't make a very realistic United States soldier, while in this chapter there are a number of unpardonable flaws in the direction.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"A Desperate Remedy." (Imp. Sund., Sept. 24.)—This is a rather clever story with a novel plot. Gloria, a wealthy girl, goes to the mountains and disguised as a wild girl, haunts the vicinity of the woods where her lover is camping out. Owing to a lover's quarrel he is dejected, but opportunity places him in a position to rescue the girl from the persecution of a gang of drunken rascals and all is forgiven. Gertrude Selby plays the girl and Carl von Schiller is the man. The photography and acting are exceptionally good.

"Musical Madness." (Joker. Sat., Sept. 23.)—This is just an ordinary comedy with a hackneyed plot. The acting and photography are good, however, and make the best of a "not up to the Joker standard" plot. Binks and Ratto, suiters for a girl's hand, are to be judged by their singing as to which shall get the girl, and Binks tries to ring in a tramp singer. The plot fails when the two arrive in time to see the tramp get the girl.

"Husks of Love." (Gold Seal. Tues., Sept. 26. Three reels.)—In this picture Claire McDowell is called upon to run the entire gamut of human emotion and does so in her own inimitable manner. Too much credit cannot be given her for her interpretation of the part of the much harrassed wife of Amos Bixby, a week-willed society roue. In the love with Jimmy Hale a newspaper reporter, she has married in haste and finds out her husband's real character too late. Her husband's mother is always making trouble between them and contrives for a favorite of hers to be placed conveniently to her son and win his affections from his wife. One compromising situation after another attends Amos and his wife until they seperate. She goes home to her mother; he goes on a joy criuse with Etta. A storm capsizes the boat and the drowning of the two leaves Mary (Claire McDowell) free to marry her first love. Taken all in all, good photography, splendid support from the cast, and a most interesting story, make this an excellent number for any program.

Jackie Saunders in "The Better Instinct" (Knickerbocker Star Feature)

"The Girl Who Didn't Tell." (U. Special. Three reels. Thurs., Sept. 19.)—This portrays the romance of a society man and a young lady who entered his home with intent to rob. It is very well done with the exception that two reels would have been long enough. The introduction of several other important characters including the girl's master, who is killed finally, gives added suspense. Harry Dittmar wrote the scenario while Robert Hill directed a company composed of Violet Mersereau, Harry Benham, Johnnie Walker and Helen Slosson.

"A Jungle Hero." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Sept. 30.)—As an animal drama, this picture is very good—in fact it is about the best of the recent Bisons featuring carnivori. While little is accomplished in the first reel in the way of plot advancement it is pleasing, as it paints the hero in a very romantic and heroic light. The latter reel, of which the locale is the jungle, builds to a strong climax and unites the lovers. Colin Chase, Harry Ham, Golda Coldwell and Rex de Reselli are the leads.

"The Lie Sublime." (Big U. Two reels. Thurs., Sept. 28.)—King Baggot as an actor dissuades a country girl with operatic ambitions from going on the stage merely because that act on his part years before ruined his country romance. This makes fair entertainment. Local color and atmosphere there is aplenty. Edna Hunter, Joe Granby and Frank Smith are others. Harry Dittmar wrote the scenario, while Baggot and Bennett Molter directed.

"Ashes of Remembrance." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Oct. 1.)—A veteran of the Civil War tells the story of how he jealously cast off his wife to a young man who believes his sweetheart is unfaithful, and this proves the means of a reconciliation. Allan Holubar, Paul Byron and Helen Leslie are the leads in this picture which makes averagely good entertainment despite some padding and a few illogical situations. Holubar wrote and produced it.

"The Shadow Sinister." (Big U. Fri., Sept. 29.)—This picture was evidently made in a rush and the director was given the first story that came in. It is so old that it lacks any interest at all, while its characters consist of the well known "maid of pines," the villain and the hero. Jane Bernoudy, James Farley and George Pearce are the principals.

"The Bicker Spur." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Sept. 23.)—Ben Wilson here essays a dual role, and the confusion in the first reel is liable to drag the picture down. The identities of the two men are hardly to be separated. The villain gets mixed up with the hero, and the latter is accused of the misdeeds of the former until he is apprehended. The double exposure bit is quite poorly handled. The most redeeming feature of this picture is its beautiful snow scenes. Rosemary Dean and Clara Beyers are others in the cast. J. Grubb Alexander prepared the scenario.

"MOTION PICTURE PORTRAIT STUDIES OF PRESIDENT WILSON AND HIS CABINET—THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT IN ACTION."

A Film of National Interest—the only one of its kind ever made in the world

DISTRIBUTED BY THE MOTION PICTURE FORUM,

220 WEST FORTY-SECOND STREET, NEW YORK CITY

C. R. MACAULEY, President

Released September 24, 1916

READ THESE ENDORSEMENTS:

Lee A. Ochs, President of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America:

"It has been demonstrated to my complete satisfaction that the public desires to see, and would welcome, the presentation upon the motion picture screen of subjects affecting its welfare.

"I earnestly favor a nation-wide use of the great power of the motion picture in defeating legislation aimed at the business life and prosperity of the exhibitors.

"Appreciating that the influence of the screen would be immensely broadened by opening it to the people as a great national forum, or lyceum, and that the grave problem of censorship would thus be definitely solved, I wish to impress upon the members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America the desirability of showing pictures of national interest.

"While the principal mission of the motion picture will always be entertainment, the time has arrived when for purposes of protection and progress exhibitors themselves must place the screen on a plane with the newspaper and free speech."

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor:

"AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR,
"801-809 G Street N. W.,
"Washington, D. C.
"September 13, 1916.

"Dear Sir: Some time ago it was my good fortune to see the Motion Picture Portrait Studies of President Wilson and his Cabinet, when they were first shown in Washington. The pictures were marvelous; never had I seen more accurate portrayal of facial expression and characteristic mannerisms than in these pictures.

"It seems to me a most excellent thought that motion pictures should be made the medium through which there can be carried to all of the people of the country, pictures that will make them feel that they have a personal acquaintance with those who control the national government. It is the personal touch that brings us close to individuals and enables us to understand their purposes and ideals. For the people of this country to have sufficient knowledge to judge of the work accomplished by their chief executive, there ought to be a personal touch. The motion picture portrait studies of President Wilson and his Cabinet will supply a long-felt want.

"Very truly yours,
(Signed) "Sam'l Gompers,
"President American Federation of Labor."

David W. Griffith, master motion picture director of the world:

"September 11, 1916.

"I heartily favor a nation-wide use of the incomparable power of the motion picture in the discussion of questions affecting the public welfare.

"By opening their screens to the people as a great forum, the exhibitors of the United States will definitely set themselves in the front rank of public benefactors.

(Signed) "D. W. Griffith."

Bona Fide Offer. You rent a store as small as 7 x 15 feet for exhibiting one of my man-eating sharks, with the big, flashy and sensational front display, and you will SEE THE MONEY ROLL IN AS IF BY MAGIC. After a week or a month, move to another location. This world is awful large. And I positively guarantee you that you can't produce an attraction at twice my price which will take in one-tenth as much quick, clear money in a day or week, or month as my embalmed shark. I mean CLEAR PROFIT.

No. 1—For $100 will ship you a real 6 to 8 ft. Man-Eating Shark, perfectly preserved and embalmed just as it comes out of the water, to keep indefinitely like a human body. We also furnish a 24-sheet Man-Eating Shark Poster, in beautiful colors. Total weight of outfit, about 300 lbs.

No. 2 SPECIAL—For $300 will ship you a 10 to 15 ft. MONSTER Man-Eating Shark, perfectly preserved and embalmed in a PLATE GLASS DISPLAY CASE, hermetically sealed, nice enough for your parlor, and in clear white embalming fluid, in which THE SHARK FLOATS AS IF ALIVE AND SWIMMING IN THE SEA, and 10 gallons of my special fluid to keep the case always full. Also a beautiful 10 x 15 ft. special hand-painted oiled banner in flashy, sensational colors, showing the shark eating up a man. Also 1000 two-color hand bills and 100 ½ sheet window cards in two colors, big photographs, etc. Will also furnish large 100-lb. live turtle, also shark jaws, and other deep sea curiosities for ballyhoo attractions. Total weight of outfit, about 500 lbs.

Trade-Marks and Advertising

TRADEMARKED goods are branded goods. In most cases they are goods which have been tested and if the trademark is worth anything they have stood the test and have established a reputation for themselves.

This reputation is not just a windfall; it is the result of hard work on the part of the manufacturer backed up by good ADVERTISING.

IN this day and generation practically every commodity which is put on the market and sold to dealers must be backed by advertising.

Look in our own trade—the STATES RIGHTS buyer takes over a picture for a territory—one of his questions is, "Has this picture got or is it going to be given a trade-marked value?"; in other words, "After I buy it, are you, Mr. Manufacturer, going to advertise it in the trade papers to the exhibitors?"

THE answer means one of two things—if it is not advertised it is almost certain to prove that the manufacturer knows it is not worth advertising and hence of no value—or if it is advertised and has value, the buyer, who is this same STATES RIGHTS man, knows that his profits are almost certain, that the manufacturer is honest with him and is a man worth while dealing with.

This states rights buyer then becomes a regular customer—an independent exchange for the manufacturer without regular distribution.

NO ultimate purchaser of goods from the dealer, who in the case of film is the exchange man, will buy a commodity about which he knows nothing when one which fills the same need and is well known is at hand. If he does, he is a fool.

One manufacturer recently said that he believed in advertising because it is the greatest starter of conversation on earth—and it's conversation that makes a thing well known.

Every exhibitor wants to own goods which are well known—ask him what make car he drives—what brand hat he wears—whose make of collar he has on—and ninety-nine times out of a hundred it is an advertised line.

IS the theatre equipment problem any different from this personal demand? It certainly should not be, for the ability to supply the actual cash for the personal demands depends upon the wisdom shown in the purchase of equipment—money must be made before it is spent.

The best equipment must be bought for the theatre, therefore, before it is possible to produce the cost of the goods for the individual—good pictures depend upon good equipment in the projection room and good pictures plus good house equipment should mean good attendance if properly advertised.

THE most ridiculous part of the whole thing is the way in which many exhibitors allow a dealer to "get away" with the remark, "Well, it's not just what you are asking for, but it's JUST AS GOOD."

This is merely a means of acknowledging that he is a piker, and any man who buys goods from a piker is a piker himself. If the man from whom he is trying to make the purchase has not got the goods you are out to buy and won't get them—go somewhere else.

SOME men have a peculiar idea—you may have it yourself. You are interested in a certain kind of equipment—you read the advertising and you are interested—you go to your dealer—he does not carry the commodity—you ignore further inquiry—you just purchase what he has on hand—it's "just as good." Why is this?

Why don't you write the advertiser for further information and make sure of getting full information on the goods direct and then make the purchase providing only that you find the goods prove to be of the standard you desire! Don't buy in a hurry!

REMEMBER, no advertiser can tell his whole story in any one piece of advertising copy—in order to know all there is to know about a commodity WRITE THE ADVERTISER for further information—it costs nothing but a two cent stamp and INSURES YOUR SATISFACTION.

No man tells all he knows all at once—it can't be done. There is always something further for the man who really wants to know what's what.

A B C of the Motion Picture Operating Room

Long Ago Majority of Exhibitors Discarded the Rheostat as a Means of Resistance on Alternating Current, as Too Much Power Is Wasted in Heat and the Projection Current Is Not as Satisfactory as That Which Is Obtained by Use of Economizers and Rectifiers

THE majority of exhibitors long ago discarded the rheostat as a means of resistance on alternating current, for the reason that too much power is wasted in heat and the projection current is not as satisfactory as that which is obtained by the use of Economizers, Rectifiers and so forth, which are nothing more or less than low voltage transformers.

Manufacturers of these devices make all kinds of claims for their product as to the saving which will be effected through their use. These claims are in many cases overdrawn, but it is a well known fact that these devices can be operated more economically than can a rheostat. There is, however, a great difference in the construction of the various devices of this kind, and the exhibitor should carefully investigate the claims made by the manufacturer before purchasing, as the first cost is a big factor.

Then, too, it is not practicable to carry one of these devices for use on the road, owing to the fact that the electrical current supplied by the various lighting companies varies, and while we might start out with a sixty cycle 110 volt machine the very first town we visit might prove to be our Waterloo, for the current might be thirty-three cycles, 220 volts. This would make it necessary to carry several of these devices which, as I said before, would be impracticable, for their weight, which is considerable, would make them costly to carry around. A transformer should only be used on the current and cycle for which it has been designed and exhibitors ordering one of these devices should be very careful to state the number of cycles which it is to be used on.

A good transformer used properly, and by that I mean on the current cycle for which it is designed, will operate noiselessly and it should be possible for you to lay your hand on it anywhere without feeling an appreciable degree of heat.

A transformer consists essentially of:

1. A primary winding;
2. A secondary winding;
3. An iron core.

Primary and Secondary Coils

Within a soft iron core made up of laminated plates of soft iron, there are four coils of insulated wire, two of which are called the primary and two the secondary coils. The two secondary coils are connected to the projection lamp, and the two primary wires are connected to the operating room switch, or source of supply. The number of turns and size of wire to be used is determined by the pressure at the line and the amount of current you desire at the arc.

The secondary coils will have a lesser number of turns of larger wire than will the primary. If this were not so, and the conditions reversed, the transformer would be what is known as a "step-up," and would furnish current at the arc of higher voltage than that at the line. And this is exactly the condition you would have if you were to connect your wires to the wrong set of binding posts, with the result that you would soon have a "Fourth of July celebration" of your own with all of the attending "fireworks."

It will only be necessary for me to say that the action of a transformer is as follows: When your switch is thrown into position you have a current in the primary wires which magnetizes the iron plates and induces a current in the secondary coils to which the lamp is connected. This might be elaborated upon and continued for some time, but I do not believe that the average operator would care to go into any great detail as to the iron or core losses, copper losses, hysteresis, etc., therefore, I will make this as brief as possible and yet enable the operator to form some idea as to the modus operandi. Those who care to go into this more deeply can do so by consulting any of the standard books on electricity, which may be found in any public library.

On nearly all of the transformers used in the operating room the binding posts are plainly marked "line" and "lamp." Connect one wire marked lamp to one binding post on the lamp and the other to the other lamp binding post. Those marked line connect directly to the operating room switch.

Transformers are usually adjustable, that is they are so constructed as to give three or more different amperages, ranging from 30 to 60 amperes depending upon the make of the machine. One thing that should be borne in mind is that a transformer cannot be used on direct current, they are purely and simply alternating current machines, but it is possible for an operator who is always "on the job" to get as good a light on the screen with one of these transformers as it is with the use of direct current. The accompanying diagram shows the method of connecting a transformer in circuit.

The A. C. line is taken to the cut out or fuse block, Fig. 1, from there to operating room switch, Fig. 2. A-A are the lines from switch to transformer; Fig. 3 is the transformer; B-B are the lines from the transformer secondary to fuse block at 4, and C-C are the lines from secondary fuses to machine switch, Fig. 5; and D-D the line from machine switch to arc. Fig. 6.

Things to Avoid

There are a number of things to remember when using either an inductor, transformer, or compensarc, and the operator should never overload his machine beyond its normal capacity, for there is danger of its heating to such an extent that there will be a smoking or burning of the insulation that is not only objectionable to the operator but may give the audience a false impression of danger, and that is what we want to try and overcome.

Sometimes, though, it is possible that the machine itself is insulated improperly which will also cause this smoking to occur. When it does you should immediately shut down until the machine has had its coil removed and rewound. The operator should never attempt to do this, as it is a job for the manufacturer. Many operators have continued to operate their machines under conditions such as this with the result that they have succeeded in injuring the other coils to such an extent as to make their machine absolutely worthless, and caused their employer unnecessary expense that could have been avoided, if the operator had used a little more care.

A transformer as well as a rheostat should always be placed in such a position as to have it entirely insulated from any part of the operating room, if the operating room is of metal con-

Color Photography

Replicas of Diffraction Gratings Moderate in Price and Within Reach of Everyone—Use of Gratings in the Spectroscope—Some Uses of the Spectroscope in Photography—Flame Spectra of Various Elements—Accurate Work in Color Photography Requires Knowledge of Absorption Spectra

FROM our description last week of the manufacture (or ruling) of diffraction gratings it may have been inferred by the readers that the advantages of spectrum analysis by means of diffraction gratings were restricted to students of large colleges and others of considerable means.

Fortunately for science in general, and for the students and workers in color photography in particular, the advantages attending the use of diffraction gratings are available to all, through the medium of the Diffraction Grating Replica.

A grating replica is an impression, moulded or otherwise, from an original ruled grating. It will readily be inferred that impressions or casts, from perfect original gratings, may be made and it is found that the making of copies from original gratings does not harm the original, but, under some circumstances may serve to improve the condition of the original by keeping its ruled surface clean.

Several workers in the fields of physics and photography have appreciated the importance of placing grating replicas into the hands of students, and years of experimenting have resulted in the production of extremely accurate grating replicas or copies.

Rayleigh's Experiments

Lord Rayleigh, the illustrious English physicist, was the first to attempt the manufacture of grating replicas in a practical way (1872). Rayleigh proposed to make photographic copies from his glass transmission gratings by the process of contact printing. He placed a glass grating in a printing frame. Upon this he placed a sensitized collodion plate and exposed the same to direct rays of sunlight. Exposure and development completed, the result was a photographic copy of the original. Rayleigh also tried printing upon plates coated with Bichromated Gelatine and with Bitumen, and although he produced and distributed many replicas giving handsome resolution of the lines in the first and second order spectra, none of his processes proved certain enough in their results to be commercially practicable.

Thomas Thorp of Manchester, England, finally commenced the production of grating replicas by the process which is practised (with slight modifications) to day, and which gives highly efficient copies of an original ruling.

Method of Making Celluloid Copies

Briefly, Thorp's procedure was to place a reflection grating (speculum metal grating) upon a levelling slab and to pour upon the ruled surface a solution of gun-cotton in amyl-acetate (celluloid—practically speaking). After the film of celluloid had dried it was carefully stripped from the grating under water, the result being a cast or copy (on celluloid) of the ruled surface. This cast being, of course, very thin and fragile, a skin of celluloid was then placed upon an accurately surfaced piece of glass with its ruled surface upwards and sealed to the glass with Canada Balsam.

F. E. Ives, an American, well known as the father of the Photo-engraving Process, and as an able exponent of 3-color photography, was the next to try his hand at making replica gratings. From a 15,000 line Rowland original Ives made numerous celluloid casts in a manner similar to that practised by Thorp. Ives practised a new departure in mounting some of his celluloid casts to the glass. After mounting the cast upon one plate of glass Ives proposed to seal another glass plate over the ruled surface, to protect it from possible damage. This proved to be a serious drawback, however, as the sealing compound (in numerous instances) penetrated the celluloid ruling and caused its deterioration and ultimate destruction. It was furthermore pointed out by R. James Wallace that interference bands were likely to be produced by placing a cover glass in contact with the ruling. We will consider interference phenomena further on, but it may be stated here that interference bands are very annoying to encounter in spectroscopic work.

Wallace Replicas Best

To the last mentioned worker, Mr. R. J. Wallace, who has been mentioned before in the Camera Department, must be accorded supremacy in the manufacture of diffracting grating replicas. Wallace also makes his replicas by flowing celluloid over an original ruling, but, in addition to a great deal of original experimenting, he has taken into account the mistakes of the others and the Wallace replicas are capable of duplicating any performance which the original gratings are capable of. Wallace's copies (mostly from Rowland originals) are to be found in schools, colleges and laboratories throughout the world. They are mounted upon very accurately surfaced glass and are entirely free from any bubbles or other defects incident to the mounting operation. As a first class grating replica with one inch of ruled surface containing 14,000 lines (or upwards) can be secured for $5.00 it is apparent that anyone working with spectroscopes can secure results equal to those obtained with costly rulings, and at a nominal cost.

Use of Grating in the Spectroscope

All types of gratings generally employed having been described, a few words are now in order as to the manner in which a grating (or grating replica) is used in the spectroscope. In order to successfully utilize a diffraction grating it is necessary to have a spectroscope with the telescope (or viewing tube) pivoted to the center of the stand—so that the telescope can be swung from side to side. If, in addition to the swinging telescope, the spectroscope also has, below the prism table, a circular disc graduated in degrees over which a pointer attached to the telescope travels, it is called a spectrometer. With a spectrometer the deviation of the telescope necessary to locate a given line may be measured and the reading duplicated at any future time.

In A, Fig. 5, a transmission grating G (a replica—being transparent—is similar) is shown in place upon the prism stand of

The Making of an American Projection Carbon

The Speer Carbon Company, St. Marys, Pa., Began the Manufacture of Projector Carbons at the Beginning of the War, and the Plant, Consisting Then of 30,000 Square Feet, Has Been Tripled—Company Now Makes an Article Meeting with Requirements of Particular Operators

ONE of the greatest manufacturing plants of interest to the motion picture exhibitor, perched on a high peak of the Alleghany Mountains, is that of the Speer Carbon Company located at St. Marys, Pa., the presiding geniuses of which are J. S. Speer and G. P. Fryling, whose likenesses appear on these pages.

Mr. Speer has been identified with the manufacture of carbons for a period of twenty-six years, consequently he knows the carbon business from A to Z. He is always to be found actively engaged in the superintending of the different branches of the industry and does not leave to others that which he himself can attend to.

Mr. Fryling, the secretary-treasurer of the concern, is the man to whom all business details are referred and is what might be termed a self-made man, for he has risen from the ranks as it were, and he is ever alert to improve and further the interests of the Speer Company.

At the outbreak of the European war when there was such a shortage of carbons, which had up to this time been largely imported, Mr. Speer and Mr. Fryling were talked into the manufacture of projector carbons. Up to this time the Speer Carbon Company had been noted for its manufacture of carbon brushes used in electrical machinery. They were in no position at that time to manufacture projector carbons, but showing the spirit of progressiveness and American business patriotism, they began to formulate plans whereby they were to become a powerful factor in the manufacture of this commodity.

Floor Space Tripled Since War

The plant at the beginning of the war consisted of about 30,000 square feet of floor space, and now after two years their floor space has been more than tripled.

The enterprise was not entered into with any thought of getting rich quick, but more as an accommodation to the exhibitors who felt dubious as to their being able to continue their business owing to the threatened shortage of carbons, and also as a basis of a permanent business. There is no reason why this permanent business should not be guaranteed them, for enormous sums of money have been spent in experimenting and perfecting the Speer carbon, and while other manufacturers have from time to time raised the price of carbons to the exhibitor the Speer Company have not. Although they were forced to pay more with others for their raw material their prices to the consumer remained the same.

During the past year many operators have found fault with the Speer carbon for the reason that there was excessive flaming at the arc and the carbon seemed to needle unnecessarily. This has been explained by Mr. Speer as being due to the fact that they were unable to get a uniform quality of binder, and it is interesting to note that within the short space of one year these carbons have been developed to a point where the objectionable features have been entirely eliminated and at the present time it is the opinion of the operators that the Speer carbon is "some" carbon.

Now comes the actual making of the carbon itself. The first process is to take the raw material composed of carbon and binder and place it into a mixer and mix toa stiff dough or paste. After being thoroughly mixed and ground, it is then moulded into cheeses. These cheeses are then subjected to a very high temperature of heat, approximately 2,200 degrees Fahrenheit which eliminates all volatile matter.

The cheeses are then ground and again mixed with the binder, this mixture being the material that is used for the finished product. This mass, which looks like huge chunks of mud, is then placed in a hydraulic press in which is a steel die the size of the carbon being made, and forced through this die at a pressure of 300 tons per square inch, which forms the carbon as the final step in its manufacture. As the carbon rod leaves the die a steel wheel runs along the surface which stamps in the name of the manufacturer. The carbons are run from this press in lengths of from four to six feet and deposited on specially grooved boards, which prevent the possibility of the carbons developing crooks or bends, and thus keeping them perfectly straight.

They are then removed from the racks and carried on specially constructed trucks to the furnaces. These trucks are in their way quite novel in that they are specially arranged to keep the carbon from changing form during the transportation to the furnace room where upon their arrival they are carefully packed and laid in the furnace or oven.

Treatment of Moulded Carbons

The moulded carbons are packed in the ovens, one layer at a time. Each layer of carbons is covered with a very finely pulverized layer of carbon, and the method of packing is such as to prevent any of this packing from entering the carbon core. After the oven has received its quota of carbons the oven is then sealed and the heat is turned on. This heat is supplied by burners using natural gas for fuel, and is gradually increased until it reaches, as I said before, approximately 2,200 degrees Fahrenheit. The control of this temperature is accomplished by means of pyrometers and other heat indicating instruments, and so perfect is this control that the temperature can be graduated at any pre-determined rate.

Readings are taken every half hour, day and night, during the entire process of baking which covers a period of fourteen days. The furnaces, in which this final firing is done, are specially constructed of the best quality of fire brick, and after extensive experiments the Speer Carbon Company have been able to construct these furnaces so that they have a sufficiently long life to be commercially adapted to baking the carbon; however, they have to be reconstructed at regular intervals on account of the intense heat to which they are subjected which causes them to crumble and disintegrate. After remaining under this enormously high temperature for a period of fourteen days, the ovens are then opened, allowing them to cool, after which sample carbons are taken to the testing room and tested for their electrical resistance.

Should they exceed the resistance set for them, they are rejected. If they pass this test the core is then inserted, after which they are again placed in specially constructed ovens, and baked, which takes for from three to five hours, to thoroughly dry out the core, this obviating the possibility of blowing out the core, which many operators experience with inferior carbons when using high amperage.

After the core has been dried out they are again removed from the ovens, cut to size and pointed, cleaned and polished, after which they are run through gauges to see that they are perfectly straight and true as to diameter. They are then taken to the shipping room and packed for shipment.

The machinery used in the manufacture of these carbons, from the largest to the smallest machine, is of the highest possible quality. The employees, including the office force, number two hundred. They are thoroughly trained and highly efficient.

I might add here that all of the employees are residents of St. Marys, Mr. Speer believing in employing his own townspeople, which does him great credit. The efficiency of the workers is such that the waste, which is a powerful factor, has been reduced from fifty per cent. to ten per cent. The average output of the plant is 20,000 carbons per day, running at minimum. Mr. Speer claims that working at a maximum capacity night and day he can maintain an output of 35,000 per day. As soon as the new machinery which has been ordered, arrives and is installed, there is no doubt but what this capacity will be doubled.

The plant of the Speer Carbon Company consists of ten buildings, the general offices, factory No. 1, which is devoted to the manufacture of carbon brushes, and factory No. 2, which is devoted exclusively to the manufacture of projector carbons. They have their own box factory for the making of shipping cases, testing laboratory, and other buildings used for various purposes in connection with both plants.

NICHOLAS POWER RETURNS TO NEW YORK AFTER ABSENCE OF SEVERAL MONTHS

AFTER an absence from New York City for several months, enjoying a well-earned vacation at Lake Bomoseen, Vermont, Nicholas Power, the man who put "The Move in Movies" returned to this city, and is again at his desk at 90 Gold street. Mr. Power, in spite of his enormous success, is a very hard worker, and takes personal charge of the experimental department of the Nicholas Power Company, working as many hours each day as the skilled mechanics employed by him.

Nicholas Power

When asked regarding the outlook, Mr. Power is very sanguine and believes the present quiet time will soon give way to big business. He is well pleased with the amount of business done by his company during his absence as a good showing was made in spite of the paralysis epidemic and other unfavorable conditions. Mr. Power was sixty-three years old on his last birthday, but his energetic application to business belies this fact.

is necessary. In B, Fig. 5, a reflection grating G is shown on the spectroscope table. The collimator tube C is now facing (at an angle) the ruled surface of the grating, while the reflected image of the spectrum is received by the viewing telescope T at the corresponding angle of diffraction.

Using the Concave Grating

At C, Fig. 5, we see how a spectrum may be produced by the use of the concave grating, which latter, as was stated last week, was one of Rowland's most valuable discoveries. With the concave grating no collimator lens or telescope is necessary. The light ray from the slit S is reflected from the concave grating G and forms a diffraction spectrum R V which comes to a focus (without the aid of lenses) on the circumference of a circle having as its diameter the radius of curvature of the concave grating. As was previously stated the spectra produced by concave reflection gratings possess elegant definition and the concave grating has come into extensive use.

Before leaving the subject of diffraction spectroscopes we must explain how a grating spectrum may be examined at direct vision, e. g., in a straight line with the slit and collimator. For this purpose we include a diagram of a pocket diffraction spectroscope, D, Fig. 5. In D, Fig. 5, A is a tube having at one end the slit B. Arranged to telescope, or slide, within the tube A is another tube C having at one end the collimator lens D and at the other end the eyepiece or viewing aperture F. Between the lens D and the eyepiece F is a prism E of small angle (about 20°) to which a celluloid grating replica is cemented. The narrow angle prism serves to throw the central white image of the slit to one side, so that nothing but the spectrum is seen by the eye. While a pocket diffraction spectroscope will show more of the Frauenhofer lines than does a pocket prism spectroscope, and while it also has the advantage over the prism instrument in its correct distribution of the colors, the same remarks regarding its inadequacy for exact measurements apply to it as to the pocket prismatic instrument described two weeks ago. As a matter of interest we might state, however, that we have, with a high grade pocket diffraction spectroscope of English make, been able to observe the D line just barely separated, by directing the instrument toward a strong beam of sunlight from a Heliostat.

As we have given in this and the previous installments of our article "Color Photography," a rather extended description of the various forms of spectroscopes, we will now outline a few of the many important uses of such instruments in everyday photographic practice, and in the photographic analysis of color.

Uses of Spectroscope in Photography

With the spectroscope a safe-light for the dark room may be examined and its suitability readily determined. Likewise—a good estimate may be formed of the quality of illumination produced by any of the various arcs or other forms of studio lights, such as are used in film production.

But in the field of color photography (and cinematography) and the photography of objects in their correct luminosity values (orthochromatic photography) the spectroscope plays a vitally important role. It is with the spectroscope that the suitability of the dyes used in sensitizing emulsions for color work is determined, and the adjustment of suitable light filters to color sensitive emulsions could never be accomplished with scientific accuracy without recourse to spectroscopic tests.

In addition to the study of various light sources, such as the solar spectrum and the spectra of arcs, there are two other classes of spectra which must receive consideration by the student in color photography.

Emission Spectra

The first of these which we will mention is the emission spectra of colored flames. As is known to all students of elementary chemistry, a piece of iron or platinum wire, when dipped into a solution of a metallic salt and then held in the flame of a Bunsen burner, will impart to the Bunsen flame vivid color. These flame colors differ for different metals and when the Bunsen flame, colored by the combustion of a metallic salt, is examined with the spectroscope, a line spectrum is seen instead of the customary band of spectrum colors. The line spectra of many elements correspond exactly, as to location, with well known fixed lines in the solar spectrum and like the fixed lines of these various elements also appear at fixed and unvarying places in the spectrum.

A, Fig. 6, is a comparison scale showing some of the more prominent lines in the solar spectrum. The line spectrum of Sodium is shown at B in Fig. 6, where it will be noted that the yellow Sodium lines appear in exactly the same position in the flame spectrum as do the fixed D lines in the solar spectrum. Another prominent line spectrum is that of Lithium shown at C, Fig. 6. The line spectrum of Lithium shows a beautiful red line between the B and C lines of the solar spectrum and an orange line nearer to the D lines.

When studying the spectra of the Bunsen flame colored by the various metallic salts nothing but the characteristic bright lines are seen through the spectroscope, because the Bunsen flame is not luminous enough to produce an easily visible complete spectrum. In the course of our article we will again refer to these line spectra, and explain their use in photo-spectroscopic work.

Even more important than line spectra in the photographic conquest of color are the absorption spectra of the colored solutions of chemicals and dye stuffs.

Absorption Spectra

dark areas, showing no color, will be noticed at various points throughout the resulting spectrum. This obliteration of certain regions of the spectrum is due to the fact that certain of the spectral colors have been absorbed (prevented from reaching the slit) by the colored solution through which the light has to pass. Such a spectrum is called an absorption spectrum and it shows exactly which of the spectrum colors are allowed to pass through the solution (of a dye for instance) being examined and which are absorbed (or held back).

A typical absorption spectrum is shown at D, Fig. 6, this being the absorption spectrum of chlorophyll (the green coloring matter of plants and leaves). It might be of interest to state here that Ives announced, in 1879, that a collodion plate sensitized with chlorophyll was sensitive (in some degree) to all colors of the spectrum.

It will now be apparent to all readers how the properties of photographic light filters and safe-lights are tested, but, in photographic research work visual spectroscopic tests are not alone sufficient. It is found necessary, therefore, to combine the camera and the spectroscope, and we will go further into the photographic recording of color next week by considering the action of the spectroscope and camera combined.

(To be continued next week)

NEW YORK SALESROOMS OF BELL AND HOWELL COMPANY OPEN FOR BUSINESS

THE New York salesrooms of the Bell and Howell Company, located at 220 West Forty-second street, are now open and doing business.

Mr. Bell, who has been in New York for some time getting everything ready, announces that he expects to stay here until October 5, when he will go directly to Los Angeles, where he intends to open a third office. After that he will spend all his time between the New York, Chicago and Los Angeles offices.

The New York office will be permanently in charge of Edward F. Rinaldy, who will, in addition to his salesrooms, maintain a service department in which there will be competent people to superintend all installations and take care of minor repairs.

In going over general conditions, Mr. Bell said that he considered them very good. The film manufacturers are demanding the best equipment regardless of price. No matter what make of goods are bought, they are only accepting the best, which is a very good sign.

In regard to the export end of the business, Mr. Bell said that he was looking for continual increase. He says that they are receiving inquiries from all over the world and that he firmly believed that as soon as war conditions allow, American equipment is going to become standard the world over. At the present time the cost of raw materials makes exporting almost prohibitive, and as profits have been cut to a minimum the manufacturing in all lines is not being pushed.

GLANTZBERG STARTS ON TRIP SOUTH FOR TYPHOON FAN COMPANY

ERNST GLANTZBERG, president of the Typhoon Fan Company, 1544 Broadway, New York, has just started on a trip through the South. His first stop will be at Augusta, Ga., where they have contracted to install the Typhoon system of cooling and ventilating in the New Modjeska theatre. From Augusta he will go to Savannah, where they are installing their system in the new Municipal Auditorium. This Auditorium is being built by the city and will have a large seating capacity to accommodate the big conventions that are held in that city. Special arrangements are being made to show motion pictures.

Mr. Glantzberg will also visit New Orleans, where they have just made a shipment to the New Glove theatre. This theatre is said to be the finest in New Orleans. It is a small house, but built in one of the most expensive locations. All modern equipment will be used and everything will be in keeping with the location.

The success that this system has made in the Triangle, Lyceum and various theatres in New Orleans has resulted in a contract from the D. H. Holmes Company, who have a department store occupying six or seven buildings. This order involves the use of fifteen of the largest fans, some twelve feet in diameter.

Mr. Glantzberg expects that this trip will take at least one month. He may also visit the exhibitors in Havana and Cuba.

THE LYCEUM, EGREMONT, CHESHIRE, ENGLAND, LOOKS LIKE A GREEK TEMPLE AND SHOWS PICTURES OF "CLASSIC WORTH"

THE Lyceum, Egremont, Cheshire, England, is made imposing by a front modeled on the plan of a Greek temple. Its appearance of solidity engendered by its six massive stone pillars, gives the pedestrian a foretaste of the pictures of solid worth shown inside. The theatre was built about six years ago and is controlled by the Raymond Circuit, London, W. C.

In the vestibule are palms tastefully arranged on handsomely carved mahogany pedestals, and the auditorium is decorated in a pleasing style in correspondence with the exterior decorative scheme. An orchestra of eight plays the music for the pictures. In the box iffice have been installed the latest Accurate Checking Machines, while in the operating booth are two 110-110 ampere motor generators, supplying current to two Erneman projectors independently, so that no "waits" occur during the change of reels.

The Lyceum Electric Palace

The Lyceum is a first run house and shows eight reels at each performance, which runs continuously from six in the afternoon until eleven at night. The theatre is located in a residential section and draws a select patronage. The number of people employed is twenty-two. Electric exhaust fans and large revolving ventilators in the roof keep the interior supplied with fresh air. In the winter the house is heated by gas radiators. The lighting system consists of tastefully arranged wall brackets. The seating capacity of the main floor is five hundred, and there are two hundred seats in the balcony. The length of throw is seventy feet, and the pictures are shown on a linen coated screen. The inside of the hall is tastefully decorated in a rich alpine cream, the side wall being embellished by handsome plastic decorations in gold. The balcony is approached direct out of the vestibule by means of a double flight of stairs, covered with heavy Wilton pile carpet of a dark crimson color. This is also to be found in the spacious balcony, whilst the seats are of a rose color, a heavy curtain to match being in the position of a draught screen running the full length of the back of balcony immediately behind the seating. A feature of the interior is the massive and solid brass fittings to be seen on the stairway, whilst the exterior and interior swing doors are of polished mahogany and beveled plate glass.

Although comparatively young, W. Pell Smith, the manager, has had considerable experience in the business, having spent a number of years previous to taking up management as an operator, and his knowledge of the "projection" side of the business is of no mean order, so the breakdowns are unknown at the Lyceum.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Lux

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

Synchronizing and Timing of Picture Music

The Term "Synchronization" in Picture Music Has Become Twisted into Many Meanings—The True and Most Important Musical Synchronism to Screen Action Is the Obtaining and Maintaining of Positive Musical Temperaments Which Are in Accord with Screen Action

THE term "synchronization" in picture music seems to have been twisted into all manner of meanings. Some think that when certain dances on the screen or titular screen suggestions are followed by musical mimicry, that they have thereby accomplished the most important in picture synchronism. This is but the smallest part and assuredly the most simple of all the requirements in picture playing. The true and most important musical synchronism to screen action is the obtaining and maintaining of positive musical temperaments which are in accord with the screen action.

The last study taken up by all musical students is the learning of the effects of musical numbers, having diffeernt tempos, upon the human temperament. The reason for this being the student's last course is found in the fact that to be capable of knowing the above to be true, he must first be the master of every other requirement necessary to a successful musical career, if he would be capable of such an inspiration as would be necessary to understandingly determine this fact.

That human beings, as well as all endowed with animal life, do respond temperamentally to music of all different types was scientifically proven by a professor in Harvard University some years ago. It is proven to the picture musician each and every day. When you play a popular one-step, the element that dances can't keep their feet still and when you play a slow number suggesting pathos, that person who has cultivated a benevolent fullness of heart can't restrain his or her tears.

Patron Feels Cheated If There's No "Sob" Music

A few years back if you played any sad music in the picture-theatre you were thrown out bodily. I know what I am talking about because I was thrown out myself. To-day the average picture theatre patron who does not feel the pangs of sorrow at least once during a photoplay performance is positive that he has seen a poor show and that he did not get his money's worth. In other words, the entire facts are just reversed to day from what they were a few years back and this evolution of Picture Music was brought about by what I maintain to be the true meaning of musical synchronization in picture playing.

It is not a difficult task in looking at a picture to note the points where someone may be dancing a waltz or one-step, etc., and set a proper number to such a scene. This does not require the efforts of advanced musical ability and can as a matter of fact be done by a layman. The most important is temperamental synchronization. By temperamental synchronization is meant that at such points whereat the stage director of the screen action is trying to develop a certain sympathy for an individual character, the music at that time must synchronize and be of such tonal color as to influence the audience and create among them a temperamental feeling which will lay greater stress on the director's efforts and assist, by the maintaining of a temperamental mood, thereby inspiring the audience to that sympathetic feeling which will make the director's efforts worth while.

I only cite one instance whereat a certain sympathy is to be maintained to a pathetic scene created. Nevertheless, the advanced scenario writer and director creates aversions and many other temperamental moods on the screen by prior action development. It is just as essential to follow these, for every temperamental change requires music of an entirely different character. This is what musical synchronization to pictures should really mean and will mean in the future when picture music becomes a matter of fact.

Timing of Reels Has Nothing to Do with Musical Synchronism

Another mistaken idea of synchronism is found in the much spoken of timing of music. Musical synchronism has nothing whatever to do with timing of reels and the sooner we all realize this the better it will be for picture music and all concerned.

As long as six years ago I started to time music to reels and reels to music. I fought with every operator I ever came in contact with; I had machines taken apart and put together again; I had everything oiled and then oiled some more, and in fact made everybody about me as miserable as I could, trying to make them do the next to impossible. The final result was that I could not hope for anything better in projection than averagely good results as regards the time of running a thousand feet of film.

The final solution was that the operator and the orchestral leader became co-operative and everything else was left to more or less good luck.

After failing in my researches along this line there was but one other ecourse left and that was Picture Music. If we could not perfect the timing of the reels there was only one other thing to do, namely, the collecting of music suitable for picture work. Picture Music has consequently been my hobby and I have tormented publishers for years about it, and at this time I can see a realization of my ideas. Timing of reels is again greatly counteracted by theatre requirements which can seldom be overcome by the musician. The way to overcome this timing of reel proposition is in educating the musician or leader to the point of fitting his music, which is not a difficult task when he has the proper music in front of him.

Term "Cue Sheet" Belittles the Work

Knowing the above facts to be as here stated, it has always seemed to me that the term "cue sheet" belittles the work of setting music to pictures. A cue sheet means really nothing for if the temperamental possibilities of the music necessary to a picture are not properly plotted, what good are cues after all? Every separate requirement of any theatrical performance, whether playing permanently in one theatre or on the road, is a plot and some of the most difficult shows that travel are put on in small towns with very little or no rehearsal by the use of these plots, and I dare say that 90 per cent. of pictures will be put on some day by the use of plots.

Five years ago when I started to play to pictures with an augmented orchestra they called me crazy, but I note that now they are "all doing it."

STILLMAN THEATRE, CLEVELAND, WILL OPEN TO DIRECTORS AND STOCKHOLDERS ON SEPTEMBER 29

THE new Stillman theatre, Cleveland, will be opened to directors, stockholders, their friends and press representatives, Friday evening, September 29. A second private showing will be given Saturday morning, September 30, for the men who built and equipped the house. The public opening will be Saturday afternoon, to be followed by the first public performance.

Friday evening's affair will be in the nature of a dedication, and will be attended by many persons of national importance in the film world, as well as those Clevelanders, who are interested in the new theatre. It will be strictly invitational. The same program will be given as on the subsequent performances of opening week, but no tickets will be sold. Invitation only will prevail at the Saturday morning performance.

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky combination, announced that he probably would attend the opening of the Stillman theatre.

It may be said that there is but one motion picture theatre in the country, the Rialto, New York, which has attracted as much attention in advance of its opening as has the Stillman. Mr. Zukor, in a letter received by President Mandelbaum, of the Stillman says:

"Judging from the amount you are putting into the building you will have the model theatre of the country. I for one am at your service at any time."

Mr. Mandelbaum announced that the service policy of the new theatre will include rest and lounging rooms, free checking service, conducted on a strict no-tip plan, free stationery in the writing-room and a novel chart in front of the theatre which will show just what pictures are to be shown, and the specific time each one starts.

Noon pictures for business men are to be features of the Stillman policy, it was announced. This will be a sort of "business men's show" from 11 to 1:30 o'clock daily, made up of short pictures, including comedy, travel and news subjects.

HERBERT GRIFFIN, NICHOLAS POWER REPRESENTATIVE, RETURNS FROM NINE MONTHS' ABSENCE

HERBERT GRIFFIN, who covers the Middle West boosting Powers' Cameragraph No. 6-B, returned to New York on Friday, September 8, after an absence of nine months from 90 Gold street. Speaking of trade conditions in that territory, Mr. Griffin said that notwithstanding the prevalence of infantile paralysis and other unfavorable conditions, the theatres in that section are doing well.

He speaks encouragingly of the outlook and said that the prospect of a good fall and winter business brought him into New York to discuss some matters of importance with the chiefs of the Nicholas Power organization.

EXPECT TO ERECT THEATRE IN ERIE, PA., READY BY SPRING

A MODERN motion picture theatre is to be erected at Erie, Pa., which when completed will be the finest in that part of the State. It is to be the largest in the lake city and will have a frontage of 120 feet.

The theatre is to be erected on the northwest corner of Fifth and State streets by H. V. Ashby and E. B. Ashby. The building will be three stories high. The entrance to the theatre proper will be on State street and and storerooms will be erected on both sides of the entrance.

The construction will be of brick, steel and it will be fireproof throughout. The front will be very ornamental and the latest features in theatres will be included in the best equipment that the company can secure.

Just when the work will be started has not been announced, but it is thought that the theatre will be ready by the middle of next spring. The two men interested in the theatre are prominent business men of Erie and are connected with several other enterprises in that city.

Of course you have some kind of music in your theatre. If you get you will have the best possible music.

Music Notes: This picture affords opportunities for excellent renditions of the music selected. The only essential effects are those necessary to accentuate the melodramatic action during Nos. 3, 4, 11, 13, 14 and 15. The scenes of the picture are laid in France, which fact should be noted when you set your musical program.

No. 1 should be a light waltz lento movement. French type waltz is the better. No. 2 should be a medium slow number of romantic appeal. Should not be a draggy number. No. 5 should be a concert waltz with a slow introduction of pathetic appeal. No. 6 is similar to 2. No. 7 should be a slow waltz lento movement played legato. Must be a more serious number than used for No. 1. No. 8 must be a slow number of positive pathetic appeal.

No. 9 is the French National Hymn. No. 10 must be a slow number of pathetic appeal with slight dramatic suggestion. No. 12 is similar to 5. No. 16 is similar to 8. No. 17 is similar to 10. This number can be of less serious nature. No. 18 should be a light 4/4 number of the caprice order with a legato strain predominant. No. 19 is similar to 8. No. 20 is self-explanatory. No. 21 is similar to 1. No. 22 and 23 must both be very serious numbers with greatly pronounced pathetic appeals. The first number should suggest the dramatic. The second number's greatest value depends upon its pathos. The two numbers must play about 11 minutes.

No. 24 is a screen suggestion and can be made effective by the use of Carrie Jacob-Bond's song "A Perfect Day." The melodramatic numbers 3, 4, 11, 13, 14 and 15 and are very essential for dramatic accentuation. The organ can be very appropriately used for the entire last two reels and any of the other slow numbers.

Circle Is Indianapolis' Finest Picture Theatre

Though Recently Opened, It Has Become a Factor in the Life of the City—Continuous Shows Are Run from Eleven Thirty in the Morning Until Eleven Thirty at Night—There Are 2,000 Ten Cent Seats in the Afternoon—Prices in the Evening Are Ten and Twenty-five Cents

THE Circle theatre, the newest, largest and finest photoplay theatre in Indiana, has become a prominent factor in the social life in Indianapolis since its opening, Wednesday evening, August 30.

Music is to be a big feature of the program. There is a twenty piece orchestra, composed of the best musicians in Indianapolis, clad in Bohemian uniforms. H. L. Spitalny, of Cleveland, is the director. William S. O'Brien is the organist.

The theatre runs continuous shows from 11.30 A. M. until 11.30 P. M., with a special noon hour performance from 11.30 A. M. to 1.30 P. M. There are 2,000 ten cent seats in the afternoon, with mezzanine floor seats at ten cents. At night the prices are twenty-five cents for reserved mezzanine floor seats; 1,500 seats at ten cents and 1,000 seats at fifteen cents.

Balcony, Circle Theatre, Indianapolis

The members of the executive staff include Mark M. Gates, manager, who was treasurer of the Murat theatre, Indianapolis, last year; Harry Bolton, stage manager, who was connected with English's theatre, Indianapolis, for more than fifteen years; and Theodore Stempfel, Jr., publicity, connected with General Film Service Company, Indianapolis, for several years. Earl Slater is the chief operator.

The Circle was built by Indianapolis contractors, with material provided by Indianapolis manufacturers and stores as far as possible, and financed by Indianapolis business men. The architecture of the theatre harmonizes with the Soldiers and Sailors Monument, which it faces.

Seats 3,000 People

The theatre occupies the southeast segment of Monument Place, and represents an investment of approximately half a million dollars and has a seating capacity of 3,000 persons.

The new theatre is novel in several details and the builders have given much thought to eliminating all the defects of previously theatres. There are broad aisles, an unobstructed view of the stage from any seat in the house and plenty of room between the rows of seats for persons to sit comfortable without being crowded. There are exits opening into three streets.

The basic construction materials are steel and concrete. The theatre has a frontage of eighty feet in Monument Place and runs back to Court and Scioto streets, a distance of 154 feet. The general width of the house is 110 feet. The front has an entrance lobby forty feet wide, with one storeroom on each side of the lobby.

The entire facade is of white terra cotta, ornamented at the crest with two friezes of allegorical figures in Rookwood pottery with a pediment in the centre, which spans the space over the entrance. Clifton A. Wheeler, an Indianapolis artist, has painted an outdoor Grecian scene in the pediment with Grecian dancing girls and musicians, harmonizing with the two friezes of symbolic Grecian figures, representing music, the drama and festivity. There are eight figures in each frieze, one frieze being on each side of the pediment. The picture in the pediment is the most pretentious picture shown on the exterior of any Indianapolis building. The friezes are in glazed terra cotta. Over the entrance is a large canopy.

Over the top of the entrance, above, the friezes and pediment, are four large fire pots which serve for electrical illumination. This makes a novel electrical feature. Electricity, shining through stained glass, with steam soaring upward, illuminates the front. There is also a large clock over the center of the entrance, studded with about 2,000 green and white lights with "The Circle Theatre Photoplays" in a circle around the outside of the clock. The minute hand of the clock is about ten feet long. It is controlled by a master clock in the office, which was put in by Betts and Betts, New York. Over the door, also, as well as in various other parts of the theatre, may be seen a monogram combining the letters "C" and "T."

In the lobby of the Circle there are no lurid, wild-eyed lithographs depicting impossibly big-eyed heroines and impossibly fiendish-looking villians and impossibly Adonis-like heroes. Instead, there are attractive and lifelike oil paintings of striking scenes from the plays and of the players to be seen therein. Handsomly lettered posters, inserted in gilt frames draped in green, at intervals along the wall, tell of present and future attractions.

Theatre Is Decorated in Adam Style

The color schemes of the lobby is ivory and gold, the ceiling is decorated in the Adam style, showing groups of graceful Grecian figures and conventional designs. The wainscoting is of white marble and the floor is covered with battle-ship linoleum in squares of gray and white.

A box office for general admission is located in the center of the lobby, with a box office at the side of the lobby for reservations. The ticket machine was furnished by the Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company of New York.

The main promenade swings in a semi-circle behind the main floor, covered with heavy carpet of deep rose. Six broad aisles on the main floor open off of the main promenade. The walls are of Caen stone in Ashlar clocks, with the ceiling of ivory. Along the walls are hung mirrors in quaint gilt frames, and handsome paintings. The furniture is of mahogany, with upholstery of deep rose to match the carpets. Sanitary drinking fountains, and a compact little room equipped with telephones are features of the promenade. A glass wall, hung with rose colored curtains separates the back row of seats and the promenade and persons sitting in the last few rows are protected from any draught.

A NEW ERA IN ELECTRIC ADVERTISING

Orders and re-orders for this unique invention are coming in from every section of the country. At last the exhibitor is enabled to advertise his show properly, yet cheaply. The new interchangeable letter electric signs that make this possible are dignified, yet attention-compelling.

In a jiffy the letters of these signs are changed to set up any reading matter desired. Then the electric bulbs "inside the handsome durable frame light them brilliantly." Can your patrons forget your coming attractions if you advertise them this way? Outside the theatre, in the lobby, or inside the house, these signs tell your story all day long—cheaply and efficiently.

The "close-up" above shows a big, popular model that costs only $75.00. We make these signs any size you want, for any purpose, charging you the lowest prices ever quoted.

A curved staircase, carpeted in rose, and divided by a mahogany rail with gilt posts, leads to the lounge on the mezzanine floor. The decorations and furniture of the lounge has more the appearance of the parlor floor of a high class hotel than a picture theatre.

Around the ledge of the mezzanine rail are growing plants that add an artistic touch. Tall lamps, with shades of various colors, add their soft light to that diffused from the elaborate indirect lighting system.

The mezzanine floor has been turned into an art gallery for the present, with twenty paintings adorning the walls, the ivory paneling making a perfect background. The pictures were loaned by H. Lieber Company and are valued at $20,000. Each painting is individually lighted.

The mezzanine floor merges into the gallery by imperceptible stages. A transverse aisle runs across the mezzanine floor, the same as on the first floor. The loges are at the front of the mezzanine floor. There are four rows of wicker chairs in the loges, each loge seating eighteen persons. The wicker chairs, with rose covered cushions were furnished by the Withrow Manufacturing Company of Cincinnati.

One of the important features of the theatre is the lighting effects, which are more elaborate than those in any other Indianapolis theatre. The entire illumination is unique in that not a single light is exposed to view. All the lamps are concealed in semi-indirect lighting fixtures of beautiful design. Those in the lounge remind one of huge amber-colored tulips edged with gold.

Magnificent Chandeliers Part of Furnishings

From the center of the ceiling in the body of the house hangs a magnificent chandelier of bronze and amber glass, while numerous smaller globes illuminate every nook and corner of the theatre. Each chandelier is equipped with three sets of globes with three different colored lights, green, amber and blue. The electrical equipment of the stage includes a complete switchboard, which has some features that have been used for the first time in the United States.

The projection is fine and clear, due to the use of a Speedco arc controller, manufactured by the Speed Controller Company, Inc., 257 William street, New York. The stage setting represents an idealized Italian garden. There is a flight of wide shallow steps leading up to a terrace. At each side is a colonnade or pergola on which are placed emerald green vases with coral colored trees.

The stage has a proscenium arch 42 feet wide and 30 feet high, with a stage depth of 35 feet. The stage has been equipped to handle any metropolitan theatrical attraction.

RAWSON AND EVANS PUT OUT NEW KIND OF ELECTRIC SIGNS FOR PICTURES

THE Rawson and Evans Company of Chicago have been experimenting for some time to produce an electric sign especially adapted to the requirements of moving picture theatres. It was their aim to combine in these signs the qualities of cheapness, durability, and effectiveness. The result of the company's efforts is seen in the extensive line of signs they are now offering to exhibitors.

Because of the various drawbacks incident to the use of the ordinary bulb letter signs, such as high initial cost, large consumption of current, big breakage of bulbs, space necessary for storing letters, time required to change the lettering and illegibility of certain angles. The Rawson and Evans Company have adopted a different principle in the illumination of their signs. That is, they are illuminated from the interior instead of the exterior, and the frame is so constructed that any lettering whatever can be easily and quickly placed in position in the front of the sign.

While this firm makes many different styles of picture theatre signs they all involve the same principle of interchangeable lettering, and interior illumination, but differing in size and capacity for lettering to suit individual requirements.

Their smaller models or program signs have interchangeable letters of clear white glass on a black enamel background. Back of the letters, translucent white opal glass of the same size as the letters is inserted giving the effect of snow white letters. Colored inserts may be placed between the letters and the white opal glass, thus producing striking combinations in any color. This makes possible a great many attractive effects, such as one or more lines in color, the emphasizing of one or more words in color, the initial letters in color, etc.

The letters are arranged in a substantial, galvanized iron frame oxidized black. A few scientifically placed electric bulbs inside the frame make each letter stand out with brilliant distinctness. The signs are also very effective for day use without illumination.

One of the most popular sizes offered in the program signs is a five-line sign measuring 48 inches wide, 34 inches high, and 6½ inches deep. This model is particularly adapted for announcing coming attractions inside the theatre (Fig. 1), for use in the lobby, or on either side of the entrance. Many exhibitors rent the bottom line to local merchants for their advertising, thus making the sign pay for itself.

Figure 2 shows a double faced outside announcer. These signs are constructed on the same general principle as the program signs, only that the letters are much larger and intended for reading at a far greater distance. This particular sign measures 11 feet 8 inches long, 2 feet 9 inches high and 8 inches deep. The letters are 8 by 12 inches, and are translucent white opal glass with an opaque mottled green background. Each letter is mounted in a separate oxidized metal frame tongued and grooved, insuring perfect fit and alignment as also preventing the escape of light between the letters. These signs are made either single or double faced as desired, the larger demand being for the single faced signs for attaching above entrance to lobby.

Double-Faced Canopy Sign

These two varieties of signs just described have been found to meet the requirements of most photoplay houses. However, making signs to order to suit the individual needs of exhibitors who cannot use the regular types to advantage is given especial attention.

KRUPA AND SNYDER COMBINE INTERESTS UNDER THE NAME OF THE HAMILTON AMUSEMENT COMPANY

GEORGE M. KRUPA, manager of the new Hamilton theatre, and William H. Snyder, proprietor of the Grand theatre, Lancaster, Pa., have combined interests under the name of the Hamilton Amusement Company.

Negotiations have been in progress for some time. A meeting in Philadelphia consummated the deal. The company is capitalized at $100,000. Mr. Krupa is president and general manager of the company, while Mr. Snyder is treasurer.

George Krupa was a pioneer in Lancaster film progress, having opened Dreamland, a small house with only 150 seats, about ten years ago. Later the capacity was increased to four hundred. Afterwards Mr. Krupa also had the Hippodrome. Mr. Snyder is a native Lancasterian, who three years ago erected the Grand theatre. All three theatres will now be under the management of Mr. Krupa.

STRIKE SITUATION IN OKLAHOMA UNCHANGED AFTER 7 WEEKS

THE amusement situation in Oklahoma City, Okla., continues unchanged, and this makes the seventh week since the strike started.

Despite the apparent success of the strike from the union viewpoint, members of the Theatrical Managers' Association do not seem to weaken.

Theatrical managers are showing stubborn fighting, and a policy that gives but little satisfaction to the strikers. The strikers, however, claim success and say that they will win in the end.

FERRY FIELD THEATRE, DETROIT, A 1,600 CAPACITY HOUSE, IS NOW OPEN

THE Ferry Field theatre, Grand Boulevard and Grand River avenue, Detroit, Mich., opened on August 31. It belongs to the list of Detroit's most beautiful theatres. The seating capacity is 1,600. It has a large duplex pipe organ. Decorations are of the Spanish renaissance type. Most of the seats are on the main floor. C. Howard Crane was the architect. Pictures are changed daily.

FILZOLA MAKES FAVORABLE REPORT ON HIS MOTIOGRAPH

D. FILZOLA, owner of the Theaterette, Ft. Scott, Kan., was a recent visitor in Kansas City, reporting favorably on the results of his recent installation of a motiograph machine. Mr. Filzola has always paid particular attention to projection, and declares that his success in the past six years has been largely due to this feature.

LIFE-SIZE SECTION OF A SMALL SILVERTOWN CORD TIRE

These giant "Muscles of--Mileage"

HERE are the Thews and Sinews,—the Muscles and Tendons of "SAMPSON,"—laid bare!

Here are the two layers of giant "Cords,"—laid transversely—one layer over the other—with a layer of live Rubber between.

Here is the Secret of Silvertown Cord Tire Strength and Endurance, revealed.

Each Cord flattened like a tape, so that each strand may overlay the other, at the tread (as fish scales do) bridging the interstices.

Each Cord STRONG enough to lift a Man's weight.

Each giant Cord laid side-by-side with the next Cord, but FREE TO MOVE INDEPENDENTLY of the rest, without friction.

Free,—because each Cord lies between two layers of Elastic Rubber.

—Each Cord so thickly coated with that Elastic Rubber,—so thoroughly impregnated with it,—that no two strands of Cotton can touch each other,—"saw" across each other,—or wear each other out through Friction, Heat, or Chafing.

THAT is the secret of such wonderful FLEXIBILITY in Silvertown Cord Tires!

Each "Muscle of Mileage" permitted to play freely in its Elastic Rubber bed, as the Muscles of the powerful, but nimble Athlete, play,—in action.

This sinewy FLEXIBILITY, then, is what reduces "Traction-Wave" to the Minimum, in Silvertown Cord Tires!

It conserves practically all of the Motor-Power, to turn the Wheels.

This,—instead of wasting a large part of it, in continuous BENDING of the stiff unyielding Walls, of other Tires.

It takes out of Motoring that continuous "UP-HILL" work which the bending of stiff Tires is equivalent to.

HENCE,—the Car equipped with Silvertown Cord Tires will—— —Coast down hill 30% further!

—Travel 25% further on each Gallon of Gasoline!

—Develop 17% more Speed from same Motor!

—Ride with 50% less Vibration!

With all this, Silvertown Cord Tires have such giant STRENGTH, that they are practically immune to Stone-bruise, Puncture or Blow-out.

—Such marvellous ENDURANCE, that they have been driven 1500 Miles, at an average Speed of 76 Miles per hour, without changing a Tire.

Silvertowns are the easiest of all Tires to permanently Repair,—the most Aristocratic in appearance,—and the most Luxuriously smooth-running to ride upon.

You are paying for them NOW (without getting them) in the 25% additional Gasoline your present Tires consume.

Remember to get Silvertown advantages you must ride on Silvertown Tires. There is but one—fully patented—and manufactured only by

The National Ticket-printing Register is fast—over 100 operations per minute, when necessary.

It prints its own tickets, doing away with expensive preprinted tickets.

It records the tickets before it issues them.

It prints from one to five tickets at an operation.

It prints tickets of five different prices.

This register prints, records, and issues its own tickets, and is just as fast as the single-roll register.

It does all that the single-roll register does, and also prints tickets of any two prices selected from a list of fourteen.

It prints tickets of two prices at the same time—and each of a different color.

It enables ticket-takers to tell prices by color, which further speeds up the handling of crowds.

These registers quicken service in any business where tickets of admission are used.

They assure the manager of a correct record of his business and all his profits.

Paramount is built on human nature, Others rest on human whim!

Anything to get the public, say the others;
Anything to hold the public, says Paramount.

"HITCH YOUR WAGON TO A STAR" was good advice until Paramount came along and changed it to read: "Hitch your wagon to a hundred stars!"

The exhibitor who is in business for today, tomorrow, next year and for ten years must not gamble—his business must be built staunchly on human nature as it is, and not as some theorist says it is.

One star may make friends fast, but it takes a hundred stars to make fast friends.

The Paramount idea is right, is sound, is lasting. The success of the greatest talking machine company in the world proves it! The success of the greatest vaudeville enterprise in the world proves it! The success of five thousand Paramount Exhibitors proves it!

"Hitch your wagon to a star"—but be prepared to fall when that star sets!

Hitch your wagon to a hundred stars—give your public the complete Paramount Program—and you'll build a business, not for today, or tomorrow, but for the years to come.

Playing stars that are Paying stars

LINCOLN used to tell a story about a steamboat on the Sangamon River that had such a loud whistle that after it blew there wasn't enough steam left to move it.

Organizations that bleat and blurt about one star—that hide behind that star's good reputation, a half dozen bad pictures—that force their inferior productions on credulous exhibitors—such organizations remind us of Lincoln's steamboat——

After the noise, nothing!

FAMOUS PLAYERS, LASKY MOROSCO, AND PALLAS furnish the 104 plays a year (two-a-week) for

THE PARAMOUNT PROGRAM

And these 104 plays are plays—not "fillers," not monstrous makeshifts, not lackwit affairs that are hurried together to even up for a star that outweighs the rest of the program!

A Famous Players Production is to use the word production in the finest sense—a Lasky Picture is a thing of technical excellence—a Morosco or a Pallas Film is picture making at its highest point!

Then consider the stars—the greatest on earth! The number of them—a hundred! The character of them—the most beloved!

No matter where your theatre is—no matter whether you have 500 or 5,000,000 people to draw from, the Paramount Program is the only one because of its stars, its plays, its versatility, its service, that can be continuously profitable.

"THE QUEST OF LIFE"

"THE greatest dancers in the world." This is a title that Maurice and Florence Walton have established beyond thought of contradiction. They have only appeared in the capitals of Europe, America and South America. The people of your town have probably never seen them. With the present craze for dancing, they are on edge to witness the performance of this world-renowned couple. Imagine what volcanic effect the announcement of their first moving picture will cause! Imagine how eager your patrons will be to see them in the startling "Dance of Death" and other dances incorporated in the action of "The Quest of Life"! Imagine what a big thing it will be for you to be the first to show this wonderful picture! Remember, this is not a mere dance picture, but a gripping story.

LASKY STARS

PARAMOUNT PICTURES OF THE WEEK
RELEASED THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 28, 1916

JESSE L. LASKY presents
THEODORE ROBERTS and ANITA KING in ANTON THE TERRIBLE

THEODORE ROBERTS has long been known as the greatest living character actor on the American stage! You are familiar with his remarkable screen successes. Now we wish to say with all the emphasis we can enlist that Theodore Roberts has never acted with such terrific effect as in the character of Anton, the brutal Cossack Chief of Police. Anita King is the famous Paramount Girl who gained nation-wide publicity by her wonderful automobile dash cross-continent. Alone, either of these stars would create the sensation you expect from a Paramount feature. Together, they will arouse a tornado of interest. The picture is a dramatization by Jules Eckert Goodman of the story that made such a stir when first published in the Saturday Evening Post. It is beautifully presented—but that is an unnecessary statement to make to Paramount exhibitors.

WHEN Miss Martin was first plucked from the legitimate stars of the stage to take her place with screendom's leading idols, we predicted that she would some day rise to the highest position in her profession. This picture proves that we were right! In her own particular field Vivian Martin has no equal. Months from now, when her name assumes the importance it deserves, "Her Father's Son" will be known as the first picture that gave Vivian Martin a real opportunity to demonstrate her magical abilities. You must not overlook this chance to register an important victory in your patrons' eyes. In this extraordinary play of the picturesque old South, Miss Martin, masquerading as a Confederate spy, charms the heart of her Union lover, and brings a plot of tense situations to a happy-ever-after close. It is a picture we are really proud of.

Sept. 6, 1916.

Dear Mr. Sothern:-

On behalf of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, I wish to thank you for your splendid picture "The Chattel" soon to be released by the Greater Vitagraph Co.

You can hardly realize what it means to the Motion Picture Exhibitors to have so eminent an actor as yourself appear on the screen, and your thirty-five years of unqualified success and your unquestioned position as America's foremost player will do more for the uplifting of the silent drama, and placing it on the plane of the spoken drama, than words can express, and calls for an expression of appreciation.

I am, therefore, taking this opportunity to let you know how delighted I am personally, and you may rest assured this is the sentiment of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, in regard to your art being assured for all time through the medium of the silent drama.

To you, to Messrs. Albert E. Smith and J. Stuart Blackton, to Director Thomson and to every member of the Greater Vitagraph organization contributing to the work of picturization of your plays the Motion Picture Exhibitors are deeply indebted.

With best wishes for your continued good health, and success,
I remain,

Very sincerely,

Brag is a Good Dog But—

There is an old saying that while Brag is a good dog, Holdfast is better. It is a true saying, too!

Fancy vests, wrong-font plug hats, and a cherry stick may constitute a "front," but, believe me, a "front" cannot forever get by. Sooner or later the goods must be delivered.

A "front" is all right in its place, but it is too frequently out of place. Anyone can put up a "front;" anyone can blow, bluster, and brag, but on this old sphere it is performances which count!

The House of Selig is one of the few pioneer houses in Movieville. It has a long list of discoveries, of performances well done, has an enviable reputation honestly earned. The name of Selig is worth a fortune in itself—it stands for art, for painstaking care, for dependability.

In regular service of General Film Company on Monday, October 9, the Selig multiple reel drama, "Converging Paths," will be released. It is an unusual drama filled with thrilling action. "A Mistake in Rustlers," in General Film service, will be released Saturday, October 14, and features Tom Mix.

MUTUAL NEWS

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION. 68 EXCHANGES

VOL. I | OCTOBER 7, 1916 | No. 4

"The Pawnshop" Is The Newest Chaplin Mutual Special

ANOTHER Charlie Chaplin Mutual Special Feature will be released to exhibitors beginning Monday, October 2. It is two reels in length, like the others in the series. Its title is "The Pawnshop." As the title suggests, Charlie appears as the clerk of a pawnbroker. The surroundings of a pawnshop give him almost limitless possibilities for comedy. Charlie fairly outdoes himself in taking advantage of these possibilities. He manages to get a laugh out of the most commonplace of situations. He invents new situations constantly.

Charlie's Newest Antics.

Charlie Chaplin's antics in the new two-reel Mutual Special Feature are the funniest he has performed to date. At an advance showing of the film in one Mutual exchange to a whole roomful of exhibitors, the laughs came so thick and fast that it was impossible to keep track of them. Men who seldom smile at the broadest kind of slapstick comedy not only smiled but laughed until on the verge of tears. The whole roomful voted it "a riot!" The laughs that Charlie manages to get out of his "business" with the sign in front of the pawnbroker's would alone take an adding machine to tabulate. And that is only one scene in the two-reeler. "The Pawnshop" is the sixth of the series of Chaplin Mutual Specials. The others are "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," "One A. M." and "The Count." All six of them can be seen and booked at any of the sixty-eight Mutual film exchanges.

New Gaumont Series

This week sees the release of the fifth of the thrilling detective stories issued by the Mutual Film Corporation under the general title of the "Fantomas series." This unusual lot of photoplays, each three reels in length, proved such a success that a new series is now being arranged. "The Vampires" is the title of the new series. It is going to be even more sensational than was the "Fantomas series." A strange band of Parisian crooks operates under the name of "The Vampires." Each subject in the series will deal with a new exploit of this mystic band.

In furtherance of his policy of securing the most famous and most talented stars in all filmland for the leading roles in Mutual Star Productions, President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation expects very soon to make some startling announcements.

"A Lass of the Lumberlands" Is New Signal Chapter-Play

President S. S. Hutchinson of the Signal Film corporation has just announced the release of a new chapter-play starring Helen Holmes. Its title is "A Lass of the Lumberlands." It is in fifteen chapters. J. P. McGowan, who directed the great success, "The Girl and the Game," is directing the new chapter-play. It will be released through the exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation. Exhibitors can obtain the first chapter on Monday, October 23. The other chapters will be released weekly thereafter. Bookings are now being taken. The story of "A Lass of the Lumberlands" is a story of Big Business and the great lumbering industry of this country. It abounds in thrilling scenes, sensational feats of daring and yet is a logical story of real events in the great timber regions of the great North woods. A tremendous, nation-wide advertising and publicity campaign will be given this chapter-play. The exhibitors will be assisted in every way in getting the public to their theaters to see Helen Holmes in "A Lass of the Lumberlands." The new production was undertaken in response to the request of nearly 6,000 exhibitors who asked for "another Helen Holmes serial" following their tremendous success with "The Girl and the Game."

The sequel to the great serial film, "The Diamond From the Sky," has been finished. The release date will soon be announced.

Mary Miles Minter In Second Mutual Star Production

DAINTY MARY MILES MINTER comes back again this week in the second of her American-Mutual Star Productions. Its title is "Dulcie's Adventure." James Kirkwood directed it. He is the same man who directed "Tess of the Storm Country" and other Mary Pickford productions. Exhibitors everywhere know what that means. In Mary Miles Minter he has as charming an ingenue as the screen has ever seen. She has a tremendous following. "Film fans" everywhere will walk miles to see a Mary Miles Minter picture. That means money to the exhibitor. It means that he won't have to go out and seek an audience for his theatre. His audience will come to him. Every house that presented "Youth's Endearing Charm," the first of the Mary Miles Minter Mutual productions, made money. The exhibitors who booked it were satisfied. They are anxious to have more Mary Miles Minter pictures. They are booking the whole series of features in which this charming star appears. The second of the series is now ready.

"Dulcie's Adventure."

In "Dulcie's Adventure" Mary Miles Minter has a wonderful opportunity for the display of her talents. She appears again as an orphan. She is afflicted with two maiden aunts who make life far from enjoyable for her. One aunt finally arranges to send her to California to marry a supposedly wealthy count. Dulcie doesn't love the count, but cares for an humble grocery boy back in the South. The marriage is forced upon her, however. She doffs her antiquated hoop-skirts and dons a white satin wedding gown. And then—at the church the count is proved an imposter and little Dulcie is free to find happiness with her grocery boy. It is a story with a strong human interest appeal. It is a picture that will delight any audience. It is being booked by all of the sixty-eight Mutual exchanges.

"A Woman's Daring."

"A Woman's Daring," a Mutual Masterpicture from the studios of the American Film Company, Inc., will be released through all Mutual exchanges beginning October 5. It features Edward Coxen and Winifred Greenwood. It is five reels in length and tells an absorbing story. The photography of the American Film studios is famous wherever pictures are shown. This picture is no exception to the rule. It is a rare evening's entertainment. Exhibitors can see it at any of the sixty-eight Mutual film exchanges.

The Winning Hand is FANTOMAS

The popularity of your theatre depends on your success in making regular visitors of your patrons. You can do this with the least effort by showing "Fantomas." It is a cleanly sensational series that holds the interest from one episode to the next. Each is "a perfect cloud of sensations," while the end "leaves the spectator in profound suspense." Read the trade paper reviews yourself and take their judgment.

Millions of people have read about "Fantomas" in the great syndicate of newspapers that published the stories this summer. They are now eager to see the world's greatest criminal on the screen. Also remember that "Fantomas" is a proved success. It has already magnetized millions of dollars into motion picture box-offices all over the world.

IMPORTANT: You can get "Fantomas" only through the Mutual Film Corporation. Book the five three-reel episodes at your nearest Mutual Branch TODAY.

Watch for "THE VAMPIRES, or The Arch Criminals of Paris," soon to be released, in nine complete episodes of three reels each.

"The Jungle Child"

A wholly "different" Kay-Bee drama, featuring Howard Hickman and Dorothy Dalton.

A vital, strong picture of undoubted charm and stirring mystery.

The romantic presentation of an unscrupulous and adventurous explorer who discovered a lost heiress in the depths of the Brazilian forests, and of the unsuspected and terrific developments that followed her transplanting to New York.

A "puller" in every sense of the word.

Douglas Fairbanks in "Manhattan Madness"

This is a typical Fairbanks picture, and merely its announcement is sufficient to pack your house.

You already know this by experience, if you have ever run a Fairbanks picture.

Here is the rushing, dashing story of the young Westerner who comes East with the conviction that nothing exciting ever happens on the Atlantic seaboard, and who gets the greatest thrill of his life in New York City. If your audiences don't cheer this picture you can offer them their money back.

Attention Mr. O'Donnell:

Dear Sir:

It gives me much pleasure to inform you that Lina Cavalieri in "The Shadow of Her Past" played a very satisfactory and remunerative engagement at our Strand Theatre five days beginning August 27th. Notwithstanding adverse weather conditions, the attendance far exceeded our expectations and we were well pleased with the production.

We felt confident that Cavalieri's name would draw the money and we advertised the picture strongly. In this connection beg to say that we cannot see where an exhibitor could possibly go wrong in booking "The Shadow of Her Past".

We will be pleased to play at any time any other Cavalieri productions that you may release for this international beauty is a well established drawing card.

With kindest personal regards and best wishes,

Very truly yours,

The Crisis

IT INSPIRES PATRIOTISM

No. 1 SELIG'S GREATEST PRODUCTION Vol. 1

WILLIAM N. SELIG FILMS A MASTERPIECE "THE CRISIS" VERDICT

Wonderful Ten Reel Production Carrying A Logical Plot

William N. Selig has filmed the greatest of American film dramas in "The Crisis." That is the verdict of critics who have viewed preliminary presentations of this wonderful drama in ten reels. It has been pronounced a film drama that presents the great crisis in our national life with splendid power and with a sympathy, a sincerity, and a patriotism that are inspiring.

According to one famous authority, the Selig drama is skillful in plot, dramatic in episode, powerful and original in climax. It is not only a spectacular scenic production but has something more—a logical gripping story.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN IS REAL IN "THE CRISIS"

Sam D. Drane enacts the part of Abraham Lincoln, in the Selig drama of American Patriotism, "The Crisis." Critics aver that Drane's "Lincoln" is the most wonderful the movie screen ever saw. It appears as if Abraham Lincoln were really and truly there before you in the drama. Drane's "Lincoln" will go down as one of the best characterizations ever known.

SOUTHERN SCENES

Real Southern atmosphere was secured for "The Crisis" by sending a special company of players, under the direction of Colin Campbell, to Vicksburg, Mississippi. In many photoplays, the atmosphere is unreal. In "The Crisis" the Southern atmosphere is genuine.

"CRISIS" FACTS

Winston Churchill wrote "The Crisis," a story of our National life. The story has been filmed by the Selig Company with inspiring sympathy, sincerity and patriotism. There is not a scene in the film drama but what can be found in the story.

SHERMAN OPENS AN OFFICE IN GOTHAM TO PUSH PICTURE

Action Necessary To Accommodate Those Interested In State Rights

H. A. Sherman, President of Sherman-Elliott, Inc., which purchased a half interest in "The Crisis" from William N. Selig at the cost of a quarter of a million dollars, has opened offices at 220 W. 42nd Street, New York City. This action was necessary because of the flood of inquiries received from territorial rights buyers.

Mr. Sherman urges promptness on the part of those wishing to confer with him regarding "The Crisis" territorial rights for sale, for the policy of first come first served will be upheld. "The Crisis" is expected to create a furore among the motion picture public.

AN ALL-STAR CAST IN SELIG'S BEST DRAMA

A strictly all-star cast appears in the Selig wonder picture, "The Crisis," to be presented by William N. Selig and Sherman-Elliott, Inc. Among the stars can be named, George W. Fawcett as "Judge Silas Whipple"; Thomas Santschi, as "Stephen Brice"; Miss Bessie Eyton as "Virginia Carvel"; Mat B. Snyder as "Colonel Carvel"; Marshall Neilan, as "Clarence Colfax," and Eugenie Besserer as "Mrs. Brice."

OLDEST ACTOR

Matt B. Snyder, 82 years young, is without doubt the oldest actor in active work in Filmland. Mr. Snyder enacts the role of "Colonel Carvel" in the "The Crisis" and despite his years, puts vim and fire into his work. He scores a tremendous hit. He is as tall and as straight as an arrow.

SPECIAL AIDS

Special publicity aids have been prepared for those showing "The Crisis." A complete line of beautiful paper, heralds, lobby display photographs, electrotypes, etc., will be furnished. Inquiries should be made of Selig Company, 58 East Washington Street, Chicago.

ENTIRE STATE GUARD ENGAGED FOR "CRISIS" FILMED BY SELIG

Scenes Taken at Vicksburg, Miss. Right on Historic Ground of Story

Several thousand members of the Mississippi National Guard were employed by William N. Selig for "The Crisis" battle scenes. These scenes, directed by Colin Campbell, were filmed right on historical battle fields of the Civil War period and real fortifications used during the Civil War were utilized.

Thousands of men are seen in desperate warfare but these battle scenes are just enough in number to advance the action of Winston Churchill's great story. "The Crisis" is not a series of spectacular pictures, it carries a gripping plot.

BEAUTIFUL LIGHTING EFFECTS IN DRAMA

Beautiful lighting effects will be shown in "The Crisis," the greatest film drama ever released by the Selig Polyscope Company. Half interest in "The Crisis" for the United States and Canada has been acquired by Sherman-Elliott, Inc., who will exploit this feature picture in a manner suitable to its artistic worth. The photography is also clear-cut.

SPECIAL MUSIC

Prof. Michel Mowschine has composed the special musical score for "The Crisis," the magnificent film feature recently completed by the Selig Company.

This score has been pronounced very beautiful and will accompany presentation of the drama.

"THE CRISIS"

The story of "The Crisis" opens just before the Civil War, and the action is carried into that crisis in the life of this nation. There are spectacular battle scenes and leading characters both of the North and South are handled with sympathetic understanding. "The Crisis" will go down in Filmland's history as the greatest photoplay.

IN the country of the blind the one-eyed man is king. Vision makes leaders. Foresight constantly brings new powers to the forefront. The ability to anticipate conditions—to estimate future developments—this quality is the stuff of which success is made.

The reign of the "one-eyed kings" is over in the moving picture industry—the exhibitor is no longer blind to his own best interests. A new deal is in the cards—one that means bigger profits for the film renter—better productions for the public and fairer terms for the star.

A New Slant to the Industry

THE news may be announced at almost any moment of the unloading by a prominent program of its own distribution system and the consequent marketing of its pictures through other and long established exchanges.

To our mind this is the most significant swerve in a commercial way the industry has yet made.

We may look lightly upon the matter as one of consolidation, concerning which there is so much and such constant gossip.

BUT there's a big and deep commercial principle involved here which is bound to shape very largely the future of the industry.

What this action really means is the proper logical recognition of the jobber in this business—the same recognition given the sale and distribution of goods through general jobbers in other fields—in all other fields.

WITHIN the past few years a considerable number of new exchange systems have been launched. A number failed and went out of existence. A crisis was reached about a year ago, at which time it was quite evident that the industry had several times as many exchanges everywhere as the market demanded.

Competition was extreme. Prices were, of course, affected. But the worse effect upon the industry as a whole was the heavy drain caused by the upkeep of many offices everywhere when only one was necessary.

Under the scheme production and distribution were launched at the same time.

DISTRIBUTION, naturally, was weak at the outset. The new exchanges had to nose their way into a field already overcrowded with exchanges. In the meantime production expense was going on full-blast, just as heavily as though distribution had been long established and was highly efficient—or to put it in figures, just as if the new exchange system were filling three thousand services instead of three hundred.

All the time the inexorable and peculiar selling system of the picture business was in operation.

In many other commercial lines the goods sold don't depreciate heavily while on the dealers' shelves. If production is too far ahead of distribution, good advertising and extra selling effort can lighten the overloaded shelves and sales will catch up with production.

NOT so in the picture business. If the new exchange cannot get its service into a goodly number of the first-run houses in its territory then all these first-run houses are gone forever as customers for the pictures that failed to catch on.

Let us say that the new exchange sells its first-run service to three out of thirty theatres. Then twenty-seven theatres are forever lost as customers for the pictures involved. Only the second, third and fourth-run houses are now available, and so on.

Consider the number of excellent pictures which have failed of first run—consider their immediate depreciation in price—and estimate the whole waste involved—all through new and weak distribution.

THIS is wasteful and wrong—as time has proved.

If you have a patented and monopolistic product you can sell it profitably through your own set of offices. But the moment you lose your patent and monopolistic hold—and competitive production starts up—you must turn to the general jobber.

THE automobile business is tending more and more to the jobbing system. This year the largest manufacturer has announced his intention of selling his product to the garage as a dealer.

And now we have the unmistakable signs of the same shaping of the picture business.

THESE signs are healthy.

The selling basis of this business is the exchange system. The established exchange knows the demands of its territory through constant communication with it. It is the pulse of the market. It knows what it wants to buy and what it can sell.

THEREFORE it is only logical that the producer should feel the pulse of the market through the established exchange, thereby producing what is wanted and no more than is wanted. It is equally illogical, it would seem, for the producer to force and direct his own and a new distributing system.

He is not only assuming an unnecessary burden of overhead expense, but he is apt to be blindly stuffing the market with too many goods, or the kind of goods not in demand.

Eventually we shall, of course, have classified exchanges, that is to say certain exchanges which handle one kind and quality of pictures (no matter how many different makes) and others which handle other grades. But they are bound to be like the general jobbers in other fields.

COINCIDENT with this expected announcement of the abolition of one set of exchanges comes the news of the launching of a new company without the formation of a single new exchange.

A New Slant to the Industry

Several producers got together and made their first step one of consultation with a number of strong independent exchanges, as well as with the foreign market. As a result, they will start production with their territory already sold and their marketing in the hands of established and experienced exchanges.

ANOTHER healthful sign.

Producing for the market, not forcing one—this should be and we believe, will be the future policy of this industry, and that it is the one logical way to stop overproduction and over-expense.

"Bad" Pictures and Bad Judgment

WE are taken to task by a writer in a contemporary publication for accepting the advertising of "bad" pictures while we editorially condemn them.

We assume the shoe is meant for us, since Motion Picture News alone carries all the current advertising in the field.

THERE have been many previous innuendoes from the same writer, all of which we cheerfully ignore since, in our conception, the reader is interested in his own business and our service to that business, and not at all in personal spite and animosities.

And we are still cheerfully sure that our journalistic conception is correct.

We believe, however, a statement is due in this one instance in justice to the trade and ourselves.

IN the first place we are publishing a weekly journal of this trade. We aim to reflect, each week, all the news of all its activities. We review pictures; we don't censor them. We edit news; we don't suppress it. And we are disinclined to censor or suppress advertising matter.

We are, we repeat, a news and service organ of the trade. We are not, nor do we pose as censors or reformers of the trade and its announcements.

THE writer says, certain pictures are "bad." That is his opinion and he is entitled to the free expression of it.

With the liberty which the press enjoys and which we are asking for the picture no one will censor him as he would have the advertisements of the pictures censored and even suppressed.

We also have our views,—only individual, we confess, —on what are "bad" pictures.

WE believe that two recent releases on two different and prominent programs are "bad" in that they present vice in an attractive form. We believe that they are worse than the cruder presentations of the repelling environment of vice.

The writer in question evidently overlooked the suppression of the advertisements of these pictures, as well as the advertisement of another "bad" picture (we assume it comes within his category of "bad" pictures) recently put out by an established company, quite as prominent an advertiser as the distributors of the pictures mentioned above.

WE are very much inclined, very sincerely inclined to question the business consistency of this writer, just as we are inclined to question the soundness of his views on censorship and on the sphere and function of a trade journal.

However, we are undisturbed. We shall cheerfully go on, as good publications have for many a year, reflecting all the news and our own editorial opinions of it.

AND we close with a letter just received from an appreciative reader:

"Dear Mr. Johnston:

"Congratulate you for your editorial of September 30, entitled 'Bully for the Newspapers.' You certainly are one publisher who don't give a snap whether the producers of 'Children Not Admitted' pictures advertise in your paper or not.

"Give us some more publishers like you and the censorship will be dead. This is no bull!

"Yours for continued success,

"S. HARTMAN,
"Mt. Vernon, Ohio."

One Reason Why Exhibitors Should Study Their Public

THE demand for good pictures for children and the failure of Buffalo, N. Y., exhibitors—among others —to meet the demand is causing much discussion among the parents of that city. At present when children are taken to picture houses, they must observe all the modern "domestic trouble" pictures, undraped woman, now, it seems quite popular, murder, and what not. The effect, to say the least, is not wholesome.

PERHAPS the condition is more thoroughly discussed in the following editorial from the Buffalo Evening News, written by the father of three children, whom he took to a photoplay house the other night and found, to his dismay, a picture, which as he says, he would not have thought of taking his children to see.

National Association Solid Against Censorship

Directors of Recently Formed Body Representing the Whole Industry Unanimously Decide Against Any Form of Legalized Censorship—Meeting Enthusiastic and Harmonious—Strong Speeches by D. W. Griffith and William A. Seabury

AT an enthusiastic meeting held in its room in the Times Building last Thursday the board of directors of The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, by a unanimous and harmonious vote, went on record as opposed to legalized censorship of any kind.

Practically the whole day was given over to a discussion of the censorship question. At the morning session of the board it was declared an open meeting for the purpose of giving those prominent and important men in the industry who were not members of the board a chance to express their views. The proponents of a legalized Federal censorship or regulation were given the first hearing, and while they one and all expressed their aversion to censorship as a principle, they advocated Federal control as a palliative for present conditions. Their main argument was that censorship in some form or other was bound to come, and that such being the case, it would be better to have it in some centralized body, such as a Federal board of control, rather than submit to a widely diversified state and local censorship, each with a different standard. The trend of their arguments was that Federal regulation would prevent the formation of state and local boards of censors. Each of the gentlemen who spoke on this side of the question stated at the beginning of their arguments that, irrespective of their own opinions, they would agree to unqualifiedly stand by the action of the board when the question came up for a decisive vote.

Strong Speech by Griffith

There were four principal speeches made against censorship in any form. They were made by D W. Griffith, Lee Ochs, president of The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, Stephen J. Bush, and William A. Seabury, counsel of the Association. Mr. Griffith made one of the most convincing and interesting speeches heard on the question. Commencing at a period in the history of the world five hundred years before the birth of Christ, he showed the manner in which Gautama Buddha was censored by the priests of his period, and then, following down through civilization, convincingly set forth by concrete examples in history the manner in which every new movement, invention and idea which has had an effect on aiding and improving civilization had been censored. "Once Federal censorship is established what power can break it?" he said. "Who will stand a chance of arguing with the United States Government? Who would be able to object if the censors objected to Mary Pickford smoking a cigarette in the first act? I believe that Federal censorship means the end of the motion picture as an art, an industry and form of speech." Mr. Griffith then read a large number of telegrams, the most important of which was from the Motion Picture Directors Association of America, comprising every director in Los Angeles, stating that they were opposed to censorship in any form.

Seabury Presents Legal Aspects

Mr. Bush made an exceedingly strong speech, bringing out the fact that "censorships breeds censorship; it begets censorship, and you will have multiform censorship, all varieties and all kinds of censorship." William A. Seabury, general counsel for the Association, spoke on the legal aspects of the question, saying in part: "The arguments of every man who advocates any form of censorship are based exclusively on the question of expediency, that if they get Federal censorship it is going to abolish state or local censorship. That is highly a matter of opinion, but I have no hesitancy in saying that it will have no such effect at all." Mr. Seabury then went on to point out and prove conclusively that the Congress of the United States really had no right to interfere with this question at all, his arguments being based on a recent decision of the Supreme Court whereby a motion picture film ceased to be a subject in interstate commerce when it came into a state for the purpose of exhibition and was placed either in the hands of an exchange for delivery to its exhibitor or received by an exhibitor direct for exhibition." Continuing, he said: "I am convinced that there is only one way of dealing with this subject, and that is from the standpoint of public education. Funds are not needed for the purpose of political chicanery, but they are needed for the purpose of properly putting before the public what censorship means."

Mr. Ochs told of the manner in which the New York Local of the Exhibitors League of America had defeated the nomination of Senator Cristman at the primaries. Concluding, he said: "I want to say to you that the exhibitor is the best judge of who should be the censor. We come in contact daily with the public and with our patrons, and if we don't show pictures that are clean they will not be patrons of ours any longer. You can put on a smutty picture and you can get a lot of money, but I want to say that it kills your house for one, two and three days afterwards, and the sooner the exhibitor realizes it the better he will be."

Following the morning session the directors went into executive session later in the afternoon, and after a long meeting, in which every phase of the question was discussed, came out unanimously against censorship of any kind.

Zukor Explains Position

Following the meeting Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players, made a statement giving the reason for his change of attitude. He said:

"I fought for the passage of a Federal bill because I believe that by its enactment motion picture producers and exhibitors could conform with one set of rules, instead of being subjected to the varying restrictions of the number of state and local boards that now exist. It was my conviction that if the government maintained a board it would have the respect and confidence of local boards, in time eliminating them entirely. Such a result would be far more desirable than the existence of many boards, as a single standard would enable producers easily to avoid the presentation of objectionable subjects. I am now advised by the legal board of the National Association, however, that creation of a Federal board would not eliminate the state and municipal boards, and would, in fact, encourage such local bodies in places where they are not now maintained, because of the love of home rule inherent in every state and municipality. Under the circumstances, I intend to be guided by this legal advice.

Those present at the meeting were William A. Brady, World Film Corporation; Carl Laemmle, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; William L. Sherrill, Frohman Amusement Company; Adolph Zukor, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Jesse Lasky; Lee Ochs, President of the Exhibitors League of America; Hiram Abrams, Paramount Pictures Corporation; Walter W. POLOTSKOVA PLANS SERIES OF CLASSIC DANCE PICTURES

Mlle. Garda Polotskova, a foreign classic dancer of note, is considering plans for the production of a series of pictures presenting interpretative dances. Mlle. Polotskova is of the opinion that these would be of great interest to the public at large, and to women in particular, as the classic dances are considered the best known exercise for women

The dancer is by no means unknown to the screen, having appeared in a Lubin picture, "Love's Toll," which was released last winter.

SECOND LINCOLN PICTURE COMPLETED

The second production of the Lincoln Motion Picture Company of Los Angeles, "The Trooper of Co. K," has been completed and shortly will be released as a state rights subject. This picture like the first one made by this company, "The Realization of a Negro's Ambition," has negroes in all the principal parts and features Noble Campbell and Beulah Hall in the leads.

This film pictures a negro joining the army because it offers him a more honorable position than it is possible for him to secure. By his bravery he is promoted, and finally at the battle of Carrizali, he serves to save the entire army. For scenes in this more than three hundred players were used and a large setting representing a complete village was built.

The Lincoln organization is the only one in the world making negro subjects, and they have found a good market for their first release which is now being shown in practically every southern state, and in many northern cities where there are negro theatres.

New York Offices Opened by Sherman-Elliott, Inc.

Exploitation of "The Crisis" to Be Handled from Candler Building—First Private Trade Showing Friday of This Week

H. A. Sherman, president of Sherman-Elliott, Inc., of Milwaukee, was in New York last week, where he opened offices in the Candler Building for the exploitation of the Selig production of "The Crisis," which his concern bought the United States and Canadian rights of, for a quarter of a million dollars.

Early in the week Mr. Sherman gave a luncheon to the representatives of the trade press at the Hotel McAlpin, for the purpose of getting acquainted. Those present were James Hoff of the Moving Picture World, Peter Milne, Theodore Osborn Eltonhead of the Motion Picture News, Fred J. Beecroft, Lynde Denig of the Dramatic Mirror, Tom Kennedy of Motography, James Milligan of the Bill Board, Dickson Watts of the Morning Telegraph, E. J. Fairservice of the Brooklyn Eagle and E. J. O'Donnell, special representative for Mr. Elliott.

Mr. Sherman during the course of the luncheon stated that he planned booking "The Crisis" on a states rights basis, east of Chicago, and as a traveling theatrical company through the west in the same manner that he had found so successful in handling "The Birth of a Nation" and "Ramona."

The first private showing of the picture will be held at the Strand theatre, Friday morning, September 29 at ten o'clock. This showing will be for the members of the press, territorial right buyers and a few well-known men of the film trade. Winston Churchill, the celebrated author of the book will be present at this showing and will view for the first time the motion picture version of his novel.

"The Crisis" is a ten-reel master-play dealing with the period preceding the Civil War, and with the stirring incidents of that conflict, presents the greatest crisis in the life of the Nation with splendid power and with a sympathy, a sincerity and a patriotism that are inspiring.

It was produced by Colin Campbell under the personal direction of Mr. Selig. Those who have seen advance presentations state that it is the most costly photo-drama that Mr. Selig has ever produced.

Elaborate Trade Showing for "The Common Law"

Many Prominent Persons Present at St. Regis Ballroom—Clara Kimball Young Receives at Buffet Supper

"THE COMMON LAW," Lewis J. Selznick's first release, made from the Robert W. Chambers novel, and starring Clara Kimball Young, has been given its New York premier under exceptional auspices. Two private showings were given last week, one for friends of the company and reviewers from the trade and daily papers, and another for the National Board of Review. The first showing was given at the Hotel St. Regis, Fifth avenue and Fifty-fifth street, where the grand ball room was filled to overflowing.

Clara Kimball Young

Many prominent in the theatrical and motion picture business were present including Lillian Russell, Lee Shubert, Carl Laemmle, Hiram Abrams, James Buchanan Brady, Kitty Gordon, Herbert Brenon, Violet Mersereau, A. B. Kooperman, J. E. Brulatour, Edna Wallace Hopper, Britton N. Busch, Suzanne Westford Allen, Harris Fisher, Mitchel Mark, G. M. Anderson, Lawrence Weber, Earl Williams, Victor Watson, James R. Quirk and Walter Kingsley. Miss Young and Mr. Selznick received the guests after the showing at a buffet supper.

That Director Albert Capellani has transferred the delicate theme of the Chambers novel to the screen with remarkable skill was manifest when the National Board voted to pass the production without a cut or change. In addition the board declared the picture was the finest representation of a work of fiction it had ever seen filmed.

The Marcus Loew circuit of houses in New York City, has secured the pre-release showing of the picture beginning Monday, September 25.

"THE CONQUEST OF CANAAN" IS GIVEN PRIVATE SHOWING AT STRAND, NEW YORK

"The Conquest of Canaan," the most recent of the Frohman Amusement Corporation's productions now complete, was given a private screening at the Strand theatre, Tuesday, under the auspices of Carl Edourde musical director of that house.

"The Conquest of Canaan" in book form, sold into the millions. Booth Tarkington, who is issuing an edition de luxe, always considered it his most attractive bit of fiction. As a special feature at the Strand showing, Helen Arnold the new Frohman beauty-star was introduced from the stage.

Exhibitors League Defeats Senator Cristman

Organized Opposition to Sponsor of Offensive Christman-Wheeler Censorship Bill Results in Nomination of Theodore Douglas Robinson by 400 Majority—Campaign Waged by Slides in Motion Picture Theatres and Through Newspaper Publicity

THE defeat of Senator Cristman at the primaries in the Thirty-second Senatorial District marks the first time that organized effort on the part of motion picture exhibitors has entered politics for the defeat of candidates opposed to the best interests of the industry.

Senator Cristman introduced the offensive Wheeler-Cristman censorship bill in the State Legislature last winter, and was instrumental in having it pass both houses. It was only the fact that it was a poorly worded measure that kept it from receiving the signature of Governor Whitman.

When Senator Cristman came up for renomination at the primaries, the New York Local of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America started an active campaign against him, supporting the candidacy of Theodore Douglas Robinson. Senator Cristman was defeated by 400 majority.

At the last election Cristman carried this district by 3,200 majority, so that the effect of the campaign waged by the exhibitors is shown in the present result. Owing to the fact that the district is overwhelmingly Republican the exhibitors knew that the main fight had to be waged at the primary. This was an uphill fight in every way owing to the fact that there are no large cities in the district. The campaign was made directly through the theatres. Slides were thrown on the screen telling the position of the exhibtors and advocating the nomination of Robinson.

Senator Cristman used the newspapers exclusively taking paid advertisements, one of which is shown in the accompanying illustration. Organization was effected among the exhibitors by Lee Ochs, president of the League, at a conference that was held in Utica. H. G. Lux was chosen temporary chairman and W. A. Fait, Jr., secretary. One of the most ardent workers was Casper W. Shults, of Little Falls, New York, who not only did a vast amount of missionary work among the various theatre owners in the district, but who was able to get a large amount of newspaper publicity as well.

Fac-simile of the Advertising Used by Senator Cristman to Offset the Slides of the Exhibitors in the Herkimer County (N. Y.) Primary Battle of Last Week

Mr. Robinson Thanks Exhibitors

Immediately upon receipt of the news of the exhibitors' victory, MOTION PICTURE NEWS wrote to Theodore Douglas Robinson, Senator Cristman's successful opponent, asking for his testimonial as to the service the exhibitors had rendered him during the campaign.

Mr. Robinson, in the communication printed below, cordially acknowledges his debt to the exhibitors, and, what is more important, offers them some suggestions, based upon his extensive political experience, for increasing the value of the motion picture screen in political campaigns.

We take pleasure in reproducing Mr. Robinson's letter in full:

September 24, 1916.

Mr. William A. Johnston,
729 Seventh avenue,
New York.

My Dear Sir:

I am in receipt of your letter of September 21, and hasten to reply as you request.

In certain ways the support of the motion picture interests was of help in my nomination over Senator Cristman.

In certain other ways such support cost me votes on account of the misunderstanding regarding the reasons for the opposition to Senator Cristman.

Lew Fields, the Distinguished Stage Comedian, Recently Engaged by World Film Corporation to Star in a Series of "Brady Made" Pictures, Is Here Shown in a Characteristic Series of Scenes from the First of His Features, "The Man Who Stood Still." The Play from Which the Pictures Were Taken Was a Distinct Success on Broadway Not Long Ago

As a means of reaching the people with what one has to put before them, the screen is an excellent medium, but I am of the opinion that the motion picture interests will defeat their own purposes in a political campaign, unless they are willing to consult and co-operate with those that know the political situation in such a district as this, and also unless plenty of time is taken to thoroughly explain the reasons for either supporting a certain candidate or defeating a certain candidate.

The motion picture interests did nothing in their campaign against Senator Cristman until the last few days, and then what was done was done without sufficient planning and consultation with those who were in closer touch with the political atmosphere of the district, and I think that a large portion of the campaign by the motion picture interests against Senator Cristman reacted in his favor, for the reason that such campaign was not conducted on the right lines.

I have been frank and clear as you requested. The screen can be a great factor in a political campaign, provided time is taken to conduct the right kind of a campaign.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) T. Douglas Robinson.

STOCK COMPANIES BEING REDUCED ON WEST COAST

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, Sept. 23.

For the past several weeks a change has been in process among the west coast producing companies. With but one or two exceptions the larger studios have reduced their stock organizations. At the American plant at Santa Barbara reduction was started first. The latter part of June there were fourteen companies working there, while at the present time there is not more than six. This change was made because of a change of policy, which provides for the discontinuance of one, two and three reel subjects. As soon as the last scenes of "Intolerance" were made at the Fine Arts plant, many of the guarantee and stock people, who had been retained to work in scenes for this and other Fine Arts productions received their notice. The Ince studio at Culver City is far ahead of release, and one director and a number of stock and guarantee players were released recently. A change has also been effected at the Keystone, where the stock company has been slightly reduced.

The largest reduction to be made recently was that at Universal City this week when seven directors discontinued work, reducing the number now actively engaged to twenty-six. It is the intention of the Universal to make the major portion of its productions during the summer months when the days are longest, and there are but few without bright sunshine.

While some companies have been reducing their stock organizations, others have been increasing. The latter applies to the Fox and Lasky companies. Fox now has nine companies at work, and Lasky eight.

ROTHACKER FILMS LITHOGRAPHERS CONVENTION

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, Sept. 23

The Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago is making a reel of moving pictures to illustrate the convention of National Lithographers Association held in Chicago. This is the personal idea of W. H. Krohmer, president of the Goes Lithographer Company.

A part of the picture was taken at the Sherman Hotel, and the balance at the South Shore Country Club, where a dinner was given in honor of the ladies of the Lithographers Association.

The completed picture was shown through the courtesy of Mr. Krohmer at the official banquet of the Lithographers Association, held at the Sherman House later in the week.

Mr. Tom Quill of the Goes Lithograph Company, well known in film circles, attended to the details of the production.

HOPKINS, ANIMATED MODELING INVENTOR, JOINS PARAMOUNT

William d'A. Hopkins, the Scotch artist and sculptor, who recently invented a new method of doing animated modeling for motion pictures, has given Paramount Pictures Corporation the opportunity of showing his first works to the lovers of motion picture novelty.

The first of a series of his work will be shown in a forthcoming release of the magazine-on-the-screen, the Paramount Pictographs.

In his first sculptured picture he tells a pathetic story of Priscilla and her encounter with the Pesky Fly. The fly makes his entrance on the bridge of Priscilla's nose, which is a very homely nose, but a perfect match for the rest of Priscilla's face. The fly's soft footfalls, as he steals about, soon lulls the maiden to sleep. Then she dreams a wonderful dream.

Her features become transformed, so that she looks like the sister of Venus with captivating dimples with not even a fly to disturb. When she wakes she finds she still has her old features with her.

FRANCIS CARLYLE DIES IN HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT

Francis Carlyle, a well-known actor of the screen and stage, brother of Robert McNab, who has long been connected with the motion picture business, died September 15, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Joseph S. Murray, 1478 Broad street, Hartford, Conn. Francis Carlyle was baptized Francis McNabb, forty-eight years ago, and it was only recently that he had the court change his name.

Mr. Carlyle occupied a prominent place in the screen world for a number of years. He appeared in a number of All-Star releases, including "Arizona." He was with the Lubin Company in Philadelphia for six months and under the Pathe banner for a year, during which time he appeared in "The Perils of Pauline" and other Pathe successes.

On the stage he played under James O'Neill, William Gillette, Guy Bates Post, Charles Frohman, and Otis Skinner, and others in such plays as "The Sporting Duchess," "Under Two Flags," "The Three Musketeers," "Colorado," "Because She Loved Him So," "Hearts Are Trumps," and in many more.

Latest Amalgamation of Producing Interests

Art Dramas, Inc., Formed as a Non-Profit Making Distributing Organization—Based on Policy of Pictures Founded on Stories of Unusual Merit—Will Eliminate High Salaried Stars—Product All Sold to Prominent State Rights Buyers

THE latest amalgamation of producing interests to be formed is Art Dramas, Inc., which will begin releasing a product of fifty-two feature pictures per year on the thirtieth of October. This company has been organized by a group of the best-known independent producers in the business for the purpose of disposing of their product direct to the state rights buyer and to the exchange man.

The officers of the new company are W. L. Sherrill, president; G. H. Wiley, vice-president and general manager; and Herbert Blache, secretary and treasurer. The company is made up of the concerns which these gentlemen represent and several others, the names of which will be announced in the immediate future.

G. H. Wiley in speaking with a representative of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS said: "Art Dramas, Inc., has been formed as a non-profit-making distributing organization, with the idea of evolving an efficient piece of machinery for the purpose of bringing the product of the manufacturers forming the company directly to the state rights buyers and exchange men, and thus doing away with the middleman's or jobber's profits.

"The policy of the new company will be the production of quality pictures based on strong stories of extraordinary merit. We shall get away from the idea of big high-salaried stars almost entirely and shall devote all of our energies to the acquisition of strong, interest compelling books and novels, and the turning them into scenarios of great dramatic tensity and force. Each and every picture will be disposed of to the exhibitor at a reasonable rental price.

"It is not our intention to slight production in the least. Everything will be put into the picture which the story demands, but we believe that the day of the high salaried star has passed, that the story is the main thing in which the public is interested and not some actress or actor with a big reputation. By the practice of this economy and the elimination of distribution profits we believe that we can deliver better pictures than are on the market today at a lower price than is now being paid by the exhibitor for a first class product.

"This distributing company has been in the stage of formation for the past three months and every one of its pictures for the first year has been disposed of for nearly the whole United States. Contracts have been closed with nearly all of the largest and best known state rights buyers in the country. Negotiations have been started for the foreign rights to our product and it is expected that they will be closed in the course of a day or two.

"Following are the part list of exchanges that will handle the product of the Art Dramas, Inc., throughout the United States: Art Dramas, Inc., of 729 Seventh avenue, New York City; Art Dramas of New England, 100 Boylston street, Boston; The Electric Theatre Supply Company of Philadelphia; The Liberty Feature Film Company of Pittsburgh; J. A FitzGerald of 75 Broadway, Detroit; Art Dramas Company, Mallers Building, Chicago; Sherman-Elliott, Inc., of Minneapolis; Lasky Amusement Enterprises of San Francisco and Los Angeles. The only territory that has not been closed is Atlanta, Seattle, Kansas City and Dallas, and contracts for these places will be signed in the course of a few days.

"The temporary offices of the new company are at 729 Seventh avenue, but in the course of a week new permanent offices will be established in one of the large buildings near Broadway and Forty-second street.

"An elaborate advertising campaign is being planned in which every possible aid will be given to assist the exchange man in marketing his product. This will include an extensive campaign in the trade papers, lithographs of exceptional quality, electrotypes, heralds and direct suggestions that will aid the exhibitor in advertising the pictures locally to the best advantage."

"Heritage" Almost Completes Bluebird October List

"Wanted—a Home" Is Set for the 2nd, "The Chalice of Sorrow" for the 8th, and "The Social Buccaneer" for the 16th—The Smalleys Finish Play with Mary MacLaren

FIXING "The Heritage of Hate" as the Bluebird for October 23, nearly completes the schedule for that period, and many subjects are ready from which to chose the attraction for the fifth Monday in the month. "Wanted—a Home" is set for release on October 2; "The Chalice of Sorrow" on October 9; and "The Social Buccaneer" on October 16.

The Smalleys, who have given Bluebird some of their best releases, are finishing one play and have produced another in which Mary MacLaren will be the leading lady. Exhibitors will be glad to take advantage of the popularity gained by the suffering heroine of "Shoes" and the girl who was so instrumental in "Saving the Family Name." The third release with the Scotch lassie featured is scheduled for October 2, "Wanted—a Home." Later on will come "Devotion," wrtten by Lois Weber and "The Girl That's Down," prepared from a story by Brand Whitlock, former minister to Belgium.

Louise Lovely, another star created under Bluebird's earlier policy, is now J. Warren Kerrigan's leading lady. She will appear with him in "The Social Buccaneer" on October 16, and will also be jointly featured with Kerrigan in "The Measure of a Man," written by Normand Duncan and directed by Jack Conway. Later on Mr. Conway will produce "The Mainspring," featuring Ben Wilson and Francelia Billington.

Ella Hall, a third star created under the Bluebird trademark, will soon reappear, this time directed by Rupert Julian, who will also be her leading man. "We Are French," written by Robert Davis, of Munsey's Magazine, and "Pawn," by Fred Mynton, will bring Miss Hall back to the friends she made when Bluebird starred her.

Two features are ready with Ruth Stonehouse the leading lady. R. S. Cavin will be her leading man in "Kinkaid Gambler," directed by Raymond Wells, and Franklyn Farnum will play opposite Miss Stonehouse in "Spring Song," created by Harvey Gates, inspired by Mendelssohn's classic and directed by William Worthington. There are plenty of other subjects ready for release, awaiting only the important matter of fixing dates for their distribution.

DAL CLAWSON AND OTHERS SIGN WITH FOX

Dal Clawson, perhaps the best known cameraman of the west coast producing colony, and one who has an international reputation for making marvelous cinema effects, this week was contracted by General Western Representative A. Carlos, of the William Fox organization, and will for the next year give this company the benefit of his knowledge and skill in photography. For the past year Clawson has been with the Thos. H. Ince producing organization.

Other new faces at the Fox studio are "Smiling" Billy Mason, who has been playing recently with Morosco-Pallas, and prior to that was at Universal featured in a series of comedies. Mason will be leading man for the Harry Edwards Comedy Company.

Leo White, English comedian, who has played in support of Charles Chaplin since Chaplin left the Keystone Company, has been signed by Fox, and will play featured comedian parts in forthcoming subjects.

BEN E. DRUM WILL MANAGE MARY PICKFORD FEATURES

Ben E. Drum is opening offices for the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, on the sixth floor of the Film Exchange building, 16 Fourth street north, Minneapolis, and will handle the Mary Pickford releases for Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, northern Wisconsin, northern Iowa and northern Michigan.

Mr. Drum has been assistant manager of the V-L-S-E Exchange ever since it was opened in Minneapolis, and left the "Big Four" last Saturday to take charge of the Unity productions released through the Supreme Feature Film Company of Minneapolis.

Glimpses of a Group of Triangles Ready for Exhibitors: Left to Right, Sir Herbert Tree and Josephine Crowell in "Old Folks at Home"

William S. Hart and Margery Williams in "The Return of Draw Egan," H. B. Warner in "The Vagabond Prince"

STUART, DALLAS, OFF ON TRIP TO STUDY THEATRES IN BIG CITIES

Lawrence F. Stuart, manager of the Old Mill theatre at Dallas, Texas, has gone east for a visit to eastern and northern cities, where he will make a study of the theatres. Chicago, New York, Toronto and Montreal are among the points he will visit. He will make an effort to obtain a series of films of special interest to children for special matinees. Manager Stuart expects to be gone for about one month.

Kathlyn Williams and Holding at Work on Morosco Film

Vehicle Is from the Pen of L. V. Jefferson and the Working Title Is "Redeeming Love"—Wyndham Standing, Who Appeared in "The Wolf Woman," Also in Cast

KATHLYN WILLIAMS and Thomas Holding, who were recently engaged by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, are now at work at the Los Angeles studios of this organization on their initial co-star subject for Paramount.

The vehicle in which this duo will appear on the screen for Morosco is an emotional drama by L. V. Jefferson. The working title of this offering is "Redeeming Love," although it is uncertain at this time whethesr or not this title will be used.

The story deals with Naomi Sterling, a beautiful young woman born and raised in a small town, who is partly in love with a noble young minister, but who rebels against giving up the many good things of life for him. While she is in this undecided state an attractive looking young gambler seeking seclusion in the small town is infatuated with her and prevails upon her to run away to the big city, where she lives the pace until all her ideals and desires for better things are shattered. It is then that the accumulation of money becomes Naomi's ruling passion. Her former sweetheart has meanwhile risen to great prominence and is appointed the head of a big vice-crusade. Various surprises in the trend of the story are promised and care has been taken by the author in collaboration with Gardner Hunting, in preparing the scenario.

One of the most pretentious sets ever built by the Morosco Company will be offered in this subject. The set will portray Naomi's gaming house, and will be built of mottled marble with an elaborate stairway and will be lavishly decorated with mural panels, statuary and onyx pillars. Various other imposing sets built with typical Morosco care for detail are in the course of construction under the personal supervision of William D. Taylor, who is staging the photoplay. Homer Scott is at the head of the photographic work.

The Williams-Holding production also marks the addition of Wyndham Standing to the Morosco forces. Wyndham is the son of Herbert Standing, the well-known Morosco character artist who also appears in this photoplay. Among Wyndham's most prominent characterizations are those offered in "Bullets and Brown Eyes," "The Beggar of Cawnpore," "The Bugle Call" and "The Wolf Woman," Jane Keckley, Helen Jerome Eddy and Don Bailey portray other important characters in the cast.

Spoor Announces Plans for Its Greatest Walthall Picture

"The Truant Soul" Is by Victor Rousseau and the Direction Will Be in the Hands of Harry Beaumont—Approximately Six Hundred Scenes Are to Be Taken

THE silence surrounding the activities of Henry B. Walthall at the Essanay studio has been finally broken by President George K. Spoor's announcement, made herewith, that that star will begin work immediately in a feature of seven reels. It is "The Truant Soul," by Victor Rousseau, and is designed to give Mr. Walthall a great opportunity for a powerful character portrayal.

Essanay promises to make this the best Walthall story ever filmed. To this end he has purchased from Mr. Rousseau a powerful story even before the writer could submit it to his publishers.

In two months the most skilful continuity writers obtainable, in collaboration with the star and director, have produced what is considered the most perfect working 'script ever turned out at Essanay. Location men have been traveling for a month to find ideal exterior setting. The technical department is ready with every interior. Essanay believes preparation is more than half the battle and when the first camera begins to grind every detail possible to be foreseen will be solved.

For the direction of this undertaking a young man, Harry Beaumont, has been selected. Beyond the fact that he has been a recognized star and director, he has won renown as a film technician. Although still under thirty, he is a veteran in motion pictures and combines his extensive experience with enthusiasm.

Approximately 600 scenes will be taken. Only in a few instances will but one camera be used. Although the picture is to be no spectacle, two, three and even four cameras will be utilized on some of the exteriors.

Mr. Walthall will be seen in the character of a surgeon. The surgeon is a genius, world-famous, but with a serious weakness.

SOL LESSER IS SATISFIED WITH WAY V-L-S-E HAS DISTRIBUTED "NE'ER-DO-WELL"

So many exhibitors have wondered what would become of the "Ne'er-Do-Well" after the 16th of September when no more bookings will be accepted on Selig pictures by the Vitagraph-V-L-S-E organization that General Manager Walter W. Irwin has reiterated his statement that the "Ne'er-Do-Well" is not affected by the withdrawal of the Lubin, Selig and Essanay Companies from V-L-S-E, Inc. Every day a great many return date bookings are secured by V-L-S-E salesmen throughout the country and the picture is going exceptionally well, although now it is about six months old.

Sol Lesser's statement to Mr. Irwin explicitly states that he is entirely satisfied with the efficient way in which his picture has been distributed and it is not his intention to disturb this arrangement in the slightest degree. Exhibitors desiring bookings on the "Ne'er-Do-Well" should get in touch with their local Vitagraph-V-L-S-E managers.

Pathe Will Release One Gold Rooster a Week

The Features for the Program Will Be Furnished by the Astra Film Corporation, the Arrow Film Corporation, Balboa, Thanhouser and the Best That the Open Market Can Afford—A. H. Woods' Successes Will Be Filmed by Astra—"Pearl of the Army" Now Being Made by Jose

BEGINNING October 8, Pathe will release one Gold Rooster per week. The features for this program will be furnished by the Astra Film Corporation, Arrow Film Corporation, Balboa, Thanhouser and the best that the open market affords.

This latest increase in program is in accordance with the policy of gradual expansion laid down by J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager, last spring. In April Pathe released seven reels per week. Beginning October they will release fifteen or sixteen reels. In April Pathe released one Gold Rooster per month. This was increased to two in June, three in August and will be increased to four in October.

In accordance with Mr. Berst's instructions, C. R. Seelye, business manager, has been gradually strengthening all departments in the home office and building up strong branch organizations.

Each of Pathe's producing companies, in accordance with Mr. Berst's policy of quality film, are in friendly competition to produce only the best.

Astra Film Corporation

The Astra Film Corporation has at its disposal the financial resources of Pathe and the facilities of the Pathe Jersey City studios. Louis J. Gasnier, president; George B. Seitz, the Secretary-Treasurer, is author of many famous features and serials, among them "The Iron Claw." The famous A. H. Woods' stage successes are being made in Astra features, and the stars of these features are selected from the great number of screen and stage favorites available in New York. Among the Astra directors are George Fitzmaurice, Edouard Jose, who made "The Iron Claw" and is now making the army serial, "Pearl of the Army;" and Donald Mackenzie, producer with Louis J. Gasnier of "The Perils of Pauline" besides a number of features. Another noteworthy picture produced by Mr. Jose, "The Light that Failed," will be released October 15. Mr. Jose has also completed a feature with Pearl White.

W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, was largely responsible for "The Million Dollar Mystery;" he was long interested in the Reliance-Mutual studios; he is a heavy stockholder in Thanhouser. Now he comes forward with the statement that back of the Arrow Film Corporation are men with wide business experience who are heavily interested in various companies in the industry. He states that they have now under contract, well known stars and directors, and that their scenarios will be prepared from famous stage and literary successes and from original stories by the very best authors. The first Arrow release will soon be ready for the trade showing.

From the Balboa Film Company will come six features with Baby Marie Osborne. The first of these, "Little Mary Sunshine," has been booked and rebooked from coast to coast and the second one will be released November 12. Balboa has completed the fourteenth episode, "Grip of Evil" picture which has already been booked by over 3,000 theatres, and is now engaged in making another serial for Pathe. "Sultana," a Balboa production with Ruth Roland, has been Pathecolored and will be released October 29.

The first two Thanhouser releases were "The Fugitive" and "The Shine Girl." Mr. Thanhouser is giving his personal attention to each Gold Rooster he makes.

Carlos Adds Third Company to Fox Organization

Harry Edwards, Late Director of Mack Sennett Comedies, and Formerly with Kalem and L-Ko, Will Have Charge of Company Including Julia Faye and Billy Bennett

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.
Los Angeles, Sept. 23.

A. CARLOS, general western representative of the Fox Film Corporation, has added the third comedy company at the western studios, which will be under the direction of Harry Edwards, late director of Mack Sennett Keystone comedies, who formerly was affiliated with the Kalem "Ham" Comedy company and prior to that was with the L-Ko for more than a year.

Mr. Edwards went to the Fox Company the first of last week and already a company has been organized which includes little Joey Jacobs, aged four years, Julia Faye, Billy Bennett, formerly of Keystone, Porter Story, Louis Morrison and others. This increases the number of Fox companies at the coast to nine and causes one to recall Mr. Carlos' statement that he would shortly have that number working at the studios here when he first came to Los Angeles. The entire list includes Charles Parrott, directing Hank Mann and Carmen Phillips, Walter Reed who has Anna Luther as star; both making comedies. The dramatic directors are Oscar Apfel, R. A. Walsh, Otis Turner, Richard Stanton, Frank Lloyd and C. M. and S. A. Franklin, co-stars.

Director Oscar Apfel has begun filming "The Iron Man" which is a five-reel underworld story by Reid Huestis. Jack Standing, who came to the coast to play in Ince productions more than a year ago, with Gladys Brockwell, will play the leads. Monroe Salisbury, who appeared as Alessandro in "Ramona," and has since been playing in the Clune production of "The Eyes of the World," together with Jack Abbott and Eleanor Crowe, will appear in other imoprtant parts. Director Otis Turner has completed his first Fox picture which will offer George Walsh and Juanita Tansen in the leading roles, and is now working with the scenario department on the production of his second play.

R. A. Walsh has recently returned from Florence, Arizona, where he went to show his ten-reel picture of prison life to the inmates of the Arizona prison. The film was complimented on every hand and rings true in every detail of prison reform. Walsh is now preparing a story which will have Harry Carey and big Jim Marcus in the principal parts. It will be of a western character, but up to this time no title has been selected for this particular photoplay.

A. Richard Stanton and a company of thirty-five Fox people are home from spending eighteen days on the border near and west of El Paso, Texas. The days there were of an exciting nature, for Stanton and players staged mimic warfare for this international boundary story picture. The principals of the cast are Allen Hale, Gretchen Hartman, Frances Burnham and Willard Lillis.

Another Fox organization to return to the studio is that under the direction of Frank Lloyd. Lloyd with a company composed of Gladys Brockwell, Harschel Mayall, Jim Farley, George Webb, Carl von Schiller and others. While in the north scenes were made along the Sacramento River where boat scenes were made. The players also spent some time at lumber camps where a large number of experienced laborers took part in scenes.

The Franklin Brothers have not completed their Fine Arts story and have not taken up their work at the Fox studio.

The Annex to the Fox Hollywood studio, consisting of a large tract of land immediately across the street from the present plant, has been completed and three days after the lease was made by General Western Representative Carlos, the stage was set up, with diffusing system and a company was working there. It is the intention of the studio management to use this stage for comedy productions.

INTERNATIONAL USES NEWSPAPERS TO ADVERTISE "JAFFERY" AND "THE FLOWER OF FAITH"

The International Film Service, Inc., has established an epoch in newspaper advertising for the first two of its Golden Eagle Features, "Jaffery" and "The Flower of Faith." To couple up these photoplays with the publication of their stories, the International will use approximately 300,000 lines of newspaper display advertising.

The International adopted this policy on its serials. This advertising is, of course, in addition to the regular amount of trade paper advertising that will be used for bringing these two great features before the public.

The results of this advertising have so far been highly successful, and it is probable that the International will continue this program with all its features.

Vitagraph-General Film Subjects.—"Cantrell's Madonna" (Broadway Star Feature), "Making an Impression," "The Thorn and the Rose" (Broadway Star Feature)

PATHE NEWS GETS THE QUEBEC BRIDGE DISASTER TO THEATRES IN QUICK TIME

The Pathe News had a cameraman at the Quebec Bridge when the span fell, and he was able to secure some remarkable pictures. The pictures were at once rushed to the offices of the Pathe News in Jersey City by a special messenger, and a day later were being shown on Broadway, no other news weekly showing the event until a day later.

The editor of a well-known engineering journal arranged for a private view of the pictures, and is using them for his authority in an article which he is writing on the probable causes of the disaster.

WILL WATCH EFFECT OF PROHIBITION ON FILMS IN ONTARIO

Theatre men in Ontario will have an opportunity of discovering whether or not prohibition has any effect upon the moving picture business now that prohibition has gone into effect in Ontario. Opinions differ but most of the exhibitors agree that the tendency will be to improve the situation rather than otherwise.

Annual Field Day of Greater Vitagraph Is a Success

Two Large Sight-Seeing Automobiles Take Employees from the Broadway Office to Flatbush Studios for Athletic Events and a Baseball Game

ONE day last week two large sight-seeing cars filled with employees of the Vitagraph V-L-S-E offices, at 1600 Broadway, worked their way through the traffic-filled streets of New York and reached the Flatbush studios about 12.30 o'clock.

The occasion was the Annual Field Day of the Greater Vitagraph Company and an elaborate program was carried out.

After introductions to a number of the Vitagraph stars, luncheon was served to the visitors from New York. Immediately thereafter the large delegation was conducted through the studios. One treat was a glimpse of Peggy Hyland, Antonio Moreno, Gordon Gray and others working in a powerful drama of the Civil War period under the direction of Paul Scardon. They were also treated to thirty minutes of Hughie Mack's comic antics, under the direction of Lawrence Semon.

The first athletic event, a fifty-yard swimming race for boys under twenty-one, which was held in the huge tank in the Vitagraph yard, was won by Joseph Sico. Second place was won by Milton Cohn and Patsy DeForest, the jovial little lady playing in Hughie Mack's comedies, finished third. Miss DeForest was loudly cheered for her gameness in competing with the boys, both from the Broadway office. First and second prizes for this event were engraved silver and bronze medals.

From the Vitagraph yard the entire delegation then proceeded to the Brooklyn Athletic Field, just two blocks from the studios, where the remaining contests were staged. The first event on this field was a potato and spoon race for girls. There were so many entries that this race was run in two heats. The first heat was won by Augusta Goldberg of the Broadway office. The second heat was captured by Mary Goebel of the scenario department. When it came to the finals the girls gamely consented to dispense with the spoons and potatoes and settle their differences by a fifty-yard dash. The dash was won by Miss Goebel with Stella Simon second, but closing fast. The first and second prizes were boxes of chocolates.

This interesting event was followed by a sack race for men. Joseph Simberg, of Hughie Mack's company, captured the first heat and first in the finals. Second in the finals was won by Joseph Sico, of the V-L-S-E exchange. The prizes for this event were fountain pens.

Then followed the big event of the day, a five-inning baseball game between the representatives of the Broadway office and the studios.

Why speak of the score?

Captained by Director Lawrence Semon, who also pitched, the studio nine romped away with the game in easy fashion. The line-up follows:

Vitagraphers.—Lawrence Semon, P.; Lenny Smith, C.; Harry Archer, 1st; Eddie Dunn, 2nd; Joseph Simberg, 3rd; Frank Brule, S. S.; Jack McDermott, L. F.; Buster Blackton, R. F.; Arthur Quinny, C. F.

Broadwayites.—Victor M. Shapiro, P.; George Burke, C.; Al Wyckoff, 1st; Billy Munn, 2nd; A. B. Harrington, 3rd; R. B. Simonson, S. S.; Victor B. Johnson, L. F.; Leon J. Bamberger, R. F.; E. Laming Masters, C. F.

Kenneth Hodkinson Is Made Manager of Paramount

Son of Former President of the Distributing Company Learned Business at an Early Age Through Association with His Father's Enterprises in the West

KENNETH HODKINSON, son of William W. Hodkinson, director and former president of Paramount, has been appointed manager of the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Hodkinson was born in Idaho and educated in California. He grew up with the motion picture industry. His father, an exhibitor and exchange man during his youth, he naturally gathered the rudiments of the business at an early age. Six years ago he entered the employ of the General Film Company, at its San Francisco exchange, in a very minor capacity, advancing himself steadily during a period of three years to the position of assistant head booker.

It was at that time that his father organizer the Progressive Motion Picture Company and the younger Hodkinson became the assistant manager of the San Francisco office. When his father came east, prior to the inception of Paramount he was appointed manager of the Progressive organization and held that position until a year and a half ago, when he joined the Paramount forces in the capacity of secretary to his father, then the president. Upon the election of Hiram Abrams as president, Mr. Hodkinson was named assistant general manager from which position he has been made manager.

RALSTON, COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PRIZE WINNER, SEES HIS PICTURE PRODUCED AT LASKY STUDIO

Dr. R. Ralston Reed, of Morristown, N. J., whose photoplay, "Witchcraft," was judged the winner in the recent Columbia College-Lasky prize contest, has arrived at the Lasky studio to watch the progress of the making of his picture under the direction of Frank Reicher. It will be released by Paramount on October 16.

Fannie Ward is the star in this photodrama, and the cast includes Jack Dean, Paul Weigel, Lawrence Peyton, and others.

The story is laid in New England about 1690, when the persecution of witchcraft was the favorite pastime in Salem, Concord, and other new world villages.

Dr. Reed will probably spend several weeks as the guest of the Lasky Company. After meeting Miss Ward and having a talk with her, he at once set to work on another story for her.

Signal Serial Permits Effective Advertising—Hutchinson

"A Lass of the Lumberlands," Featuring Helen Holmes and Directed by MacGowan, from Its Local Color, Consisting of Scenes Taking in All Branches of This Mammoth Industry, Will Suggest to the Exhibitor Innumerable Publicity Stunts with a Business-Getting Pull

"I AM sure every motion picture exhibitor in the country will learn with interest that the Signal Film Corporation has ready for release a new motion picture serial," declared President S. S. Hutchinson, of the Signal Film Corporation, at his office in Chicago last week. The new picture will be entitled "A Lass of the Lumberlands." It will be released beginning October 23. It will feature the Helen Holmes, star of "The Girl and the Game." Like the other Signal Film Corporation's production the serial when completed will be released through the Mutual Film Corporation's sixty-eight exchanges.

"A Lass of the Lumberlands" is in fifteen chapters of two reels each. Treating as it does, a theme and an industry wholly new to motion picture patrons, it is expected to prove an extraordinary attraction. E. Alexander Powell is the author of the story, which is filled with action and thrills, while the direction of this story of the lumber region is in the hands of J. P. MacGowan, the man responsible for the other Helen Holmes's pictures.

"In announcing to the public the release of the new serial," said President S. S. Hutchinson, of the Signal Film Corporation. "We feel that we are presenting a screen subject that will not only exceed all previous offerings in magnitude, interest, and thrills, but one which will prove very entertaining and interesting in its portrayal of a mammoth industry. As the title, 'A Lass of the Lumberlands,' indicates the story is laid in the great North Woods, amid the mighty sequoia, pines, and cedars that makes this region famous. As the story progresses the screen will actually illustrate every detail of operation in the great lumbering industry. One will see the standing timber, behold the methods of cutting and trimming the logs for arrangement in booms, the shooting of the logs down the flumes, the start of the drive down the swirling streams to the sawmills, the breaking of a log-jam, the arrival of the timber at the mills, the operation of the mills themselves, and the final marketing of the lumber.

Not an Educational Feature

"Of course," continued President Hutchinson, "the story is not primarily an educational feature, but an intensely interesting, tremendously thrilling, splendidly acted spectacular chapter play. As a piece of screen literature, 'A Lass of the Lumberlands' will compare favorably with any film offering on the market.

"It has been filmed in the real lumberlands. There is nothing staged or artificial about it from first to last. The company that produced the picture under the direction of J. P. MacGowan, worked for several months in the heart of the mighty forests of the North. Real lumberjacks are seen cutting real timber. Real log-jams in real rivers are seen broken up by real dynamite. Every chapter of the entire fifteen is crammed with action, and each chapter demonstrates the daring of the fearless film star, Helen Holmes. In fact, there will not be a dull moment in the whole serial. And yet there is nothing exaggerated or unbelievable in the entire story. It is a tale of conditions as they exist, told in a convincing fashion.

J. P. MacGowan Helen Holmes S. S. Hutchinson

"Big business plays no small part in the unfolding of the story, 'A Lass of the Lumberlands,' for the Lumber Trust has its grip upon the hearts and souls of all who work in the woodlands. It seeks to control not alone the actions of the wealthy contractors who superintend the winter's cut, but also clutches in its grasp the more subservient timber cruisers, camp foremen, and gang bosses, and so on down to the humblest lumber-jack with his canthook and peavey.

"Working in the other direction, its tentacles reach out to clutch the men who control, the railroad lines used in hauling the timber, the ship owners with their gigantic fleets of freighters, the representatives of the people in the State Legislature, certain Congressmen at Washington, and even a Justice of the Supreme Court. And against an octopus of this sort the heroine of 'A Lass of the Lumberlands' finds herself battling, aided only by a little band of faithful friends and loyal helpers. Her struggle, pictured in every detail on the screen, is sure to be watched with interest by audiences all over the country.

"The heroine of this absorbing tale," went on President Hutchinson, "is known to exhibitors and motion picture fans everywhere for her splendid work in the recent serial, 'The Girl and the Game.' She is not only famous for her beauty and daring, but is above all else an actress of superior talents. The company supporting her will be fully adequate to the portrayal of such an unusual film offering. It is an all-star cast in every sense of the word, each player having been chosen for peculiar talent along certain lines, special types having been selected for each part.

"The direction of 'A Lass of the Lumberlands' is under the masterly supervision of J. P. MacGowan, who superintended the staging of all the other Helen Holmes productions—the same man who directed the great successful serial, 'The Girl and the Game.'

"From the standpoint of advertising possibilities exhibitors were never offered a picture that can compare with 'A Lass of the Lumberlands.' The mere fact that the story is laid amid a background wholly new to the motion picture screen is going to make the attraction a powerful box office magnet.

Film Ready for the Fall Season

"The film will be released at a time when the fall season has just opened. It comes at a time when the whole country is feeling prosperous, and the people are seeking amusement. It is unusual in theme. It features a star who has an established following. It is filled with action and thrill, yet is always logical and convincing.

"It is in fifteen chapters, a new chapter being released each week for fifteen weeks, and so gives the exhibitor an opportunity to secure steady patronage over a long period. Patrons who begin 'A Lass of the Lumberlands' now will be steady patrons for fifteen weeks. It means a steady revenue—continuous prosperity.

"It will be backed by a national advertising campaign. Every medium of publicity will be used to aid the exhibitor in bringing the public to his theatre. The first chapter will be released on Monday, October 23.

"Already hundreds of exhibitors have arranged to show 'A Lass of the Lumberlands.' More are booking it every day. This is the story that 6,000 exhibitors have requested, and have been waiting for on account of the tremendous earnings made on 'The Girl and the Game.' I have personally overseen the production. I know the sort of a picture that is now ready for booking. I can personally guarantee its merit. I have recommended other pictures in the past to the exhibitor. They have proven big money-makers. I am confident 'A Lass of the Lumberlands' is going to be an even greater success."

"CHARITY?" FIRST POWELL FEATURE, WILL HAVE TRADE SHOWING AT LOEW'S NEW YORK THEATRE ROOF

"Charity?" the first feature of the Frank Powell Productions, Inc., which has just been completed, will be shown to the trade at Loew's New York Theatre Roof on Tuesday afternoon, September 26, at two o'clock.

This picture, which has been made under Mr. Powell's direction from a story by Linda A. Griffith, and which marks his initial effort as an independent producer, already has aroused interest. In it, and who are making their first appearance as stars under Mr. Powell's direction, are Creighton Hale, Linda A. Griffith and Sheldon Lewis.

Frank Powell

In the endeavor to eliminate the possibility of that which is oftimes an unfortunate feature of an otherwise presentable picture—bad titles, Mr. Powell commissioned James Clarence Harvey to write the titles for "Charity?" Mr. Harvey has long occupied a unique position in the world of letters as a writer of verse and prose that carries always an appeal to the heart strings.

In addition to the trade there will be present at the private view of "Charity?" numerous people prominent in various lines of endeavor who have displayed keen interest in the picture during its making, and who are interested especially in those conditions considered in the picture. "Charity?" will be released on a State rights basis.

BERING, HOUSTON BUSINESS MAN, BUYS SOUTHWEST RIGHTS TO "YELLOW MENACE"

C. L. Bering, a prominent business man of Houston, has purchased the Southwestern rights to "The Yellow Menace," the serial issued by the Unity Sales organization. Though an office is not yet announced, it is understood it will be exploited from Dallas, and a prominent film man will be placed in charge.

T. O. Tuttle, for the past year in charge of the General Film Company office at Houston, has been promoted to the managership of the New Orleans office of the General, effective September 18. Mr. Tuttle, formerly was in the vaudeville booking business, and then became a roadman for the General, soon being placed in charge of the Houston office. He is a very able film man, and has many friends. His brother, W. S. Tuttle, not quite so long in service with the General, recently a roadman, steps into "big brother's" shoes on the eighteenth.

J. C. Cross, formerly operator of the Unique Film Exchange, at Houston, and who has been connected with two or three of the picture houses in Houston, died September 9. Mr. Cross had been in ill health for the past six months.

William Horwitz, Jr., formerly with the Fox exchange of Dallas, is now back in Houston.

J. A. Cressey, a relative of Miss Young, has purchased the rights for Clara Kimball Young, Herbert Brennon and Ella Wheeler Wilcox productions for Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana; and has established an office in the Southwestern Life Building in Dallas, with F. M. Sanford, formerly with the World in the southwest, as manager; and L. C. McHenry, recently of the Southern Cabiria Company, in Dallas, as assistant manager. The exchange is listed under the name of J. A. Cressey Interests.

BESSIE BARRISCALE IS IN NEW YORK ON VACATION

Bessie Barriscale, the Triangle star, has reached New York on her vacation after three years' absence in Los Angeles, and is registered at the Knickerbocker. She is combining business with the pleasure of doing a lot of shopping, however, and is to confer with Thomas H. Ince, her supervising director, in regard to plans for the coming autumn.

Fall and Winter Program Is Like Certified Check—General

If It Is to Be Judged by Number of Stars Featured in Short Length Dramas and Comedies There Is Unusual Strength in the Films, Company Contends

GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S recent announcement that its fall and winter program would be to an exhibitor the equivalent of a certified check was followed last week by a statement giving in detail General Film Service program for week October 2-10, inclusive. This is the first program announced under General Film Service for autumn and winter.

If their program is to be judged by the calibre and number of stars featured in short length dramas and comedies and advance press criticisms of their dramas reviewed to date, there is unusual strength in the films.

There are twenty-eight film notables in the week's program, as follows: Marguerite Clayton, Patrick Calhoun, Eugenie Besserer, Charles West, Harry Myers, Rosemary Theby, "Plump" and "Runt," Tom Mix, Gordon Gray, Virginia Hammond, Lillian Gish, "Pokes" and "Jabs," Ivy Close, Josephine Earle, Harry Beaumont, Gertrude Glover, Jackie Saunders, Frank Mayo, "Ham" and "Budd," Ethel Teare, Marin Sais, True Boardman, Helen Gibson, Millicent Evans, Lionel Barrymore.

To Selig goes the distinction of showing the first picture on the fall program, October 2, "In the House of the Chief," a three-reel drama, presenting Eugenie Besserer and Charles West. This will be followed by a one-act comedy, "Making an Impression," a Vitagraph production. The Selig-Tribune, always a feature, will be even stronger during this fall and winter, if we are to judge by the offering of the 79 chapter. "An Indian's Loyalty," with Lillian Gish in the titular role, a Biograph reissue, will be the last picture.

For the following day's first picture a two-part drama, Essanay selected two of their strongest stars, Marguerite Clayton and Patrick Calhoun, who will be seen in "An Old Fashioned Girl." This will be followed by a Kalem one-part comedy, "One Step Too Far," featuring "Ham" and "Budd" and Ethel Teare.

"The Fable of the Kid Who Shifted His Ideals to Golf and Finally Became a Baseball Fan and Took the Only Known Cure," an Essanay one-reel comedy, featuring one of George Ade's noteworthy stories, leads the program for Wednesday, October 4. "A Grain of Suspicion," a one-reel comedy, presenting Vim's latest fun makers, Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby, will follow, and then will be shown the ninth episode of "The Girl from 'Frisco," in two reels, "The Web of Guilt," in which Marin Sais and True Boardman have achieved distinctive success. Biograph's three-part drama, "Under the Gaslight," a famous picture taken from an equally famous speaking stage play, in which Lionel Barrymore and Millicent Evans are featured, will be then shown.

Selig-Tribune and a Vim one-part comedy featuring "Plump" and "Runt" in "Royal Blood" will occupy the screen Thursday, October 5.

Jackie Saunders and Frank Mayo will be seen in a Knickerbocker Star feature drama in two parts "The Better Instinct," the first picture shown Friday, October 11, and this will be followed by a Kalem one-reel comedy, "Stolen Plumage," presenting Ivy Close. Then another comedy, a Vitagraph production, "A Vampire Out of Work," presenting Josephine Earle, and the day's program will be brought to a close with still another comedy, this time a Vim one-reel production, "Strictly Business," featuring "Pokes" and "Jabbs."

Essanay's three-act drama, "His Little Wife," presenting Harry Beaumont and Gertrude Glover, will be the first picture shown Saturday, October 7. This will be followed by a Vitagraph production in three parts, "Cantrell's Madonna," with Virginia Hammond and Gordon Gray featured. Then will come an episode of the "Hazards of Helen" series by Kalem, "The Blocked Track," with Helen Gibson in the limelight. A Selig one-act Tom Mix drama, "The Canbyhill Outlaws," will close the program for the week.

Characteristic Moments in "The Crisis," the Big Civil War Feature Produced by W. N. Selig from the Novel of Winston Churchill

NEW YORK AND CHICAGO PREMIERES OF "CRISIS," WITH ORCHESTRAS

William N. Selig and H. A. Sherman, president of Sherman-Elliott, Inc., have completed some unusual plans for the presentation of Selig's masterpiece, "The Crisis." It is proposed to give premiere presentations in both New York City and Chicago at the best theatres and with the aid of complete orchestras.

"The Crisis" is also to be booked throughout the country only at the best theatres. The film play will be handled like a first-class theatrical company and a complete orchestra will accompany each film, as will motion picture machine operators. A line of publicity material, including posters, heralds, cuts, and special press stories are in course of preparation.

Winston Churchill, who wrote "The Crisis," is expected to visit Chicago during the initial presentation. He has written to Mr. Selig, expressing great interest in the drama.

H. A. Sherman, who will give his individual time and attention to "The Crisis," has opened offices at 220 West Forty-second street, New York City, and 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Those interested in territorial rights should correspond directly with Mr. Sherman.

There is an all-star cast to appear in "The Crsis," including George W. Fawcett, Marshall Neilan, Thomas Santschi, Frank Weed, Will Machin, Mat B. Snyder, and Bessie Eyton, Eugenie Besserer, and others.

Colin Campbell, who directed "The Spoilers," "The Ne'er-Do-Well," and "The Rosary," produced "The Crisis" under the personal supervision of William N. Selig.

BLANK PLANS HANDLING OF YOUNG PICTURES IN MISSOURI VALLEY STATES

A. H. Blank, an exhibitor of Iowa and Nebraska, has organized the Midwest Photoplay Corporation, which will distribute the Selznick and Clara Kimball Young productions in the Missouri valley states.

Mr. Blank has been maintaining offices in Des Moines for his personal business, and will continue to make that his headquarters, with offices in the Garden Theatre Building, and he will manage the branch offices which are to be established at St. Louis and Omaha. He is the president and treasurer of the company. W. H. Bell is vice-president and general manager, and he is now opening headquarters at 920 Main street, Kansas City.

Roscoe's Exclusives, Ltd., Will Handle Frohman Films

Spurin, Long Associated with Ruffells, Completes Arrangements for Exploiting the Pictures of the Company in the British Isles

ROSCOE SPURIN, who for a considerable time has been associated with Ruffell's Limited, England's well known film purveyors, concluded arrangements this week whereby the new and heavily financed company, known as Roscoe's Exclusives Limited, will handle the productions of the Frohman Amusement Corporation throughout the British Isles.

This is the consumation of the first of many deals throughout the world by the Frohman Company which is the first step toward the open market.

Australia, Japan, South America, South Africa, Spain and Portugal will be closed this week and the ambitious productions of the Frohman concern, beginning with "The Conquest of Canaan" will be disposed of in the United States and Canada through the open market.

Mr. Spurin concluded arrangements with the Frohman Company after viewing their recent productions and learned that with the launching of "The Conquest of Canaan" and "The Witching Hour" even bigger pictures are anticipated than the eleven features which have characterized World, Pathe and Hearst's International programs in the past year.

Mr. Spurin will begin an aggresive advertising campaign on Frohman features upon his return to England and will adopt as his firm's trademark, a wind mill novelty which, according to cables, are to be placed on the thousands of vehicles and spaces and which will be active, live, advertising mediums.

Mr. Spurin will return to England next Saturday, taking with him the negative of "The Conquest of Canaan." During the past week he has been the guest of the Frohman Company at their studio where he witnessed the staging of a number of scenes in "The Witching Hour."

Ivy Close Leaves Kalem and Will Return to England

The Star Will Give Up Her American Screen Work Indefinitely—Death of Brother in the Trenches and Call of Her Husband to the Front Take Actress Back Home

IVY CLOSE, the English beauty who has been appearing in Kalem comedies, has been forced to return to England. Miss Close will thus give up her American screen work indefinitely.

Since the death of her brother, Raymond Close, in the trenches in France, Miss Close has found the call of the home land growing more and more insistent. To add to her burden she received word last week that her husband, Elwin Neame, was about to be called to the front. Mr. Neame, who is prominent as a photographer of royalty and English society, was among the married men who "declared" themselves early in the Summer and he has been expecting the call to active service for many months.

Under the unfortunate conditions, the Kalem Company, though regretting the step in view of the popularity of the famous beauty's screen productions, readily acceeded to her request to permit her return to England. Miss Close made swift preparations to sail in order that she might see her husband before he answered the call for duty in Flanders.

Supported by Henry Murdoch, Miss Close was seen in a series of one-reel comedies that quickly took rank among the most popular of Kalem releases. Among the coming productions in which the two stars will be seen are "Rival Artists," issued on September 29, "Stolen Plumage," scheduled for October 6, and "The Battered Bridegroon," released through General Film on October 13. "Stolen Plumage" is proclaimed by Kalem officials as taking a place among the top-notch comedy hits of the year. Much of the action is supposed to transpire in the Orient, where Murdoch is an autocratic potentate.

WRECKING COMPANY SEEKS ENLARGEMENTS OF PATHE NEWS

The value of the motion picture newspaper as an unbiased witness of events is now everywhere recognized. Recently the editor of the Pathe News received a request from a large wrecking company for enlargements from the film showing the sinking of the United States collier Hector.

They said that with these pictures they could estimate on the raising of the ship without going to the spot. The photos were sent them, and by studying them they were able to get all the information they required.

BIG SETTINGS FOR "BIG TREMAINE"

The Metro-Yorke organization has gone to great expense in the building of a complete Colonial home, with interiors and exteriors, for the production of "Big Tremaine," which has an atmosphere of Virginia. The mansion occupies the entire stage, has exteriors on three sides and four complete rooms, all furnished, besides two attractive verandas, and is so complete in all details that practically every scene for this Metro production starring Harold Lockwood and May Allison can be made at the studio by Director Otto.

A cast selected for this production includes Lillian Hayward, for several years leading character woman for the Selig Company; Andrew Arbuckle, known for work in Balboa and Universal releases; William Ephe, who supported the stars of this production when they were with the American Company at Santa Barbara; William DuVaull, seen in Fine Art subjects; Virginia Southern and Josephine Rice, who have played with several Coast organizations; Lester Cuneo of the Yorke stock company, and other equally well-known photoplayers.

"Big Tremaine" is an adaptation from the novel of the same name by Marie Van Vorst, which concerns the brother of a spendthrift assuming the guilt of his younger brother and as a result he suffers morally for the sacrifice.

Robert L. Todd has been added to the Metro-Yorke organization in the capacity of film editor. He has served at other Coast studios in such work. The studio staff at the Yorke studio was this week increased by the addition of a number of carpenters and technical men.

BIG BOOKINGS FOR "AROUND THE WORLD IN 80 DAYS," IS REPORT OF HERALD FILM CORPORATION

The Herald Film Corporation announces that bookings for "Around the World in Eighty Days" have been coming in steadily. The demand by exhibitors for this feature has been increasing daily. The offices of the Herald Film Corporation feel that their judgment in selecting "Around the World in Eighty Days," by Jules Verne for their first release of big features, has been more than vindicated. the price per day, is also meeting with the approval of the exhibitors. In all probability, this method will be followed by the Herald Film Corporation in their future advertising of big features.

"KING LEAR" A DECEMBER RELEASE THROUGH PATHE

Edwin Thanhouser announces that the Frederick Warde production of "King Lear" is nearly ready and that it will be released through the Pathe exchanges, probably early in December.

Rumors that "King Lear" is not to be released through Pathe have no foundation whatever, Mr. Thanhouser asserts.

Mr. Warde, who has been on a lecture tour through New England, will return to the Thanhouser studios in a few weeks to begin work upon "The Vicar of Wakefield" which will be directed by his son, Ernest Warde.

"The Inferior Picture Only Is Overproduced"—Brady

"Nobody Can Tell to a Moral Certainty How the Public Will Respond to a Picture," Says Official of World Film—"It Is Quality That Counts"

"I FAIL to coincide in a number of the reasons called upon to account for certain conditions which assert themselves from time to time in the motion picture business," said William A. Brady, director general of the World Film Corporation.

"There is no over production of good pictures. There is no such thing as too much competition in meritorious output. Salaries of actors who draw the public pay themselves automatically. And finally, the program system is the only one under which the exhibitor can thrive and the producer exist at all.

"It is the inferior picture that is overproduced, precisely for the same reason that applies to every kind of business. There is nobody of whom I have ever heard who can tell to a moral certainty that the great public will respond to his photoplay. But if he possesses the knowledge of what makes drama, and knows good photography from bad, and has a fair knack of mending broken bridges, the producer is in a position to establish a first rate average of quality.

"And quality is what counts. It makes over-production, competition and the rest look sick.

"There is a theory which finds expression in print once in a while to the effect that experience as a producing manager for the speaking theatre is valueless in the motion picture world—that the two lines are so far apart as to nullify a man's skill in one of them when he applies himself to the other.

"Never in the world was there a more absurd assertion. For example, when I came into the motion picture field I noticed among other matters that scenery, properties, costumes and the like were not always on hand when the actors were ready to proceed, and that long delays ensued, during which the salaries and other expenses ran on. This would not amount to much on the speaking stage, where rehearsals are not usually paid for, but what would be thought of a producing manager in the regular theatre who allowed his play to go up to its actual first night without a complete equipment of scenes, props and dresses?

"It is no state secret that when I first went rummaging through the belongings of the World Film Corporation, I found several complete photoplays lying upon the shelf, which could not be marketed. How many of these there were, or what I did with them, does not matter.

"There was no legitimate excuse for such a condition. Nobody in particular was to blame for it, for such situations are apt to crop out in a business that has grown too fast for many persons to keep up. I mention the matter as the only real case of over-production with which I am acquainted. If these pictures had been good enough to sell in the first place, they would not have been overproduced.

"This brings us around to a point worth considering. When a man or company is dealing in an article for which there is a general demand, and cannot find a satisfactory outlet for his product, the chances are that the product itself is at fault, not that the trouble lies in market conditions, high salaries or any other outside influence or condition.

"The biggest things I have been driving at in my direction of the World-Brady pictures were (and are) the stoppage of waste, the systematization of production and the perfection of the output."

Theodore Marston Will Direct "Sloth" for McClure

He Entered the Motion Picture Field in 1912 as Director for Pathe and Later Became Associated with Kinemacolor, Finally Going to Vitagraph

THEODORE MARSTON, formerly of the Vitagraph Company, has been engaged by McClure Pictures to direct the production of "Sloth," the fourth play in the McClure series of seven five-reel feature plays, "Seven Deadly Sins." Mr. Marston's work will supplement that of the other McClure directors, Richard Ridgely and Alan Crosland, who are engaged upon other plays in this feature series. Charlotte Walker is to be the star of "Sloth."

Marston was educated for a civil engineer. He spent three years on the northwestern frontier, after which he decided to go on the stage, and for several seasons appeared in leading character parts. Mr. Marston was favorably mentioned for his work in "Quo Vadis," "Janice Meredith," "Under Two Flags," "The Virginian," "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and "The Man of the House." His last stage appearance was with William H. Crane in "The Senator Keeps House" and the revival "A Fool of Fortune" at the Garrick theatre, New York.

In 1912, Mr. Marston entered the moving picture industry starting as director for Pathe Freres. Later on he became associated with the Kinemacolor Company. After that he joined the Vitagraph forces. During the three years of his service with this company, he directed many of their big features, among them "Mortmain" with Robert Edeson, "The Cave Man," "The 13th Girl,"

STREYCKMANS LEAVES THE FILM BUSINESS

H. J. Streyckmans, one of the best known motion picture men in the country, has given up the film business and has accepted a position with Torrey and Company, dealing in motor securities, and specializing in Clyde Motor stock, an automobile truck proposition which will be marketed in a few weeks.

Mr. Streyckmans will open an office in the Ashland Block, Chicago, for Torrey and Company.

SELIG ATHLETIC FEATURES RELEASED THROUGH KLEINE-EDISON-SELIG-ESSANAY

The Selig Atheltic Feature Film series were on September 16 released through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service. The Selig Atheltic series consists of ten films, each one reel in length and presenting the athletic stars of the world in various lines of endeavor. Such experts as Frank Gotch, Joe Stecher, Jess Willard, stars of the boxing arena, champion golf players, leading exponents of the billiard cue, champion swimmers, tennis and baseball players are all presented in these films.

A wealth of advertising matter accompanies these athletic feature films and the way will be paved for exhibitors to make money by a series of signed articles from such athletes as Packy McFarland and other leaders in the sport line. Over one hundred newspapers have already printed these signed and copyrighted special articles and many others will follow suit. Each special story will run about a half column in length.

POLISH WRESTLER SIGNED BY WHITE EAGLE COMPANY

Wledek Zbyszke, the wrestler, who is known to mat fans all over the country as the mighty son of Poland, has been persuaded to become a motion picture actor.

He has signed a contract with the White Eagle Cinematograph Company, of Chicago, of which Andre Roosevelt is the director general.

Zbyszke is now in Chicago at the White Eagle studios, beginning work upon his first picture.

He will be starred jointly with Myrtis Coney, leading woman of the White Eagle Company.

They jointly are preparing all the scenarios which they will use. Zbyszke has translated a number of Polish plays into English, and Miss Coney has turned the stories into working picture scenarios.

HIRSH BUYS RIGHTS TO "PAGES FROM HER LIFE"

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Pioneer Feature Film Corporation, has purchased the New York State and northern New Jersey rights for "The Pages from Her Life."

This is an emotional drama in five parts. based upon incidents in the life of a stage favorite.

John O'Brien, Mary Pickford Director, with Metro

He Will Begin Work on a Five-Part Feature Entitled "Vanity," Starring Emmy Wehlen—The Story Was Written by Aaron Hoffman

JOHN B. O'BRIEN, until recently the director of Mary Pickford at the Famous Players, and before that with D. W. Griffith has signed a long time contract to direct exclusively for the Metro program, at the Popular Plays and Players studio. Emmy Wehlen, will be under Mr. O'Brien's direction in this new arrangement. Work will begin immediately upon a five-part feature called "Vanity," which was written especially for Miss Wehlen by Aaron Hoffman.

The last features to O'Brien's credit at the Famous Players, in which Miss Pickford is starred, are "Hulda from Holland," "The Foundling" and "Eternal Grind." Other recent features which he produced include "Destiny's Toy," with Louise Huff in the stellar role, and "The Flying Torpedo," with John Emerson and Bessie Love.

Among other features which Mr. O'Brien gave to the screen is "The Outcast," by Thomas Nelson Page, the present Ambassador to Italy. This feature was produced with a cast including Mae Marsh, Robert Herron, Ralph Lewis and Spottiswood Aitken. These same players carry the important roles in Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance."

Mr. O'Brien is also responsible for the production of "Captain Macklin," from the pen of Richard Harding Davis, and in which Lillian Gish was starred. He directed "Her Shattered Idol," with Mae Marsh and Robert Herron. Other endeavors bearing his mark include "Old Maid" and "Dorothy in the Garret," in which Blanche Sweet is starred and "Severed Thong," starring Mary Alden. "Tear That Burned" with Lillian Gish is another O'Brien production.

Mr. O'Brien is now engaged in casting for his first Metro-Popular Plays and Players production, in the studio at 228 West Thirty-fifth street. He will surround Miss Wehlen with a strong supporting cast that will include many new faces.

Murdock McQuarrie in East to Form Directors' Body

Organization Will Be Similar to the One on West Coast—Purpose of Association Is Merely That of General Benevolence and Mutual Interest

MURDOCK McQUARRIE, one of the best known directors in the business, formerly connected with Universal and more recently with the American studios at Santa Barbara, Cal., is in New York City in the interests of the Motion Picture Directors' Association of the west coast.

One of the chief objects of Mr. McQuarrie's visit is to assist in the formation of a directors' association in the East similar to the Coast organization.

In this connection he is anxious to correct the impression which seems to have been circulated, and to a certain extent credited, that the directors' association partakes of the character of a union.

It would appear that some producers have believed this, and feared that attempts to raise salaries, or fix an exorbitant scale, with an accompanying menace of strikes and walkouts, would follow the establishment of such an association in New York.

This is in no sense the case, said Mr. McQuarrie. The association is formed for purposes of general benevolence and for that alone. Article II of the constitution and by-laws, he declares, should make that perfectly evident.

For the information of those who may be interested, this section is quoted here in full:

ARTICLE II

PURPOSES OF ASSOCIATION

The purposes for which this association is established are:

(a) To maintain the honor and dignity of the profession of motion picture directors.

(b) To cultivate the usefulness and to exert every influence to improve the moral, social and intellectual standing of all persons connected with the motion picture producing business.

(c) To cultivate social intercourse among its members.

(d) To aid and assist all worthy distressed members of this association, their wives, widows and orphans.

With the Exhibitor

This Department is designed to include all news of exhibitor organization and welfare, national, state and local; news items of exhibitor activities; and letters from exhibitors, constructively critical and dealing with any important trade problem. We invite correspondence

Furniss Urges Union with Manufacturers

A SPECIAL meeting was held at the West Hotel, Minneapolis, Monday, August 28, at 2 P. M., after a luncheon served in the Pheasant Room by the association for the Twin City Exhibitors.

There were present James Gilosky, president; Wm. Koenig, secretary; D. G. Rodgers, F. E. Nemec, Henry Greene and J. B. Reisman, members of the Executive Committee, and about fifty of the Twin City exhibitors.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. Gilosky, who introduced Thomas Furniss, former member of the Executive Board of this association, and now chairman of the Executive Board of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

Mr. Furniss said, in part:

"You exhibitors of Minnesota and the Northwest need an organization, a good strong local, for with so many unfavorable conditions arising you must be brought together. That is the purpose of this meeting. And so this is to be a heart-to-heart talk to tell you what I know of the different branches of your industry. I shall explain it to you as I understand it, so you may have a more clear understanding.

Result of Expositions

"The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has really sprung from the manufacturer, the exhibitor, and the film exchanges. The greatest good accomplished for the industry was at the two Expositions held in New York last year, but that meant the failure of the Board of Trade, a manufacturers organization. As a result they got together, and now have their organization. They elected five directors, the publicity men elected five, the accessory men elected five, the exchange men elected five, and the exhibitors were allowed to elect ten directors.

"The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America has grown to be an institution to which all are anxious to affiliate themselves, but before affiliating with the Nation Organization one must be a member of good standing in the local organization. There are great benefits to be derived by belonging to the National League. The best lawyers and talented men of the country are employed to go to the aid of the exhibitor if necessary.

"The principal men of the country are beginning to realize the power of the motion picture industry. The two highest candidates for office have recognized the power of this industry, and have asked for the support. There are now in the New York office of the Exhibitors' League of America letters from every Senator except two, concerning the Kitchin Bill. The matter of censorship will be straightened out.

What Association Has Done

"The National Motion Picture Industry has done this. They have incorporated under the State of New York. They have opened offices in the Times Building, employed a secretary, a man of ability to organize, who although new to this industry has been an organizer and promoter in other lines. He brings new blood into this industry. He will carry us into a line of politics we have never entered before. I believe he is going to make a valuable secretary. Mr. Brady will devote a lot of time to this association, and is bound to make it a success.

"The National Exhibitors' League has gradually come along. A short time ago at San Francisco, there was absolutely less than one hundred and twenty-five exhibitors at the convention. It was pitiful to see this great industry with no organization. Fred Harrington was made president of the League of America, although he did not want the position. He had no books, no treasury, or anything to work with. He used his own money and worked for the league.

"This year the convention in Chicago was the biggest and best get together spirit ever shown by the exhibitors of the United States. On Thursday morning, after the delegation from New York arrived and said they wanted to co-operate, thereby showing their interest, fifty of the big exhibitors, or more, that had never affiliated before, were present. The exposition was a big success. It cleaned up in the neighborhood of $12,000, and next year will have in its treasury $50,000. The get together feeling in Chicago did this.

"I believe that in Lee Ochs they have elected a powerful man, a man who thoroughly understands the industry from A to Z. That the rest of the organization will co-operate and are co-operating with him, was shown recently when the correspondence with all the Senators in regards to the Kitchin Bill was gone over.

Big Exhibitors in Now

"The big exhibitor has never gone into the Exhibitors' Association before, for he has never felt the need of an organization. But during the Chicago convention Mr. Hamberger, one of the largest exhibitors in the country, connected with over seventy theatres, as a special favor to one of his friends, lent his support to the organization, and called a special meeting at his theatre. He was elected as a member of the Executive Committee, and is now an enthusiastic worker for the organization. He attended a meeting in New York, and declared that there was not enough money in New York to induce him to resign from the Executive Board now, although his enthusiasm was small at the beginning, so interested has he become in the work of this organization.

"Brother exhibitors, the thing to do is to call a special meeting, and get together with the manufacturers. They are willing and anxious to please you. They want to work hand-in-hand with you, and are only waiting to know what you want them to do.

"Referring to the censorship proposition. I am against censorship entirely, but I do believe in absolutely clean pictures. The exhibitor should be the one to do the censoring, and gradually the sensational pictures will die.

"Another thing of importance to you Minnesota exhibitors is the Sunday closing attitude. I know that there are already bills before the Legislature which should be fought. There are two or three men present who know how much work was done to prevent Sunday closing a short time ago. These men spent a lot of time lobbying against the bill. Now, these men should not be required to do these things for nothing.

"Do Not Abuse Your Trust"

"Gentlemen, you have a wonderful trust placed with you. Do not abuse it. The members of this organization should be all worthy members. No man who does not pay his bills should be a member of this association. You must all affiliate and assist each other. The express proposition and film rental in advance, are some of the present troubles. The main trouble is that you do not work together. If you would all affiliate there is no question as to the organization of Minnesota. Personally, I want to see Minnesota produce big men. Get along and put your business on a plane such as you now lack. Do not let your opportunities pass by you.

"As I get information through the National Organization, I will be more than pleased to meet with you and give you the details. Gentlemen, I thank you."

Mr. Gilosky then made a short speech congratulating the National Organization on getting such men as Hamberger interested in the association, as he is one of the largest exhibitors in the country. He then called upon the largest exhibitor in Minnesota, I. H. Rubin.

Mr. Rubin said:

"The smaller exhibitor relies on the large managers to take care of the difficulties that prescnt themselves, instead of assisting them in this work, which is entirely wrong. We surely need an organization in the Twin Cities, not one in name only, but one in action. We are in the business, and are so situated that we do not need to call on our competitors for assistance as a rule. We need not pay any attention as to how they run their business, etc. But at the present time we must get together and make this our common interest. If we do not, we are going to come in contact with some breakers that will paralyze us. There are one or two things that have come up here within the last two weeks that have got to be taken care of. The smaller exhibitor has been threatened. Any threat to the little exhibitor will reach the big one."

Mr. Rodgers said: "After listening to the remarks of Thomas Furniss, Mr. Rubin and Mr. Hays, there does not seem to be much left to say. However, I am going to tell you that there are a lot of people so busy that they cannot find time to meet with us, unless they get in trouble.

"This organization had its foundation way back. In 1914 we held a convention in St. Paul. Scarcely anybody attended, for the small exhibitors felt that they were being taxed the same as the large exhibitor. At that time the resolution was passed that the exhibitor should be taxed according to his seating capacity, and it was resolved to tax them one cent per seat. Mr. Greene was elected president, Mr. Steffes secretary, and I treasurer. Night after night we visited the different theatres with our machine, but it was almost impossible to get one house to give us their one cent per seat dues.

"To-day we have an organization, the best ever in existence. Mr. Furniss refused to be president of the National Organization. The candidates from New York said if Thomas Furniss would accept the nomination, they would withdraw and throw New York's support to him. Mr. Furniss refused it. He could have had it. Mr. Harrington would have withdrawn. However, Mr. Furniss was elected as a member of the Executive Committee by the largest majority of any one there."

An open meeting was then called. Mr. Furniss spoke again, thanking the exhibitors for their enthusiastic support. Mr. Wolfson stated that he had been intending to sell his theatre, but after hearing these addresses he could not be induced to sell it at any price. Mr. Chamberlain gave a short address on the benefits of the organization.

The following committee of exhibitors were appointed to meet a committee of the operators regarding a scale of salaries: Jake Cohen, Lagoon theatre; W. D. Chamberlain, American theatre; George Garrish, Third Ward theatre; Ed Hinz, Cosy theatre; Mr. Calvert, New Garrick theatre, and Mr. Stelzner, Star theatre.

Political Action Committee of League Makes Report; Many Candidates Seek Endorsement

THE Political Action Committee of The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, comprising the following, Joseph Hopp, chairman; L. H. Frank, secretary; M. A. Choynski, Geo. Laing, Wm. J. Sweeney and Adolph Powell, make this report:

"For the past three weeks we have had on an average ten to fifteen aspirants for office and those who are now in office seeking nomination for re-election, before us asking us for our League endorsement.

"This was due to a letter sent to the various exhibitors in Illinois asking them to refrain from showing slides or films of aspirants for office without the endorsement of our league.

"It is remarkable what effect it has had and what a power the screen has proven itself to be in so far as the political office seekers are concerned. They show no hesitancy in letting us know that we are far superior to the press in getting them before the public.

"Each and every one that received the endorsement of our organization has had to come out and convince us that they would oppose censorship in every form and those who could not vote on propositions of that kind, although elected to office, have promised their moral support to help us combat any laws of censorship and all other laws that might be inimical to the interests of the motion picture industry.

"We feel that we have gained a great recognition and intend to use the same judiciously and at all times for the good of the league. All other branches of our organization should do likewise and I am sure that in a short time the motion picture industry will be as safely protected as any other industry.

"In the course of the last three weeks we have probably had three hundred candidates appear before us for the present primaries asking our league endorsement, from candidates for governor to the lowest office of the state; also men who are now in congress as well as those that are now representing the state in other offices.

"After three weeks of hard work the political action committee has adjourned for a week.

"Louis H. Frank, Secy.

ONTARIO PLANS INCREASE OF ADMISSION PRICE

It is said that the Exhibitors Protective Association of Ontario are contemplating a movement to raise the admission prices in Ontario to ten and fifteen cents. The heavy war taxes as well as the added cost of doing business is said to be the reason for this proposed increase.

MILWAUKEE HOLDS ANNUAL ELECTION

Special to Motion Picture News.

Milwaukee, Sept. 23.

The Milwaukee Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association held its annual election Friday, September 8, and elected Jack Gramman, president; Jacob Langheimer, vice-president; Henry Trinz, treasurer, and Tom Lee, secretary. The meeting was largely attended, and following the election of officers the matter of medicine show competition was taken up.

The outskirt exhibitors complain very bitterly against the fact that during the past few months, medicine shows have been visiting various parts of the town, and taking out only a transient merchants' license, have been allowed to compete with the theatres, though they are forced to pay city taxes and a large theatre license. A medicine show recently occupied a lot near the Liberty theatre at Twenty-seventh and Vliet streets, and played to 1,500 to 3,000 people a night, giving three acts of free vaudeville before selling their compound.

The theatre men maintain that though no admission is charged, these medicine shows should be classed as circuses or theatres and pay the regular license fee, as they get more money through the sale of their medicine than would be possible if they did not give the shows.

PHILADELPHIA THEATRES WEATHER PLAGUE

Special to Motion Picture News.

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.

In spite of the hardship wrought by the paralysis conditions and which caused the closing of several of the neighborhood theatres, most of them have weathered the storm, and improvements are being made in many houses.

Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, State Commissioner of Health, announced September 14, that unless the epidemic again took an upward tendency, the ban would be lifted on motion picture theatres and schools on September 29. As the edict has been placed on all gatherings of children under sixteen, including Sunday Schools, the picture men could have no complaint of partiality.

It is hoped that the long weeks minus their favorite "movies" will cause a big rush to the theatres of parents and children as soon as the quarantine is withdrawn.

A good autumn season is therefore expected, even with the well defined movement to attempt a raise in prices all along the line.

PANTAGES BOOKS "CRIMSON STAIN"

The latest big small-time vaudeville circuit to book "The Crimson Stain Mystery," the sixteen-episode serial photoplay presented by Consolidated Film Corporation, is the Pantages.

A telegram received at the executive offices of Consolidated at 1482 Broadway, New York, from Metro Pictures Corporation, San Francisco, states that after viewing the first three episodes, Alec Pantages, owner of the Pantages Circuit, signed a contract booking the serial for his entire chain of theatres.

Maine Exhibitors and Exchangemen Look Forward to Big Fall and Winter Business

MOVING picture exchange men of the State of Maine as well as the exhibitors are looking forward to the most successful season for the motion picture business, that the Pine Tree State, has ever witnessed. Motion picture houses have been established in every town of any size, even in the sections far from railroad connections, where the films have to be shipped by stage, and in the smaller towns a show is given one night a week at the very least. Many of the small towns have two shows a week.

Some of the big farms, operated by the larger corporations of the State, are enjoying motion picture shows. The population in some of these farms, as they are called, is as large as in a good-sized town and being mostly men, they are anxious to see the latest releases, as when they come to Bangor. The managers of the farms, in order to keep the help on the job, and away from the centers have adopted this means of giving them entertainment, for which they go to the towns.

Manager H. P. Smith, of the General Film Exchange, in Bangor, has just returned from a trip through Aroostook County as far North as Houlton. He has booked several houses that are just opening up, after a slack summer, and finds that the business is even better than a year ago. "The Girl from 'Frisco" has been booked solid with the exception of Sundays, till after December 1, by Mr. Smith and the houses through the country towns are still seeking the picture. It has created quite a sensation through this section, the Graphic theatre taking it on in Bangor.

"The Stingaree" serial is also being booked up full by Mr. Smith.

The exchange men in Bangor find that the exhibitors are anxious to use the two and three reelers instead of the big features that were so popular last winter. In the smaller places this is true, especially for the shows are not as frequent as in the larger towns and cities, and for this reason the serials are drawn out. Some fine bills are offered in the farming districts, and every night that pictures are shown the farmers come to the village to attend the show.

The Mutual Film Exchange in Bangor is also doing a good business and making arrangements to give service through the winter months. Manager R. F. Borrotto is now in the western part of the State, having been in Portland early in the week, and he has had considerable success in enlarging his field. The Mutual has made arrangements to serve the Dreamland theatre in Van Buren, the Strand and Golden Horse, in Presque Isle, the Camden Opera House, the Gem theatre in Caribou, and the Belfast Opera House.

A children's show will be furnished throughout the winter for the Strand theatre in Gardner, and a full Mutual program will be shown at the Scenic theatre in Limestone. C. H. Martis has made arrangements to use "The Girl and the Game" in his Opera House in Milbridge, and H. T. Dillon will use the same picture in his Majestic theatre in Brownville Junction, and "The Secret of the Submarine" in his Pastime theatre in Brownville.

Manager Charles M. Stern, of the Universal Film Corporation, is in the southern and western part of the State loking after the trade, and Manager A. Bevan, of the Pathe Exchange, is also in that territory. Both managers are calling on every exhibitor, and have reported to their offices that the business is remarkably good.

SHEA'S HIPPODROME RAISES PRICES TO TWENTY CENTS

To prove the often repeated remark that Buffalo, N. Y., will pay the price for real entertainment, Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo's largest and most beautiful photoplay house, has increased its admission price from fifteen cents to twenty cents at all performances. No falling off in attendance is noted as a result of the move; in fact the audiences seemed to have increased in size. Shea's Hippodrome is now presenting the Triangle program with an orchestra of eighteen pieces under the direction of Herman E. Schultz.

Careless Handling of Films in Indianapolis Cause of Fire Entailing Loss of Life, Says Commissioner of Buildings

JACOB H. HILKENE, Commissioner of Buildings, Indianapolis, after making an investigation of a fire recently at the Princess theatre, a moving picture house at 858 South Meridian street, when five women were injured, has reported that the owners of the theatre had complied with the city building code in building the operator's booth, in which the fire occurred. Under the present building code ordinance, he declared that nothing more could have been done by the owner to protect persons attending the theatre.

Hilkene said, however, that the operator of the machine had been careless in leaving exposed several rolls of films which were not in use when the fire started. These caught fire, he said, thus adding materially to the seriousness of the fire.

"No one would have been injured in this fire," said Mr. Hilkene, "if a rush had not been made for exits. The theatre proper at no time was in danger. The operator of the motion picture machine claims that an electric spark caused the fire. When the film roll became ignited he left the booth immediately. I found that the operator had left several rolls of film exposed on the floor. This is a violation of the building code.

"The operating booth was built before the present city building code was passed by the City Council, but there is practically no difference in the requirements for building booths in the new and old codes. The booth was made of sheet iron. The fire spread to the front of the building through a ventilator in the booth, but at no time was the theatre proper in danger. The theatre owner will not be permitted to repair the old booth. I will require him to install a new one.

"I am not satisfied with conditions existing in scores of motion picture theatres in Indianapolis, and if I had my way every one would be a fireproof structure. Of course, this would be impossible under our ordinances."

The theatre is owned by Delhi G. Bramble, 401 North Illinois street, Indianapolis.

WHAT SYBERT SAYS ABOUT THE "NEWS" IS WORTH YOUR ATTENTION

Marietta, Ohio, Sept. 8.

Dear Mr. Johnston:

I herewith enclose a renewal for the coming year. Accept my good wishes for the efforts that you have been putting forth to make MOTION PICTURE NEWS the guiding star to exhibitor prosperity.

We are all very much interested in your publication. We read your magazine just as soon as it comes to our desk and get the very latest happenings relative to our industry.

We are with you in your movement for honest criticism and stories upon releases and we feel that when a feature does not merit any good points you have the courage to say so.

You keep the pages of the "News" clean, honest and at all times it is for the exhibitor.

Very truly yours,
The C. and M. Amusement Co.,
A. J. Sybert,
Manager.

LEADER GOES TO UNICORN

D. D. Leader, one of the first men to exhibit motion pictures in Maine and the first man to devote his whole attention to that one form of entertainment, giving an entire and continuous motion picture show, has accepted a position with the Unicorn Film Service Corporation, and has been installed manager of the Bangor exchange.

Mr. Leader knows the needs of the exhibitors in that state about as well as any man in the business, having opened the first house for the exclusive motion picture show in Rumford in 1905. Since that time Mr. Leader has been connected with several successful houses and in recent years has been manager of the Empire theatre in Portland.

He is just looking over the business of the Unicorn in Maine and will make a visit to the exhibitors using this service during the next two weeks. He knows what the motion picture business of the state is and says, "This is going to be the biggest season for moving pictures, that Maine has ever seen." He is making arrangements for the features that are soon to be released by the Unicorn people.

David E. Dow, who has been manager of the Unicorn in this city for the past two months, has gone with the "Circulation" exhibitors in Boston.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

"The 'News' wishes to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything in fact done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to send for publication the successful ideas that he has worked out, also to come to us for suggestions or information. Address the Editor."

Getting Atmosphere Into a Lobby Display

"I REGARD the lobby display I built to advertise 'The Spell of the Yukon' as the best piece of work I have ever done," said M. Kashin, whose lobby displays at the Midway theatre, Montreal, were the feature of this department for the issue of September 30.

The whole set is as simple as it is striking,—two qualities which, as we said last week, Mr. Kashin considers indispensable in successful advertising of any kind, but especially in the lobby display.

The main feature, as the close-up of the theatre front on the right reveals, is the cardboard reproduction of an open book.

Inscribed on one page is the poem by Robert Service which was the foundation and inspiration of the picture. Facing it is a portrait of Edmund Breese, the star. The mimic volume is flanked by the regular lobby frames.

In this instance, the stills there used not only serve as glimpses of the picture, but they illustrate the poem which Mr. Kashin has thoughtfully reproduced, and give the passer-by two reasons for examining them where he would ordinarily have had but one.

In other words, Mr. Kashin has doubled the usual value of his lobby frames by the use he has made of them on this occasion.

Overhead, and stretching from one side of the upper half of the lobby to the other, is a great panel, depicting a typical Alaskan scene, with the dog-sled dominating the whole in the foreground.

Above this, in turn, runs a banner bearing the name of the picture and that of Metro, the producing company.

The lights around the entrance arch have been hung with imitations of icicles that sparkle in the rays of the incandescents. The latter effect, it hardly needs to be explained, was gained by glueing strips of cotton wadding to the globes and sprinkling them with "diamond dust."

Elaborate as this lobby display might seem to the casual observer, it cost no more than the one we discussed at length here last week,—about fifteen dollars.

HE HAD THE WHOLE TOWN CRANING THEIR NECKS

Boy, page H. J. Lego, proprietor of the Majestic theatre at Fort Dodge. There is a gentleman here who wants to meet the most progressive exhibior in Iowa. Get Mr. Lego for him.

This would be the truth if somebody did want the most progressive exhibitor in Iowa. Mr. Lego is constantly springing something new and original. His latest stunt was a winner and he got lots of business as a result. The picture was a Paramount release, "The American Beauty."

Mr. Lego purchased one thousand varied colored balloons and had them on hand the morning of the first day of the picture. Going to the side of town where he would get the wind to blow over Fort Dodge, Mr. Lego took these thousand balloons and one tank of oxygen. You can guess the rest. Inside of thirty minutes he had five hundred of these little balloons floating over the town.

On one hundred of them were complimentary tickets. The other five hundred he distributed among the kids of the city. On one side of the balloon was the name of the theatre and the date of the show. The other side named the play and the star. Suffice to say, he got the business.

BOOSTS SUNDAY AND HOLIDAY ADMISSIONS TO TWENTY-FIVE CENTS

The Majestic theatre, Detroit, Mich., has increased its prices for admission on Sundays and holidays to twenty-five cents for all parts of the house; in other words, there will be no admission to the theatre at less than a quarter. Heretofore Sunday and holiday prices have been ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents.

The change to the advaced price has made no difference in the Sunday attendance, the number of paid admissions being greater than ever, while the receipts much greater. The day of cheap prices for high-class motion pictures is apparently on the wane.

Another of the Kashin Lobby Displays Which Have Made the Name of the Midway Theatre, Montreal, Famous Throughout the Canadian City

The New Garrick, Minneapolis | New Majestic Theatre, St. Paul | Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee

Northwestern Picture Houses Rank with the Best; Noted for Novel House Management Methods

IN their way, the theatres shown on this page are as representative of the cities in which they are located as is the Strand of New York. To say the Alhambra, New Garrick or New Majestic, Milwaukee, have made innovations is the same as recording something new in the style book of motion picture theatres.

Everyone in the motion picture industry has heard of the Alhambra theatre of Milwaukee. Mr. Fischer, its manager has a keen sense of showmanship and a wide knowledge of amusements and knows how to serve the public. There perhaps is no other manager that is so keen for courtesy in his employees as is Mr. Fischer. With ris ability and Paramount pictures he has made the Alhambra theatre the pride of the motion picture industry in his section of the country for many miles around.

Under the guidance of Mr. Calvert, the New Garrick has been offering Paramount pictures to Minneapolis' most critical photoplay fans. It is noted not only for its attractions, but for the manner in which it is conducted and the original and novel way Mr. Calvert has of procuring patronage.

At the New Majestic in St. Paul, Mr. Goldman not only manages the theatre, but also manages to draw the biggest audiences of this critical city with the Paramount Program. The New Majestic is in the midst of many photoplay houses, but enjoys a peculiar distinction because of the many original things Mr. Goldman does toward attracting public attention to his house.

Free Tickets for Inmates of an Old Ladies' Home; Permanent Complimentary Passes Issued

HERE is a suggestion which we think motion picture theatre owners could act on to the great pleasure of the inmates of the old people's homes, and at the same time make it appear that their theatre is popular at supposedly slack hours. Over two years ago a theatre proprietor was approached, and it was suggested to him that he could give much pleasure to the old ladies in a home situated two blocks from his theatre, by admitting them free on afternoons each week, and at such hours that he had the most spare seats.

He realized that many of the women had no allowance for such pleasures, and had not for years seen modern life; what a golden opportunity for them to see the happenings of everyday life through the screen. The matron of the home fell in with the idea readily with the result that fifty permanent complimentary tickets were presented to the home for the use of the inmates.

Two months ago when visiting the home, the matron informed us, that the old ladies go regularly every week to the theatre, and can hardly wait until dinner is over to get off to the "movies."

The proprietor who had performed this charitable act was most gratified to know that he had been afforded the opportunity to entertain the old ladies.

STANLEY THEATRE IN PHILADELPHIA SCORES BEAT ON NEWS WEEKLIES

The Stanley theatre recently showed a "beat" on the news weeklies, and even the newspapers in Philadelphia. Mr. Mastbaum detailed Oscar A. Morgan, publicity manager of the Famous Players exchange, to go to the Essington shipyards and take pictures of the launching of the Nedeva 2nd Submarine Chaser, the only boat of its kind in the world. It is a sixty foot boat, capable of making thirty miles an hour. It is equipped with wireless, and can cruise 1,000 miles. Everything is done by electricity, even the firing of the guns and cooking and heating.

The boat carries a six pound non-recoil gun, such as is used on the Allies aeroplanes. This gun has never before been mounted on a boat. It is peculiar, in that the missile leaves one end of the rifle and the charge the other, making a perfect balance. Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, well-known society people of Philadelphia, were the sponsors, presenting the boat to Mrs. Stotesbury's son, H. R. Cromwell, who has been commanded by Admiral Benson to take charge immediately and report for maneuvers. The picture caused a great deal of favorable comment.

SEATS FOR LADIES WITHOUT ESCORTS, AND USHERS FOR THE EXCLUSIVE SECTION

Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo's largest photoplay house, has inaugurated a popular innovation in setting aside at all matinees one section of the orchestra floor for the exclusive use of ladies without escorts. Women ushers have been introduced and since its inception, the idea has proved so popular that the section is filled to capacity every afternoon.

This idea is a good one and assures lady patrons of theatres that they will not be annoyed by "mashers."

VISITING CARD NOVELTY ADDS 20 PER CENT. ATTENDANCE

In our issue of August 19 we suggested a novel method of utilizing a visiting card to advertise coming productions. This unique visiting card has been used by the manager of the Columbian theatre, Santa Rosa, Cal. Mr. Carrington, when sending us the enclosed specimen card he distributed, states that his business for the two days increased 20 per cent., as a result of adopting our original live wire advertising stunts.

WHAT IS A HOUSE ORGAN?

IT IS the exhibitor's personal message to his public.

IT IS a periodical catalog of merchandise and a news medium in happy combination.

IT IS a means by which you advertise that certain pictures, music, and comfort are being sold at your theatre.

IT IS your effort to increase the power of the motion picture theatre —it can be great or little, insofar as you put your own vital energy into it.

IT IS your personal grip upon your patrons, and is worth while doing well, because it most assuredly pays.

A BLIND MAN MAKES PEOPLE WITH GOOD EYESIGHT SEE SCREEN LIGHT

M. H. Cinberg of the Magnate, Lyons, Neb., was showing "The Little Girl Next Door" when he ran across a blind man in the streets. He hired the blind man at six dollars a day to parade the streets with his cane and dog, wearing a sign, "I'd give $500 if I could see 'The Little Girl Next Door.'" It took, said Cinberg, and made money.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"The Code Letter" Is the Title of the First Release of the "Grant, Police Reporter," Series from Kalem

Ollie Kirkby and George Larkin in the First of the New Kalem Series, "Grant, Police Reporter"

"THE CODE LETTER" is the title chosen by Kalem for the first story of the new series of newspaper adventures by Robert Welles Ritchie. George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby will make their bow in this initial episode of the new series on Friday, October 20.

In the official announcement Kalem lays particular emphasis on the fact that "Grant, Police Reporter," will be released to exhibitors in the regular program of the General Film Company. The expenditures for stories, stars and publicity on "Grant, Police Reporter," are setting new marks for a one-reel series, and it was thought in some quarters that the feature might be a special release. But Kalem announces that it will follow the policy that has proven so successful in the case of "The Girl From Frisco" and place the series within reach of exhibitors just as any regular General Film release.

The new series will take the place on Kalem's schedule left open by the calling of Ivy Close to England, a one-reel episode being issued every Friday. Work of production on "The Code Letter" has already been completed, and the first run in the Kalem projection room has doubled the enthusiasm of the company's executives over the new series.

"'Grant' will surely be a winner, "declared Mr. Wright, of the Kalem Company, to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "It is a wonderful combination of thrilling action and logical stories—the quality aim that we have set out for. When the picture is released you will surely agree with us that George Larkin is even surpassing the daring that gained him his dare-devil reputation, while Ollie Kirkby is showing rare ability in dramatic acting.

"In this new series by Robert Welles Ritchie we aimed to produce a picture that could find a place in any house ,and 'The Code Letter' proves to us that we have secured the combination of quality and strength. Robert Ellis, the director, has grasped our ideas fully and has hit the mark with the first shot."

One of the thrilling scenes in "The Code Letter" shows George Larkin performing a daring feat in the heart of Jacksonville's business section. Larkin is letting himself down hand over hand on the rope of a painter's scaffold when the other supporting rope is cut and he swings through the air six stories above the pavement. Hundreds of Jacksonville persons crowded Julia Street when the feat was performed on the side of the Everett Hotel and cheered lustily when the player managed to swing himself to safety by grasping a fire escape.

In addition to the two stars, the cast of the initial production includes William McKey, Robert Ellis, Arthur Albertson and numerous others. The story is a mystery revolving about the code letter of the title and the suspense is said to hold to the final scene.

"COUNTRY THAT GOD FORGOT" IS FIRST RED SEAL PLAY THROUGH KLEINE-EDISON-SELIG-ESSANAY

"The Country That God Forgot," the Selig Red Seal play, which has created so much favorable comment in the trade, will be William N. Selig's first release in Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay. The release date will be Monday, October 2.

Marshall Neilan wrote and directed "The Country That God Forgot," and the leading character roles are undertaken by Tom Santschi, George W. Fawcett, and Mary Charleson.

The five-part drama is a tale of a Western desert—of a godforsaken country—and of a woman who longed for the joys of the great world outside.

How a great mistake was rectified, how love finally found a way, and how grim Nemesis came to pay retribution are episodes in this drama.

WITH COMPLETION OF "THE BIG SISTER" MAE MURRAY RETURNS TO PACIFIC COAST

With the completion and release on the Paramount Program of "The Big Sister," her last starring vehicle; Mae Murray, Famous Players-Lasky star, returns to the Pacific Coast. Originally a Lasky star, Miss Murray was transferred to the Famous Players studio after the merger of the two producing companies, because the atmosphere required for "The Big Sister" was strictly Eastern, the scenes being laid in and around New York City.

Miss Murray's next production is to be called "The Heir Apparent," and will deal with the life of a young English girl in South Africa.

In California there are miles and miles of hills and table-lands, which accurately resemble the type of country with which we all associate mention of South Africa. It is, therefore, only natural that Miss Murray should be sent back to the Coast for this photoplay.

The story itself revolves around a young girl of English parentage, who has been left alone in South Africa by the death of her parents. She has been made a veritable slave by Varley, a wealthy but brutal farmer. The girl is really the heir to the Brentwood estates, and her aged grandmother is endeavoring to get some trace of her. Through an attempted deception of the old lady, a young lawyer is sent to Africa in search of Margot. He stumbles upon the real Margot by accident.

VITAGRAPH RELEASES THROUGH GENERAL IN WEEK OF OCTOBER 2

On Monday, October 2, General Film will release the Vitagraph comedy "Making an Impression." It was directed by Frank Currier. On Friday, October 6, General Film will release a Vitagraph one-part comedy entitled "A Vampire Out of Work." This is a burlesque on the vampire type of picture and Josephine Earle is featured.

On October 7 a Broadway Star Feature in three parts, entitled, "Cantrell's Madonna," is scheduled. Gordon Gray and Virginia Hammond are featured. The director of "Cantrell's Madonna" is Thomas R. Mills.

October Will Be a Stirring Month for Essanay; Five Features and Program Productions Are Expected to Test Its Studio and Laboratory Facilities

OCTOBER will be the stirring month for Essanay. Five large features and quality program productions will test its studio and laboratory facilities to the utmost, and, in keeping with President George K. Spoor's faith in the industry the construction of these plays will be accomplished with rather greater expense than is usual in the business. Mr. Spoor views the coming fall and winter season with optimism and this has led him to believe that more than customary expenditure for production is warranted.

"A brisk and healthy competition so far enabled producers to keep abreast of the demands of the public," he says. "It now behooves us to surpass our standards of the past year in supplying entertaining photoplays, lest the patrons decide that the industry is not progressing and is neither up to nor in advance of their requirements.

"This can be obtained only by additional expenditure. Essanay's system of manufacture, and its complete facilities for such, effect a saving in the technical end which permits of more being spent in the line of artistic production. I believe 'The Return of Eve' and 'The Prince of Graustark' offer an exposition of my meaning better than it can be placed in words."

"The Return of Eve" will be the first feature released through the new Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service. The date is October 2. Shortly after, at a time to be announced later, "The Prince of Graustark," adapted in five acts from George Barr McCutcheon's novel, will be released.

At this time final scenes will be taken for "The Chaperon's," made famous on the stage by Maxime Elliot, and "The Breakers," taken from Arthur Stringer's story in The Saturday Evening Post. Edna Mayo and Eugene O'Brien will appear in the former and Bryant Washburn and Nell Craig in the latter. Each play will be in five acts.

Also at this time Henry B. Walthall will be appearing before the camera in his next feature, the title of which will be announced soon.

Essanay's October program for General Film Service offers selection of good stories. "An Old Fashioned Girl" opens the month of October 3. It is a two-act piece featuring Marguerite Clayton, and its backgrounds are the beautiful spots around historic Starved Rock, Ill. On the next day "The Fable of the Kid who shifted his Ideals to Golf, and then became a Baseball Fan and took the only known Cure," will be offered in one reel. Harry Dunkinson, comedian, who has not been seen in the popular George Ade fables for some time, plays the lead in this offering. The three-act offering for the week is released on October 7. Harry Beaumont wrote, directed and played the lead in "His Little Wife," a drama of small town life Gertrude Glover plays opposite him.

The second week opens October 10 with "Money to Burn," a two-act piece featuring Lillian Drew. Wallace A. Carlson's Canimated Nooz Pictorial, a split reel with scenic, follows the next day, to provide its customary number of laughs. The three-reeler on October 14 is "Lost Twenty-four Hours," a famous stage comedy. Richard C. Travers and Marguerite Clayton appear in the leading roles and the supporting cast includes many other leading Essanay players.

"The Fable of the Kittenish Superanns and the World-Weary Snipes," is a George Ade fable in two reels offered on October 17. This fable contrasts the enjoyment gotten from life by a group of middle aged persons, with the bored outlook a lot of debutantes and their dancing beaus have upon existence.

On October 18, Wallace A. Carlson, cartoonist, will bring back Dreamy Dud to his many friends in the usual split reel with scenic. The three-reeler, offered October 21, marks the first appearance of E. H. Calvert since "According to the Code," a five-act feature. It is entitled, "Isle o' Love."

Richard C. Travers and Marguerite Clayton take the leading roles in "Borrowed Sunshine," a story built around the activities of a little girl of five. This will be released on October 24. Canimated Nooz follows on October 25. "It Never Could Happen" is the title of the three-act piece, released October 28. Richard Travers and Lillian Drew appear in the leading parts. On October 31 a two-act comedy, "The Lifesaver," with Harry Dunkinson, will be released.

"The Straight Way," from Fox on October 2, Will Be Followed by "The War Bride's Secret" on the 9th and "The Ragged Prince" on the 16th

VALESKA SURATT, Virginia Pearson and June Caprice will appear in three William Fox releases for the first weeks in October. The appeal of each story is entirely different from the other.

Miss Suratt's picture, her first since "The Soul of Broadway," tells of a woman's revenge plot which nearly brings disaster upon herself and her own daughter at the last moment. Several hundred feet of film were made at Sing Sing for some of the scenes. Another of the interesting scenic parts is the realistic effect of lightning striking a house. There is a flash during a hard thunder-storm and the entire wall crumbles beneath the stroke. Two and a half weeks were spent in building the "set" just to destroy it.

For the second week in October, there is released a dramatic story of life during the war in a simple Scotch village, and the torment the struggle brings to a woman's heart. The quaint humor of the plainsmen acts as a foil to heighten the emotional appeal.

A cheery, optimistic little tale is woven through Miss Caprice's third production for the William Fox films. The story was written by Frederic Chapin, and gives the winsome actress the sympathetic role of a waif. Harry Hilliard plays opposite the youthful star. The inimitable Jane Lee is also included in the cast.

The releases are: On October 2, Valeska Suratt in "The Straight Way. The story of a woman's quest for happiness with Glen White and Herbert Heyes in the supporting cast.

On October 9, Virginia Pearson in "The War Bride's Secret," a vivid portrayal of war's women.

On October 16, June Caprice in "The Ragged Princess." A Cinderella-like picture of charm and power.

Florence La Badie in "The Pillory" and Gladys Hulette in "Prudence the Pirate" Play Widely Different Roles— Pictures Will Be Released by Pathe in October

FLORENCE LA BADIE in "The Pillery," and Gladys Hulette in "Prudence, the Pirate." plays of widely different types, are the features that Thanhouser will release through the Pathe exchanges in October. "The Pillory," written by Philip Lenergan and directed by Frederic Sullivan, is a drama woven around a mother who has sinned, her daughter and an intolerant aunt who in a fanatical attempt to act as an apostle of vengeance cruelly persecutes the mother who is trying to atone for her sins.

Florence La Badie is the daughter, Marie Shotwell is the mother and Marie Haynes is the bigoted aunt. Ethyle Cooke, George Marle and Yale Benner are others who have important parts. "The Pillory" is to be released on October 8.

"Prudence, the Pirate," is a comedy drama by Agnes C. Johnston, who wrote "The Shine Girl," and is directed by William Parke, who produced that feature. "Prudence" will be released October 22.

Miss Hulette plays a romantic little girl who wants to be a pirate. Aided by a party of tramps and a boy chum she sets sail in the good ship "Bucket of Blood," captures her aunt's house boat and breaks up a party to which she was not invited.

Panthus, the ugliest pup in the world, is a feature of the picture.

Flora Finch, famous for years as a co-star with the late John Bunny, is Miss Hulette's aunt. Barnett Parker, Riley Chamberlin and William Parke, Jr., are prominent in the supporting cast.

"FAITH" IS MISS MINTER'S THIRD PICTURE FOR MUTUAL

The picture which is absorbing the time and attention of Mary Miles Minter is "Faith," the feature which will constitute the fourteen-year-old star's third release as a Mutual player. "Youth's Endearing Charm" has already gone to the public. "Dulcie's Adventure," her second picture, is ready for release on October 2.

"Faith" was written by James Kirkwood, Miss Minter's director.

CHAPLIN'S NEW COMEDY, "THE PAWNSHOP," AND "DULCIE'S ADVENTURE," THE LATEST MINTER PICTURE, ARE AMONG MUTUAL RELEASES NEAR AT HAND

"The Pawn Shop," with Chaplin, and "Dulcie's Adventure," with Miss Minter, Heads Mutual List for Week of October 2

WITH Charlie Chaplin, in his newest Chaplin-Mutual release, entitled "The Pawn Shop," and Mary Miles Minter, in her second Mutual star production, "Dulcie's Adventure," heading the week's releases, the Mutual Film Corporation's output for the week of October 2 takes on interest. Both pictures will appear on Monday, October 2.

Aside from these, a five-part Mutual masterpiece, featuring Winnifred Greenwood and Edward Coxen, "A Woman's Darling"; the last of the five installments of the Gaumont Company's "Fantomas" detective series, entitled "The False Magistrate"; the usual output of current and scenic film; a number of comedies and a two-part drama will be counted among the week's releases.

In "The Pawn Shop," as in the last of his comedies, "The Count," the half-million-dollar funny man appears in his own famous make-up—the feet, the baggy trousers, the mustache and the ridiculous hat.

Edna Purviance, the fair, is seen in the role of the pawnbroker's daughter.

In "Dulcie's Adventure," produced by James Kirkwood, little Miss Minter appears in the role of an appealing young southern girl, a characterization for which the fourteen-year-old star is exceptionally well suited, since she herself is a daughter of the South.

She was born in Louisiana, where she spent her earlier days.

Aside from the characterization of Miss Minter, there is much of the atmosphere of the South added to the drama in the characters of the young girl's two maiden aunts—Aunt Emmie and Aunt Netta—roles portrayed by Bessie Banks and Marie Van Tassell.

As Harry, the boy whom Dulcie loves, Alan Forrest appears. Aside from him, there are Mollie Schafer, Perry Banks, John Gough, Harry Von Meter, Gertrude Le Brandt, William Carroll and Robert Klein.

"A Woman's Daring," the Mutual masterpiece of the week, is scheduled for release on October 6. In it are Winnifred Greenwood and Edward Coxen.

In support of Miss Greenwood are Mr. Coxen and George Field, the perfect villain, and a well-balanced cast.

"The False Magistrate,' the fifth "Fantomas" installment, will be released Thursday, October 6. In it, as in the other installment, Fantomas, one of the greatest crooks of fiction, escapes at the last moment, and in a wholly unexpected manner, from death at the hands of the law, and from Juve, the world's master detective, and Fandor, the journalist, the great sleuth's aid.

There is a whimsically humorous turn to the Thanhouser two-part drama, "Arabella's Prince," a release of October 6.

A delicious touch is introduced with the youthful Clavering Jones, Jr., a ten-year-old youngster, who aspires to be Arabella's prince. The spinster's cat and the sea dog's parrot afford some interesting moments.

The Beauty comedy release of the week is released, as usual, on Tuesday. Orral Humphrey appears at this time in a farce, the name of which is "Slicking the Slickers." Mr. Humphrey gets out of this funny story his usual amount of eccentric humor.

"A Touch of High Life," a Vogue comedy in two reels, appearing Sunday, October 8, gives Paddy McGuire, the Mutual funny man, unusual situations to his heart's content.

The Cub comedies for the week will be three in number. "Oh! For a Cave Man," the first of these, will appear Friday, October 6, and "Won by a Fowl" and "That Wonderful Wife" will both go out on the following day.

The remaining releases for the week consist of the usual scenic and current material of Gaumont production. Mutual Weekly No. 92, the news pictorial, and the split reel scenic-comic, "See America First," will go out on Wednesday, and "Reel Life," the Mutual's magazine in pictures, will be released on Sunday, October 8.

"THE FALSE MAGISTRATE" CONCLUDES GAUMONT'S "FANTOMAS" SERIES

With the showing of "The False Magistrate," October 5, the last of the five "Fantomas" episodes will have reached the screen. The call for additional prints to supply the demand is a gratifying indication of the success which awaits "The Vampires; or the Arch Criminals of Paris," the new Gaumont series of nine episodes, which will be released through the Mutual Film Corporation in the near future.

"The False Magistrate" completes the series. "Fantomas" is serving as an introduction to the longer series, "The Vampires." The new series is also in episodes of three reels each. One episode a week is scheduled for nine weeks.

BORZAGE WILL SOON BE SEEN IN "IMMEDIATE LEE"

"Immediate Lee," a picture of the good old Western type, a forthcoming Mutual (American) release, gives Frank Borzage, the able actor-director, his favorite role.

"Immediate Lee" is named "Immediate" because he is quick with his gun. Pitted against a band of cattle rustlers and outlaws, he comes out victorious, but not without his little struggles, and wins the pretty girl of the piece.

Opposite Mr. Borzage appears Anna Little.

"Borrowed Plumes," from Universal, Is Expected to Put Patrons in Fine Feather, While "Clipped Wings" Will Fly High Without a Handicap

TWO Universal Special Features and a Red Feather five-reel drama head the Universal Program for the week of October 2.

The first special feature is "Borrowed Plumes," a two-reel episode of the "Timothy-Dobbs-That's-Me" series in which Carter de Haven is starred. "Borrowed Plumes" was written by Bess Meredyth and produced by Wallace Beery. Robert Milash, Marcia Moore and Dan Duffy appear in support of Mr. De Haven.

The other Universal Special Feature is "Clipped Wings," the eighth two-reel episode of the new Universal serial, "Liberty," featuring Marie Walcamp, Eddie Polo and Jack Holt, with Maud Emory, G. Raymond Nye, Neal Hart, Bertram Grassby and L. M. Wells also in the cast. "Liberty" was written and is being produced by Jacques Jaccard.

The week's Red Feather is "Under Suspicion," a five-reel drama to be released October 2. "Under Suspicion" was written by the famous English novelist, E. Phillips Oppenheim, and was adapted and produced by George L. Tucker. Douglas Munro, Gerald Ames, Bert Wynn and Laura Cowie take the principal roles in the play.

On the same day "With the Spirit's Help," a Nestor Comedy featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Priscilla Dean, will be released. The story of the play by Virginia Kirkley was scenarioized and produced by L. W. Chaudet. Fred Gamble appears in support of the trio of principals.

On Tuesday, October 3, Ben Wilson, supported by Edna Hunter, plays the leading role in "The Heart of New York," a three-reel Gold Seal underworld drama written by William Addison Lathrop and produced by Ben Wilson. Charles Ogle, William Welsh, Howard Crampton, Margaret West and Dixie Compton also play prominent roles in the picture.

There will be no release under the Victor brand on October 3.

On October 4 the feature of the day will be Dan Russell in the two-reel L-Ko comedy, "Safe in the Safe," in which the chief of police of a certain town finds that his home and office has become the rendezvous and hiding place of all the crooks for two hundred miles around. On the same day Number 40 of the Universal Animated Weekly will be released. There will be no releaase under the Laemmle brand on this date.

"The Eternal Way," a Big U drama featuring G. Raymond Nye and Vola Smith, will be the feature of the program of October 5. The drama was written and produced by C. Elfelt. Charles Gunn, May Hill and Eddie Brown also play important roles in the picture. Under the Powers brand will appear the Hy Mayer educational drawings, "Pen and Inklings in and Around Jerusalem." This is a combination of a cartoon by Hy Mayer and a travel picture in Palestine. At times the moving picture is stopped and a cartoon by Mr. Mayer faded in. The famous Wall of Wails is shown, the different types of people, a Mohammedan maiden, a sacred parade, the well into which Joseph was cast by his brethren and the place of Christ's nativity. There will be no release under the Victor brand on this date.

On October 6 the Universal Special, "Somewhere on the Battlefield," a two-reel military drama featuring Hobart Henley, Claire McDowell and William Welsh, will be released. The story of this strong and timely drama was written by H. H. Van Loan at the suggestion of Hobart Henley. Mr. Van Loan's story in the New York Evening Mail was scenarioized by Elliott J. Clawson and produced by Hobart Henley. The play deals with the adventures of an American hospital corps in Servia. On the same day Billie Mason and Madge Kirby co-star in the Victor comedy "A Charming Villain," which was written by Harry Wulze and produced by John Steppling.

There will be no Rex release on this date.

Little Zoe Rae will be featured on October 7 in "A Mountain Tragedy," a Bison two-reel drama written by Calder Johnstone and produced by George Cochrane. E. J. Denecke, Marjorie Ellison, Buster Emmons and Bert Law appear in support of the diminutive Universal star. On the same day William Franey and Gale Henry with Milburn Moranti and Lillian Peacock appear in "Father Gets in Wrong," a Joker comedy written by William Schoene and produced by Allen Curtis.

Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnston share honors on October 8 in the Rex two-reel society drama, "The Human Gamble," which was written by Calder Johnstone and produced by L. B. Carleton. Richard Morris and Alfred Allen appear in support of the principals. There will be no Imp or L-Ko releases on this date.

Five one-reelers will be released on the Universal program for the week of October 2 under the Imp, Big U, Rex, Laemmle and Victor brands. The titles of these five special releases had not been decided upon at the time of going to press.

Pictographs Show How the Wild Untamed Oyster Becomes a Quiet Animal with a Placid Disposition; Revolution in Paper Making Also Shown

ANN PENNINGTON, the "Follies" star, makes her second appearance in the Paramount Program in "The Rainbow Princess," produced by the Famous Players, during the week of October 9. This, together with "Miss Nancy," a Pallas production in which Vivian Martin is starred, will be the two main features on the Paramount Program.

On both these features, Paramount through its exchanges, has prepared publicity and advertising aids.

During the same week the "little features" released by Paramount will consist of the 35th edition of the "magazine-on-the-screen," the Paramount Pictographs, the 36th of the series of "trips-around-the-world," conducted by Burton Holmes, in which he will take his fellow-travelers through "Old Ireland," and the Paramount-Bray cartoon, "Col. Heeza Liar Gets Married," from the pen of J. R. Bray. The week of October 16, Paramount will issue its second comedy "Bridget's Blunder," produced by the United States Pictures Corporation.

The four leading subjects tell of how wild oysters are captured, how swampy ponds are turned into places beautiful, how wood is converted into paper, and the first showing of motion picture sculpture.

The capturing of wild oysters is particularly thrilling, and tells an interesting story of how oysters are planted, grown, polished, tagged, and all stages through which the oyster passes, from the day it is planted until it is eaten.

The idea of showing the public how to make their municipalities more beautiful than they had formerly conceived, is an entirely new subject in the motion picture field, and is done in a series of pictures which are an inspiration to any populace to turn their ugly, unsightly pools into ideal gardens of arrangement.

"Converting Wood Into Paper" tells the story of how after the discovery that printing paper could be made from wood, the industry was revolutionized and made the penny newspaper possible.

In this release of the Pictographs, there will be the first showing of motion picture sculpture originated by William d'A. Hopkins.

The Paramount-Burton Holmes travel picture for this week, takes a trip "In Old Ireland."

Mr. Holmes will follow this trip with one to Switzerland, and then will go to Italy and other beautiful places of Continental Europe.

J. R. Bray's animated cartoon for this week is "Col. Heeza Liar Gets Married," during the course of which the Col.'s new wife goes on a strike for an eight-hour day, and insists upon the Colonel making his own meals.

On October 19, Paramount's second comedy, "Bridget's Blunder" will be released.

"LAND O' LIZARDS" GIVES ANNA LITTLE CHANCE TO PLAY COWBOY ROLE

In the role of a cowboy—trousers, "makings," and all—the altogether delightful Anna Little, Mutual (American) star, dominates the Mutual Masterpiece, "Land o' Lizards."

Miss Little has always wanted to play a boy's role, a regular wild Western role, giving her a chance to depict a boy of the Western country, which has always been her home.

Her opportunity came when "Land o' Lizards" was written with her in mind by Kenneth B. Clarke, the short story writer.

Opposite Miss Little appears Frank Borzage, who also directed the production, in the role of "The Stranger."

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

THE sudden and dramatic death of Arthur Hoops, the popular leading man in many Metro productions, who died in his automobile while driving to his home in Bayside, L. I., is marked with many striking coincidences. This was remarked by his friends and fellow-players around the Popular Plays and Players studio, when the news of his death came.

Mr. Hoops was apparently in excellent health when he left the studio. He had been working in some of the final scenes in "The Orchid Lady," in which Mme. Petrova is starred, and which is now being completed under the direction of Burton King. On the previous day Mr. Hoops worked in a big scene near Dover, N. J. Strangely enough, in this scene he was supposed to be killed. The title which will appear on the screen, in advance of this scene, reads: "The Hand of Destiny."

The players associated with Mr. Hoops recalled that Mr. Hoops laughingly remarked a few minutes before he worked in the scene in Dover:

"Well, good-by, fellows—here is where I die. You slaves can go on and finish the picture, while I am dead."

Mr. King, who knew Mr. Hoops perhaps better than any one else around the studio, declared, when first he heard of the actor's death, that it surely was due to heart failure, aggravated by a sudden shock. This has been proved to be the case. Mr. Hoops always was nervous when riding in an automobile. He never allowed his chauffeur to drive faster than fifteen miles an hour. And whenever he was in one of the company's machines, he was agitated until the trip was over. When rounding a corner, or driving close to another machine, Mr. Hoops invariably shouted a warning to the chauffeur.

The morning of the day he died Mr. Hoops purchased a new Mitchell car. He made several calls on friends after he was through working, and started toward his home on Long Island. It has developed that his negro chauffeur came within a few inches of running down a man not fifteen minutes before Mr. Hoops was found dying in his car. Along with other coincidences the man was Charles A. Taylor, the scenario expert, employed in the general offices of Metro. Mr. Taylor was crossing Broadway at Forty-sixth street, when a machine suddenly came from behind the frame building occupied by the subway construction workers. Mr. Taylor jumped back, and not a second too soon. The automobile came to a stop, then shot on. Mr. Taylor saw that it was Mr. Hoops in the car, and he shouted after him. There was no response, and he saw Mr. Hoops settle back, as if drawing a deep sigh of relief. Fifteen minutes' later he was dead.

"Divorce and the Daughter"

The next feature in which Florence La Badie, the Thanhouser star, will be seen is "Divorce and the Daughter," directed by Frederick Sullivan, and written by Agnes C. Johnston. It is a different sort of a story, discussing in a new way the problems of married life and the effect of divorce upon the children.

After "Prudence, the Pirate" was finished at the Thanhouser studios, everybody wanted to adopt "Panthus," the ugliest pup in the world, who is next in importance to Gladys Hulette in the cast. Six persons drew straws, and Robert Vaughn won "Panthus," who now is condemned to live in Brooklyn.

Work has begun at the Frohman-Flushing studio on Augustus Thomas's dynamic play, "The Witching Hour." C. Aubrey Smith, who returned from London, specially for the work in this production, is spending five days a week at the studio and two days at the theatre where he is rehearsing with Margaret Illington in her new play. In addition to Mr. Smith, Jack Sherrill, Helen Arnold, Etta De Groff, and Robert Conness will have the important parts. It will probably be in seven reels.

Helen Badgley, the Thanhouser kidlet, is back in pictures. She is soon to be seen with Vincent Serrano in "A Modern Monte Cristo." Other motion picture actresses have retired temporarily for various reasons—to be married, to travel, etc.—but none before ever retired for Helen's reason. She was out of the films because her front teeth came out, and she couldn't act again until the new ones grow in.

E. H. Sothern, who has been working at the Vitagraph studios for the past two months, distributed gifts to three of the men who have played a large part in the making of his productions.

To Fred Thomson, the director, he presented a heavy Tiffany hand-wrought gold ring with a blood stone signet setting. Eddie Cassel, the property man, and Charles Davis, cameraman, also received heavy gold signet rings. Each of the rings was engraved with the following inscription: "In remembrance of Vitagraph days, from E. H. S." Mr. Sothern posed for his final scene in "An Enemy to the King" on Saturday, September 16.

The most significant combination of Vitagraph stars in any forthcoming release except Commodore Blackton's big spectacle, "The Battle Cry of War," have just begun work in a new play at the Brooklyn studios. They are Harry Morey, Alice Joyce, and Marc MacDermott, and their vehicle is a new play by Commodore J. Stuart Blackton and Cyrus Townsend Brady. It is being directed by William P.

How Peggy Burke, the Thanhouser Actress, Spends her Spare Moments. She Is in the Cast Supporting Gladys Hulette in "Prudence, the Pirate," Released Through Pathe

S. Earle. Mr. Morey and Miss Joyce have been working together in "The Battle Cry of War." Mr. MacDermott has just finished a big dual personality story directed by Charles Brabin.

Having completed his C. N. and A. M. Williamson serial, "The Scarlet Runner," the Vitagraph star, Earle Williams, is already hard at work for the forthcoming Blue Ribbon releases which come regularly after the run of the automobile adventure story is completed. The story in which he is now busy is by James Oliver Curwood. Naomi Childers will play opposite Mr. Williams. The direction of this film has been placed in the hands of Vitagraph's woman director, Marguerite Bertsch, who has just completed "The Devil's Prize," which she wrote and directed in five week.

H. A. Barrows, who plays the Chief of Police in "Fires of Conscience," William Farnum's new photoplay, has acted in six other Farnum pictures for William Fox. Mr. Barrows is a very versatile actor, and had widely different parts in his other films.

MacDermott's Vacation

Marc MacDermott, who recently joined the Vitagraph forces, and who plays the leading male role in "The Footlights of Fate," a recent Blue Ribbon feature, is taking his vacation by spending the weekends with his wife and family at Atlantic City. Owing to the fact that Mr. MacDermott has been busily engaged in the making of another feature he was unable to arrange his rest periods in any other way.

Gladys Hulette, having finished "Prudence, the Pirate," a Thanhouser feature to be released through Pathe, has started on another feature by Agnes C. Johnston, called "Her New York." O. A. C. Lund is directing the play.

Capt. E. H. Calvert, Essanay heavy actor, has disbanded the volunteer troop of cavalry he tentatively organized at the Essanay studios at the outbreak of the Mexican trouble.

He will immediately reorganize it if volunteers should ever be needed.

The Ziegfeld "Follies" have gone on the road, taking with them little Ann Pennington and her even smaller Hula Hula costume. But thanks to the necromancy of the motion picture film, neither the diminutive Miss Pennington nor her abbreviated costume have been completely departed from our midst.

Before she left New York Miss Pennington took her costume to a vacant field in the vicinity of Scarsdale, where a little Hawaiian village had been especially erected. Thither there also repaired the Hawaiian orchestra to whose melodious strains Miss Pennington has been dancing the Hula all summer at the New Amsterdam. Then, while the cameraman ground his crank, the celebrated dance was accomplished in most approved style. Now it is being incorporated into the circus episodes of "The Rainbow Princess," in which the little dancer will be starred by the Famous Players.

"The Hidden Scar," in which Holbrook Blinn and Ethel Clayton are the co-stars, plunges a girl with a past into the heart of a clergyman's family, the members of which have a hard time applying the "go and sin no more" teaching when it is brought home to them. Mr. Blinn plays the agnostic friend who shows them the error of their ways.

Arnold the Lead in "Marooned"

Edward Arnold, whose latest work before the camera was as Seymour Purch-

Virginia Pearson, the Fox Star, as Maud Muller

well, the heavy lead in "The Return of Eve," will play the lead in "Marooned," a new three-act drama now being constructed at the Esanay studios.

There'll be no canvas realism in Essanay pictures. That company has just completed what is believed to be the largest all-wood setting ever constructed. It is to duplicate a lodge in the Wisconsin woods, where scenes were taken for "The Chaperon," and construction required a carload of birch saplings and 12,000 board feet of lumber. It has been a general custom in the industry in "sets" of this size to use painted canvas, but President George K. Spoor has ordered that wherever possible real construction be used.

"The Fable of a Throbbing Genius of a Tank Town Who Was Encouraged by Her Folks Who Were Prominent" is the title of the latest George Ade Fable to be filmed by Essanay. It is constructed on the craze of entering the film firmament.

W. Christy Cabanné, the director who recently joined the Metro forces, has leased the beautiful Pierce country home at Forrest Hills, L. I., where he will live. His wife and two daughters have arrived from Hollywood, Cal., and are now installed in their new home. The daughters are named Vivien Christy Cabanné and Florence Turner Cabanné.

Lieutenant Charles Maigne, the author of "The Brand of Cowardice," and formerly an officer in the regular army, is playing an important role in this five-part Metro play. Lionel Barrymore and Grace Valentine are starred, and John W. Noble is directing it.

"Loneliness," the World-Brady play upon which Alice Brady has been occupied in the star role since finishing "Bought and Paid For," is the work of Willard Mack, one of the most successful dramatists of the present time. Arthur Ashley is featured in the principal male role, and the cast also includes Justine Cutting, J. Clarence Harvey, Walter Green, Edward Langford, and Edward Kimball. Harry Davenport is the director.

For the assembling of a National Capital "mob scene" for "The Man Who Forgot," with Robert Warwick as its star, the World Film people advertised in the Washington papers inviting the public to see itself in the movies, and fully 5,000 persons responded.

Joan Sawyer will keep on dancing even though she has deserted the stage for the silent drama. In her next Fox picture, now being staged under the direction of Tefft Johnson, she will dance in the unusual setting of a gypsy camp in the glow of the camp fire.

Theda Bara's new photoplay for the William Fox films is near completion. Miss Bara has a "vampire" role—her first since the tremendously successful, "The Eternal Sapho." A six-room "set" was built for some scenes in the picture last week at the Fort Lee, N. J., studio. A. H. Van Buren, who had the male lead in "Her Double Life," has an important part in the photoplay. Included in the cast are Herbert Heyes and Mary Martin.

Mme. Petrova, the Metro star, who has begun work on the five-part feature, "The Orchid Lady," the second subject she has written for herself in the last few months, declares a star can be, and should be of invaluable assistance to her director, in the making of a production. She declares that it is the business of the player to take her work seriously, because the success of several productions spells success for the star and those who support her.

Mme. Petrova's first story for the screen is "The Weaker Sex," a five-part feature, in which she is starred, and which was recently completed. Director Burton King had been casting around for a suitable vehicle for Mme. Petrova, but was unable at first to find what he wanted. This meant a delay and considerable expense. It was then that Mme. Petrova volunteered to write her own story. It proved so successful that she was induced to write another one, and "The Orchid Lady" is the result.

Last Sunday afternoon when the steamship Tuscania, which plies between here and the British Isles, arrived in port, a tea was given on board, at which Valentine Grant and Sidney Olcott were guests of honor. Many of the scenes in the "Daughter of MacGregor," featuring Miss Grant, and playing at the Strand theatre this week were filmed on board the Tuscania, and all of the Scotch crew as well as the officers are particularly anxious to see their boat in the movies. So Mr. Olcott and Miss Grant have made reservations for thirty seats at the Strand theatre for next Friday night.

Careful of "War Brides"

In producing his photodramatic version of "War Brides," Herbert Brenon has taken every precaution to guard against technical discrepancies and inconsistencies. One of the big scenes takes place in a hospital where wounded soldiers are brought from the battle front, and the players who take the parts of the physicians, attendants and Red Cross nurses will have the advantage of being supervised in their work by Dr. Orrin S. Wightman.

Brenon Aided by Physician

In addition to being a prominent physician, Dr. Wightman himself is deeply interested in motion picture photography. He owns a fine camera of the latest model, and makes numerous films for his own diversion. He has installed a projection room in his home, and holds his own "shows" for the entertainment of his friends. He visited the Brenon Studio on Hudson Heights last week, when some of the big scenes were being made, and volunteered to give Mr. Brenon the benefit of his technical knowledge in the hospital scene.

Other expert "consulting directors," who are aiding Mr. Brenon are two Roman Catholic priests from a church not far from the studio. These two fathers were present when Mr. Brenon made his church scenes, showing the marriage of the war brides to the departing soldiers, and scrutinized closely all details of the ceremony, and the fittings of the church and altar. While the company was in Connecticut for a week making a large number of outdoor scenes, the church was built in the studio, and three hundred extra players were engaged for the ensembles.

The popular Vitagraph star, Lillian Walker, is lying at the Mineola Hospital suffering from a general shaking up and contusions as a result of an automobile accident on the Jericho Turnpike, about three miles from Mineola, where the company were going to film some scenes in a forthcoming Blue Ribbon release.

The accident occured when the chauffeur swerved Miss Walker's machine in order to get out of the way of a Ford. The wheels skidded and the car turned turtle pinning the chauffeur, Miss Walker, Wilfrid North, her director and Bob Galliard, who was also in the machine, beneath its weight.

The players were unable to free themselves until assistance came, after which they were rushed to the Mineola Hospital, where they are now under the best of care.

Director North is believed to be suffering from fractured ribs, while Miss Walker and Mr. Galliard are generally bruised and shaken up.

Los Angeles, Sept. 23.

FOUR hundred extra players—occidental, oriental, black and white—have been crowding the Selig studio of thirty-nine acres while mob scenes were made for "The Garden of Allah." They played the parts of soldiers, natives and tourists, working day and night. Almost every evening artificial-light scenes for this multi-reel photoplay, which has Helen Ware as star with Tom Santschi in the principal male role, were filmed.

Most every member of the Selig Company working at the Newhall western studio in the filming of "The Light of Western Stars" aided the citizens there in fighting forest fires which threatened to destroy the town. The fire spread to the oil fields near by, and proved one of the most disastrous forest fires that has visited Southern California in the past few years. Pictures of the exploding oil wells and the forest fires were secured by the cameramen of the Selig Company.

Director E. A. Martin has returned to the Los Angeles studio for the making of interior scenes for this ten-reel production. This work will require but a few days each week, and the balance of the time will be spent at the western studio at Newhall and in the mountains of that vicinity.

The E. & R. Jungle Film Company has completed six of the ten numbers of their forthcoming series of comedies featuring Napoleon and Sally, the chimpanzees. These pictures will show the educated junglites in scores of different vocations. They begin with entering the "movies." They work in several pictures, join the army and usurp the authority given the officers in command. Life there proves to be rather slow, and they seek other thrills in conducting a Chinese laundry. Where the other four episodes will take them to remains to be seen. Each episode has new comedy situations and will be complete in itself.

Practically every member of the Lasky Hollywood studios participated at a benefit dance given Friday evening, September 15, at the club house of the Hollywood Women's Club. The proceeds of the dance will go to the Lasky baseball team. The grand march was led by Wallace Reid and Anita King. Kenneth McGaffy presided at the refreshment booth (almost all evening).

George Adds to His Talents That of Magician

George Dubois Proctor was in charge of the dance cabaret, himself serving as magician and reader, reciting for the fifteenth encore his famous story pertaining to "The Adventures of a Famous Actress' Pet Poodle." In the language of Business Manager Fred Kley, "a good time was had by all."

Lasky Director George Melford last week used a fashionable Hollywood church for scenes of an elaborate wedding for the subject titled "The Year of the Locusts," which offers Fanny Ward as star. More than one hundred in evening dress appear in the scenes made here.

Director Frank Reicher is doing everything possible to prevent further injury befalling Lou-Tellegen, now playing in his last Lasky subject for the present engagement. Reicher hopes to be able to send the actor in a presentable condition to his famous wife, Geraldine Farrar, who has already returned East. In every picture in which Tellegen has worked he has been injured to a more or less extent.

In "The Explorer" his ankle was sprained; he received a bad bruise on the shoulder in "The Unknown"; a bomb exploding in "The Victory of Conscience" caused painful burns; for "The Victoria Cross" he was thrown from a horse, and in the present subject titled, "The Black Wolf," he played too close to a swinging fist, and his nose stopping one, was badly bruised. The most recent accident occurred in a scene in which Spanish police surround a tavern and capture him.

A Japanese photodrama, with most of the scenes laid in Japan, is claiming the attention of E. J. LeSaint, who is directing Sessue Hayakawa and his pretty Japanese wife. Hayakawa has materially aided Art Director Wilfred Buckland in designing and building Japanese houses and interiors correct in every detail.

"The Wharf Rat" is the temporary title given a Fine Arts production being directed by Chet Withey, which has Mae Marsh and Robert Herron as co-stars, with Spottiswoode Aitken taking the role of a grandfather and Lillian Langdon the part of the stepmother. Miss Marsh impersonates an orphan girl who runs away from home with her grandfather, a violinist. Later she disguises herself as a boy and then meets Robert Herron, a law clerk. Both are thought to be women haters, and finally fall in love with each other. A motor boat race, in which Herron rescues Miss Marsh from her stepmother, is to be one of the thrillers of this production.

Los Angeles physicians were called in to play leading parts in a blood-transfusion operation for the Fine Arts picture known at present as "Bugs." F. A. Turner, taking the role of an eccentric who imagines he is heir to every human ailment, was the victim of this operation. The scene, while realistic in every way, contains a note of satire, and the director, Paul Powell, is said to have injected some excellent comedy into the situation.

Mr. Turner is working in two pictures at one time, his other being the one which features Dorothy Gish and known as "The Best Bet." Director Sigmund is in charge of the filming of the latter, and he and Powell, both making a claim for the services of Turner, finally deciding by each having the well-known character man play with them every other day.

Six hundred horsemen are said to have taken part in the Mexican-Indian battles made at the improvised rancho near Sunland last week for the Fine Arts picture, "The Defender," which deals with early Californian life and the land-grabbing condition which prevailed in the Bear state at this early period. The making of all these scenes required more than two weeks and the directors are said to have secured very unusual daredevil riding.

"Your Words Interest Us"

Chinese waiters employed in a cafe scene in the Triangle Komedy "The Village Vamp" rioted all over the stage when they found a Chinese inscription hanging on the wall of the cafe interior. After the excitement was all over, Director Dillon learned that the Chink artist employed to make the first sign had written into it an insulting message to a rival tong. The waiters who happened to be employed saw this and tore it to bits on condition that they could replace it with another. As soon as the scene was made Dillon decided it would be best to destroy the trouble maker, fearing the original sign-maker might return.

The jinx which has followed the Signal Helen Holmes Company since it left Los Angeles, more than four weeks ago, continues close on the trail of J. P. McGowan and the producing company. Since leaving the studio here production has been delayed by sickness, inclement weather, breakdowns and from other causes, which materially increase the production cost. Owing to the illness of Leo D. Maloney, who plays lead opposite Miss Holmes in "Lass of the Lumber Lands," the company lost several days during the past week.

The day following they started on a location sixty miles from their hotel at Arcata, California, and one accident after another which befell the company's cars served to prevent securing many scenes. Then, too, on this day the company had gone to the wreck of the Pacific Coast liner Bear, which was off a cape at the most westerly point of the United States. All the remaining portion of the day the players worked in the water while a breeze which is thought to have started in the Arctic Zone tended to send shivers up and down their backs continuously.

At night a car breaking down made it necessary for the players to remain in the mountains along the coast until midnight. Even when it is impossible for them to work for one cause or other, the members have had little luck at trout fishing. Paul Hurst was the most fortunate, and returned with a grand collection of fish. Three varieties in cans and the fourth, a six-inch trout, constituted the collection.

N. Z. Woods, affectionately known as Daddy, who has played in practically all of the releases of the Signal Film Corporation, died during the past week at his home in Glendale. He was cast for an important role for the serial now being made by J. P. McGowan, "Lass of the Lumber Lands," but was taken ill a day before the company departed. Woods was formerly a railroad engineer, and was considered a very valuable assistant to Director McGowan. He is survived by his wife.

The J. Warren Kerrigan Universal Company in the Redwoods Country, Filming the Scenes for "The Measure of a Man"

The Yorke Film Corporation's producing company has left for the Imperial Valley to stage the prologue scenes for the forthcoming production, "Big Tremaine," which co-stars Harold Lockwood and May Allison. The entire party accompanied Director Henry Otto, including Lester Cuneo, Virginia Suthern, William Ephe, Lillian Hayward, William DeVall, Josephine Rice, Charles P. Stalling and Tony Gaudio. The scenes to be shot at the Imperial Valley are those of cotton fields of the South. "Big Tremaine" has most of its scenes laid in Virginia.

During the past week the lack of rain in California made it necessary for the Yorke producing staff to create an artificial shower, which drenched the beautiful southern home built on the stage at the Hollywood studios.

Some Raiment for "Big Tremaine"

The character taken by Harold Lockwood in "Big Tremaine," as described by Marie Van Vorst in her novel, is a handsome youth who knows how to wear tailored clothes. Lockwood, after reading the book, we are told, jumped into his high-powered automobile and drove to the tailor shop of —— (censored by the advertising manager), where all the Pasadena millionaires buy their clothes, and selected the material for half a dozen suits. May Allison is also said to have spent a month's salary on her new wardrobe.

Prior to the company's departure for the Imperial Valley, Cameraman Tony Gaudio, a Roman by birth, gave the producing staff an Italian dinner, which is spoken of as the greatest feed of their lives, and one that lasted from three in the afternoon until eight at night.

The Yorke Film Corporation has completed negotiations with Bobbs-Merrill Company, book publishers, for motion picture rights on one or two of their most recent best sellers, and script is now being prepared for the company's next production.

The film version of the Richard Harding Davis novel "Somewhere in France" has

Ben Turpin and His "Poultry a la Mode" in the Vogue-Mutual Comedy of That Name

"THE ISLE OF LOVE," "THE SHADOW," "DAVID'S IDOL DREAM" AND "HER CARD" ARE THE FOUR UNIVERSAL RELEASES REPRESENTED IN THIS GROUP

been completed at the Ince studio and forwarded to the eastern factory of the New York company. This subject gives Louise Glaum and Howard Hickman the co-star parts. The story appeared originally in The Metropolitan Magazine, and is spoken of as the most gripping narrative of the present European war. Practically all of the thrilling incidents described by the novelist are said to be embodied in the screen version, and the scenario prepared by J. G. Hawks required a large number of war scenes, which will add new honors to the Ince staff.

Miss Glaum takes the part of a daring woman spy who accomplishes her mission of securing secrets which ultimately cause her downfall. Hickman appears in the role of a lieutenant. A cast composed of Joseph J. Dowling, Fannie Midgley, George Fisher, Jerome Storm and others support the stars. The numerous photographic effects were secured by Del Clauson, and the artistic settings were prepared under the direction of Robert Brunton, art director at the Ince studios.

A number of scenes required the operation of a wireless instrument, and as these were close-ups, it was necessary that Howard Hickman spend a week at a local station to learn the technique of operating.

An interesting incident in connection with this photoplay is the fact that J. G. Hawks, who prepared the scenario, many years ago was stage manager at the Belasco theatre at New York, and in order to live up to the rules of the management was required to order the author of this story, Richard Harding Davis, off the stage.

A college-life play is next to be filmed by Ince Director Charles Miller, which will offer Enid Markey and William Desmond in the principal roles, the former appearing as a chorus girl, and the latter a college athlete. Margaret Thompson, David M. Hartford, Charles Gunn and a number of others will support the leading players in this subject, which was written by John Lynch, a most recent addition to the Ince scenario staff. This will be Mr. Hartford's second work as an actor in more than ten years.

He is superintendent of productions at the Ince studio, and recently was induced to take the role of a heavy in support of Frank Keenan. He put this over so well that other directors have since been clamoring for his services, and now Business Manager E. H. Allen fears that he will lose a good executive in order to keep peace among his directors. Hartford, however, refuses to become a member of the stock company, and insists that he will, now that he has started, play a part for each director and then he is through.

Raymond B. West has been placed in charge of filming a psychological drama which will have three stars and a great array of talent of the Ince stock organization. The screen version of this story was prepared by Monte M. Katterjohn from a well-known story, and besides Dorothy Dalton, Louise Glaum and Charles Ray the principal players are Margaret Thompson, George Fisher, Charles K. French, J. Frank Burke, Jack Gilbert, George Elwell, J. Barney Sherry and a number of others. This is said to be the greatest array of talent ever assembled for a single Ince-Triangle production.

Vacation days have arrived for two Ince Culver City studio principals. Director Reginald Barker is making the last scenes for the second Triangle subject starring Clara Williams, and upon its completion he will leave for three or four weeks in the mountains. On this trip he will spend most of the time at Yosemite Valley and in the mountain district near there.

A Speedy Picture Maker

During the past week Barker made a new record for speed. He filmed sixty-three scenes on the Inceville battlefields in one day. Several hundred people took part in this mimic warfare, and Barker had several cameras shooting from different angles.

The other Ince principal to leave for a vacation is Bessie Barriscale, who has gone to New York on the first vacation she has had in three years. She will probably be absent about three weeks.

There was a wedding at the Ince Culver City studios this week. Marjory Wilson was the bride and Jerome Storm the groom. All the members of the producing staff assembled in one of the big glass stages to witness the ceremony. The congratulations were numerous, even though all members knew that the wedding was but for a scene in a coming Frank Keenan Triangle picture. The bridal pair wore their wedding togs three days before the California sun would shine bright enough to permit the camera to record the action, and this is said to be the longest wedding in history.

William S. Hart has taken up a new melodrama, he having completed the western newspaper story by J. G. Hawks. The new production is by Monte Katterjohn and is referred to at the studios as a gripping melodrama, in which Hart will use his famous six-shooters in many scenes. The supporting players are Alma Reuben, Norbert A. Myles, Nina Byron and Walter Perry.

In the making of a scene last week William S. Hart received a painful injury. A lariat became entangled and cut one of his hands when the ferocious horse in the loop at the other end made a sudden dash forward. Several of his fingers were badly cut, but good views of the scene were secured before the actor gave up his hold on the rope.

Kenneth Anthony O'Hara, Ince publicity writer, has stepped forth again and won terpsichorean honors. His most recent conquest was a loving cup given as a prize for the most graceful dancers at the Breakers Cafe, Venice. Mary Dolan was Mr. O'Hara's partner in the contest.

Al. E. Christie has completed the first two-reel comedy release, titled "Bride and Gloom," and has taken up the filming of another of this size, titled "All for Five Hundred Dollars." The story is by William E. Wing, and for it Mr. Christie has cast all his comedians in principal roles. This list includes Neil Burns, Eddie Barry, George French and Dave Morris. Betty Compton, who has been styled "The Prettiest Girl in Pictures," will play the feminine lead.

Second Christie Comedy

The second Christie company, under the direction of Horace Davey, is filming "Miss Billie Buttons," a one-reel comedy by a Los Angeles newspaper man. This gives Miss Billie Rhodes the part of a bellhop, and she is featured in a cast composed of Nolan Leary, Harry Ham, Harry Rattenbury and Stella Adams.

Business Manager Charles Christie, of the Christie Film Company, has closed contracts with a large number of exchanges in various cities for the weekly relcase of Christie comedies, the list of these to be announced shortly. At the present time Mr. Christie states the exchanges to handle their subjects include the Zenith Film Exchange, managed by McEvoy and Duffy of Boston, which will handle the New England states, the Eastern booking office at Philadelphia, Eastern Pennsylvania. The Superior Feature Company of Detroit will take care of Michigan; William S. Seivers, St. Louis, has contracted to supply the exhibitors of the "Show Me" state; Lynch and Tandy, owners of the Southern Paramount and the Texas Paramount exchanges at Atlanta and Dallas; Nolan and Swanson of Denver, the intermountain territory; The Zenith Feature Film Service, Minneapolis, for Minnesota, North and South Dakota; and E. H. Emmick's Peerless Film Service of San Francisco and Los Angeles, California, Nevada, and Arizona territory. In a number of important cities the Christie Company is negotiating with one or more exchanges, and it is the intention of the company to make an early announcement of the entire list.

The Christie Film Company last week supplied one of the news weeklies with scenes of the Pacific Coast steamer Congress leaving the Los Angeles harbor pier on its ill-fated voyage to north coast cities. These scenes were taken under the direction of Al. E. Christie for a comedy, and show close-up views of Captain Couzzins, who was the last man to leave the burning ship, and many of his crew. At the time, Harry Rattenbury played the role of captain of the boat, wearing Captain Couzzins' clothing at the time, the two men weighing 230 pounds each.

A change was made at the Vogue studio last week, when Robin E. Williamson, who has been a director for the Vim Company at Jacksonville, Florida, was placed in charge of the direction of the company composed of Gypsy Abbott, Arthur Moon, Paddy McQuire and others. This company is now at work on the two-reel comedy known under the working title of "The Mystery of the Greenback." It consists of the various principals pursuing a thousand dollar bill in its many rambles, all of which create a number of new comedy situations.

Henry Kernan, Vogue director, has been transferred to the other company and will serve as co-director with Rube Miller, who, with Ben Turpin and Lillian Hamilton, will make up the cast. They are now filming "The Stolen Painting," which deals with many double-crosses caused by the owner of a valuable painting placing it in a safety deposit vault and substituting for it an imitation of the same subject, the substitute having been purchased at the Red Front Emporium, well known in every city. Thieves attempt to steal the painting, get the substitute, believe they have been double-crossed by their aids, attempt to fix the blame on a pawnbroker, all of which causes complications of a laugh-making character. This comedy will require several very handsome settings of a very elaborate scale; one now occupies all of the stage space at the studio.

POLLARDS AGAIN IN SAN DIEGO FOR SCENES

Special to Motion Picture News.

San Diego, Cal., Sept. 16.

Last April the Pollard Picture Company came to this city to film some scenes for "The Pearl of Paradise," and the surroundings of the many Exposition buildings, with the elaborate parkings, the lagoons and other landscape features, proved so satisfactory that the company has returned to San Diego for a permanent location, having taken a lease on the "Streets of Old Panama" concession on the Isthmus at the Exposition, this concession not having been in use for some time. There are a number of buildings connected with it, but the company has erected a stage and installed equipment of considerable proportions.

Harry Pollard, formerly with the American Company at Santa Barbara, is directing, with Gordon Russel as co-director and heavy. Joseph Harris and John Steppling are playing characters, while Jack Mower, formerly with Vitagraph, has the leads. The company is featuring Marguerite Fischer, with Beatrice Van in seconds.

Julian La Mothe, formerly head of the scenario department in Lubin's Coronado studio and later with the American at Santa Barbara, is in charge of the same department with the Pollard company, as well as having charge of the publicity. Maxwell Alexander, another former Lubin employee at Coronado, is in charge of scene painting.

The first play upon which the company is working is a five-reel comedy, "Miss Jackie," in which there is much of a naval character, with a mythical isle in the sea as one of the scenes of action. The company plans to put out only five-reelers, releasing through the Mutual.

Capt. and Mrs. Wilbert Melville have returned to Coronado after four weeks spent at Great Bear Lake. No announcement has been made as yet as to the reopening of the Lubin studio, of which Capt. Melville was the manager.

The Associated Student Body of the San Diego High School has voted a fund to provide for showing an educational film once a week at that institution, a committee having been named to make the selection. It is planned to have scientific films, travel scenes and reels depicting the construction of various machines, ships, and the like.

SHIPMAN ESTABLISHES OFFICE FOR MABEL CONDON EXCHANGE IN NEW YORK

Since arriving in New York, Ernest Shipman has established offices for the Mabel Condon Exchange on the tenth floor of the Longacre Building, and has already closed contracts for a number of people who are enroute to the Pacific Coast studios.

Contracts are executed whereby he becomes business manager for one of the largest film concerns now doing business, offices for which are being opened on the eighth floor of the Longacre Building.

Mr. Shipman has also reverted to the legitimate end of the theatrical profession. He has gone into partnership with a New York producer.

INTEREST IN SINGLE-REEL BULLETINS FROM GAUMONT ON INCREASE

The Gaumont Company requested the branches of the Mutual Film Corporation to send for as many Gaumont single-reel bulletins as would be required to supply the needs of exhibitors, institutions and the casual projectors of motion pictures, other than photodramas. To date there have been requests for over 6000 of these bulletins to be sent weekly. They contain brief, newsy accounts of the pictures in "Real Life," the Mutual Magazine in Film, "See America First" and the Mutual Weekly.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

Exchange Men in the Middle West Report Businses for Serials Greater Than Ever; in One Town Exhibitors Bid Against Each Other for Serial Bookings

SERIALS may or may not be popular in other parts of the country, but they certainly are in the smaller towns of the middle west. Here are a few recent happenings:

Road men out of the Pathe exchange last week sent in twelve contracts for serials in one day, breaking all previous records.

One exhibitor, to accommodate the crowd, shows the same chapter of the same serial two different nights each week.

One exchange has been forced to arrange for additional prints to be distributed exclusively in Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota.

One exchange manager gets an average of two letters a day—and has been getting them for two weeks—telling of all box office records broken by a recently released serial. Exhibitors in the same town bid against each other for serial rights. Estimates by one exchange show that four out of every five houses are showing serials.

"The serial business has been climbing, climbing, until the other day we broke all records of the office by getting twelve serial contracts in one day," said Manager Kirk of the Pathe exchange. "Eight serials have been released in one month, but the price has steadily gone up until our latest release is double the price of former releases. Three exhibitors in Lincoln, Neb., have been fighting over the privilege of showing "The Shielding Shadow," and two exhibitors in South Omaha bid against each other to see who'd get the rights there."

"We had a brand new serial to boost last year, but the results then can't be compared with the success of 'The Girl From 'Frisco,' our regular service serial this year," said Manager C. W. Taylor of the General exchange. "It is going very big. One attraction about it is that only two reels are released each week."

"'Liberty' has broken all Universal records in this territory," was the declaration of Jake Mitchell, manager of the exchange. "I'll admit, now, that I was skeptical at first, because of the serial's unusual length—twenty weeks. But I found the exhibitor was not opposed to a long serial if he felt it was going to deliver the goods. There is a serial craze out here; this territory has never before been showing as many serials as this fall. Four out of every five houses—and I am quoting from figures—are showing serials. And the most gratifying part of it is four out of every five showing them are asking more money than they would with any other service.

"Something of what 'Liberty' is doing," Mr. Mitchell continued, "can be found in these letters," showing a stack on the table. "They are from exhibitors praising the serial. I get an average of two a day, and have been receiving them for several days, saying the box office receipt records are broken. Here's one from L. E. Carnes of the Palace, Sioux City, Iowa, which is typical. 'Broke all standing records with 'Liberty,' he says. Ernest N. Epley of the New Edison theatre, Hastings, says, 'It beats 'Peg o' the Ring,' which was the record breaker before.' Porter L. Wilbern, Port's Electric theatre, Sibley, Ia., says 'Liberty' sure got the people started, along with the extra advertising. Records smashed.' Do you want to read any more of them? Well, most of them give me the figures—the money they took in—and I don't blame them for crowing."

"It's advertising has made 'The Secret of the Submarine' almost a household term in this territory," said Manager Max Weisfeldt of the Mutual exchange. This week I am sending out these cards," showing a card the color of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS cover. They tell the exhibitors that on account of the unprecedented applications and requests for "Secret of the Submarine" bookings, we have just arranged for additional prints to be distributed exclusively for Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota. These cards also announce the coming of the sequel to the 'Diamond From the Sky.' This is also certain to be a winner. The Chaplin series of twelve comedies, one a month, is the biggest thing this office ever handled. Even towns of four hundred population—apparently too small to get crowds to pay for the picture, want it. The exhibitors boost the prices, and can more than afford to pay us."

B. E. Lyon, Pittsburgh, Is Made District Manager by International, with the Whole United States as His Field of Activity

FOLLOWING its announced policy of advancements to its branch managers, the International Film Service, Inc., has appointed B. E. Lyon, manager of the Pittsburgh exchange, to the position of district manager. He will act as assistant to J. K. Burger, assistant general manager in charge of exchanges. His field will be the entire United States, and he will visit the different exchanges, instilling into the branch managers the ideas of the home office.

Mr. Lyon has been in charge of the Pittsburgh exchange of the International since its organization. Prior to that time, he was with Pathe, and was directly responsible for founding and building up the Newark branch. His work there was considered of the highest order and because of it, he was selected by the International for the important post in Pittsburgh. His success there has been as phenominal as in Newark.

Mr. Lyon will be succeeded as manager of the Pittsburgh branch by Edward J. McGurty, which appointment, too, is along the International's policy of awarding faithful employees. Mr. McGurty joined the International Film Service, Inc., in April of this year as a road man, working under the supervision of Mr. Lyon.

Mr. McGurty was born and raised in Chicago, attended the public schools there and graduated from the University of Chicago. He engaged in special investigation work for the McCormack Foundation of his alma mater and later did similar work for the Illinois state attorney.

For the past two years he has been a resident of Pittsburgh, where he entered the film field, first with the Liberty Film Company.

Susbsequently he represented Pathe in West Virginia, where he remained until he joined the International.

BEHRING, JR., IS IN CHARGE OF EXCHANGE ESTABLISHED IN HOUSTON BY UNITY

Announcement is made this week that the Unity Sales Corporation has established its own exchange in Houston, Texas, to look after the distribution of "The Yellow Menace," and other features which are to be put out by the Unity Sales Corporation. A. G. Behring, Jr., is to be manager of this exchange, and will handle all of Texas and Oklahoma.

Besides "The Yellow Menace," Mr. Behring has at the present time to offer exhibitors in his territory "The Marriage Bond," starring Nat C. Goodwin, in five reels; "The Lottery Man," with Thurlow Bergen, in five parts, and the Tweedledum comedies, with the famous Perez, in a series of one and two reel comedies.

Manager Vine of the International has engaged Mrs. Bernard Corbet for one of his office force.

TWO MINNEAPOLIS SALESMEN

Two new salesmen at the Minneapolis branch of V-L-S-E are A. J. Mentz and Theodore Quandall. Mr. Mentz formerly handled the Bluebird features in Ohio, and Mr. Quandall was a salesman for Pathe in Minneapolis.

TRIANGLE ISSUES STAMP BOOK TO PREVENT ANNOYANCES FROM C. O. D. SHIPMENTS

An innovation has been introduced by Triangle in its supply department, which is making the purchase of posters and other advertising material much easier, and is cutting out the little annoyances of C. O. D. shipments.

A book containing 150 stamps is now issued, for sale to exhibitors. There are stamps of varying denominations from one cent to twenty-five cents, the total value of the book being ten dollars. This amount the exhibitor pays on receipt of the book, then, as he wants supplies, he tears out sufficient stamps to cover his order, and sends them to the branch manager, by mail or by messenger, as the case may be.

This method entirely does away with the twenty-five cent collection charge of the express company, which always attended C.O.D. shipments, and which in the case of a small order amounted to a very considerable percentage of the actual cost of the material.

By both the branch managers and the exhibitors the plan has been received with satisfaction. The former are provided with what amounts to a cash deposit from the exhibitor, without the trouble of bookkeeping and the rendering of weekly or monthly statements; the latter is relieved of the same amount of detail, and in addition is provided with a means of remittance which may be transmitted without cost, and is much more satisfactory to give to a messenger than the equivalent in cash.

PARAMOUNT OPENS BRANCH IN CLEVELAND

Because of the increase of the business handled by the Famous Players Film Service, Inc., distributors of Paramount Pictures in Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan, it has been necessary for them to open another branch exchange in their territory. The new exchange will be in Cleveland, Ohio, with offices at 501 and 502 Sincere Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

The Pittsburgh Exchange for Paramount Pictures is one of the largest in the country and handles the distribution of Paramount productions, both features and single-reel releases, for approximately 1,000 theatres. The Pittsburgh Exchange has branch offices in Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit and Cleveland.

Harry W. Irons, formerly connected with the Kunsky Theatrical Enterprises of Detroit, and later connected with the Pittsburg exchange, will assume personal direction of the Cleveland office. Mr. Irons is very well-known in the film business and has had wide experience.

TWICE FLOOR SPACE FOR MUTUAL IN HOUSTON, TEXAS

The Mutual Film Corporation exchange at Houston is now comfortably located at 806 Franklin avenue, where it has twice the floor space of its old quarters in the S. P. Building. The new office is well arranged, and the handling of business is simpler, without the crowded conditions of the former office.

Serials Are Taking Well in Des Moines Territory—Rosenfield, Lego, Visitors in the City—Shipley Is Added to Force of Pathe Exchange

FOR enthusiasm regarding the output of his company, honors have to go to L. A. Sheridan, Des Moines, manager of the Pathe exchange. Mr. Sheridan recently took the first two episodes of "The Shielding Shadow" to Oskaloosa, where he gave a private showing to the exhibitors of that city. "Those fellows were just like a bunch of kids, so pleased were they with the serial," said Mr. Sheridan. He has made announcement in his territory that he is getting four times the usual cost of serials for "The Shielding Shadow," and adds that bookings are coming in fast.

A recent visitor in Des Moines was Louis Rosenfield, manager of the Temple Grand theatre at Creston. Mr. Rosenfield went to the capital city to meet some factory representatives and purchase equipment for his new Willard theatre, now under the course of construction.

Another well-known exhibitor of Iowa to call on Des Moines exchangemen was H. J. Lego, manager of the Majestic at Ft. Dodge. Mr. Lego was a visitor at the Paramount offices.

Nicholas Amos, manager of the Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., in Iowa, after a two-weeks trip on the road, revently commented on the manner in which Bluebirds were taking. "From the publicity matter sent out by our own exchange and that in The Saturday Evening Post, fine business is resulting. For a while it was hard going here, but things are rounding up in great shape with the result that we are more than holding our own."

R. L. Shipley, a former exhibitor of Des Moines, has recently been added to the force of the Pathe exchange. Mr. Shipley is the new night shipping clerk.

"We are getting requests all over Iowa, for bookings on 'The Crimson Stain Mystery,'" said C. E. Smith, local manager of the Metro. Mr. Smith says it is the best ever. But a talk with D. B. Lederman, who is handling "Liberty," and a similar conversation with L. A. Sheridan, who is directing the sale of "The Shielding Shadow," would indicate that Mr. Smith is slightly prejudiced.

For the first time in several months, conditions in the office of the Laemmle Film Service, distributors of the Universal, are normal. First came district managers and auditors; then several special representatives; then it was necessary to make changes in the arrangement of the shipping and distributing departments, necessitating the hammering and noise of various carpenters. They are all gone now, however, and the place is fairly quiet.

Paul Amos Vickers, of the publicity department of the Orpheum theatre at Ann Arbor, Mich., was a recent visitor in Des Moines. Mr. Vickers was in Des Moines, as a guest of Charles Stevenson, manager of the publicity department of the Laemmle Film Service. Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Vickers were old schoolmates in Kansas City, and the reunion was one of pleasure to both. In addition to his work with the Orpheum theatre, Mr. Vickers is studying at the University of Michigan.

The Consolidated Film and Supply Company, at Houston, have also been forced to secure additional room, and have enlarged their quarters by securing a large room across the hall in the S. P. Building. They now have a very neat office and shipping department.

The Mutual Film Corporation offices at San Antonio, Texas, were forced to secure larger quarters to care for its rapidly increasing business. It has moved from the Prudential Life Building to 209 Alamo Plaza; and Manager McConville says he has a location now where he can handle shipments quickly and "have room to turn around."

AUTOS FOR PARAMOUNT SALESMEN IN CHICAGO

A large portion of the Chicago Paramount office is undergoing the process of reconstruction for the purpose of satisfactorily accommodating the sales and publicity departments. The sales manager, publicity manager, and the four city salesmen will have a private location in the office.

Five country salesmen are also busily engaged in landing contracts for this exchange. The entire office is being refreshed and made new by the painters and decorators.

Last, but not least, C. E. Elliott, the sales manager, and all of his city salesmen are to be equipped with a brand new Ford runabout.

PAY-IN-ADVANCE SYSTEM IS UNDER WAY IN ONTARIO

The pay-in-advance system for moving picture films has been installed successfully by the Ontario exchanges. While naturally there was a little confusion and difficulty, there was yet a most noticeable lack of any real hitch. As stated before, this new system was endorsed by the leading exhibitors. G. M. Davidson, auditor for Canada of the Universal Company, who was seen after completing the first week's collection said: "This system marks a new era in the Canadian motion picture business." This system is extending all over Canada. At present in Montreal pay-in-advance is in force. The maritime provinces are expected to follow early in September, while the west and British Columbia are planning for a similar ruling in October or November.

GOFF IN LOS ANGELES

Assistant General Manager A. W. Goff of the Vitagraph exchanges, was in Los Angeles last week, and spent several days with Manager Harry Naugle. Mr. Goff is making a tour of the western exchanges, and finds conditions far more satisfactory than anticipated. He stated the new policy of the Vitagraph, that of dealing direct with the exhibitor, was meeting with the greatest approval by the theatre owners, and he believes it will solve the film renting problem.

BUFFALO SCREEN CLUB BEGINS MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

At the fall "Get-together" meeting of the Buffalo Screen Club held September 11, with President G. H. Christoffers presiding, it was decided to inaugurate immediately a membership campaign. Several applications for membership were presented, and J. R. Levy, Buffalo manager of the World Film Company and Basil Brady of the International Film service, were elected to membership.

Buffalo correspondents of the trade papers were elected to honorary membership. It was decided to hold a noon luncheon once every month at one of the hotels with representatives of the different manufacturers as guests and speakers.

The first entertainment of the season will be held on the first Monday in October. The club held a few of these entertainments in its rooms last season, and as they were great successes, it is expected that the entire membership will turn out for the opening social.

There were discussions of many topics, but one of the outstanding was the Screen Club ball, which it is expected, will be held the first part of January. The ball in the spring was a most brilliant success, when "Fatty" Arbuckle and several other stars were guests of the club. A longer time in which to prepare will insure an even greater event this year.

The club is in a most flourishing condition. The present officers are, President G. H. Christoffers; Vice-President H. F. Brink; Secretary Al Becker, and Treasurer F. S. Hopkins.

IVAN ESTABLISHES OFFICES AT 23 PIEDMONT STREET, BOSTON

In order that the New England territory may be properly covered, and that the exhibitors in that territory who have requested for a long time that there be a distributing agency located in New England, from which point they may be more readily served, the Ivan Film Exchange of New England has engaged offices at 23 Piedmont street, Boston, from which point the following Ivan features will be distributed to the various theatres in the States of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Maine; "The Immortal Flame," "City of Illusion," "His Wives," "Her Surrender" and "The Faded Flower."

F. J. Willis, formerly manager of the Buffalo office of the Merit Film Corporation, has been assigned to take charge of this new branch.

UNITY PICTURES CORPORATION, MINNEAPOLIS, WILL HANDLE UNITY SALES PICTURES

The Unity Pictures Corporation, with offices at 16 North Fourth street, Minneapolis, Minn., is the name of a new exchange formed by Harry Rathner, a well-known figure in the moving picture industry, to handle the Unity Sales Corporations program for the Minneapolis territory.

Mr. Rathner is at present handling "Civilization" in his territory, but will arrange to look after the releases on the Unity program permanently. Besides "The Marriage Bond,' "The Lottery Man" and the "Tweedledum" comedies, Mr. Rathner will also book the new five-reel features to be produced, one a month, by the Dudley Motion Picture Manufacturing Company, which has arranged to distribute its features on the Unity program.

Bluebird Bulletin, Two-Page Publication Recently Launched in San Francisco by Luntz, Meets with Response from Exhibitors

THE Bluebird Bulletin, a two-page weekly publication recently launched from the San Francisco office of the Bluebird Photoplays by Manager Charles I. Luntz, is meeting with a response from exhibitors not often accorded house organs of this kind, and requests have been received for copies from those who had been unintentionally missed in the mailing list. Each issue gives a list of all the Bluebird releases, with a review of the latest one, the rest of the publication being given over to hints to exhibitors as to the best means of presenting these productions.

Manager Luntz calls attention to the fact that many motion picture houses open with much promise, make a great stir for a few weeks, and then settle down to a mediocre existence, the exhibitors blaming the pictures for a lack of success, or else complaining of a waning of public appreciation. At the same time these productions presented elsewhere are meeting with a great success because they are properly advertised.

He says: "The truth of the matter is that the house manager is usually to blame for failure. Operating a theatre is actually a simple operation and success comes to those who furnish three essentials—a well-kept house that is inviting and in which the pictures are accurately projected; a good selection of film subjects, and thirdly, but not least important, the proper advertising of what you have to offer.

"Circus methods of exploitation are of the past. Except in the big cities, and then only in restricted districts, salacious films have no place on any program. Misstatements and exaggerations bring you censure, create enemies and drive your possible patrons and their families away."

Mr. Luntz is a believer in the use of a mailing list and advises exhibitors to keep a live one and to send out notices frequently.

The advice given to exhibitors by Mr. Luntz in the Bluebird Bulletin is mostly specific in nature and consists largely of hints for advertising current releases. In the last Bulletin he tells of a number of plans for calling attention to "Love's Lariat." He suggests that a man dressed in cow-puncher fashion be led through the street by a lariat in the hands of a little girl dressed as a Cupid, the man bearing a sign of an appropriate character. To attract the youngsters to the matinee performances a six or eight-foot lariat of ordinary line could be presented as a souvenir by a Cupid.

Mr. Luntz was greatly pleased at the decision of the management of the new Royal theatre on Polk street to open with a Bluebird attraction this being "Little Eve Edgarton." This opening was a great success and was intended by many exhibitors, in addition to the general public.

REAVEY MAKES FEATURE ANNOUNCEMENT

Harry Reavey, Cleveland manager of the new Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay combine, announces that features on the regular program will be released every other week, in addition to its big specials. The specials thus far announced include Essanay's "The Prince of Graustark," Edison's "The Cossack's Whip," with Viola Dana and Richard Tucker, and Essanay's "The Garden of Allah," with Helen Ware.

On the regular program early releases will be Essanay's "The Return of Eve," with Edna Mayo; Selig's "The Country that God Forgot," with Thomas Santschi, and Edison's "A Message to Garcia," picturized from Elbert Hubbard's inspiration.

October 25 Manager Reavey will open offices on the fifth floor of the Sincere Building with George Oldfield of Pittsburgh as his assistant. It is planned to make the offices a gathering place for exhibitors. Douglas A. Burgh, personal representative of George Kleine, is in Cleveland and will remain until the opening of the offices.

DETROIT EXCHANGEMEN FORM REEL CLUB

Fourteen Detroit exchange managers got together at the Alt Heidelberg on Monday evening, September 18, and organized a Reel Fellows Club. The aim and object of this club is purely to fraternize once or twice a month at some downtown cafe and talk over trade conditions and current events. There will be no dues and no qualifications for membership. Any exchange manager can attend the meetings which will always be preceded by a Dutch dinner. The officers are George J. Trask, president; M. S. Bailey, vice-president, and J. O. Brooks, secretary.

KLEINE EXCHANGE IN KANSAS CITY BECOMES K-E-S-E

From now on the George Kleine exchange, Kansas City, Mo., will be known as the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay exchange. A. C. Melvin, formerly manager of the George Kleine exchange, is branch manager and recently expressed himself as pleased with the results of the new combine.

PAT HALL QUITS THE BUSINESS IN KANSAS CITY

P. J. "Pat" Hall, formerly manager of the Western Film exchange of Kansas City, has discontinued work in the moving picture business, and has gone to Chicago. The Western Film exchange was disrupted some time ago. The fellows in the business at Kansas City will remember "Pat."

New Laws and Court Decisions

Pennsylvania Turns Down "Where Are My Children?"

"WHERE are my Children?" the Humanity Film Company's picture can not be shown in Pennsylvania. This decision rendered by Judge Audenreid of the Common Pleas Court, No. 4, followed an appeal made by the owners after the film had been turned down several times by the Pennsylvania Board of Censors.

Although shown all over the United States and in the judgment of many critics, teaching a helpful lesson, the Pennsylvania censors have condemned the picture in no uncertain terms.

Chief Censor Breitenger would not be interviewed, but Dr. Ellis P. Oberholtzer another member of the board expressed himself freely. "The picture is unspeakably vile," said Dr. Oberholtzer. "I would have permitted it to pass the board in this state only over my dead body. It is a mess of filth, and no revision, however drastic, could ever help it any. It is not fit for decent people to see."

Mrs. E. C. Niver the third member of the board said the picture was too indecent for discussion, and would not comment on it in detail.

The Reverend John C. Wheeler of the Church of St. John the Evangelist of Philadelphia, general secretary of the Catholic Theatre Movement of Philadelphia, and spiritual director of the Federation of Catholic Societies in that city, was one who saw the picture when its author Hal Reid had a private showing. Said Father Wheeler: "After seeing the picture the committee was unanimous in its condemnation of the film. One may not be able to say that the film is openly immoral, but most likely it is even worse in its suggestive situations."

The Catholic Theatre Movement is in reality another form of censorship, as all pictures as well as plays are viewed by members of the committee and on their decision Catholics are forbidden to attend such as meet with disapproval. Thus subjects which might pass the state censors could still be turned down by the Catholic authorities in Philadelphia.

George J. Beihoff, manager of the Supreme Feature Film Service of Philadelphia, the concern which owns the state rights of New Jersey and several other states of the Union, when shown the adverse comment regarding the film, "Where Are My Children" said that entirely too harsh and out-of-place are the criticisms accorded this film.

"It is anything but indecent, vile and dirty or unspeakable as the censors will have it. It treats of a subject upon which hundreds of volumes have been written, eminent men like Theodore Roosevelt and many others have vented opinions, and a subject that every man and woman should know about. The film was not made for children, should not be seen by children, and in fact would not be understood by children, but it carries with it a powerful lesson to grown people, and this lesson has been expressed in a powerful dramatization and in a manner to strike home. And above all, treating of a delicate subject it is, beyond a doubt, the cleanest film ever shown and those who call it dirty, vile or unspeakable have never seen the film or have never understood it. Every state of the Union except Pennsylvania has passed favorably upon the film. Hundreds of physicians, educators and public officials have commented on the film in the highest terms.

"The mayor of Elizabeth, N. J., after viewing the film has written a highly favorable opinion to the manager of the Supreme Feature Film Service. A number of well-known clergymen of New York of all creeds have viewed and highly praised the lesson embodied in this picture and the film itself.

"I am at a loss to understand the severe turn in the judgment of Pennsylvania officials unless it was to sway the opinion of the judges who had the appeal from the censors' decision under consideration.

"Somebody is making a mountain out of a mole hill for reasons hard to fathom."

"Where are my Children?" after being acquired by the Supreme Feature Company was sent as required to the board of censors. Upon their rejection it was, as is usual, returned upon appeal. Upon this second rejection, the picture was revised and in its modified form last week again came before the censors, who still refused to pass the film.

Upon this decision the Humanity Company carried the matter before the courts where it was heard before President Judge Charles Y. Audenreid and Judge W. W. Carr.

Deputy Attorney-General Joseph L. Kun as usual argued the case for the censors. In the course of the evidence when it was stated that Boston was showing the picture, Mr. Kun said that he understood the Mayor of Boston had a financial interest in it.

The fact that Mayor James M. Curley of Boston had gotten a letter from Senator Boies Penrose to present Mr. Breitenger in behalf of the film was made much of by the censors. It is claimed that when this letter was received the censors wrote to Mayor Curley asking him what standard was used in Boston in censoring motion pictures. It is alleged, an answer was promptly had from someone representing the mayor telling of the good this picture had done in Boston, and praising the play. The Philadelphia censors thought such unusual praise peculiar.

It is claimed that politics have played a large part in the "Where Are My Children?" fight.

Senator Penrose in commenting on the letter he had given Mayor Curley said: "Mayor Curley came to me in Washington a month or two ago and explained that he wished me to aid him in having a matter concerning a moving picture adjusted with the state censors. I knew Curley as a prominent politician of Massachusetts, and saw nothing unusual in his request. I did not even ask him the name of the picture or anything about it.

"I gave him a letter to Mr. Breitinger, the chairman of the state board, or perhaps I wrote to Breitinger direct, I do not remember which. Later I received a letter from Mr. Breitinger stating that the motion picture in question was so indecent in parts that the board could not pass it in its present form. The matter was so trivial I dismissed it from my mind."

The present board of censors was appointed by Governor Brumbaugh, who is said to lean to the Vare faction in state politics, while Senator Penrose is on the opposite side of the state political fence.

After hearing the case, Judges Audenreid and Carr viewed the picture at a private exhibition at the censors' room, Eighteenth and Filbert.

A decision was promptly given dismissing the appeal of the Humanity Film Company. Judge Audenreid's decree was as follows:

"Upon consideration of the evidence, after having at the request of the parties viewed an exhibition of the series of moving pictures retained on the films involved in this case, the court finds that in condemning the representation of said films of the drama known as 'Where Are My Children?' on the ground that it tends to debase or corrupt morals, the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors did not abuse the

Mayor of Boston Sues Newspaper for $100,000 on Charge of Libel in Stating That He Had Interest in "Where Are My Children?"

MAYOR JAMES M. CURLEY of Boston has stated that he would enter suit against the Boston Traveller for stating in a recent issue that he was interested financially in the film, "Where Are My Children?" Twenty-five thousand dollars is the amount the mayor asks. Later his injuries mounted to $100,000 and only criminal libel would satisfy him.

All the Boston papers carried the story of how Mayor Curley went to Washington and prevailed on Senator Boies Penrose to use his influence with Chairman Breitinger of the Pennsylvania board of censors to have the film passed by that board on a third submission. Mr. Penrose stated that Mayor Curley had said that the film was running in Boston and had met with no opposition.

The mayor in his statement said that he had no financial interest in the film, but had asked Mr. Penrose to use his influence out of friendship for Joseph M. Levenson, one of the stockholders in the Boston Photoplay Company, which has the right to the film for New England. Mr. Levenson and his brother also represent parties who will compose the Pennsylvania company which will be formed if the right to show the picture in that state is secured.

That there is anything in the film that calls for censorship only one or two isolated religious bodies maintain, always excepting the Pennsylvania board of censors, who seem to object to almost everything.

The Boston censorship is worse potentially than that of Pennsylvania, for it is political, composed of the mayor, the police commissioner and a judge. Politics and hypocrisy are twins. To placate a small class "The Easiest Way" was censored off the boards of the Hollis Street theatre after one performance. "Marie-Odile" was warned not to appear in town at all, which proceeding was illegal and without the province of the censors. Liberals in the state have been disheartened at the spectacle of office holders making political capital out of prejudice by pandering to it. They hope that as a result of this latest episode censorship may be wrenched from politics.

San Francisco Supervisors Abolish Board of Censorship and Places Motion Pictures on Same Footing with Other Amusements

BY an almost unanimous vote the board of supervisors of San Francisco has abolished the ordinances providing for a board of censorship for motion pictures and has adopted a new one, placing this branch of the amusement industry on exactly the same footing as other theatres. It is now no longer necessary for an exhibitor to go to the police commission to secure a license for the opening of a theatre, and there is no danger of a film being seized unless it is obscene or offensive to the moral sense.

It has taken months of hard work on the part of film interests to bring about this result, and the success of the movement has been due in no small part to the efforts of the Film Exchange Board of Trade of this city. There has not been a meeting of the police committee of the board of supervisors at which this subject was touched upon that has not been attended by some member of this organization, and it has been compelled to go to considerable expense to secure the services of attorneys to assist in presenting the film men's side of the case.

The new ordinance has been passed to print and its final passage, when it will go into effect, is merely a matter of form. Under its provisions anyone witnessing the showing of an immoral picture may make a complaint and have the case prosecuted as is true with any public nuisance. Theatre owners cannot be heckled, as was the case recently at Sacramento, and threatened with a suspension of their license if they show this or that picture not exactly approved by the official censor. Exchange interests and the better class of exhibitors have joined to make a thorough house-cleaning, and managers of theatres making a specialty of the showing of doubtful subjects have been warned to be careful of their ways. Already action has been commenced in one case and an obnoxious lobby display has been seized by the police, the owner of the house receiving an order from the judge before whom the case was tried to destroy the offending matter.

TWO-CENT TAX ON TICKETS PROPOSED FOR OLD AGE PENSIONS

A tax of two cents on every ticket of admission to a motion picture show has been proposed before the special State Commission of Massachusetts on social insurance, which held a hearing on old-age pensions at the State House.

Harry W. James, counsel for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts, was present to oppose that method of raising money. He told the commissioners that such a tax would take all the profits of the exhibitors. He failed to understand why the moving picture industry should be asked to pay old-age pensions any more than any other separate industry. Mr. James said that motion pictures had become a necessity, and was not, therefore, subject to special taxes.

It is thought that the Legislature will not be asked to pass such a bill. But someone must be kind enough to tell them where $50,000,000 may be found for old-age pensions.

CRITICIZES DETROIT THEATRES

The Detroit Board of Health claims that an investigation of the theatres in that city shows that eleven per cent only have adequate means of ventilation; about forty-seven per cent have no means of ventilation whatever, except through the ordinary openings. In an effort to provide adequate ventilation, heating and general sanitation, the board of health has drafted an ordinance to put the regulation of these factors in their hands. The ordinance will receive a public hearing on October 3 for the benefit of exhibitors especially. The ordinance does not require suitable ventilating apparatus, but it deals with heating, temperature, air and floor space per person, toilets and general cleanliness. Conditions in theatres in the poorer sections of the city were found to be generally bad.

Censorship Situation in Minneapolis Hits Rough Waters; Committee Wants Return to Regulation of Pictures by the Police

THE censorship situation in Minneapolis has hit rough waters. With the argument that to recognize censorship in any of its forms is dangerous a several hour meeting was held on Friday afternoon, September 16, in the offices of the Bijou theatre, which was attended by exchange managers, exhibitors and the mayor's secretary.

At a previous meeting with the mayor and the censor board representatives a form of censorship was agreed upon that merely required the registration of film with the mayor's office. If it was thought the picture might be unfit or for other reasons it should not be exhibited publicly the censor board would request the exchange to present the picture for their viewing.

Everything worked along harmoniously until the condemning of "The Wolf Woman." At the showing of this picture to the board, it is claimed by Mr. Broadford, that very little attention was paid to the picture by the censors.

The result is that a committee of nine men was appoined to wait on the mayor and request him to abolish the censor board now in existence and return to the police regulation policy.

Also it was decided to get the candidates for mayor in the coming election to declare themselves on the question of censorship. They will be invited to a meeting of exhibitors, exchange men, operators and attaches in the motion picture business to be held in the Unique theatre.

FORT WORTH EXHIBITORS FINED FOR SUNDAY VIOLATION

J. S. Phillips, charged with operating his moving picture show on Sunday at Fort Worth, Texas, was tried September 7 and found guilty by a jury and was fined $35. This makes the fourth case tried in Fort Worth recently. In one case the manager was found not guilty, but in the other three cases, the jury found the defendants guilty and assessed fines. One of the defendants found guilty, was a woman manager.

Indianapolis Club Women Committee Condemns Child Acting in Pictures—Want Children Under 16 Excluded from Theatres Except on Certain Days

THE Indianapolis Woman's Club Committee of the Moving Picture Indorsers for Juniors, held a meeting recently at the Chamber of Commerce, Indianapolis, which was largely attended. Child acting was unanimously condemned, and it was declared an imposition on minors. Mrs. David Ross presided, and Mrs. Merle Sidener was secretary.

Reports were read from many of the picture playhouse managers in Indianapolis in reply to letters asking them to set aside Friday evening and Saturday afternoons for juveniles, saying they would be glad to comply with the request and asking for suggestions from the women on suitable pictures for those dates.

Club women of Indiana will be asked by the board, it was announced, to get similar concessions in their respective communities.

Children under sixteen years old will be prohibited from attending motion picture theatres, at Anderson, excepting on Friday afternoons after school and on Saturdays, if an ordinance being drafted by City Attorney O'Neil, of Anderson, is passed by the City Council.

Mayor Mellett took up the question of putting the motion picture theatres of Anderson under some kind of restrictions, and at first favored the plan of having an ordinance enacted which would give the Council authority to appoint a Censorship Committee, whose duties it would be to inspect all pictures shown at local theatres and placing a ban on the society dramas, and pictures showing scenes which are said to be unfit for children to see.

It was hoped that a Censorship Board could be found which would serve gratis. An investigation disclosed the fact that it would be necessary for a board of this kind to examine more than twenty films each day to properly censor the pictures. City officials have concluded that this would be too stupendous a task and have abandoned this plan.

City Attorney O'Neil states that another plan proposed as a solution of the problem of controlling films shown at theatres is to pass an ordinance prohibiting children under sixteen years of age from attending picture shows excepting on Friday afternoons and Saturday. Films which would be wholesome for children to see would be exhibited on these days.

Mr. O'Neil says that the measures of this nature have been passed in several large cities, and that the plan has proved successful.

He asserts that the school teachers of the city universally approve such an ordinance.

Councilman Albert Van Slyke has announced his intentions of combating any ordinance which would create a Board of Censors to pass on picture show films.

The moving picture show owners of Anderson have been in conference regarding the steps which the city proposes to take regarding the censorship of films, and asserts that they will insist that some productions at other theatres also are barred.

PENNSYLVANIA TURNS DOWN "WHERE ARE MY CHILDREN?"

discretionary power vested in it by law or act arbitrarily or oppressively. The appeal of the Humanity Film Company and Joseph M. Gaites from decision of said board is therefore dismissed."

In commenting on the strong language used by the censors in regard to "Where Are My Children?" the manager of the exchange, a competitor of The Supreme Feature Film Service, said that nothing else was to be expected of the Pennsylvania board as their minds belonged to the sixteenth rather than to the twentieth century.

People who believe that girls should be left in ignorance instead of being taught properly the facts of life, as this man claimed, was the theory of the present censors, were not fit to be the moral guardians of the people of a large state, in his opinion.

Other managers could not understand the opposition to the picture as it was shown in Chicago unmolested and in New York, it was claimed that even priests had praised it. Although Pennsylvania people are barred from viewing this picture within the confines of their home state, if any are eager to judge of its merits for themselves their curiosity can be satisfied by a run to Atlantic City, where the film is enjoying an immense popularity.

Film News From Foreign Parts

"Battle of the Somme" Creates Stir in England

Special to Motion Picture News.

London, Sept. 15.

"IF the exhibition of this film all over the world does not end war, God help civilization." This is how Lloyd George, Secretary of State for War, expressed himself on the official five-reel film visualizing "The Battle of the Somme." Without a doubt, this is the most startling war film yet produced, and it has been exhibited to crowded audiences in all parts of the country. On the first day of exhibition hundreds of people were turned away disappointed, from the picture houses. In Liverpool, for instance, the film was shown at the four most important cinemas, all situated within a hundred yards' radius (one building having the largest seating capacity of any in the city), simultaneously from two o'clock in the afternoon until eleven o'clock, and till late in the evening there was constantly a long queue waiting to gain admission.

"The Battle of the Somme" film is certainly a production that heralds the dawn of a new era, so far as historical records are concerned, and in the future posterity may not have to depend so much upon the veracity of historians as upon cinematograph film for panoramic records of events that indicate the milestones of progress.

Cabinet Faces Camera

When it was first announced that the British Cabinet ministers intended to face the camera for a cinematograph film, certain sections of the lay press, awe-stricken at such an unseemly and undignified condescension on the part of the Cabinet posing for the movies, heaped scorn and ridicule on the proposal till, on the eve of the filming operations, it was decided to abandon the project. The idea was to take a film record of the Cabinet "deliberating" in the Council Chamber and to exhibit the film with a view of raising some thousands of pounds for a charitable object. However, although the official film is off, Cecil Hepworth, of Hepworth Cinematograph Company, has succeeded in obtaining a series of three films, each of 1,000 feet in length, to be released for the open market in consecutive weeks from the 11th inst. The title is "Cinema Interviews," and in each film twelve of the most eminent men of the period are to be seen face to face, each of whom makes a statement through the medium of the screen to the people or nation. Twenty-five per cent. of the profits drawn from the handling of these subjects will be handed to the Sportsmen's Ambulance Fund. Besides Cabinet ministers, the films depict leading public men of the country.

There has been a decrease in the value of films imported into Great Britain during the month of July, which is the latest month for which the returns have been published, by over £60,000 compared with the previous month. While America has exported to Great Britain £77,208, France's exports are £6,623, and other countries £3,308. The American figures for the current year are : January, £75,000; February, £42,000; March, £145,000; April, £46,500; May, £139,000 and June £141,500, making an actual total up to the end of July of £661,495. Compared with July last year, there has been a decrease of £47,000 in U. S. A. films sent to the United Kingdom. France's film exports to Great Britain for seven months have been valued at £55,500, and other countries nearly £40,000. British exports for the month of July have been the largest this year, the value being estimated at £13,500, a figure only equaled in November of last year.

Under the auspices of the Treasury Department of the Customs Department, bonded film stores are to be opened in London. It is understood that under this new arrangement agents will be enabled to view the films consigned to them in this country, before paying the import duty. The great advantage of this system is that if the negatives do not come up to requisite standard, the film need not be cleared, which of course means that the import duty is not paid.

Official Censorship Proposals

A draft scheme has been submitted by the Home Office and is now under consideration by the film and cinema industry of Great Britain for the establishment of a central and definite censorship under Home Office control. The model conditions which it is suggested should govern the new issues of cinematograph licenses provide (1) that no film be shown which is likely to be injurious to morality or to encourage or to incite crime, or lead to disorder, or in any way offensive in the circumstances to public feeling, or which contains any offensive representation as to the living persons. If the licensing authority objects to the film on any of these grounds, it shall not be shown. (2) No film which has not been passed by the official censors to be shown unless three clear days' notice has been given to the licensing authority. (3) Film must be exhibited to public exactly as passed by censors or licensing authority, unless consent for additions or alterations has been previously obtained. (4) Applies the wording of paragraph 1 to that "No poster, advertisement, sketch, synopsis or program of a film shall be displayed, sold or supplied either inside or outside theatre which is likely to be injurious," etc.

The Secretary of State contemplates the appointment of Chief Censor and assistant censors, and at least one of them should be a woman.

None of the censors should be considered with the trade.

It is proposed that the expenses of the Board shall be met by charging the manufacturers a fee in respect of each film examined. It has been suggested that a strong Advisory Committee be appointed, including representatives of the local authorities (including the educational authorities), well-known members of the general public and authors of standing, not connected with the cinemas. The Secretary of State hopes that that official censorship may come into operation on January 1, 1917.

British Films

The leading British films of the last few days have been "The Princess of Happy Chance," London Film, based on Tom Gallon's novel on the experiments of a princess who exchanges positions with one of the "lower strata." The sequel provides a virile plot.

"Lead Kindly Light," Surrey Film, four-reel drama of a girl's selfishness and its consequences.

"The Man Without a Soul," London Film, 7,000 feet, drama, with remarkable power of appeal, strong plot and execllent production; showing the adventures of a vicar's son who combats agnosticism.

"Odd Charges," London Film Company, two-reel comedy by W. W. Jacobs, giving a glimpse into old country life.

"The Girl Who Wrecked His Home," British Empire Film.

"Tatterley," Lucoque Film, from Tom Gallon's novel. A convincing human story with beautiful photographic effects.

"Her Greatest Performance," Ideal Film, featuring Ellen Terry. This beautiful six-reel drama will rank among the best films of the year. The story is charmingly developed, allowing full scope for the gifted artists. Of the spectacular scenes the views of brightly dressed children indulging in May-day revels and festivities stand out pre-eminent. The plot has a strong human side and the title of the story is the most apt description one can give to Miss Terry's histrionic attainments.

Lucoque, Ltd., intend producing a sixteen-part serial entitled "Fu Manchu," by Sax Rohmer, to be followed by "King Solomon's Wives." At present the firm is engaged on a two-reel fairy story entitled

Australian Film World Teems with Activity

Special to Motion Picture News.

Sydney, N. S. W., Sept. 1.

THE most conspicuous event in the film business here for the last three weeks has been the advent of the Melbourne firm of picture showmen, Hoyt's, who have opened up a first-class continuous theatre, the remodeled building originally known as the Colonial No. 1. For the last six months a gang of workmen have been busy on the renovating and reconstructing of this old house into the now finished palatial home of Fox and Metro features. Dr. Arthur Russell, who founded Hoyt's about six years ago, died at the latter end of last year. The first theatre opened by him was a small building in Bourke street, Melbourne, Victoria.

It is estimated that the cost of reconstruction will total nearly £11,000, and none can deny that the bright structure is fully worth that amount.

The opening program consisted of "Blazing Love," Fox, with Virginia Pearson; "The Yellow Passport" (World), with Clara K. Young, and a Metro-Drew comedy.

Fox and Metro features will be screened regularly.

The following paragraph appeared in The Sydney Sun recently and was written by the press agent of Australasian Films, Limited.

It may not be classed as anything out of the ordinary in the way of news, but it is an example of what can be done by a little originality. Here is the paragraph:

"Has any one ever stopped to think of the nerve possessed by the man who can stand off and kick his boss good and hard just as part and parcel of his usual day's work? He wants some nerve to do it, and more especially when the same boss receives £35,000 a year. There are possibilities conjured up by the imagination. For instance, the hard-working extra man who has incurred the Chaplin wrath comes on to do his work in the scene wherein he has to place a stage kick on Charlie. Nothing was mentioned in his contract as to the degree of force to be exerted. In fact, the possibilities are enormous. Even if Charlie does get the money, the extra man gets the satisfaction of being able to show his grandchild the famous boot that kicked the man earning the highest salary in the world. Some day an enterprising bootmaker will exhibit in his window a dilapidated old shoe, with a label reading: 'This shoe kicked Charlie Chaplin.'"

Marion Marcus Clarke, character actress for the J. C. Williamson Theatrical Company, is negotiating with a local firm to produce a feature picture founded on the widely read novel "For the Term of His Natural Life," written by her father. It is a fine story of an innocent man being convicted for another's crime. Its originality lies in the fact that his innocence is never proved. Rufus Dawes is the convict, and he falls in love with the daughter of the governor of the prison. The story is laid in the old convict days at Hobart Penal Settlement, Tasmania. A motion picture was made of this story about five years ago, but as the film was not up to the standard Miss Clarke was able to secure an order restraining the producers from continuing to screen the picture. If a satisfactory arrangement cannot be arrived at here, Miss Clarke intends to endeavor to dispose of the rights to all of her father's works to an American company.

Dorothy Brunton Sails for America

Dorothy Brunton, the favorite musical comedy actress of Australia, will sail for America, it is said, towards the end of next month. It has not been made public if Miss Brunton intends to enter the movies when she arrives there, but she was a great success in the role of the lady reporter in J. C. Williamson's photoplay production of "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Dorothy has the reputation of being the only Australian actress who has attained the achievement of appearing in one role for one hundred consecutive performances, that of Letty in "So Long, Letty." Her movements in the U. S. A. will no doubt be watched keenly by her Australian admirers.

The question of picture censorship has once more clouded the otherwise clear skies of New Zealand. The matter is still unsettled, as no suitable method can be discovered in which to give satisfactory deals to all concerned. At present an order-in-council prevents the screening of any undesirable picture. So far £500 has been expended, but nothing has yet resulted.

Films that have been visited by the local censor recently include the following subjects:

"The Yellow Passport" (World), "The Cheat" (Lasky), "The Kiss of Hate" (Metro), "All for Ould Ireland" and "Ireland a Nation."

Most of these films have been censored under the new Defense Act, which implies that no picture is to be screened which shows any of the Allies in a light that may cause ill feeling. None of these pictures will be allowed to be screened anywhere in the Commonwealth of Australia.

The following successes, which have been produced in the pictures in America, are forthcoming attractions on the Williamson circuit of "legit" theatres: "Big Jim Garrity," "Blindness of Virtue," "Damaged Goods," "Shore Acres," "Marrying Money" and "The Outcast."

A movement is now under way by the Theatre Employees Union of Australia to obtain an arbitration award to enable a set rate of wages for the employees of theatres and picture shows.

Charles Evans and Ernie Vockler, two local comedians who have gained a small following by their Chaplin impersonations, have been co-starred in a two-reel feature comedy by John Mathews, entitled "Charlie and His Twin Brothers." Mathews was originally the "Mathews" of the vaudeville team of Mathews and Mack.

Australasian Feature Films, Limited, the Australasian distributors of the Paramount pictures, have recently installed a fine large projection room in their Cinema House, Sydney, for the use and convenience of their customers and the local press. The projection room is one of the largest in Australia and is a fine example of the policy of the A. F. F. in so catering for their clients.

"Mutiny of the Bounty"

Raymond Longford's feature production of "The Mutiny of the Bounty" is to be screened at the Sydney Town Hall for a season shortly. This picture is reckoned to be the most elaborate production made here yet, and has taken over eight months. This picture is at present placed in a very curious position. For some unknown reason the exhibitors and several exchanges of this country have passed a resolution that will mean the boycotting of the production. However, as one member of the trade puts it, "The whole movement may mean a little bit of free advertising for the producers." At any rate, for the sake of local production, and "The Mutiny of the Bounty" in particular, we hope so.

Jack Gavin, the prominent local director, has decided to follow up the recent production of "The Martyrdom of Nurse Cavell" (which is now being exploited in America by C. Post Mason), with a number of five-reel features to be released at the rate of one per month. He has completed arrangements for the placing of his pictures on foreign markets and hopes thereby to keep up a regular releasing plant. He hopes to be in a position to print twenty copies of each subject, instead of five or six, which has been sufficient to supply the local demands so far. At present Gavin is working on a comedy feature starring Miss Gwen Lewis, a theatrical star of the Strollers Company. Questioned about a multiple-reel feature which is being made under the working title of "The Birth of Australia," Mr. Gavin remarks that it is to be his most ambitious effort and production will be continued as soon as the prominent stage star who is at present playing under contract to a local theatrical firm is free. The scenario for this production has been written by Agnes Gavin, author of more than fifty photoplays, all of which have been produced by John Gavin. Among her successful scripts are "Keane of Kalgoorlie," "Thunderbolt," "Assigned Servant," "Life's Great Game," "The White Hope," "Moonlite," "Drover's Sweetheart" and "The Martyrdom of Nurse Cavell."

Recently the State Governor, Sir Gerald Strickland, accompanied by the Director of Fisheries and the Minister of Education, embarked on a trip to witness the scheme of deep sea trawling. The trip was not without the representation of a film concern. Australasian Films dispatched Cameraman Ellis with expedition, and a one-reel picture was secured of the trawling operations.

Lou Handman and Joe Cook, two vaudeville artists who stowed away from America and are now appearing on the Fuller vaudeville circuit, are credited with being intimately associated with Thos. H. Ince and Mack Sennett, and other prominent members of the producing business. It is said that they will shortly appear in a two-reel photoplay under the direction of John Mathews.

The Australian Photoplay Magazine, launched the last week in August, this year, will go a long way towards filling the need of a trade paper. For a long time there has been a great opening for a motion picture trade journal, and it looks as if this new publication will fill the bill. The proprietors of this magazine are well known in the film industry. John M. Giles, who will be the managing editor, was the organizer of the Henry M. Waterhouse Tourist Bureau, Honolulu, and formerly on the staff of the San Francisco Examiner. At present Mr. Giles is assistant advertising manager for Australasian Films Limited.

Hal H. Carleton, also on the staff of the magazine, is co-editor with Mr. Imrie on the Reliance Reviews and a free lance scenario writer. It is the aim of the proprietors to establish a closer relation between the Australian exhibitors and distributors with the American producers. Offices have been secured in Berry's Building, 136 Pitt street, Sydney, in the heart of the film district.

"Dawn," to be released towards the end of the year. The first show of "Vanity Fair," by Thackeray, is to be held in London in a few days. What is described as a great Franco-British Alliance is the arrangement whereby the Eclair Company, Limited, will in the future send their film productions to the Broadwest Film Renting Department, a London concern. L'entente cordiale!

American Films

The most popular American films at the show rooms have been: "The Social Pirates (Kalem serial); "God's Country and the Woman," and "The Destroyers" (Vitagraph); "Slander," "Sins of Men," "Battle of Hearts" and "Blue Blood and Red" (Fox); "Mother o'Mine," "The Man from Nowhere" and "The Hidden Hand" (Red Feather); "The Man Behind the Curtain" (Blue Ribbon); "Betty of Graystone" (Triangle); "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "Alien Souls" (Lasky). Up to August 14, Triangle films have been booked in the United Kingdom for 56,641 days at 671 theatres.

Cabanne Completes First 5-Reeler for Metro in 8 Days

Frances Nelson, a Newcomer to Its Studio, Is the Star in the Picture, Yet Unnamed, and Niles Welch Is in the Supporting Cast

W. CHRISTY CABANNE, who recently joined the Metro directing forces, has just completed his first five-reel feature for Metro, producing it in the remarkably short time of eight days. The feature is as yet unnamed. Frances Nelson, a new addition to the Metro artistic staff, has the stellar role. Niles Welch heads the supporting cast.

Mr. Cabanné not only directed the feature, but he contributed the story, and engaged the cast within the eight day period. Mr. Cabanné does not direct from a scenario, or any manuscript whatever. He generally has the story well grounded in his mind before he begins production. Then he elaborates upon it from time to time, a scene or situation suggesting another one.

Mr. Cabanné did not consume the entire eight days working in the production. One of the days that he had set aside for photographing exterior scenes, it rained. He was obliged to wait for the sun to peep through the clouds for a few minutes, and these precious moments he utilized to the fullest possible extent. And on the concluding day he was finished and out of the studio at three o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Cabanné succeeded in keying up the players under his direction, to high tension and enthusiasm. The pace that the director set proved inspiring, but nerve racking to some of the players not used to the Cabanné methods. Miss Nelson, who was as anxious as her director, to see the picture completed in the time Mr. Cabanné set aside, worked until she collapsed.

After a brief rest Mr. Cabanné will begin the direction of the big $500,000 serial of fourteen episodes, which Metro has arranged to present with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the stellar roles.

E. H. Sothern Picture, Made by "V," at the Strand

Marks Switches the Announced Program of the New York Theatre in Order to Headline Its Bill with Famous Actor's First Appearance on the Screen

AS this announcement appears in print the Strand theatre, New York, will be showing Vitagraph's first E. H. Sothern release, an original story entitled "The Chattel," written by Paul West, directed by Frederick Thomson.

Mitchell H. Mark, president and general manager of the Strand Theatre Corporation, switched the announced program for the week beginning September 24 in order to headline the Strand's bill with Mr. Sothern's first appearance in motion pictures. Not only did he order a switch made in the program to include this Greater Vitagraph production, but he also issued instructions to launch an immediate and extensive campaign of advertising.

Generous display advertising space appeared in the English and German newspapers of Greater New York this past week announcing to the public the treat in store for them. Harold E. Edel, managing director of the Strand theatre, concurred with Mr. Mark's judgment as to the advisability of revamping the Strand's bill so as to include Mr. Sothern's picture upon it.

On Sunday evening at the Strand Mr. Sothern, accompanied by his wife, Julia Marlowe, personally witnessed his own premier on the screen as a guest of Commodore and Mrs. Blackton. In the box-party other guests were Peggy Hyland, the famous English actress, who is Mr. Sothern's leading woman in "The Chattel," and Paul West, author of the story. The box-party followed a dinner given by Commodore and Mrs. Blackton.

"THE SOUL OF A CHILD" FOR RELEASE THE EARLY PART OF OCTOBER

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Pioneer Film Corporation, announces the completion of his first five-reel production, "The Soul of a Child." This is the first of a series of big pictures that will be produced under the Pioneer banner, and State righted. "The Soul of a Child" featuring Em Gorman.

The picture was made at Block Island, and scenic effects were obtained under the direction of Jack Gorman.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

It Isn't Often You Get a Chance to See Fannie Ward, Mabel Normand and Jack Dean Together Like This—Maybe You Wouldn't Yet, if They Hadn't Furnished the Picture.

Gail Kane, the star in the World Film production of "The Scarlet Oath," soon to be released, was recently arrested down on Long Island for speeding her automobile. When arraigned before the local justice of the peace she was discharged on the grounds that "she was too pretty to fine." Beauty may be only skin deep, but Miss Kane's was evidently deep enough to get under the thick skin of a Long Island magistrate.

There is a time for everything even politeness, says Madame Bertha Kalich, who rebuked an officer of the law last week for being too polite to her.

The reproval from the noted tragedienne of the William Fox films, came at the Fort Lee, N. J., studio, while Madame Kalich was acting before the camera in a new photoplay. The distinguished actress appears in this particular scene as a woman on trial in a divorce suit.

While the cameras ground, Madame Kalich finished her testimony and one of the Fort Lee policemen who had been impressed into movie service started to help her down from the stand.

"Please forget that I am Madame Kalich," said the actress. "Now, to all intents and purposes, I am merely a woman who has given some testimony in a trial."

The bluecoat informed the tragedienne that he was simply following out the custom of courtroom procedure, so the scene was retaken, with the officer as chivalrous as ever.

And now who should turn up on the Longacre horizon but Steve Talbot! And Steve wasn't alone, either, as the following notice, printed in bold but respectable type and passed around by the hero himeself, witnesseth:

"Bigger, Busier, Brighter Bell Ave." Bayside, L. I., October 7, 1916.

EDITORIAL

Some of these days the BUGLE is going to start a campaign in favor of paving Bradish avenue, especially the bad spots in front of Rose Stahl's house, and on towards the bay. Nowadays when so many of our best people live in this district, including Rose Stahl, Nance O'Neill and Husband, Pearl White, Bill Johnston, Frank Powell, not to mention a score of others, there is considerable traffic, and it is time the city took notice of the same, and made the road fit to use. The BUGLE does not like to harp on this theme, but we give our voice in favor of having something done.

LOCAL NEWS

—Leon and Vick Searl, who have been living at the yacht club all summer, have moved to N. York for the winter.

—Quite a crowd was out from the city, Sun. last, to see Mary Pickford working in a picture at Beechurst; a whole village was built there to represent a Hindu settlement for the new picture, which is to be known as "Not So Much as the Dirt," or some such a name, and Miss Pickford was out doing her work where everybody could see her. Ed. Hollywood built the village, and Heck Turnbull wrote the show.

—Frank Powell was a N. Y. goer on the 8:40 last Thurs. a.m.

—Bob Vignola, the w. k. director, with Luise Huff Jack Pickford, and others, passed through here Thurs. eve., on the way to Oyster Bay, to take scenes for their new picture, "Seventeen."

—Mrs. Marsh Farnum is spending this month with her brother, Cliff Bruce and Wife.

—Mrs. Ralph Dean has wrote a couple of songs which may be heard in N. Y. City shows this fall.

—Geo. Irving's cousin has bought one of the new Ford cars, which looks almost like an automobile.

—Ben Hendricks has promised to bring a lot of N. York actors out to help out in a chow at the yacht club next week.

—Those pictures you see in the ads of Jaffrey, showing Aub. Smith shaking a cane at Ben Hendricks and Flo Deshon were made right here in Bayside, the water being the bay right where everybody goes in swimming.

AUTHOR AND SINGER VISIT U CITY

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, Sept. 23.

Universal City was honored by the visits last week of two distinguished women, Alice Hegan Rice, the authoress, and Madame Schuman-Heink, the singer. The authoress visited the picture city early in the week and was there on a day when practically all of the thirty-eight companies were at work, so she found much of interest. Madame Schumann-Heink wanted to see everything and experience some of the thrills that players receive in the making of screen productions, and so she was taken to the zoo where she entered the training cage occupied by two of the largest Universal lions, during the absence of the trainer.

The jungle kings at first showed a disposition to be mean, but when the Madame began to sing they climbed onto their respective seats and remained there while a number of photographs were made. General Manager Davis accompanied the singer over the rear half of the Universal property, and when she returned to the front stages she was introduced to President Carl Laemmle, who took a keen delight in showing her how pictures were made and in discussing the present German difficulty, both speaking in their native tongues.

Shortly before the noon hour all employes, numbering fifteen hundred people, gathered on the big stage where Madame Schumann-Heinck sang "The Rosary" and two other selections, while accompanied by the Universal City orchestra.

Mary Pickford's First Artcraft Picture, "Less Than Dust," Now Being Cut and Assembled

MARY PICKFORD'S first play for Artcraft Pictures Corporation, "Less Than the Dust," is now completed, and as the cutting and assembling is going on rapidly so that there may be no delay in the October release date, tentatively announced, it is now possible to obtain a detailed description of the character and story which Miss Pickford will use in her first appearance as an independent star. From a mass of scenarios she selected for her new debut Hector Turnbull's story, inspired by the poem which Laurence Hope included in his "Indian's Love Lyrics." She will be seen as a little English girl deserted by her father soon after the death of the mother, who sacrificed her own life in giving birth to the child.

The girl, dwelling among the lower caste of a city of modern India, is the adopted child of a sword maker when the natives start a rebellion because of certain policies of their English rulers which excite their protest. This uprising is the turning point in the girl's life. She meets Captain Townsend, commander of the local garrison, is greatly impressed by his position and looks upon him as a personage exalted and apart from the common people with whom she has always been associated. This infatuation increases when the captain rescues her from an infuriated mob of fanatical natives, who accuse her of desecrating the sacred pool in the temple, when, in a playful mood, she fell in and got a ducking.

Greater sorrow than she has ever known now comes into the young girl's life. In the lower caste she has been a pathetic figure because of the native attitude toward her, but her natural exuberance of spirit and the loyal friendship of the native children have more than offset the scorn and ridicule of their elders. Now, because of Townsend's attentions to her, she becomes the victim of the wife of another officer, who is smitten with the captain, and is intensely jealous of him.

In spite of all opposition, Rahda, as the little English girl is known in India, clings to her childish affection and admiration for Townsend. She risks her life to save him when he is wounded in a skirmish with the natives. Townsend is sent to England to recover his health. During his absence Rahda's foster father is thrown into prison and she organizes a rescuing party to effect his release. When she is about to be killed for her foolish bravado the prisoner reveals the fact that he is not her real father, but that she is the child of an English derelict who formerly stood high in the military class. In pity for this man's unforunate condition Rahda had often displayed great sympathy for him, of course in absolute ignorance of their relationship.

This derelict is related to a wealthy Englishman and Rahda is sent to him. It develops that Townsend is also related to this rich man, who dies before Rahda arrives and leaves his fortune to the captain. Townsend is in charge of the estate when Rahda arrives. He at once exerts his influence to obtain the sword maker's release from prison and Rahda remains in England to go to school. Here their affection becomes love and they are married.

Townsend, thoroughly recovered, takes her back to India.

They find that the other woman has been made a widow by the rebellion. Now free to impose her affection on Townsend, she persuades Rahda that she has no right to be the wife of the captain and tricks her into leaving her husband. Overcome with grief, Rahda obtains a poison from a chemist and flees into the desert to die. Townsend discovers the deception in time to trace his young wife and overtake her in the desert before she can put an end to her life.

Nearly fifty principal players are required to portray the story of "Less Than the Dust." David Powell is Captain Townsend, Mary Alden the jealous woman, whose husband in the play is Frank Losee, and Francis Joyner is the derelict. Other prominent roles are in the hands of Mario Majeroni, Cesare Gravina, Russell Bassett, Walter Morgan and Mercita Esmonde.

"A DIPLOMATIC ROMANCE," FEATURING BUSHMAN AND BEVERLY BAYNE, IS METRO QUALITY RELEASE FOR OCTOBER 16

"A Diplomatic Romance," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are co-starred, will be released on the Metro program October 16. This five-part feature was produced under the direction of Mr. Bushman, who also made the screen adaptation of the story written by John C. Clymer and Hamilton Smith.

Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne are supported by a notable cast, which includes Henri Bergman, William Davidson, Helen Dunbar, Edmund Elton, Belle Bruce, Harry D. Blakemore, Mrs. La Roche, Liza Miller and Charles Fang. The feature is produced by the Quality Pictures Corporation for Metro.

Mr. Bushman took his company of players to Washington, D. C., to make several of the important exterior scenes. Several interesting scenes of Washington are shown, including the national capitol in one of the backgrounds used for a setting. Another big scene is the diplomat's ball in which more than two hundred persons appear. The introduction of the model of a machine gun, which will supposedly fire a death dealing bomb high into the air and asphyxiate the pilot and crew of an invading aerial machine, is one of the novelties in the production.

UNITY RELEASES THIRD EPISODE OF "THE YELLOW MENACE"

The Unity Sales Corporation, through its exchanges releases this week the third episode of "The Yellow Menace," the title of the picture being "The Poisonous Tarantula."

Reports from all parts of the country show that this serial is being well received.

PYKE, STAGE AND SCREEN ACTOR, JOINS PALLAS STUDIO

Wallace Pyke, character man, has been engaged by Pallas Pictures and will be seen under this brand on the Paramount Program in the forthcoming Dustin Farnum vehicle, "A Son of Erin."

Mr. Pyke has appeared under the Jesse L. Lasky banner, opposite Victor Moore. Prior to his affiliation with Lasky, Mr. Pyke appeared with Essanay under Thomas Ricketts and with the Vitagraph Company's New York forces. Behind the footlights he has attained considerable success, having appeared on the speaking stage for some fifteen years.

His initial appearance as an actor was with the original cast of "Way Down East," in which Phoebe Davis and Odell Williams took part. Three years with the Henry W. Savage Castle Square Opera Company, three years with the Aborn English Grand Opera Company, playing leading roles and other important engagements including those with Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta," with Trentini and in vaudeville, gave him wide experience as an actor.

Report of Heavy Bookings on "Shadow" from Pathe Exchanges

"We Are Striving to Give Exhibitors the Best Pictures It Is Possible to Make," Says Berst—"It Is Our Policy to Book a Subject at Its Box Office Value"

EVERY one of Pathe's thirty exchanges has reported record business on "The Shielding Shadow," the serial which will be released October 1. These reports are particularly gratifying to J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of the Pathe exchange, because they prove his contentions that the same underlying principles on which are founded the relations between manufacturers and buyers apply now to the motion picture business as well as to every other important business—in other words, there are fifty dollar-serials and fifteen dollar-serials, just as there are fifty dollar-suits and fifteen dollar-suits.

The Pathe announcement of doubled prices on "The Shielding Shadow," made about a month ago in the trade journals, was regarded as revolutionary and caused widespread comment. Mr. Berst, in explaining this increase in prices, said that it had been made necessary by the increased cost of the "Shielding Shadow" serial.

"We are striving to give the exhibitors of the United States the best pictures it is possible to make," said Mr. Berst.

"It has always been our policy to book a picture at its box office value. If we release a twenty dollar-picture, we get twenty dollars for it. But if we release a picture that is worth one hundred dollars a day to the exhibitor, we must get one hundred dollars a day for it. Otherwise, we would not continue to make one hundred dollar-pictures.

"When the idea of 'The Shielding Shadow' was first suggested Charles Pathe was in this country. He was deeply interested in the story and pointed out that we had an opportunity to make the greatest serial that had ever been made. The Astra Film Corporation, headed by Louis J. Gasnier, was authorized to go to unlimited expense to make this the greatest picture; the reviews in the trade journals and the reports from our exchanges indicate that we have succeeded."

The advance booking record established by "The Iron Claw" was passed two weeks ago. C. R. Seelye, business manager, has received orders from ten of his exchanges for additional prints to supply the widespread demand for "The Shielding Shadow." Over 150 prints have now been ordered by the various branches throughout the country.

The day of the trade showing of "The Shielding Shadow" in the Broadway theatres of New York was also scheduled for a meeting of the New York Exhibitors League. Both were set for the same time. The Exhibitors League meeting was postponed until the afternoon to give exhibitors an opportunity to view "The Shielding Shadow." Ever since that day—now more than two weeks ago—A. S. Abeles, manager of Pathe's New York exchange, has been busy booking "The Shielding Shadow."

H. E. Friedman, manager of Pathe's Minneapolis branch, held a trade showing in the New Grand theatre on September 8. After the first few reels had been shown, exhibitors began signing up and before the end of the day Manager Friedman found he was compelled to wire for an additional print.

From the Boston territory have also come reports of business that are gratifying to the Pathe home office. One of the most important bookings reported by Manager Farrell is for a full week's showing in the Boston theatre, with a seating capacity of 3,800.

Unity Will Plaster the Country with Posters and Lithos

Twenty-four Sheet Stands in Fifty Cities Placed for Effective Paper Display for "The Yellow Menace"—Stock Paper Features Oriental Atmosphere

AS a part of the advertising campaign to back the exhibitors showing "The Yellow Menace," Unity Sales Corporation has placed twenty-four sheet stands in over fifty cities throughout the country. A list of the cities where these stands are located follows: Portland, Me., Manchester, N. H., Burlington, Vt., Boston, Mass., Springfield, Worcester, Hartford, Conn., Bridgeport, New Haven, New London, Providence, R. I., New York City, Buffalo, Rochester, N. Y., Newark, N. J., Philadelphia, Pa., Baltimore, Md., Wilmington, Del., Washington, D. C., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Chicago, Ill., Minneapolis, Minn., St. Paul, Milwaukee, Wis., San Francisco, Calif., Los Angeles, Oakland, Seattle, Wash., Spokane, Portland, Denver, Colo., Salt Lake City, Utah, Cincinnati, Ohio, Cleveland, Toledo, Louisville, Ky., Detroit, Mich., Pittsburgh, Pa., Indianapolis, Ind., Kansas City, Mo., St. Louis, Omaha, Neb., Des Moines, Iowa, Memphis, Tenn., Chattanooga, Nashville, New Orleans, La., Atlanta, Ga., Birmingham, Ala., Jacksonville, Fla.

In addition to this, the company has put out a line of lithograph paper, including stock one, two and six sheets, as well as similar paper for each of the sixteen episodes, making in all a helpful addition to the newspaper and magazine advertising campaign. Only the stock paper features the Oriental atmosphere of the picture. The rest of the paper is a reproduction from scenes which have their setting in New York City and various points on Long Island, where the largest part of the picture was made.

A big newspaper advertising campaign is now appearing in prominent papers throughout the country with special attention given to cities where exchanges are located. The New York Evening World, the Chicago Herald and some forty other big city newspapers have aroused public interest through the running of the story, the novelized version of which was written by Louis Tracy.

Window cards, colored photographs, buttons and other serial novelties have been distributed in abundance.

A thirty-two page booklet, containing still pictures and synopses from each episode of "The Yellow Menace" is the first of its kind to be produced.

ALFRED VOSBURGH AND ESTELLE ALLEN JOIN MOROSCO STUDIO

The two latest acquisitions to the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company studios are Alfred Vosburgh, leading man, and Estelle Allen, the ingenue, whose work under Vitagraph, Ince, Edison, and other trademarks will well be remembered.

Alfred Vosburgh has appeared in motion pictures since his twentieth birthday, five years ago, and has enjoyed considerable success with Vitagraph, American, and Ince. Prior to his debut on the screen he portrayed important roles on the speaking stage for five years, having appeared with Miss Allen in her big success on the Stair and Havlin Circuit, "Barriers Burned Away," and in various prominent stock organizations throughout the country. He will make his initial appearance on the Paramount Program in the forthcoming Vivian Martin release, "Her Father's Son," produced by Morosco. Later, he will be seen in support of Lenore Ulrich.

Estelle Allen has also considerable stage experience, her greatest work behind the footlights having been evident in "Barriers Burned Away." Prior to her engagement in this play, Miss Allen played several years on the stock stage. Miss Allen will also appear with Mr. Vosburgh in a Lenore Ulrich production.

BIG FOUR FAMILY IS CHANGED TO VITAGRAPH FAMILY

Commencing with the issue of September 9, The Big Four Family will be known as The Vitagraph Family.

In the issue of September 9, Albert E. Smith, Greater Vitagraph's president, issues a broadside in his characteristic forceful style which is a statement of the big things in store for exhibitors, taking for his text the slogan: "From Producer to Exhibitor."

" The Bishop's Son " Is Title Decided Upon for Arrow Film

Only Short Prologue to Be Filmed Before Assembling Begins on Picture Founded on Hall Caine's " Deemster " as a Vehicle for the Novelist's Son

"THE BISHOP'S SON" is the title chosen for the first of a series of special seven and eight reel productions to be made by the Arrow Film Corporation at its studios in Yonkers, N. Y. It is expected that " The Bishop's Son " will be finished within a fortnight. It remains only to film the short prologue scenes, and then the task of assembling, titling, and cutting will be in order.

This first Arrow special feature is also Arrow's first from a story by Hall Caine, whose books have probably reached greater circulation totals in every civilized land than those of any living author.

" The Bishop's Son " is based on Mr. Caine's famous novel, " The Deemster," which has enjoyed translation into twelve different languages and of which more than 6,000,000 copies already have been sold, and on Mr. Caine's own dramatic version of " The Deemster, which his famous son, Derwent Hall Caine, produced and played on the English stage under the title of " The Bishop's Son."

In Arrow's film version of " The Bishop's Son " Derwent Hall Caine plays the same role which he created and made famous throughout England in the stage presentation of his father's play.

" The Deemster," on which " The Bishop's Son " is based, is laid in the Isle of Man in the years 1700 to 1710. It is therefore a costume play, in a period of extremely picturesque garb. More than that, the Isle of Man itself is unique in many ways, both politically and geographically. It is ruled by the Lord Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the King of England, the Deemster and the Bishop of Man.

When it came time to make Arrow's film version of " The Deemster," W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, under whose personal supervision " The Bishop's Son " has been produced, found it exceedingly difficult to secure the exact locations in the United States which would correspond to the unique character of the Isle of Man. Hall Caine himself sent over a number of drawings to illustrate the character of the buildings to be used in the film presentation of " The Bishop's Son," fashioning these drawings on the historic originals now on the Isle of Man.

After a careful search of all available locations by Howell Hansel, the director of " The Bishop's Son," it was decided to utilize the rolling turf and steep cliffs of Block Island to stage this big production. A number of thatched stone huts were erected on the cliffs and on the ocean edge. The interior scenes in these huts were made in the real huts by taking the roof off after all the exterior scenes had been filmed. The home of a multi-millionaire on Fort Washington avenue, New York City, was secured as the Deemster's residence, and an equally imposing mansion for Bishop's Court, the historic abode of the Bishop of Man. Derwent Hall Caine passed on the likeness and the locations of the buildings to those on the Isle of Man, among which he played as a boy.

A special mound, an exact counterpart of the famous Tynwald Hill, the ancient open-air court of judgment on the Isle of Man, was constructed under Derwent Hall Caine's supervision at Fox Hills, Staten Island, and more than 800 extra people were used there in the trial scenes.

The costumes for Arrow's film version of " The Bishop's Son " were brought over from England by Derwent Hall Caine, and are identical with those used in the famous London production of this play. The special properties and furniture utilized by Arrow in " The Bishop's Son " likewise were imported from England just for this production, running from the fowling pieces of the constables and the lanterns of the jailers to the massive tables, chairs and beds which constituted the furnishings of the Deemster's and the Bishop's home.

HELEN ARNOLD, WINNER OF BEAUTY AND BRAINS CONTEST, IS ENGAGED BY FROHMAN COMPANY FOR " WITCHING HOUR "

Helen Arnold, the little Louisville, Ky., girl, who was selected by William A. Brady as the most beautiful photographic type he had ever seen, and who was one of the winning candidates in the Photoplay Magazine's Beauty and Brains Contest, has become a permanent player in the roster of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, and will make her first screen appearance as Viola in that company's production of " The Witching Hour." She will be in support of C. Aubrey Smith and Jack Sherrill and is now at work under Director George Irving.

Helen Arnold

Upon arrival in New York, four weeks ago, Miss Arnold began visiting various studios, hoping to gather some insight into the work before her. At the Frohman Flushing studio, she was used in a court room scene and attracted the attention of George Irving, who was then engaged in making " The Conquest of Canaan." A test was made and after a few lessons in poise and pantomime, Miss Arnold went through several difficult scenes with Jack Sherrill. Result—she was immediately engaged by Mr. Sherrill, and will remain definitely with the Frohman Company. A legal release was secured by Miss Arnold from the World Film Corporation on September 9.

FREULER MAKES FILM PREDICTION

Special to Motion Picture News.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 23.

Comedy-drama as the backbone of the moving picture business, large productions, long features of an excellence so great that no bills will be changed oftener than twice a week, and most of them weekly, with specialties used after the manner of curtain raisers, are some of the prophecies made for the moving picture's future by J. R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation in an interview arranged for the Evening Wisconsin by J. W. Martin, Press Publicity Company.

The interview occupied a full column in the paper, and has caused no little comment in local film circles, as it is one of the biggest film interviews obtained in Milwaukee.

" This is a transitional stage in the moving picture business," said Mr. Freuler. " The short-length films were formerly ninety-five per cent. of the films shown, now they are about one-third. I predict that they will be used as curtain raisers in connection with the five-reel features, and these last will be comedy-drama, for the most part, and large productions taking from four months to two years to produce."

MILO COMEDIES TO BE RELEASED THROUGH INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES

The Milo comedies, made by the Milo Pictures Corporation, of Baltimore, Md., are to be released through independent exchanges throughout the United States, several of which have signed for the company's output. Others are being signed to take prints of the comedies which feature prominent screen comedians and stage players of repute.

The Milo Company decided on this method after some of the exchange men approved the idea. An extensive advertising campaign will be started to boost the pictures and stars by General Manager Frank P. Donovan, who directed the productions.

HATCH MAKES PROMOTIONS IN V-L-S-E AT ST. LOUIS

There have been several changes made recently at the St. Louis offices of the V-L-S-E exchange, at 3630 Olive street. S. W. Hatch, the manager, has added an advertising man to his staff, in the person of R. E. Stahler, and has promoted Walter L. Merrill to booking clerk, Charles Sears to traveling representative, and John Noehrn to city salesman.

GUETLEIN, "SEE AMERICA FIRST" CAMERAMAN, IS NOW TURNING TOWARD THE SOUTH

As was announced when Edward Guetlein, the Gaumont cameraman for "See America First," started north last spring, the first touch of cool weather is now turning him toward the south again. For this series he has secured some highly picturesque views of New England and the Adirondacks. That he is now following the retreating warm weather is seen in the "See America First" release of October 4. This is Baltimore, the fine old southern city which contains so many beautiful monuments, parks and squares.

Edward Guetlein in Adirondacks for Gaumont's "See America First"

Druid Hill Park, Mount Vernon Place, the beautiful new home of The Johns Hopkins University, the inner harbor with its fleet of oyster boats, and the magnificent public buildings are among the more important views recorded by the camera.

On the same reel with Baltimore there is a Gaumont Kartoon Komic entitled "Abe's Opossum." In this picture a whimsical pickaninny goes in pursuit of the little marsupial that is the goal of every chonhued American.

"Return of Eve" Pleases 12 Sons of Adam in Chicago

Exhibitors See Advance Showing of Essanay Picture, Featuring Edna Mayo and Set for Release on Oct. 16 Through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service

AN impromptu showing in Chicago of "The Return of Eve" to a dozen exhibitors in advance of the regular trade showing brought approximately fifty bookings, according to advices received from Essanay. Inasmuch as a trade showing was not contemplated and that the exhibitors saw the film when being run for officials of the company, Essanay believes its claims that the picture is far out of the ordinary are substantiated.

The release date on this feature has been set for October 16, through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service. It was previously announced for release October 2.

"The Return of Eve" is in five reels, and features Edna Mayo, supported by Eugene O'Brien. It was directed by Arthur Berthelet and taken from the stage play of the same name by Lee Wilson Dodd. It deals with two children brought up in a wilderness by the terms of an eccentric millionaire's will, and then plunged into civilization to be a part of the life of a colony of ultra-rich.

"The Prince of Graustark" has been completed by Essanay and will be offered through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service following "The Return of Eve."

It is a rapid piece of high comedy, taken from the novel of the same name by George Barr McCutcheon. Bryant Washburn and Marguerite Clayton take the leading roles and are supported by Ernest Maupain and Sydney Ainsworth. Fred E. Wright, who directed "Graustark," also directed the sequel.

Two new five-reel features by Directors Wright and Berthelet are now being constructed in the Essanay studios. The latter is filming "The Chaperon," Maxine Elliot's stage hit. Edna Mayo and Eugene O'Brien also appear in the leading parts in this picture. Sydney Ainsworth has the chief supporting part.

Director Wright is ready to begin work on "The Breakers," taken from the story by Arthur Stringer in The Saturday Evening Post. This will be in five reels, and feature Bryant Washburn and Nell Craig. Ernest Maupain will have a big character part.

"Woman Who Dared" in October on State Rights Basis

California Motion Picture Corporation Also Announces That "The Passion Flower," with Beatriz Michelena, Is Nearly Completed

ANNOUNCEMENT has just been made by the California Motion Picture Corporation, advising that "The Woman Who Dared," recently completed with Beatriz Michelena in the leading role, would be immediately distributed on the state rights plan for October release. Meantime, according to the same report, an extensive line of advertising helps has been prepared for the picture and is now ready for prompt delivery.

"The growing number of inquiries concerning our pictures," writes the sales department of the California organization, "would indicate that the fall amusement season has been opened most auspiciously for the picture trade. It also gives evidence that the independent buyers are alive to the new opportunities offered by the open market. The past two or three weeks have accumulated a file full of offers and requests for quotations on "The Woman Who Dared," which prompts us in our decision to begin an immediate assignment of territories for the feature."

The California Motion Picture Corporation also announces that another Michelena production, entitled "The Passion Flower," written by Captain Leslie Peacocke, is nearing completion and will be released for a November date. According to the advices sent out from the studio, "The Passion Flower" is a seven-part feature, produced on the same elaborate scale and with the same attempt for scenic grandeur as "Salomy Jane."

"'The Passion Flower,'" says the advance report, "is a story of the big out-of-doors, and utilizes a section of Northern California's redwood scenery never before touched by the camera. It has a gripping plot with just enough of a problem to put it over with a 'smash.' It is concerned with a woman's regeneration, but is not the old threadbare story. It has originality and a 'punch' that is quite distinctly its own. The leading role finds Beatriz Michelena in her element."

Listed in the supporting cast are found the names of Andrew Robson, William Pike, Albert Morrison and Irene Outtrim.

"Pen of Cartoonist Can Do More Than Director"—Palmer

"While Admitting His Skill, I Cannot Believe He Is Able to Crowd as Many Laughs into Same Number of Feet as Can Pen Humorist," Says Gaumont Cartoonist

"THE pen of the cartoonist can do more wonderful things than can the ablest director," said Harry Palmer in discussing animated cartoons, that branch of the art in which he is a recognized leader. "While admitting the skill of the director of comedies, I cannot believe that he can crowd as many laughs into the same number of feet as can the humorist with the pen.

"To illustrate this, let us consider the latest animated cartoon from the Gaumont studios, which I have called 'Pigs.' Now, a pig naturally lends himself to the joyous mood, as witness Ellis Parker Butler's classic, 'Pigs Is Pigs'; but when you come to introduce the porcine actor to the camera you will find that he does not run true to form when considered as the hero of a story.

"The cartoonist, however, can take any pig from the little pig that went to market to the one that Tom the Piper's Son stole and get a laugh out of him in a thousand ways. He can be made to climb a tree or swim a river or do some other thing that spectators recognize is quite impossible for a pig. Yet the very fact that the feat is impossible is a great aid in tickling their risibilities.

"Then the cartoonist who varies his subjects can score a higher percentage of hits than can the brother artist who is bound to a single series. He is not held in any one channel or confined by limitations that hamper his play of fancy. I vary my work by releasing 'Estelle' one week, perhaps, 'Nosey Ned' the next, then switch to something entirely different, and for the fourth week take new tack."

"IRON CLAW" BOOKED IN 368 THEATRES IN ST. LOUIS TERRITORY

There are 732 theatres in St. Louis territory of the Pathe Exchange. Manager C. S. Edwards has already booked "The Iron Claw" to 368, or more than half of them. Eighty-six of these bookings are in St. Louis and East St. Louis alone.

"THE SHIRLEY GIRL" WILL BE AN ANIMATED WEEKLY

The International Film and Producing Company with offices on the twenty-sixth floor of the World's Tower Building, New York, has just made arrangements for the release of "The Shirley Girl Animated Weekly," featuring Miss Marguerite Shirley.

Experienced cameramen and press agents will accompany Miss Shirley all over the United States, and scenes of local interest and prominent people will be taken in every city. The different subjects will be realized as "The Shirley Girl Animated Weekly" will be shown in the moving picture houses in various cities.

Marguerite Shirley comes from an old English theatrical family. Her father, Gerard Shirley, was a well-known English actor. She was only six when she came to America, but she has been over in the old country many times since, and before she did the movie stunts she played in London with the Drury Lane Stock Company, and for two years was leading woman in "The Whip."

"The Shirley Girl" will appear under the auspices of the leading newspaper in every city and "The Shirley Girl Animated Weekly" will be realized through the management of the paper.

"TWEEDLEDUM" VISITS NEW YORK WITH BILLY DUNN

Billy Dunn, moving picture director and showman, has been in New York the past few days, conferring with the Unity Sales Corporation regarding the release of the "Tweedledum" comedies, which the Eagle Film Manufacturing Company, under Mr. Dunn's management, is producing. Tucked under Billy's arm, for safe keeping, was Perez himself, better known as "Tweedledum."

Perez began his career with the Pathe Freres in Paris sixteen years ago. He later went with the Eclipse Company of Paris for whom he produced "The Near Sighted Cyclist," of which the record number of nine hundred and fifty prints was sold throughout the world in two years. This picture alone made "Tweedledum" famous and the Eclipse Company a fortune.

He later went with the Eclair Company of Paris and then the Ambrosia Company of Turino, Italy, with whom he was the director general and star comedian for a period of six years. He left the latter company and came to this country to produce the "Tweedledum" comedies for the Eagle Film Manufacturing Company.

The first of these comedies, which is now being released by the Unity Sales Corporation, is called "Tweedledum's Busy Night." In this picture "Tweedledum" plays fourteen distinct and separate parts.

James Morrison Will Create Principal Role in Next Ivan

Actor Has Appeared in "The Seventh Son," "The Modern Prodigal," "The Christian," "Mother's Roses," "The Wheels of Justice," and "In the Days of Famine"

James Morrison Louise Vale Donald Hall. Frankie Mann

FOR the next Ivan production to be released in October a notable cast of screen stars has been assembled. James Morrison, immediately upon the completion of an important role in "The Battle Cry of War," Vitagraph successor to "The Battle Cry of Peace," left that organization to create the principal male role in this new Ivan production. Mr. Morrison has enacted principal roles in such great successes put out by Vitagraph as "The Seventh Son," "The Modern Prodigal," "The Christian," "Mother's Roses," "The Wheels of Justice," "In the Days of Famine," "Mortmain" and "The Battle Cry of War."

Louise Vale, for a great number of years one of the stars of the Biograph Company and under whose banner she appeared in hundreds of screen plays under the direction of such directors as D. W. Griffith, William Christy Cabanne and others, will make her debut under the Ivan banner in this production.

Frankie Mann, starred by Lubin and Vitagraph, has been cast to portray a "vampire" type in this new play.

Donald Hall, for four years with the Vitagraph Company, will portray one of the types for which he is so well known.

When completed, "The Sex Lure" will be released as a regular Ivan feature.

Successful Showing of "Fall of Nation" at Casino

Overflow Houses the Rule in Washington, D. C.—The Theatre Decorated with Flags and the Stage Made Attractive for the Week

Special to Motion Picture News.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.

THE initial appearance of "The Fall of a Nation" has been phenomenal at the Casino theatre. During the first week of its showing there were over-flow houses, many applicants for seats being turned away. The practical themes of preparedness and peace proved especially interesting at this time and more so to the Capital of the Nation.

The fact that the musical score was written by Victor Herbert furnished an attraction of its own and for this purpose Manager Meyer augmented his orchestra to meet the requirements of the composition. This readily demonstrated the rich field that lies open to the composer for the feature photoplay and augurs much for a closer relation of producer and composer as well as dramatic and musical themes.

The presentation of "The Fall of a Nation" was frequently interrupted by applause, not only in patriotic situations, but also for the excellent acting of the cast.

In offering this production, Mr. Meyer artistically decorated his theatre in flags on the outside and inside. The stage was also made attractive. The young lady ushers were dressed in white with ribbons, suggestive of the Red Cross nurse. The whole effect was harmonious and appropriate.

POWELL WILL SHORTLY START WORK ON NEW STORY

With the completion and trade showing of his first feature "Charity?" Frank Powell, president of the Frank Powell Productions, Inc., will immediately begin work on another production in which he sees great possibilities.

Little is known of this new picture except that it, like "Charity?" will be based on a subject of timely interest and one uppermost in the public mind.

Creighton Hale and Sheldon Lewis will be starred in this new picture as will a woman star whose name has not been disclosed.

ESSANAY-CHAPLIN REVUE BOOKINGS ARE LARGE

Although the compilation of the Essanay-Chaplin Revue of 1916 has just been announced, the company reports that bookings for this feature reaching into the hundreds have already been recorded by General Film Service.

President George K. Spoor believes the attraction of the revue for exhibitors and public alike lies not only in the fact that the idea is new, but that three of the Essanay-Chaplin comedies have been selected for its construction. They are "His New Job," "The Tramp" and "A Night Out."

POLLARD COMPANY HARD AT WORK AT MAKING "MISS JACKIE"

Special to Motion Picture News.

San Diego, Cal., Sept. 23.

In making "Miss Jackie," upon which the Pollard Picture Company, now located at the San Diego Exposition, is working, special permission has been obtained for using artificial lights in filming scenes between decks on board of naval vessels, it being the first time, it is believed, that this courtesy has been extended to motion picture companies by the navy department.

This five-reeler, "Miss Jackie," has a large portion of comedy mixed in with its serious situations. Jackie Holbrook, played by Marguerite Fischer, is the daughter of a couple who have come into wealth suddenly, and they wish her to marry a title, but she has a different view of the matter and assumes a frigid front whenever the English nobleman appears in her vicinity. All the men at a fashionable hotel are Jackie's admirers, save Capt. Robert Crowe, commanding a naval vessel in port. Jackie determines to make a conquest, and assumes the part of a sailor who has a letter to deliver to the captain. Orders to sail immediately for the island of Vergania to quell a revolution result in Jackie being unable to return to shore. On account of the effeminate manners of the pseudo-sailor she has many difficulties. At the island a landing party goes into the interior, where they are taken by fanatical negroes. During a voodoo orgy Jackie and a relief party effect a rescue, and when the real Jackie is discovered the captain finds that he really loves her, and so she wins in the end.

Melvin Mayo, formerly with the Lubin Company at Coronado, has joined the Pollard Company.

Cecil Van Auker, another former Lubin man, is leading man in "The Fortune Hunter," which has reopened the Belasco theatre in Los Angeles. Mr. Van Auker has had good success in the legitimate and his work before the camera was only temporary. His leading woman in the play is Inez Plummer.

"CIVILIZATION" PRODUCER ANTICIPATES MONSTER MILITARY ARMORED AUTO

Many of those who witness the Thomas H. Ince spectacle "Civilization," now running at the Park theatre, Columbus Circle, express astonishment at the size and power of the military automobiles which appear in the picture. These monstrous looking machines take active part in the film conflict. Some have expressed doubt as to whether such machines are actually made and used.

These cars were, it is true, especially designed for the production, but it appears from the European war news this week, that Mr. Ince anticipated the British military authorities in the size of the formidable fighting monsters which have just appeared in the Somme with such terrific results. They carry large numbers of soldiers armed to the teeth, and have wrought great destruction amongst the Germans. They are compared to steel land ships. This description may be an exaggeration, but a great deal of secrecy seems to be maintained with regard to the actual construction of them. One gets an idea of how they act, in the battle scenes of "Civilization."

THEODORE ROBERTS AND ANITA KING CO-STARS IN "ANTON, THE TERRIBLE," LASKY

Theodore Roberts and Anita King as co-stars for the first time will appear in the Jesse L. Lasky production of "Anton, the Terrible." The story of this drama of Russian political intrigue was written by Jules Eckert Goodman from Thomas H. Uzzell's story and prepared for the screen by Marian Fairfax and Charles Sarver. It is the Paramount Picture of September 28.

Theodore Roberts in his years on the stage and screen has been seen in many different roles, but it is said that as the head of the cruel Russian secret police in "Anton, the Terrible," he excels anything he has done heretofore.

Anita King, the Paramount girl, who recently scored a success in "The Race," plays the part of the young girl upon whom Anton wishes to revenge himself for her father's crime.

The photodrama is produced under the personal direction of William C. De Mille.

The cast supporting Mr. Roberts and Miss King includes such prominent artists as Horace B. Carpenter, Edythe Chapman, Harrison Ford and others.

"THE POWER OF EVIL," FIRST MOSS RELEASE

The initial release of the new B. S. Moss, one a month policy will be "The Power of Evil," a scorching arraignment of the drink evil by George Bronson Howard. The picture has been completed and is now ready for state rights buyers. Marguerite Nichols plays the leading role.

Extensive preparations have been made for a country wide exploitation of this picture, and these arrangements will hold good throughout the entire list of one a month releases. Elaborate printing, paper, heralds, cuts, and all the forces that make for an exhaustive campaign have been drawn upon including an advertising campaign taking in both the trade papers and the newspapers.

DRUMMOND GOES TO MANAGE MUTUAL IN LOS ANGELES

The Los Angeles Mutual exchange is to have a new manager in the person of Mr. Drummond, who comes here following similar work for the Mutual at Spokane, and the Triangle at Salt Lake City. The change was made necessary by C. M. Simmons tendering his resignation and accepting the management of the Art Craft, San Francisco territory exchange.

Newt Levy, formerly connected with the Los Angeles exchange as salesman, who has been serving as assistant manager at San Francisco, has been returned here to serve as assistant manager.

E. Auger, special representative of the Mutual exchange system has spent a week in Los Angeles, at the Mutual exchange.

HOUSTON TURNS OUT FOR "FALL OF NATION"

Special to Motion Picture News.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 23.

W. K. Sheppard with his "Fall of a Nation," the Thomas Dixon spectacle, opened a two week engagement at the Prince theatre, Houston, Texas, on September 10.

The town has been plastered with various advertising matter of the film, and rather large crowds have been in attendance during the first week, with an exceptionally large crowd the opening day and night.

On September 15 all of the film men in Houston were invited to see the big picture as guests of Mr. Sheppard. They are: F. A. Tomes and Fred Cullimore, of the Mutual; Harry T. Peebles and A. C. O'Leary, of the Consolidated; W. S. Tuttle and R. Stevens, of the General; S. H. Tassey, of the Southern and others.

DETROIT BOARD OF EDUCATION TRIES PICTURES IN SCHOOLS

The Detroit Board of Education has decided to try motion pictures in twenty-five schools. It has placed an order for five projection machines, and will receive a weekly film service for each machine. The films will be of the educational kind. If the plan works out successfully, the board will recommend the service for all of the public schools.

Great Enthusiasm Displayed Over New Jersey Gathering at Newark on October 4

SECRETARY F. J. LISCHKE is in receipt of numerous requests for information regarding the big state convention of the New Jersey Exhibitors League set for October 4, at Achtelsteller's Hall, 842 Broad street, Newark, N. J., and wishes to inform all exhibitors throughout the state that a record-breaking attendance for the meeting of this kind is expected.

Mayor Thomas L. Raymond of Newark, has promised to make the opening address; Wm. A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry; Lee A. Ochs, president of the M. P. E. L. of America; W. W. Irwin, general manager of V-L-S-E; W. Stephen Bush of the Moving Picture World; Wm. A. Johnston of the Motion Picture News, and H. P. Hill of the C. & C. Electric & Manufacturing Company will address the meeting on topics of vital interest to the exhibitor.

Such matters as the recent unfair actions of the Film Club of New York, an organization of exchange managers; the abolition of the deposit system; the discussion of a political and legislative program; the reduction of the electric light and power rate and other matters that will materially assist the exhibitor in the conduct of his business will be acted upon.

The gubernatorial candidates are expected to attend and declare themselves regarding censorship and other matters.

No exhibitor can afford to miss this meeting.

Morosco Asserts His Faith in Permanence of Screen

Theatrical and Motion Picture Producer Denies in Its Entirety the Alleged Statement That He Predicted the Motion Picture Is Doomed in a Letter to President Hiram Abrams of the Paramount Pictures Corporation—"Not Misquoted Intentionally, But Misunderstood by Interviewer"

OLIVER MOROSCO, theatrical and motion picture producer, has issued a denial to the alleged statements that were spread broadcast as having come from him, through a magazine, in which he was quoted as having predicted the ultimate doom of the motion picture, and that it is waning at present, but would go down fighting. Mr. Morosco's denial comes in the form of an open letter to the motion picture industry and its allied interests, addressed to President Hiram Abrams, of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, distributors of the productions of the Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco and Pallas.

In his communication to Mr. Abrams, Mr. Morosco says:

New York, Sept. 20, 1916.

Mr. Hiram Abrams, care of Paramount Pictures Corporation, 485 Fifth Ave., New York City.

"My Dear Mr. Abrams: Since talking with you the other day, I have carefully gone over the article in the Green Book. A great many of the things quoted as coming from me staggered me quite a little. I do not believe the interviewer intended in any way to misquote me, but merely misunderstood me in several instances.

"My article was based on the moving pictures, and I stated emphatically to the interviewer that I thought the future of the moving picture business would depend on the manner in which pictures would be made; that I thought the cheap class of moving picture films would not succeed as they had in the past, but that the high class, well constructed, well acted story would live forever; that I intended in our picture company to make our productions with as much merit and quality as I would the biggest production I made on the legitimate stage, and that I would fight my own moving picture company with my dramatic productions throughout the country not as an opposition, but in the making of the same. In other words, that in the making of a play or the making of a picture, I would try to make one outdo the other in artistic endeavor.

"I also said that the moving picture industry of the future would prove a "survival of the fittest." At no time did I intend to be quoted as saying that the high-class picture, or the worthy picture, was on the decline. How foolhardy that would be of me, when I am in the picture business, making pictures for the public; and if you will take one clause in the article referred to, I think it undoubtedly speaks for itself; I quote as follows:

"There will be a place and a demand for photoplays containing good stories, good acting, fine production and all that goes to make a good picture, and it will be the companies and producers capable of giving these pictures that will survive."

"Yours truly,

(Signed) "OLIVER MOROSCO.

The misquoted interview placed Mr. Morosco in an extremely embarrassing and serious position. It has been his earnest endeavor to have the erroneous impression corrected everywhere. Immediately upon the issuance of the interview, President Abrams called the attention of Mr. Morosco to the averred statements, impressing upon him the fact that the misquotations would be detrimental to the entire motion picture industry.

Among some of the alleged quotations which have been denied by Mr. Morosco are that "the motion picture will go down fighting, but will go down nevertheless," "I intend to give battle to the motion picture business with every ounce of strength at my command," "already the sun of the motion pictures is setting," "as I believe the future will show the moving picture industry is on the wane," and "there is no question that the motion picture demand and popularity is waning."

Quality, Not Quantity, for Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay

"Over Production, Haste in Production and Rushing Through a Film Play in Order to Meet Requirements of Schedule Create Other Than Artistic Effects," Says Selig

IT will be quality and not quantity with the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service, according to William N. Selig. In the course of a recent interview Mr. Selig is quoted as saying: "Over production, haste in production and the rushing through of a film play in order to meet the requirements of a scheduled program have created other than highest artistic effects.

"I believe that a film play, especially a long subject, should be carefully built, that plenty of time should be afforded the writer of the play, the producing director and the players to get all possible out of their work. Turning out film plays with machine-like regularity is what ails the artistic details of many plays in this day and age. Film productions should not be 'manufactured.' I do not like the expression; they should be developed.

"I propose to go slowly, to give plenty of time for each of my feature plays released through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service. I may not release a Red Seal play every month. If my forthcoming plays are not ready for presentation at a certain time, I shall not order production hurried along which is certain to detract from true art. Instead I shall request those producing the play to pay no attention to any schedules, but to work with only one end in view, namely, to complete a production artistic in every respect and with due regard to the little things.

"Haste makes waste in the film world as elsewhere. Haste does worse than that, it is responsible for films that are machine-labeled that are crude, that are really unfinished. No company can turn out excellent pictureplays, productions above the average, if plenty of time is not afforded for production. Quality production is what will count."

PHILADELPHIA LEAGUE WILL HOLD SPECIAL MEETING

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.

Jay Emanuel has been made head of a special committee to call a meeting of all the exhibitors of Philadelphia on Sunday, October 1, at the Family theatre, 1311 Market street. The meeting will be called to order at 8 P. M.

The Exhibitors League of Philadelphia has been reorganized and it is in line with the league's desire to infuse new life into the organization that Mr. Emanuel has been empowered to call this meeting. President Lee Ochs of the National body will be one of the speakers.

JOSEPH LEE WILL MANAGE BUFFALO OFFICE OF THE MERIT COMPANY

Joseph Lee, who has been New York State representative of the Merit Film Corporation, has been promoted to the managership of the Buffalo office of the Merit Film Corporation, succeeding F. J. Willis. The latter leaves his position to become manager of the Ivan Film Exchange in Boston, from which point he will have charge of the distribution of Ivan features in the New England territory.

MARIONETTE BASEBALL GAME, FOR SHOWING IN REEL LIFE, IS CHANGED TO NUMBER 22

The baseball game played by marionettes announced for Gaumont's "Reel Life," Number 21 has been changed to Number 22. It has been replaced by a series of scenes showing "Raising White Leghorn Chickens." "Reel Life" Number 22 is released October 1. In addition to the baseball game, which is a reproduction of a world's series game last season, there are two other interesting subjects. One shows "The Wood Workers of the Southern Mountains." The other records adventures during "A Night With a Police Dog."

The wood workers are mountaineers who with a few simple tools make furniture that is notable for its strength and real beauty. The picture will prove entertaining to dwellers in cities who are accustomed only to factory-made furniture products.

In recent years frequent publicity has been given to the efficient work being done by dogs trained for police service. In this number of "Reel Life," a typical night's work of one of these four-footed guardians of the peace is shown.

BRAY DRAWS FUNNY CARTOON FOR PICTOGRAPHS

J. R. Bray's forthcoming cartoon on the Paramount Program called "Col. Heeza Liar Gets Married," which is scheduled for release on October 9, is said to be the funniest that he has ever turned out. The Colonel after bidding his bachelor friends farewell is married to a fair young damsel weighing 330 pounds. After two years of married life, after he has been blessed with several children, he declared a strike for an eight-hour day. His wife agrees with him and also goes on strike, quitting work at five o'clock. When the Colonel returns home from the office he is forced to cook the dinner and mind the children. He solves the difficulty by hiring a strike-breaker, a fair you "chicken" of sixteen summers. When his wife discovers what he has done she calls the strike off and everything goes along smoothly again.

The forthcoming release of the Paramount Pictographs will show the manner in which the oyster industry is conducted from the planting of the seed oysters to the gathering of the grown product and the manner in which it is prepared for market.

RYAN GIVEN A DINNER ON LEAVING WORLD FILM TO JOIN SELZNICK FORCES, IN CHARGE OF SHIPPING AND SUPPLIES

C. C. Ryan, for a year and a half in charge of the shipping and supply department of World Film, was given a dinner last Wednesday night by his old employees in honor of his departure from service in that company to take a similar position with the Lewis J. Selznick organization. The dinner was, in fact, an after-the-theatre supper, and lasted well into the small hours.

Ryan was first escorted to a box-party at the Forty-fourth Street theatre to witness "The Girl from Brazil." Then the function was removed to Joel's famous all-night rest cure, and "a fine time was had by all."

Among those present were: Maurice J. Walsh, Clarence Carta, Dick Segal, Al. Lehrer, Joseph Barry, Herman Pepper, Clifford Myers, H. A. Thomas, Frank Zucker, L. E. Byer, P. Masterson, Maxwell Sass, Sol H. Kravitz and J. H. Lutjen.

TRIUMPH FILM SHOWN AT SING SING

"The Prima Donna's Husband," a five-reel production starring Holbrook Blinn, made by the Triumph Film Corporation, was given a showing in Sing Sing prison, Sunday, September 17. The picture is being distributed in New York and surrounding territories by the Despatch Film Company, under whose auspices it was shown at the prison. The huge entertainment hall was crowded with inmates of the place, all of whom seemed to enjoy the picture thoroughly.

Many members of the company, together with their friends, made the trip from New York to Ossining, where the prison is situated. Julius Steger and Joseph Golden, the co-directors of the picture, were on hand, the former making a short speech before the projection. Others who made the trip were Gilbert P. Hamilton, Harry Warner and Mr. and Mrs. Alperstein. A number of press representatives attended after being rounded up by Leon J. Rubenstein.

KOHN LEAVES SAN FRANCISCO FOR TRIP TO NEW YORK

Marion H. Kohn, head of the recently incorporated Consolidated Film Corporation, of San Francisco, which has taken over the interests of the Apex Feature Service, has left for New York on an important business mission. The headquarters of this concern on Golden Gate avenue are being remodeled and enlarged for the proper handling of a number of large productions that are to be taken over.

Upon the return of Mr. Kohn arrangements will be made at once for opening branches in Los Angeles, Portland, and Seattle, a site having already been selected for the Southern California branch.

"THE YELLOW MENACE" RELEASED IN NEW YORK ON SEPTEMBER 25

The Unity Film Service, handling the "Yellow Menace" serial in New York territory, will release the first episode of the picture the week of September 25 to seventy-five theatres in the Greater New York district. The release of this serial was first set for Labor Day, but after request of the exhibitors the showing of the picture was postponed until this week on account of the disturbed conditions due to the paralysis epidemic.

The Unity Film Service has provided itself with four solicitors' automobiles, which are being used to reach the exhibitor promptly in this territory. The automobiles are decorated in yellow banners and streamers, serving the double purpose of reaching the exhibitors more quickly and, at the same time, advertising the serial to the public.

In this way, too, the company is well protected should there be further trouble from the street car strike and all deliveries will be made by automobile should any further difficulties arise. Good care is being taken of the exhibitors' needs and no inconveniences will be suffered on account of tie-up of transportation facilities.

CONTINENTAL WILL FILM "SPIRIT OF '76"

The Continental Film Corporation organized by Robert Goldstein among Los Angeles and San Francisco financiers, is shortly to begin production of a subject to be titled "The Spirit of '76," story for which was written by Mr. Goldstein, who conducts a costuming establishment here and one at San Francisco. Preparations for the filming of this picture have been in progress for several months, and a number of research people have been collecting data for fully twice that period. Mr. Goldstein plans on making new costumes for this production, and thus making sure that all are perfect in every detail. Frank Montgomery, formerly connected with several coast companies in the capacity of director will be in charge of the filming, and Carl LeVines has been selected as associate director.

SMITH LEAVES MIRROR TO JOIN TRIANGLE FORCES

Frederick James Smith, formerly vaudeville editor of the New York Dramatic Mirror, has resigned from that publication to become connected with the publicity department of the Triangle Film Corporation.

Mr. Smith was vaudeville editor of the Mirror for three years, and had charge of the motion picture department for the last few weeks. At Triangle he will assume the position formerly carried by S. E. Stanton.

CRISP COMPLETES NEW CLUNE FILM

The second production of the Clune Film Producing Company has been completed by Director Donald Crisp, who has left for a vacation of three weeks, and will stay away until about time of the premier of this subject at Clune's Auditorium theatre, Los Angeles. This subject is a film adaptation of Harold Bell Wright's novel, "The Eyes of the World."

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"ASHES OF EMBERS"

(Famous Players—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

IN "Ashes of Embers," Pauline Frederick has achieved her highest pinnacle as an exponet of screen drama. She has been furnished with an opportunity by both the author and the director and has seized it with the greatest avidity. We have never looked at a motion picture play in which there was displayed acting of such a high order of merit. Miss Frederick was called upon for her best and she more than rose to the opportunity. Interpreting a dual role in which the characterizations were as wide apart as the two poles, she gave a performance that not only called forth the greatest admiration but one that was worthy of the highest commendation as well.

The story, written by Forrest Halsey, is intensely dramatic from start to finish, and reaches a stirring climax near the end of the fifth reel. It has been built according to the well known rules of dramatic construction and constitutes a powerful portrayal of a certain phase of life. The fact that it is an extremely unpleasant phase of life tends to increase rather than detract from its dramatic intensity.

Another of His Victims

Still it is stories of the kind portrayed in this picture that have done the most harm to the screen and brought it in disrepute with those who are looking for a chance to carp and criticize. Its theme is vampirish in the extreme, its force is of a destructive nature, it portrays the horrible and the vicious, and in the end throws a sop to convention in the steadfast fidelity of the negative of the two leading characters.

It is a picture that will fill theatres to overflowing but it is likewise a picture that no immature person should witness. For those who have gained maturer years, to whom the sex appeal has lost its mysterious attractiveness, and who can view it purely from an artistic standpoint as the finished polished work of a really great actress, "Ashes of Embers" will prove a delightful evening's entertainment. The immature will ask their elders embarassing questions, and those of a salacious and lascivious turn of mind will be disappointed because it does not go far enough.

The story deals with twin sisters in poor circumstances—one, Agnes, all that is good, and the other, Laura, a vixenish, vampirish woman, who uses the lure of her beautiful body to gain her own selfish desires for material prosperity, and the sensuous luxuries of life, as well as to relieve her craving for the realities of passionate expression. She is not only immoral but unmoral and adheres to no code of ethical conduct other than the gratification of sensuosity and degenerate whims.

By a set of well worked out incidents Agnes redeems and falls in love with one of Laura's victims, whom she has wrecked and cast aside. The big stirring climax comes when the regenerated husband of Agnes again meets and falls victim to the wiles of the unprincipled Laura, and his rescue at the psychological moment by his still faithful and forgiving wife. The acting of Miss Frederick in this difficult series of scenes was marvelous, to say the least. In the end Laura is shot and killed by her deceived husband and the picture closes with the final happy touch of the start of a perfect life of love and happiness between Agnes and her husband.

Earl Fox did a sterling bit of work as the weakling who could withstand neither the lure of a beautiful woman or the smell of whiskey, while Frank Losee pleased as the easily deceived husband. Others in the cast were Maggie Holloway Fisher, Herbert J. Frank and Jay Wilson. The picture was staged under the capable direction of Joseph Kaufman, who not only achieved some beautiful effects but devised settings that served to emphasize the action and the acting of the leading characters.

"THE LIGHT THAT FAILED"

(Pathe-Gold Rooster—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Light That Failed" looks as if it would make money, and plenty of it, for the exhibitor. Glancing at it from the trade angle, there is much in its favor and only a few shady pieces of photographic work in its disfavor. It presents a story that is full of action, appeal and human interest—one that is also original in more ways than one. Lest we forget, "The Light That Failed" is based on Rudyard Kipling's work of the same name—a work that really deserves to be termed immortal. It will be somewhat difficult for readers of the book to realize the fact that the picture draws its substance from Kipling. His story has been changed considerably, altered to meet the demands of what the producers believe to be the public taste. They have

Heldar Overpowers Bessie

"played the picture safe," for it will please that taste, but we cannot help wondering why the story was not presented as written. It pleases in book form—it would have, we are sure, in pictured form. It must not be thought that the producers have changed the whole trend of the story; it is in only a few situations that they have decided that their own judgment is better than Kipling's. But there we go, criticizing from the wrong standpoint—in trade parlance, the production is a money getter.

The story as presented takes up the case of Dick Heldar, a brilliant artist. He loves his childhood sweetheart, Maizie, but she, believing that she will some day be an artist herself, refuses to marry. Bessie, Dick's model, has continually made overtures to him, but he will have none of her. Angered, she one day attempts to kill him with a knife, and while he is repelling her attack Maizie enters and misinterprets the situation, denouncing the artist.

Later, Dick learns that a head wound inflicted in his boyhood days, combined with a shock sustained in a recent assault by thieves, is slowly driving him blind. When the light fails him he leaves his London home, his bosom friend, Torpenhow, and goes to the East where the British forces are fighting, where before he made his name as an artist. And so he wanders into the thick of a battle and is killed.

Robert Edeson gets much from the role of Dick Hedlar, although we never imagined him as such a matured man. Claude Fleming is excellent as Torpenhow. Lillian Tucker is a fair Maizie. Joe Collins as Bessie does the role after a conventional fashion. The direction is that of Edward Jose.

"THE CHALICE OF SORROW"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS seems to be a record week for revivals of the screen's favorite and reliable pictures. In the production of "The Chalice of Sorrow," Rex Ingram goes even further back than a month, a year or even the birth of the motion picture. His contribution to the Bulebird program is derived from the famous opera, "La Tosca." It has been done before in film form, but a good thing always bears more or less repetition. Mr. Ingram has localized his production in Mexico and by so doing has perhaps given added force to the tragedy by thus accentuating the possible villainy of a Mexican commandante.

The picture has been given as a production befitting the renown of its antecedent by Mr. Ingram. The scenario is clear and intelligently handled in all but the episode concerning Pietro's death, which will be rather unapparent to those not on a familiar footing with the story. The Mexican settings suggest a good atmosphere, while the photography and lighting is deserving of special praise. This latter is the work of Duke Hayward. The brief flashes of the prison with one shaft of light streaking through the slit in the wall are most effective. The arrangement of the lighting and its resulting shadows and brilliancy is remarkable and adds not a little to the strength of the picture.

In this case the woman who suffers at the hands of the commandante is named Lorelei. The story is so generally well known, that we will not relate it all here. Suffice it to tell of the main situation which concerns Lorelei's attempts to free her lover from the power of the commandante. She promises to give her body to the man if he will but liberate both of them afterwards. He consents, says that a mock execution will be gone through with her lover and that both may leave the city after the ordeal is over. Lorelei kills the commandante when he attacks her and then goes to find her lover who is dead from the execution which was grimly carried out in every detail.

Cleo Madison gains new laurels for herself in the part of Lorelei, acting her big scenes with a dignified show of emotionalism. Wedgewood Nowell makes a villaious commandante. A competent cast composed of Howard Crampton, Charles Cummings, Jack McDermott, Blanche White, Albert MacQuarrie and Rhea Haines appears in support.

When shown for review there was a misplaced scene in the fifth reel while one subtitle we call to mind at this writing was illiterate, but doubtless these oversights of the editor will be corrected before release day.

"THE REVOLT"

(Peerless-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

AS long as the world goes round we will have pictures of the man who believes in a double standard of morals for himself and his wife, and who is finally awakened to his right senses by his wife's decision to employ the double standard for herself. Of such stuff is "The Revolt" made of. We say this not intending to taboo the production. It is a very good one, produced satisfactorily. It is more than evident that World Film's general policy as to stories is to feed the exhibitor and his public that kind which have demonstrated their ability to make money and entertain.

The Doctor Explains

Frances Marion prepared her scenario from a play by Edward Locke. Hers is a meritorious piece of work in general. There is perhaps only one high light in the story that she has not brought out with sufficient saliency, that is, not the revenge that Lena nurses against Anna, believing the latter the cause of her dismissal, but this point does little to weaken the sustaining interest caused by the whole work. Barry O'Neil staged the piece satisfactorily.

Anna Stevens, a shop girl, marries one of the company's salesmen and for a while lives happily. Then he starts getting his entertainment away from home because of the vixen temper of Anna's stepmother, who lives with them. In exasperation Anna accepts the invitation of Lena, an old friend who has slipped and never gotten up again, to one of her parties. She goes against her better judgment but is rescued from one of the old roues present by the arrival of a doctor, whom she had formerly known. He takes her back to her husband, who is wild over the sickness of his little child. The child and the kindly counsel of the doctor prove the necessary tonic to smooth over the troubled waters and so the couple is left.

Frances Nelson is seen as Anna, Arthur Ashley as her husband and Clara Whipple as Lena. Both Miss Nelson and Miss Whipple, besides showing more than ordinary appreciation for their roles, are blessed with a real knowledge of makeup. Their transformation from the first scene, where both are introduced as young girls without a care, to the later part in the picture, when Anna has matured and Lena coarsened, is noticeably realistic. Others in the cast are George MacQuarrie, Frank Beamis, Madge Evans and Ada Price.

"THE COUNTRY THAT GOD FORGOT"

(Selig—Kleine—Edison—Selig—Essanay)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2nd

THIS is Selig's first contribution to the new Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay releasing organization, and it is a particularly valuable one. "The Country That God Forgot" is one of those rare features that practically any exhibitor, catering to any class of patrons, can book with the certainty of pleasing one hundred per cent of his audience.

For Helen's Sake

The story, written by Marshall Neilan, combines every element that makes for good entertainment, and each element is present in just the right proportion.

Marshall Neilan also directed, and he made every foot of film contribute something to the dramatic effect of the picture as a whole. Mr. Neilan gave so many admirable touches to the film that it is impossible to mention them specifically. He tore a slice out of life itself and spread it raw on the celluloid. Painstaking editing enhances the effect of Mr. Neilan's brilliant directing.

The cast is remarkable. Thomas Santschi is the perfect embodiment of the character he portrays. The restrained power of his performance is superb. George Fawcett presents what is probably the best character study he ever created—very high praise. Mary Charleson does wonders with an unsympathetic role. Will Machin, Charles Gerrard, Charles Le Moyne and Victoria Forde round out the cast excellently. Due principally to the consistent artistry of these players, there is not a single exaggerated or theatrical incident in the entire production. The locations used are magnificent. The photography is good.

The following skeleton of the story does not do it justice. Helen Brant is the wife of Steve Brant, a miner. Brant and Hearn, his partner, work fifteen hours a day to collect pay-dirt. They want enough money to give Helen the refinements of civilization. They know how she loathes the ghastly, arid barrenness of the wilderness they live in. One day the agents of the government reclamation service pass the Brant cabin. Wells, the paymaster, makes love to Helen, and feeds her starved soul with stories of the colorful outer world. She consents to run away with him. Steve overhears their plans and, numb with agony, puts all his savings in the girl's pack-saddle. Hearn insists that his money be put in also.

When the eloping pair have been gone for hours, a posse rides up to inform Steve that Wells has stolen government funds. Steve cannot let his wife associate with a thief, so he and Hearn join the posse.

Meantime Helen has discovered her husband's unselfish gift. She tells Wells that they must return the money to him. Wells, knowing that he is being pursued, refuses. Helen aims a revolver at him; he struggles with her, and she is shot. He rides off.

When the posse reaches Helen's body Steve leaves the pursuers and takes the girl to the nearest doctor. Hearn now makes the avengers lash their mounts. The men finally overtake Wells, but the county sheriff says he must follow the law and put the man in jail. As he walks away with his prisoner, he significantly drops his keys. Just before the noose tightens around Wells' neck he confesses that he has a wife living in Canada.

The doctor tells Steve that Helen will recover, and the man and wife, knowing each other better than ever before, solemnly kiss.

"THE GIRL FROM 'FRISCO"

(Kalem—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY LAWRENCE ALVIN URBACH

THE ninth episode in this series is called "The Web of Guilt," and is up to the usual high standing that has characterized the series from the beginning. The action is exciting throughout the picture and reaches a climax when the villain is given the third degree and is forced to confess to a crime for which another is blamed.

The Evidence

Risling, owner of a hardware store, threatens to kill Lonny, the ranch foreman for Ace Brent, who owns a large ranch, adjoining which is another ranch owned by John Wallace. The altercation between Risling and Lonny comes about by the latter accepting money from Fannie, a dance-hall type of woman and friend of Risling.

A few days after this, Siwash, a drunken Indian, comes to the village saloon and begins shooting up the place. He is overpowered by Lonny and swears revenge. That same night, John Wallace, while riding to his ranch, sees a strange man with a bicycle stop in front of Lonny's house to peer in through the window. Wallace alights from his horse and a quarrel takes place between the two men; Wallace is thrown sprawling on the ground, unconscious. The stranger then invades Lonny's room and forms a contrivance whereby Lonny will be killed when he comes home and opens his door to enter.

In the meantime, Ace Brent and his daughter Barbara are in Mr. Brent's study and, requiring the services of Lonny, send their Chinese servant Wung to his house to call him. Wung is shot dead, upon entering the room, by a shot-gun with a rope attached by one end to the trigger and by the other end to the door. Siwash is accused of the murder, but Barbara intercedes for him, showing that a cowboy would never ride a bicycle. Siwash is then placed in custody until his innocence is proved.

Barbara, hearing about the quarrel between Risling and Lonny, joins Wallace, and they both set about their task of proving Risling's guilt. They tell Lonny to remain under cover and they keep Wung's death a secret. Risling is invited to Lonny's house where the murder scene is re-enacted, and he confesses. Siwash is released and Barbara is cheered by the ranchmen for her ability in solving the mystery.

Marin Sais and True Boardman were pleasing in the leading roles. Others in the cast were Frank Jonassen, Edward Clisbee, Ronald Bradbury, Josephine West, Steve Murphy and Phillipie. The direction, lighting and photography were up to standard.

"THE SCARLET RUNNER"

(Episodes Eight, Nine and Eleven, Vitagraph-V-L-S-E—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THESE three episodes of this series of two reel pictures based on the automobile stories of C. N. and A. M. Williamson contain a greater rapidity of action than some of those that have preceded. They are thoroughly enjoyable from start to finish.

The eighth is called "The Glove and the Ring," and after a somewhat lengthy and padded introduction, containing some subtitles that could be greatly improved, works into a very interesting story. Christopher Race, while touring Italy in company with an Italian nobleman, who is tired of life, discovers a peasant cart drawn by two horses with no driver. In the cart he finds a woman's traveling bag, a glove and a gold ring. Giving the horses their heads he is led by them to a small farm house. There they discover that one of the men of the family had gone to meet a young girl, a refugee from Russia. In the Scarlet Runner they hasten to the frontier where they learn of a strange automobile that has passed a few moments before. By means of speed of the Scarlet Runner the fugitive car is overhauled and the young girl rescued. Her beauty is such that the Italian nobleman decides that life is quite worth living after all.

The ninth episode is called "The Gold Cigarette Case," and contains plenty of excitement throughout. In his wanderings about the country Race runs across a beautiful young girl confined in the high tower of a castle. She throws a gold cigarette case out of the window containing the photograph of a young man and a cryptic combination of letters. By a mere coincidence Race discovers the young man, and it develops that the girl is being kept prisoner by her unscrupulous guardian, who is endeavoring to force her to disclose the secret combination to a safe deposit box containing her fortune. Race, with the assistance of the young man, is able to free the beautiful maiden and turn her guardian over to the police.

"The Missing Chapter," is the title of the eleventh episode and forms the first part of Christopher Race's romance. This episode also contains much that is unnecessary for the proper telling of the story. Race meets Dorothy Herbert and falls immediately in love with her. Madame Du Guesclin, her companion, blights the budding romance in order that her nephew may have an unobstructed road. Dorothy, who is an expert automobile driver, has a bad accident in which she drives a car over a cliff. Race rescues her and then saves her life by submitting to the operation of blood transfusion made necessary by her great loss of the vital fluid. He leaves, however, before she returns to consciousness, as he erroneously believes that she is engaged to Raoul, and that he will never have an opportunity to tell of his love.

The pictures have been most carefully directed with some settings and locations of great beauty. The photography and lighting were good and the acting of the supporting members of the various casts, especially that of Edith Storey, called forth great praise.

Those making up the supporting casts were Adolphe Menjou, Jean Stuart, Anna Brody, Don Cameron, Gypsy O'Brien, Edward Elkas, who did an extremely good bit of character work; Herbert Stanley, Mrs. Storey, Edith Storey, Julia Swayne Gordon, Arthur Lehman and Hattie Delaro.

"THE VAGABOND PRINCE"

(Triangle-Ince—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

HERE is another picture with a young Balkan prince as its central figure. The young fellow discovers that he isn't happy and his bethrothal to a princess from a neighboring kingdom is about the last straw his unhappiness will bear. So at the instigation of an artist he takes to the open road to seek romance. He finds it to be sure, but not in a very idealistic place. On the Barbary Coast in San Francisco he gets in a fight for the sake of a cabaret performer, lands in jail, is released by his friend the artist, and then sets up as a fencing master. Of course he enters upon a romance with the cabaret girl and then follows the struggle between love and duty when emissaries from the kingdom urge his return. It is quite superfluous to add that love puts duty to route.

We have seen this plot in many ways, shapes and manners in the past; it has always been quite a favorite with producers ever since they discovered a wealth of mythical kingdoms lying in the Balkans. The fault with "The Vagabond Prince" is that it is unusually heavily padded. The first part of the picture is exasperatingly slow. The prince dwells on his unfortunate lot so persistently that one is inclined to wonder whether he has any back bone after all. And then it is not enough for the artist to impart to him the freedom of the open road once, twice or even three times—he does it for at least the full space of one reel. The subsequent experiences of the prince in America are lacking in suspense for the simple reason that one is quite certain just what is going to happen at every change in scene.

H. B. Warner and Dorothy Dalton have the leading parts while others are Roy Laidlaw, Katherine Kirkwood, Charles K. French, J. W. McLaughlin, J. Frank Burke and Agnes Herring. J. G. Hawkes wrote the scenario and Charles Giblyn directed.

"THE MANAGER OF THE 'B. AND A.'"

(Signal-Mutual Star Production—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

RATHER appropriate for these days of threatened railroad strikes is this release from the Signal studios, and as the strike of workers in the railroad shops is vividly portrayed, with its attending violence, it strikes a portentous note.

Even though featuring Helen Holmes, it is strictly speaking a "man-picture," and Helen does not get much chance to show her remarkable versatility as in other railroad pictures from the same studios. Hers is just a passive role in the part of the daughter of the former manager of the road.

Leo Maloney, in the character of Dan Oakly, the new manager, is the whole works, and is ably supported by Thomas G. Lingham in the heavy role as Griffith Ryder, labor leader and editor of the town paper.

Cutting down expenses by the new manager by laying off some of the men and discontinuing the short days during the summer months brings on a strike, culminating in the cutting of the water main supplying city water to the railroad yards.

An engine "going dry" explodes and sets fire to the yards. Water being cut off, the fire spreads to the town, and the neighboring town is asked for aid. Oakly goes on an engine to bring the fire apparatus, already loaded on a flat car and ready in the town a few miles away. Coming back with the apparatus, he runs through a burning woods, and the way the flaming trees and brush fall over the rushing engine and on the tracks in front of it is realistic and thrilling in the extreme. In fact, all the fire scenes, in the burning shops, the threatened town, and along the right of way, are beautifully worked out and deserve great credit.

The fire is finally put out, and Oakly by his efforts is soon in favor with the strikers, and the workers return to their old jobs.

A little love affair between Oakly and his rival, Ryder, with Constance Emory (Helen Holmes) as the object of their affections, is a minor theme that runs through the picture, terminating in the death of Ryder and the acceptance of Oakly by Constance.

The acting of all the principals is beyond criticism, and with a good interesting story with a punch in it, unusually clear photography, and well chosen exteriors, this picture is bound to please the most exacting audience.

"REVENGE IS SWEET" AND "ALL IN A DAY'S WORK"

(Mutt and Jeff)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IN these two split reels Bud Fisher displays even more than his customary supply of humor. His comedy is as usual of the practical joke variety and his stories, if they may be called such, are developed cleverly. The animation in these cartoons has improved considerably since the first release and has reached such a point that no seriously annoying jerks are apparent in the action.

In "Revenge Is Sweet," Jeff thinks over a few of the many times Mutt has maltreated him and plots revenge. Mutt is injured in a naccident and Jeff, after making sure that he is physically incompetent proceeds to beat him up.

Two separate jokes are offered in "All in a Day's Work" and are told with a profuse use of dialogue written into the pictures. In the first Mutt learns that someone with whiskers has stolen a bartender's girl. He tells Jeff that a good way to get a free drink from this particular fellow is to tell him about the good points of the girl. Jeff goes in and starts to laud the young lady, but being whiskered he is suspected of having stolen her and consequently gets the full force of the bartender's ire.

In the second part of this half reel Jeff encounters an ex-prize fighter of his own height. He buys him clothes of his own cut and dresses him up to pass as a fair imitation of himself. He then goes out and plagues Mutt until he is chased. Jeff coming on the fighter hides and Mutt attacks the substitute, who, of course, beats the long fellow to something the sport writers call a pulp.

"TWIN FATES"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2nd

THIS release is fully up to the standard of program short-length subjects. While not wholly new in theme, it has enough originality to maintain the interest. The unexpected ending is ingeniously brought in, and gives a good final punch.

Marguerite Clayton, Sydney Ainsworth and Edmund Cobb are well suited to the parts assigned them. The details of production and directing are adequate.

Walter Keane, a young rounder, is given a last chance by his father. He is sent to a firm in a distant city, and given a year to make good. While on his way he gets a letter from his fiancee, breaking their engagement. In desperation he leaves the train at a water tank and shoots himself. Sharron, a hobo, finds his body, and taking his credentials and clothes, takes Keane's job. Sharron was once a prosperous business man, so he tackles his duties with great acument and energy.

At the end of the year he has made a wonderful record, but his deception is discovered. He tells his story, but it is believed that he shot Keane. He is arrested on a charge of murder. Doris, the girl whom Sharron loved in his earlier days, hears of his plight and decides to investigate. She hears of a chauffeur who calls himself "Sharron," and who has no memory of his past. She looks up this man and finds that he is Keane. Keane had not killed himself, but had been suffering from amnesia. Sharron is re-engaged by his firm and marries Doris.

"THE COMMON LAW"

(Selznick—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE COMMON LAW" has not been over publicized. And anyone who has read the trade journals or strolled about Longacre Square with his eyes open knows that the production has received more than the average amount of publicity expended on a single picture. We are of the opinion that "The Common Law" is a picture quite far above the average. First, because it was originally written by Robert W. Chambers, and Mr. Chambers' novels are not in the least quiet or retreating; rather are they inclined to be sensational and outstanding. Second, the picture is in seven reels, and is quite worth it. Perhaps, though, the

Helen Holmes, J. P. McGowan and the Signal Company in "The Manager of the B. & A.," the Latest of the Signal Features to be Released on the Mutual Program

Frank Borzage and Anna Little in the Mutual Masterpicture, "Land o' Lizards," a Current Release from the American Studios

main factors in elevating "The Common Law" above the average were the superb presentation given it by Director Albert Capellani and the brilliant performance of Clara Kimball Young in the role of Valerie West.

Mr. Capellani is something of an artist. More of his caliber and productions containing real artistic merit would be on the increase. He is a master in the art of suggestion—that technique which permits the telling of a portion of incident, and only part of it, allowing the spectator to sense the rest of it himself. His staging of the story is quite perfect. The realism of his scenes seems unbounded by the celluloid—there is nothing denoting the motion picture studio about them. The lighting and photography supplement well the director's good work.

The Death of Querida

Mr. Chambers' story has many box office assets which may well be taken into consideration. Probably it has been more extensively read in this day than any other work of fiction recently picturized. And it was read because of the boldness and fearlessness of the author's style and the topics upon which he wrote. The spirit that permeated "The Common Law" in novel form has been most successfully transferred to the screen. The picture calls a spade a spade, and by its undeniable frankness will undoubtedly create considerable comment. But it is here in its very frankness that the art of suggestion is employed so successfully. Delicate situations are thus made delicate pictures.

The story itself concerns the life of an artist's model, Valerie West, who, because she believes she will ruin the career of the man she loves if she marries him, decides to be his wife according to the Common Law. Her attitude changes finally when she discovers that it was the selfishness and ignorance of others who misjudged her just because of her profession, and so she consents to become the artist's wife according to the Law of God. Mr. Chambers' did not write his novel for the screen. And while it may be thought that its climax lacks something of the power of the usual picture, this is more than made up for by the ultimate effect created by the whole.

Miss Young as Valerie acts with rare skill and gives her work an appreciable touch of refinement. In the person of Conway Tearle, who plays opposite as the artist, Miss Young has an excellent leading man. Mr. Tearle is a real actor, known on the stage, whose expressive performance wins him new laurels. Paul Capellani is the heavy. Lillian Cook has an important role, which she handles skilfully, while others are Edna Hunter, Julia Stuart, Edward M. Kimball, Lydia Knott and D. J. Flanagan.

"THE LAND O' LIZARDS"

(American-Mutual Master Picture—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

IT is always refreshing to the average picture lover to see a film featuring "all outdoors," and a more agreeable and satisfying one than "Land of Lizards" would be hard to find.

When it is stated that for a cast we have Anna Little as the heroine, Frank Borzage as the hero, and the inimitable Jack Richardson as the villain, it becomes all the more desirable.

The hero is engaged by Eastern capitalists to investigate the gold-bearing property adjoining the ranch of one Buck Moran (Jack Richardson). The cowboys of Bar C ranch have been the terror of the countryside and have innumerable killings to answer for. To trespass on their property is to practically court instant death at the hands of the cowboys. With Buck Moran as their leader, they know no law but their own.

The hero in his course of the investigations discovers that the supposed son of Dave Moore, a squatter on the property in question, is a girl in disguise, but only after her father has been shot by one of the gang.

On the death of her father she is carried off by Moran, only to be rescued when a posse with our hero at the head attacks the ranch. Moran is killed, the other members of his gang either killed or captured, and the representative of the Eastern capitalists makes his report. He marries "Bobbie" Moore (Anna Little), and as the two are about to go on their honeymoon they learn that "Bobbie's" father, on the day of his death, has recorded his claim and the gold-bearing property now belongs to her.

The photography is up to the standard that the American studios are noted for, and the story is interesting throughout, with plenty of tense situations that are bound to please. Beautiful exteriors are also worth noting, and they are well chosen both as to locale and environment.

"THE QUEST OF LIFE"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

THERE is one thing that is bound to stand out above others and force itself on the beholder of this picture; it is the fact that the director has spared no pains. Here are two leads that have in all probability never acted for pictures before behaving for all the world like old timers.

Maurice and Florence Walton, famous on two continents for their dancing, are the two leading principals in this picture and though "playing to the camera" in their dancing specialties that are introduced during the run of the story, there is not a single fault to be found in their acting. But as for the dancing numbers they are truly wonderful.

The Famous Players studios, responsible for the "Quest of Life," have made arrangements with a well known music publisher to have special musical arrangements for the picture so that the exhibitor can have the same music for the dances as originally used by the Waltons.

One of the most famous of the Maurice and Florence Walton dances, "The Apache Dance," is shown in all its violent and graceful numbers and is only one of the dancing numbers introduced.

"The Quest of Life," however, is more than merely a screen version of a number of dances. It is full of real heart interest telling of the struggles of a young girl who is suffering from an illness that the doctor tells her will cause her death inside of a year unless she can go to Arizona. She is poor and of lowly parentage and it is out of the question for her to go away.

The Dance Proves a Hit

How she meets the celebrated dancer, is accepted as his partner, makes a hit with him on the stage, is sent by him to a sanitorium to recover her health, and at the end marries him, all goes to make a truly agreeable and interesting plot.

The photography is excellent throughout save for a few overbright spots in the close-ups, where it would seem there was too much glare on the eyes. As stated above the acting is above criticism and the entire cast is alive to their respective roles.

There is no reason why this release should not make a hit with any average theatre audience.

"IDLE WIVES"

(Universal—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS latest production of the Smalleys, based on a novel by James Oppenheim, which was shown at the Maxine Elliott theatre, New York City, is a preachment on the sacredness of the home, also on the power of the motion picture. There is nothing to be wary about in its contents, that is nothing to warrant the display of the feaful sign, "Children under sixteen years of age not admitted." It touches on intimate things to be sure, but in a way no more sensational than other productions which children under sixteen are allowed to witness.

The picture is also presented in a manner that is open to question. It presumes upon the character of its audience. It supposes that there is a girl in it accompanied by a man of questionable character. It supposes that there is a husband and wife slowly drifting apart in it and that there is a man with a large family from the tenements in it. We are inclined to doubt whether an audience likes to be thus judged. Then after all these characters have witnessed the picture within the picture, they go to their homes resolved to lead better lives. In other words the picture is a preachment.

"Idle Wives" treats with a set of characters identical to those that witness it in the prologue. Its main theme is the downfall of one girl who believes she has more sense than her parents, and of her ultimate salvation through the kindly aid given by one of the wives who refuses to remain idle. A parallel treats of the wife's husband who sees nothing beyond his own social sphere at first, but who comes to his senses through the temporary desertion of his wife to take up the work of caring for the needy.

The story is well told, waxing a little bit slow at times, but this is partially balanced by the swiftness of the action in other parts. The principals in the main picture are Phillips Smalley, Lois Weber and Mary MacLaren, while those who are in the prologue and epilogue are Ben Wilson, Maude George and Neva Gerber. The supporting cast is competent.

"HIS LITTLE WIFE"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY

THE "atmosphere" in this picture crowds nearly everything else out. The production consists mostly of a series of undramatic episodes very prettily done. The various scenes are laid in a small town, and the slowly creeping plot develops a very ordinary rural romance. There is one thrill—a girl's leap from a bridge.

If your audience likes to nibble at dainty, unnourishing stuff, this film will appeal to them. If they crave raw meat—thrills, punches, climaxes—they will fidget in their chairs during the run of "His Little Wife."

Harry Beaumont was the author-director-juvenile. His writing duties were not heavy, because the plot he furnished is conventional and slight. His directing made the most of the meagre story, creating the bucolic atmosphere excellently, and giving a number of true-to-life tableaux. As to his acting, he is a good-looking and youthful hero, well-suited to the part he plays.

Gertrude Glover, as the heroine, has the girlish air of innocence so necessary for the role. To her credit be it said that she is not "doubled" in her leap from the bridge; she obviously performs the feat herself.

The photography, sets and locations are adequate.

Anxious Moments

Grace Bolton, the ward of the village cobbler, falls in love with Tom Williard, son of the dry-goods merchant. The elder Williard refuses to let his son marry "beneath his station." The pair are secretly married in the city, and then return to the village, where they must live apart. This separation causes Grace to attempt suicide by drowning. She is rescued by Williard, Sr. In her delirium she calls for Tom, and his father, realizing that their love is stronger than his will, blesses them.

"THE RUMMY"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE RUMMY" is an interesting melodrama greatly enhanced by the sterling character work of Wilfred Lucas who appears in the title role. It is a picture of newspaper life showing a good deal of the routine and much that is not routine of the reporter's duties. The story was cut from stock material but again the Fine Arts scenario department has shown its ability to administer a finesse that stamps the picture at first glance to be somewhat original.

We are introduced to the Rummy in the first scene, as he completes his morning toilette at a park fountain. He is in a bar the next minute drowning his sorrow in five fingers of straight whisky and then we flash back to the story of his life. Only a year ago he was a rising reporter on a newspaper under the control of a corrupt political boss. He married a girl who had lost all interest in life—in fact he had picked her out of the night court. As he progressed she was deligted and when the boss told her to come to his apartment where he would outline a plan for her husband's welfare she went and was attacked by the corrupt one. Her husband denounced her and then he took to drink.

In the bar again we find him, this time listening to the fellow who was once the "fall guy" for the boss. The "fall guy" gives the Rummy a tip for a big story. He goes to the boss and breaks in on him with his friends just as his wife is being maltreated again. The Rummy discovers his wife was in the right all the time, clambers aboard the water wagon and gladly accepts an offer from his old paper to "come back."

A typical sob story is "The Rummy" and it may set many in tears, as it is full of heart interest touches. The Rummy gets a strong hold on the sympathies chiefly because Mr. Lucas is such a good actor. Pauline Starke is attractive as his wife, while others are William H. Brown, James O'Shea, Harry Fisher, A. D. Sears and Clyde Hopkins. Paul Powell directed.

"THE ROMANCE OF BILLY GOAT HILL"

(Red Feather—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WE have often mentioned that Director Lynn Reynolds is a great stickler for detail. In this lies the main merit of his productions. The production in hand is almost over-crowded with incident but thanks to Mr. Reynolds' picture sense in regard to the accentuating of all detail he has made a success of it. "The Romance of Billy Goat Hill" is not centralized, it is inclined to wander from one situation to another and back again without sufficient pause. But when a director can make each one of these situations, disconnected or not, interesting of itself, then the success of his picture is assured providing the whole hangs together with any degree of unity at all. The comedy and the drama and the human interest of each phase is delightfully brought out until the observer finds himself quite absorbed in contemplating every scene of the photoplay. "The Romance of Billy Goat Hill" may not be perfect but it is good and fully worthy the attention of the exhibitor looking for material to provide an evening's entertainment of the lighter sort.

Going to Meet the Colonel

The effects that Mr. Reynolds introduces in his picture contribute largely to the realism of his piece. If he wants rain he gets it and if he wants snow he makes it, the truth of which statements are ably substantiated by the rain and snow storms in this picture. Both are some of the most realistic bits of picture technique that we have seen in a long time. "The Romance of Billy Goat Hill," like many other productions by the same director, is laid in the south.

The picture is based on the book by Alice Hegan Rice, which fact of itself creates good advertising possibilities for the theatre man. In its characters lies its charm and there are many of them, each is painted with a colorful brush; with each the audience gets on a thoroughly familiar footing before the picture's termination. These characters are responsible for no little humor of a high order and although we would hesitate in terming "The Romance of Billy Goat Hill," a comedy-drama, as its principal theme is serious, we are inclined to think that the laughs are thicker than the moments of suspense.

The story tells of a girl of the south and her fiance who is believed to have committed assault. This separates the two for a long time, during which period the girl marries. But shortly afterwards her husband dies and the return of the hero is followed shortly by the showing up of the villain

Myrtle Gonzalez and Val Paul have the principal roles and both do admirable work. Others are Fred Church, Thomas Jefferson and George Hernandez.

"IN THE HOUSE OF THE CHIEF"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY

THERE is a lot of plot crammed into these swiftly-moving three reels. Many of the situations brought in are conventional, most of them are improbable or illogical, but there is a certain type of audience that will enjoy every minute of the production. Those who love the stark melodrama of the underworld, unleavened by fine character delineation, reality, or continuity, will eat this up.

Again Facing the Wronged Man

Director T. N. Heffron, knowing to what element the story would appeal, bent his entire energy to putting action into the picture. A good example of the result is the irrelevant but terrific fist-fighting introduced.

Eugenie Besserer is excellent in a character lead. Vivian Reed makes a pretty heroine. Charles West is not physically suited for the hero's part, but the film shows him to have a heart of gold.

Madame Le Blanc has been a "fence" for crooks for many years. She has followed this unsavory profession so that her daughter Marie might have every advantage. The police finally discover her place, and to escape prison she promises to be a "stool pigeon." One day her long lost son comes in with some stolen goods. Knowing that the police are outside, she puts the swag in the pocket of Fiedler, her clerk. The innocent man is sent to jail.

Marie is heart-broken, for she was engaged to Fiedler. A year later the wronged man is released, and he gets a job on the police force. When he has become a lieutenant he cables Marie to come home from Paris where she has been studying. She comes home and finds that her husband-to-be is now chief-of-police. Madame Le Blanc, being captured by the police, commits suicide.

LEO DENISON IS TRANSFERRED FROM DETROIT TO NEW YORK AND WILL SUPERVISE PARAMOUNT BUSINESS IN DETROIT, CINCINNATI AND CHICAGO

D. LEO DENISON, former manager of the Detroit office of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, has been transferred to New York, where he will supervise the company's business in Detroit, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Chicago. Mr. Denison will spend about half of his time on the road, keeping in direct touch with conditions in the territory allotted to him. The position he assumes is one newly created and for which Mr. Denison is aptly suited in view of his long experience in the exchange end of the Paramount Pictures Corporation. In addition to handling these four exchanges, Mr. Denison will act as personal representative for James Steele, secretary and treasurer of the Paramount Corporation.

J. O. Brooks, connected for the past twelve months with the Detroit office, has been appointed manager to succeed Mr. Denison. Mr. Brooks has also had considerable experience in the film and dramatic end of the theatrical profession. His success in the profession has been attributed to his willingness to always see the other fellow's viewpoint.

Mr. Denison announces the following additional appointments at Detroit: Harry Manning in charge of the advertising and poster departments, and G. N. Shield, formerly with V-L-S-E in Kansas City, as assistant; George Almardt, formerly with the Triangle exchange in Buffalo, as manager of the short reel program; Will M. Elliott as manager of the new publicity department, which is already working out some wonderful stunts for the exhibitors; and Jack Loranger and C. C. Pippin as Michigan traveling representatives. Mr. Loranger was formerly with the Casino Feature Film Company, while Mr. Pippin comes from the Mutual.

IT WOULD BE A SHAME TO "KID" THIS STORY ABOUT THE ELEPHANT GETTING HIS TOE NAILS MANICURED —SO WE AIN'T GOING TO

ANIMALS are not unlike human beings in that they have ailments and need attention from specialists, and this is particularly true of the beasts of the jungle when in confinement. Therefore, it frequently happens that Rex de Rosselli, superintendent of the zoo at Universal City, has what he calls "a mending day."

At least once a year the toe-nails of an elephant have to be trimmed and he must also be scraped and his skin thoroughly oiled. Sometimes, too, the tusks have to be filed. When an elephant is kept in confinement and does not get the amount of walking required in native haunts the toe-nails grow long and turn inward, causing sores. Therefore it is necessary to trim them at stated periods. Charlie, the Universal elephant, does not enjoy the process but nevertheless Rosselli and his assistant, J. A. Futrelle, perform the operation. Then the entire body is scraped with a wire brush, which is followed by a coat of oil over the entire skin.

Monkeys are quarrelsome, and often the men at the zoo are called upon to repair wounds after a battle in one of the cages.

The lions while loose in the big wooded arena frequently get splinters in their feet and these must be extracted.

A few days ago a black diamond rattlesnake was brought to the zoo. Rosselli performed the operation of removing the poison sack from its mouth and it is now destined to become an actor.

OPTIMISTIC VIEW OF AMERICAN PREPAREDNESS TAKEN BY "UNCLE SAM AWAKE"

"UNCLE SAM, AWAKE," a feature production emphasizing the strength of the American Army and Navy, which is being handled by the firm of Hiller and Wilk, Inc., 924 Longacre Building, New York City, is now being booked on the state rights basis. The picture is now enjoying a run at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, where it was booked for an indefinite period, to follow "Civilization." So good an impression has it made with the clientele of this house that the selling agents, Hiller and Wilk, Inc., are now negotiating for a Broadway house which they expect to procure for the presentation of "Uncle Sam, Awake," within two weeks.

In this production the critics of the American fighting forces are given their answer. They are shown the activities of the United States Government along the lines of preparedness, just how the military and naval institutions have been brought up to their present war footing, and just what protection citizens can look for in the event of trouble.

Recruiting officers in cities where the picture is booked have been advised to get in touch with the theatre to work in conjunction with the management to stimulate recruiting. Exhibitors in many localities have been quick to realize the opportunities presented by this voluntary co-operation of the government, and as a result application for state rights are coming in fast.

The producers of the picture received the official sanction of the Adjutant General of the Army in making the scenes, which gave them entrée into all army posts and assured them of every assistance.

HERALD FILM COMPANY MAKES FLAT RATE OF FIFTY DOLLARS A DAY FOR "AROUND THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS"

L. ROSENGARTEN, president of the Herald Film Company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, who is releasing the Jules Verne feature, "Around The World In Eighty Days," has adopted the plan of advertising the feature to exhibitors at a flat price, fifty dollars a day. Any exhibitor contracting for a week's run is immediately given a first-run print. Exhibitors taking the film for less than one week, get second, third and fourth runs, depending upon the number of days contracted for.

After all the territory in certain sections of the country, especially the larger cities, has been covered the film will be sold outright at a figure to conform to the territory to be covered. The advantage in this method it is claimed is that exhibitors in small and medium sized cities can secure first-run films, which they cannot do under existing methods.

SALES MANAGER OF ROTHACKER BACK IN CHICAGO

Special to Motion Picture News.

Chicago, Sept. 23.

W. H. PHILLIPPI, sales manager of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, returned yesterday from his New York business trip, but at once returned to attend some special conferences.

A Rothacker camera crew under the direction of Wesley Smith has just finished a series of industrials in Detroit and Flint, Michigan.

Edward Linden, in charge of another crew, leaves tomorrow for a trip to Killdeer, N. D., where he will superintend the filming of the fall round-up.

Harry Birch, heading a camera crew, is now in San Francisco getting some industrial and scenic film for the Rothacker concern.

W. B. Klingensmith, who has just completed a contract for the Illinois National Guard on the border, will remain in Mexico with his crew to cover additional contracts there.

W. B. Miller has just returned with his crew from Kansas City, where they photographed the Dairy Show.

MACAULEY OPENS FORUM TO BRING PUBLIC MEN TO PEOPLE VIA THE SCREEN

TO bring the personalities of men who serve the people in important positions of trust intimately close to the vast public whose destinies they control is the object recently accomplished by C. R. Macauley, whose cartoons in the New York World were internationally known. Mr. Macauley secured the consent of President Wilson anl all the members of his Cabinet to pose before the Motion Picture Forum camera in a remarkably effective series of cinema portrait studies.

Other distinguished men who have been filmed for the present generation and for posterity are ex-President William H. Taft, Col. E. M. House, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, David Lubin, the celebrated internationalist, and many others of equal prominence before the public.

The forum idea has been endorsed in letters to Mr. Macauley by Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor; Lee Ochs, President of the Exhibitors' League of America; David W. Griffith, leading director of photo productions of the world, and many other men in public life.

WEST NOW MAKING FIVE-REEL KAY-BEES

RAYMOND B. WEST, Thomas H. Ince's chief assistant director on "Civilization," has gone back to the production of five reel Kay-Bee subjects and recently staged what is believed to be the first night railroad smashup ever finished. For this he secured two old engines, dressed them for the picture, placing a battery of cameramen with telescopic lenses on their machines alongside the track and gave the signal for the engines to be started.

The trains came together more than a hundred feet from the spot where the arc lamps had been stationed and it was at first thought that the cameras had failed to secure pictures of the smashup. On developing the film it was discovered that the thrill had registered in solid black and white. Three hundred and more extras took part in this scene, which was made for a picture featuring Dorothy Dalton, Enid Markey and Howard Hickman.

One Reason Why Exhibitors Should Know Their Public

THE editorial is an interesting one:

"Stroke of Paralysis,
"Attempted Assault,
"Fourteen Violent Deaths,
"Arson.

"The above list suggests the recapitulation of the combined hospital and crimes auditor of the state Department of Prisons.

"But it isn't.

"It is the actual count of 'thrills' in a film shown last week in Buffalo's best and largest picture theatre.

"And to quite grasp the terribleness of it all the imaginative must punctuate the above fatalities with pistol and rifle shots—even heavy ordnance—fired with terrifying frequency and deadly accuracy.

"The quality of melodrama seems to be a small thing to quarrel about or to excite controversy.

"Nevertheless, we have positive knowledge of three young children who saw the film in question and all night they peopled the far corners of the nursery with bloody Mexican bandits, "bad men" and gun-playing soldiers. All this with such consequent damage to their nervous system that one is moved to wonder what kind of a race of people we will have if such attacks are made on the nerve centers in childhood.

"The exhibitor's reply to this is: 'If you don't like it, don't pay to see it.'

"This restriction would we gladly comply with, were it not for the exhibitor's deception.

"What advance knowledge has the public that a film isn't fit for a savage to see?

"And the surprising fact is that none of the exhibitors have been taken at their word: 'If you don't like it, don't pay to see it.'

"The wonder is that the challenge hasn't occasioned a boycott long since, and a diversion of patronage to some theatre that promises decent pictures and keeps its promise.

"Is it because no exhibitors dare to break away from the combine of thrills, or just because they haven't the inclination?

"Who'll be the first to test the temper of the public with decent offerings that a decent public will pay decently to see?"

SUCH is the editorial launched against Buffalo's largest photoplay house presenting one of the largest company's programs. The writer of the above editorial assures Motion Picture News that before writing it he received ten letters, drawing attention to the picture in question, and as many more after its publication commending the view it expressed.

Tabloid Reviews for the Busy Exhibitor

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM SERVICE

"Peter, the Hermit." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Sept. 26.)—This comedy-drama not shown for review; the story follows. Peter Dudley, a young college professor suffering from overwork, joins a band of hoboes in order to lead a healthy life. He organizes the tramps, and gets them to work in a lumber camp, electing himself their boss. He later rescues Vivian, the daughter of the lumber magnate, from drowning. She investigates his past life and finds that he is the author of a book on ants that has become a best seller. She tells him that he should collect his royalties. He does this, and marries Vivian. In the cast are John Junior, Harry Dunkinson, and Nell Craig.

"Dreamy Dud Has a Laugh on the Boss." (Essanay. Split reel. Wed., Sept. 27.)—Animated cartoons by Wallace Carlson share the reel with Western scenic.

"Twin Fates." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Sept. 30.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"One Step Too Far." (Kalem. Tues., Oct. 3.)—In this single-reel comedy, Ham and Bud first appear as amateurs in a 10-20-30 house. Bud wins a prize and after the performance Ham and Bud quarrel over the prize and are both arrested. Ham is made a policeman and Bud, rejected from the force, meets a fair damsel and they both become burglars. They are in the act of hauling away silverware from an old man's house, when the police are notified and Ham is on the job as a pillar of the law. He nabs Bud and his fair partner red-handed and has them placed in the lock-up. Ham then lines his hat and coat with silverware. At the station house, while he is being awarded a medal for his bravery, the silverware falls to the floor and Ham joins his friends behind the bars.

"Stolen Plumage." (Kalem. Fri., Oct. 6.)—This single-reel Ivy Close comedy, written by Louis B. Gardner, has several pleasing bits of fun. It deals with a supposed hero who tells of his wonderful bravery in Africa. While there he procures two plumes from a sacred chicken and is followed to America, where the plumes are recovered by their owner. Ivy Close has a pleasing way and Henry Murdoch does his bit of comedy well. Others in the cast are Arthur Albertson, Mary Taylor-Ross and William McKey. The picture is well staged, with clear photography and good lighting.

"The Blocked Track." (Kalem. Sat., Oct. 7.)—An exciting episode of the "Hazards of Helen," in which Helen Gibson shows her daring and skill. Thieves have succeeded in holding up a pay car and are about to get away with their loot when Helen rushes to the scene on horseback. She is thrown from her horse and is forced to climb hand over hand on a telegraph wire and then into a high tree. There she awaits a passing train onto which she drops from her high berth. She arrives in time to find the thieves still in the pay car, and becomes master of the situation. It is a well worked-out story.

"Power of the Cross." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Sept. 25.)—Only the most unsophisticated audiences will take this production seriously. It is hard to believe that the picture was not made in a spirit of burlesque. The clothes of the players show that the picture was made some time ago, and the acting methods of the principals are a relic of a far earlier period. The religious element, although it is a mixture of Catholic, Protestant and Salvation Army beliefs, may find favor in some communities. Madge, a stenographer, is in love with Randall, a college youth. She loves luxury, and therefore marries Anderson, a rich broker. When Anderson dies, she goes to Randall to ask his love and forgiveness. She finds that he was so stunned by her marriage to Anderson that he became a Salvation Army worker. He points to the cross and says it is more powerful than love. Madge enters a nunnery. People who appear on the screen are Virginia Kirtley, Eugenie Forde, Robyn Adair and E. J. Bradley.

"The Raiders." (Selig. Sat., Sept. 30.)—This is a very improbable but exciting Western. Tom Mix and his assistants cram in their spectacular feats to a lavish extent. If Westerns are popular in your house, this number will get by well. In Mix's support are Victoria Forde, Sid Jordan, and Pat Chrisman. Tom Gardner, a Texas ranger, is looking around the border for Mexican raiders. The band eludes him and attacks a wagon containing Vicky, Tom's sweetheart, and her father. The besieged couple are about to surrender when Tom comes to the rescue and kills off the raiders. Tom and Vicky decide to get married right away.

"The Web of Guilt." (Ninth Episode in "The Girl from 'Frisco" series. Kalem. Wed., Oct. 4.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"In the House of the Chief." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Oct. 2.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Canhyhill Outlaws." (Selig. Sat., Oct. 7.)—This is an unusually good Western that can be unhesitatingly recommended for any house where Westerns are playing. It is crammed with action from start to finish, introducing innumerable riding, shooting and other cowboy feats. Tom Mix directed and takes the lead. In his support are Victoria Forde, Pat Chrisman and Joe Ryan.

Tom Wall is the deputy sheriff of a woolly Western county. Both he and the sheriff are in love with Vicky, a ranchman's daughter. One day the sheriff sends Tom to capture the notorious Canbyhill outlaws. Tom finally trails the desperadoes and finds that they have captured Vicky. He captures the gang and the leader tells him that they are in league with the sheriff. To prove this he shows Tom a note from the sheriff saying that Tom is to be in the neighborhood and that he must be shot. Tom kills the double-crossing sheriff and then goes to marry Vicky.

"An Old-Fashioned Girl." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Oct. 3.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Much to her father's delight, Jane Galvin refuses to marry the society idler her mother had picked for her. Jane goes to the mountains, where she meets Barth, a young civil engineer. Both are wealthy, but she poses as a simple mountain girl, and he pretends to be a struggling surveyor. They fall in love, and then discover each other's identity. Jane's father, who has seen some of Barth's work, enthusiastically consents to their marriage, and the mother is finally won over.

The cast is composed of Marguerite Clayton, Patrick Calhoun, John Cossar, Florence Oberle and Ullrich Haupt.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Movie Struck." (Cub. Fri., Sept. 22.)—This is rather an amusing comedy featuring George Ovey and Claire Anderson. There is abundant brick-throwing, but otherwise there is not too much slapstick. Jerry and Tess, his sweetheart, have sundry adventures while visiting a studio in search of an opportunity to star in the "movies." Some of the situations are fairly funny and will please the average audience.

"Reel Life." (Gaumont. Thurs., Sept. 21.)—This is Number 21 and is going to make a stir. It opens with an "armless wonder" that might better have been termed a "handless wonder," who holds a pen between the two stumps and writes. The closing number shows chicken-raising by up-to-date methods. But what is going to make a hit is the part devoted to palmistry. Different hands are shown on the screen. On the left is a model with the lines of the palm being slowly traced upon it, while on the right is shown a human hand of the type being explained. As the life lines, head lines and heart lines are being explained the average person is going to look at his or her hand as the case may be; but when the "chain" head line is shown with the explanation that "this shows many love affairs and infidelity," some of the young folks, and the old folks too, are going to do some "explaining" to their side partners if their hands show any such marking. This picture is certainly going to make any audience "sit up and take notice."

"Her Final Choice." (Centaur. Sat., Sept. 23.)—This title was originally "The Father of Her Child," and the story is of the "Enoch Arden" type, featuring Ethel Calvert. Marrying the town "Beau Brummel," who is an idle good-for-nothing, she rejects the village blacksmith who loves her. Her husband runs off to sea and is reported dead, but returns after ten years. In the meantime she has married the blacksmith and on her first husband's return is undecided as to which one she loves. Her child finally shows her the right road and she learns that its father the blacksmith is her final choice. Though the plot is hackneyed the film is well acted, has good photography, interesting situations, and will please the average audience.

"Fantomas." (Gaumont. Three reels. Fifth Episode.)—This last episode in the Fantomas series entitled "The False Magistrate," excels in mystery, intrigue and clever plotting. Fantomas pursued by a detective, bent on arresting him for various crimes, successfully eludes the sleuth and assumes the place of a judge whom he previously had killed. In this position he acts as representative of the law in a big robbery case, finally securing the booty of the crooks for himself and escaping. Victor Navarre continues in the all-powerful title-role.

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.

"Heine and the Four Hundred." (Starlight.)—In this Mittenthal comedy, Heine appears minus the support of Louie. He has, however, the assistance of a pretty little ingenue, a type of player that always adds much to any comedy. There is something said about rough house in one of the sub-titles, and this aptly describes the entire reel. No story, but much rough house and much of it humorous.

"Luke's Speedy Club Life." (Rolin.)—Luke is chief bell hop in a club, and his experiences with all the members are some of the most humorous that he has undergone in these comedies. The new stunts devised by the producer are truly uproarious, and the good part about it is that one is sprung every few feet or so.

"U. S. Customs Inspection." (Educational.)—One of the most interesting educational releases in a long time is this reel, which shows the U. S. Customs inspection of liquors, tobaccos, watches, jewelry and teas. It is instructive and very entertaining.

Pathe News, No. 77. (Sat., Sept. 23.)—Civilian Naval Consulting Board, Washington, D. C.; victims of Zeppelin, wrecked in England, buried with military honors, London; polo contest, Bala, Pa.; preparing for German merchant submarine, New London, Conn.; cartoon by C. W. Morris; hop crop, Perkins, Cal.; sailors give exhibition, Chicago, Ill.; dogs used in English fire department, London; Wisconsin state fair, Milwaukee; scenes relative to the increase of the country's merchant marine.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"A Mountain Tragedy." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Oct. 7.)—A story in which a putty blower manipulated by a child proves of value in putting to route a vagabond who has attacked his mother, has been picturized here with better than average results. The light incidents of the first reel firmly plant the characters, while the second part is devoted to the working out of an exciting denouement, very impossible but interesting nevertheless. Calder Johnstone prepared the scenario for George Cochrane's direction. Marjorie Ellison, Zoe Rae, Buster Emmons and Burton Law are the leads.

"In the Heart of New York." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Oct. 3.)—This picture combines melodrama and light romance in about even proportions and makes an acceptable release even though some of its situations are strained. It was written by William Addison Lathrop and produced by Ben Wilson. The cast includes Wilson, Paul Panzer, William Welsh, Charles Ogle, Dixie Compton and Edna Hunter.

"The Eternal Way." (Big U. Thurs., Oct. 5.)—Written and directed by Clifford Elfelt, the sole redeeming feature of this reel is its scenes

DAYS OF OLD

FOREIGN COUNTRIES

This colossal picture is indeed the epic of early California.

San Francisco Chronicle.

All the pretentious claims made for this splendid picture drama are entirely justified. . . . . It is in a larger sense an epic of America. . . . . Tense sustained interest grips through the ten reels.

San Francisco Call.

SENSATIONAL

THUS

"Truth is stranger than fiction".

Gold leaped so rapidly into the laps of its seekers that ordinary wealth became commonplace. In five short years one billion two hundred million dollars worth of gleaming yellow metal was taken from California's bosom.

Thus men climbed to the highest and drifted to the lowest forms of life, according as their varied natures might be swayed by the finding of or the failure to find gold.

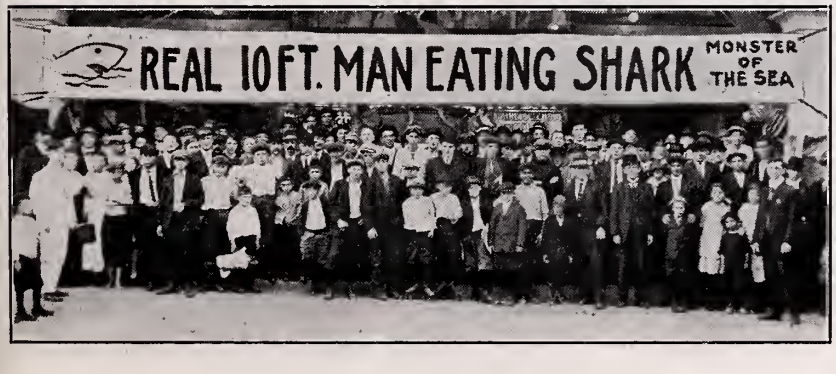
DR. VICTOR PRINCE--- 1457 BROADWAY---NEW YORK.

Titanic pictures 4 years ago broke our records until your man-eating shark Friday smashed everything to pieces including front boxoffice railing. Beauty part about it is public willing pay quarter admission. Could you guarantee landing live shark here? Could charge 50 cents or dollar. Wire lowest price two more outfits like ours.

Chas E. Perey, Mgr. Noname Theatre, 1025 Canal.



The public everywhere is crazy to see a Man-Eating Shark, since the daily papers of the entire country have been full of front page news of MAN-EATING SHARKS, which have eaten up and killed so many bathers this summer, and terrorized the entire Atlantic Coast

Look! $813.75 in One Day

See What the "Live Wires" Are Doing

Bona Fide Offer. You rent a store as small as 7 x 15 feet for exhibiting one of my man-eating sharks, with the big, flashy and sensational front display, and you will SEE THE MONEY ROLL IN AS IF BY MAGIC. After a week or a month, move to another location. This world is awful large. And I positively guarantee you that you can't produce an attraction at twice my price which will take in one-tenth as much quick, clear money in a day or week, or month as my embalmed shark. I mean CLEAR PROFIT.

No. 1—For $100 will ship you a real 6 to 8 ft. Man-Eating Shark, perfectly preserved and embalmed just as it comes out of the water, to keep indefinitely like a human body. We also furnish a 24-sheet Man-Eating Shark Poster, in beautiful colors. Total weight of outfit, about 300 lbs.

No. 2 SPECIAL—For $300 will ship you a 10 to 15 ft. MONSTER Man-Eating Shark, perfectly preserved and embalmed in a PLATE GLASS DISPLAY CASE, hermetically sealed, nice enough for your parlor, and in clear white embalming fluid, in which THE SHARK FLOATS AS IF ALIVE AND SWIMMING IN THE SEA, and 10 gallons of my special fluid to keep the case always full. Also a beautiful 10 x 15 ft. special hand-painted oiled banner in flashy, sensational colors, showing the shark eating up a man. Also 1000 two-color hand bills and 100 ½ sheet window cards in two colors, big photographs, etc. Will also furnish large 100-lb. live turtle, also shark jaws, and other deep sea curiosities for ballyhoo attractions. Total weight of outfit, about 500 lbs.

TERMS—DEPOSIT OF ONE-HALF must come with the order. I guarantee to fill all orders from 1 to 5 days after received. I have best references. Do not bother us unless you have the cash to do quick business. Write, wire or call.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

and photography. The acting is good, but the story carries little interest and finishes in a manner not at all satisfactory. Vola Smith, Mae Hill, Ed Brown, Charles Gunn and G. Raymond Nye are the principals.

"Father Gets in Wrong." (Joker. Sat., Oct. 7.)—Allen Curtis fell way down on this Joker. It shows the father's flirtations with his son's beloved and his final chastisement by his wife. There are some individual scenes that will evoke laughter, but as a whole the picture is flat. The usual Joker cast appears.

"Somewhere on the Battlefield." (Universal Special. Two reels. Fri., Oct. 6.)—Written and directed by Hobart Henley, this war picture is good enough to be extensively featured by the program exhibitor. It tells of the romance of an army doctor, who is a spy for the opposition, and his assistant, a nurse. It is produced well and there is great suspense as the result of the doctor's real identity. It is, however, improbable that a doctor should stand and mourn the loss of a patient, especially in a war hospital when men are dying every day. Save for the introduction of these petty and out of place emotions the picture is convincingly realistic. Hobart Henley and Claire McDowell are the leads, while William Welsh and Roy Stewart are in other important parts.

"With the Spirits Help." (Nestor. Mon., Oct. 2.)—The Nestorites have relied on one of their stock plots to put this comedy over. It is a real good one although its contents are known to all. It concerns the adventures of a pseudo hypnotist in a house where a boy and girl are eloping. The hypnotist is scared out of his wits by the noises made by the runaway pair. Lee Moran in character and Eddie Lyons and Priscilla Dean as the lovers are the principals.

"The Inspector's Double." (Joker. Sat., Sept. 30.)—William Beaudine directed the old Joker cast in this comedy and has not made a picture up to the usual standard of this company. Mixed identity is the basis of the plot and the sameness of the situations is liable to tire the spectator. Franey, Henry, Peacock, Conklin and Moranti are in the cast.

As A Society Leader, In

The Power of Evil

By George Bronson Howard

Finds Her Rival To Be

A Woman Of The Streets

An inherited taste for drink leads the man she loves into dives of the lowest order. "The other woman" sets him straight again and he goes back to marry his Society Sweetheart. But Drink and his other Love call—then comes a Story of absorbing, throbbing, thrilling interest.

YET NONE CAN MISS THE LESSON—

"The Power of Evil" is Drink

It is the Power at the bottom of all Human miseries—at the elbow of crooks and murderers. It is the betrayer of the white slaver's victim—the degenerate millionaire, and every unfortunate in the wide World between, can lay his or her downfall directly, or indirectly, to this terrible Curse.

THE LATE MODEL MOTIOGRAPH

—In Performance

It can boast of clear, steady pictures on long or short throw, its simplicity is spoken of by all its operators.

—On LOW Maintenance Cost

You don't find die cast or bronze gears or soft bearings in the MOTIOGRAPH. Every part is made from selected material—parts most subject to wear receive a Special Heat Treatment and with ordinary use the MOTIOGRAPH will outwear all other projectors.

—SERVICE

With each MOTIOGRAPH goes a year's guarantee and should the machine with no apparent cause become out of adjustment you may send the mechanism to the factory—it will be put in good working order with not one cent of cost to you.

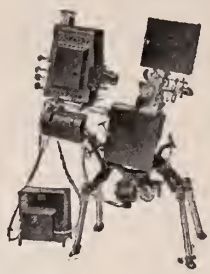
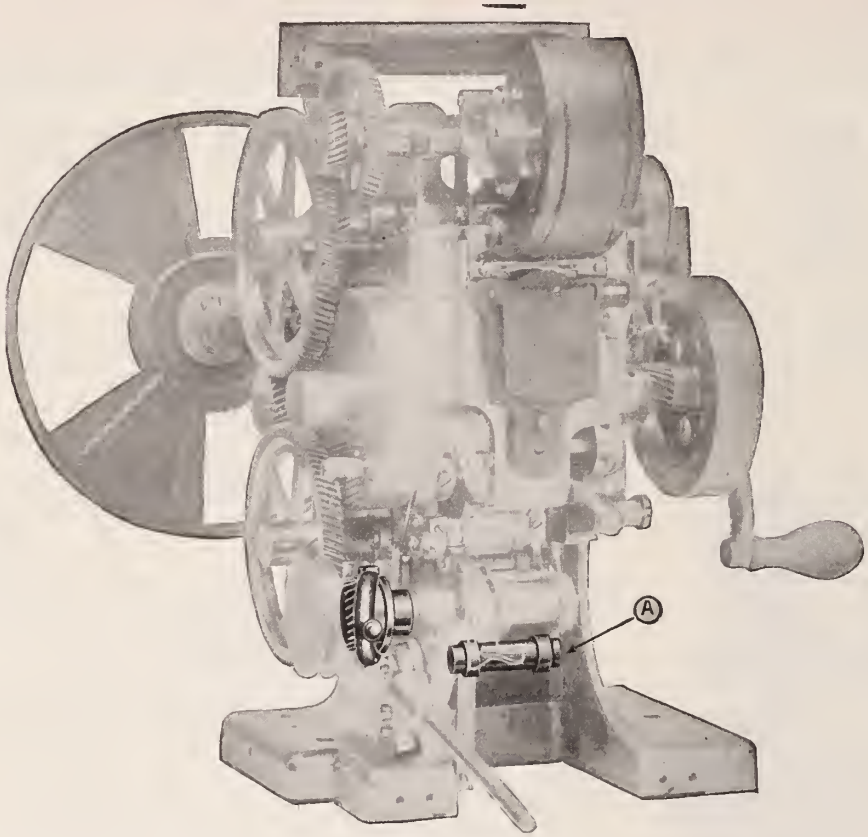
POWER'S LOOP SETTER



AUTOMATICALLY PREVENTS LOSS OF THE LOWER LOOP

THUS ELIMINATING THE MOST FREQUENT CAUSE OF TROUBLE IN MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION

A DEVICE AS SIMPLE AS IT IS EFFECTIVE

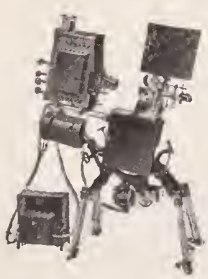


AN EXCLUSIVE FEATURE OF POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH

When the lower loop is lost, the film necessarily rips or tears apart. While making repairs an impatient audience is entertained by a dark screen.

Power's Automatic Loop Setter eliminates this constant source of trouble by continuously maintaining the lower loop.

The loop forms around roller A. Any slackening of the loop draws the roller upward, thus disengaging the take up. The loop immediately assumes normal proportions. The roller springs into its original position and the take up again starts to operate.



You should have our Catalogue D which gives complete details of many exclusive features.

The Projection Room

WE are receiving a considerable number of letters from prospective theatre builders who ask various questions about construction. The main trouble, however, seems to be how, when the theatre is finished, can the best picture be guarantetd on the screen.

Let's go back to the history of the picture theatre. There are two distinct styles of house, as we see them—(1) The store front house and its development; (2) The converted legitimate house and its development.

IN the first style we find the old show window of a store on the street removed and a lobby built, in back of which were chairs or benches and over the entrance was the projection coop, the screen being placed at the further end, practically on a line with the machine. This developed gradually till we now find many fine houses, from four hundred to one thousand seats, all on the ground level, with a picture which cannot be criticised, providing the proper projection equipment and screen are installed.

* * *

TO this style was added in some cases a small balcony which was an adoption from the second class of house and put in because of the added seating capacity—in order that there might be more of a price distinction or for some other reason demanded by the locality of the house.

IN both these instances the projection room—which naturally became larger—was kept as nearly as possible on a line so that all distortion and other unnecessary projection troubles were eliminated.

The second class of house which was never built or planned for pictures is entirely different. When it was put up pictures had never been thought of, yet because it was there the owners wanted to realize on it—with the same result as usually comes when the proverbial square plug is fitted to the round hole. The seating capacity was there, the house was comfortable, but the picture which is in the last analysis the thing sold to the public was not there, as it must be if it is to pull the public.

THE advancement in this style of house as new ones were built was slow. Architects who put them up were working for people with plenty of money and therefore the object was beauty and attractiveness—which was attained. The projection, with a few exceptions, was not improved. In the old houses the projection rooms were tucked away among the rafters or above them—the picture was never given a chance. Yet again that is what is being sold and is the only excuse for the house being there.

UNFORTUNATELY a good projection room is the exception in this class of house which is copied by many new builders. An architect is a necessity—yes, but if he is ignorant on the picture question he must be taught before he wastes his time and your money. He will strive for artistic effects, pleasing approaches, effective decorations, and after he has got all done, according to his artistic sense, the question will come up as to where the projection apparatus is to be placed. His answer is always, "Oh, build a loft over the top of the balcony and then hide it as much as possible." This naturally kills the pictures—it is impossible to get results.

THE picture machine and the screen must be as nearly on a level as possible. There are two ways of doing this—both of which the average large architect will fight against.

(1) Put the projection room in the front of the balcony—yes, it will probably rob the management of from twenty to thirty-five seats, but watch the box office receipts. They will not fall off; on the contrary, a picture will result which cannot help but pull the crowds, everything else being equal.

(2) Place the projection room under the balcony in the rear of the house if necessary, arching the balcony so the overhang will not interfere.

BOTH these methods will mean a real picture, for the projection will then be nearly level, just as it is in the first class house. All else in the theatre construction is subordinate to this one first consideration—make the line of projection between machine and center of the screen as nearly level as possible. Build around this thought and you will not go wrong.

A B C of the Motion Picture Operating Room

This Week the Rectifier, Another Changing Device for the Purpose of Obtaining Direct Current at the Arc When the Supply Is A. C., Is Described—Rectifier Combines Principal Advantages of Both Alternating and Direct Current

IN last week's issue we treated briefly of the transformer, known under the names of Economizer, Inductor and Compensarc, but in this article I am going to treat of the Rectifier, another current changing device for the purpose of obtaining direct current at the arc when the supply is A. C. It is necessary to remember that the voltage required at the arc on direct current is approximately 55 volts, while that for alternating current is approximately 33 volts; the current (amperage), of course, depends upon the amount of light or illumination demanded, the actual amperes required for the same illumination being from three to four times as great with alternating as with direct current. It should also be remembered that the carbon arc is subject to sudden and extreme variations of current when operated directly from a constant potential circuit.

When a sufficient amount of resistance is connected in series with the arc, satisfactory stability can be obtained because the change in voltage drop over the resistance tends to instantly counteract any variation in the current.

With a sensibly constant potential supply circuit, the direct current arc requires sufficient steadying resistance to give a voltage drop of at least 15 to 20 volts, which makes the required supply voltage about 70 to 75 volts. If the supply voltage has a sufficiently drooping characteristic, due to the special design of the generator, no steadying resistance will be needed and a normal voltage of 55 volts is sufficient.

As I have said before, the first installations took their current directly from commercial alternating or direct current power circuits, using adjustable resistance or reactances to reduce the standard line voltage to that required at the arc. More than enough such resistance or reactance to give the necessary stabilizing effect was required for voltage reduction, so that the results were quite satisfactory in that respect.

When direct current circuits of voltages higher than 110 volts had to be used, the waste of power was enormous and the heat generated in the rheostats made the operating room very uncomfortable in warm weather as well as increasing the light bills of the exhibitor.

Cutting Down Excess Voltage

The excess voltage of alternating current circuits was cut down with much less loss by means of reactance; but the use of alternating current was strictly limited by the candle power that could be obtained from a current of 60 to 70 amperes and it was also very unsatisfactory on account of the color of the light thus produced.

The economy of the alternating current projector was soon further improved by the development of adjustable voltage transformers; one of the first of which is the rectifier which as the growing demand for better and more brilliant projection was made by the exhibitor, was met in a very satisfactory manner by the standard moving picture rectifier outfit, as manufactured by the General Electric and Westinghouse companies.

The rectifier well combines the principal advantages of both alternating and direect currnt, for by its use a better quality of light was obtained with a smaller current at the arc, and the economical reduction and regulation of voltage by means of this device soon made its appeal to the exhibitor. In addition to efficiency, the absence of moving parts, noise or vibration and the fact that it required almost no attention from the operator after once being installed contributed greatly to its popularly.

I might say here that I operated one of these restifiers for a period of over seven years and in all that time I experienced absolutely no trouble whatsoever. The rectifier is one of the most simple devices to operate. It may be made to start automatically by bringing the carbons in the lamp together for an instant and then separating them the required distance. In this way the rectifier runs only during the time the arc is burning, and all losses due to running idle are eliminated. Due to the small space it requires and the entire absence of vibration, the rectifier may be installed in almost any convenient place without the necessity of providing a special foundation.

It is my recommendation that it be installed in a room adjoining, or at least readily accessible to the operating room, where the greenish light given off by the tube will not interfere with the operator's view of the screen. Many operators have the rectifier located in the operating room itself, which is detrimental to good projection, for the operating room must be as dark as possible, not only for the better projection it affords, but for the saving to the eyes of the operator.

The mercury-arc restifier has been in use in motion picture theatres for so long a time that a description of it hardly seems necessary, but for the benefit of those of my readers who are unfamiliar with it I am going to describe it briefly.

The rectifier shown in the accompanying illustration is the latest type rectifier manufactured by the General Electric Company of Schenectady, N. Y. It is equipped with a dial switch "C" for regulating the current without any loss in resistance and with two link connections B-B, located directly under the triple pole switch "A," which allows the rectifier to be used on either 110 or 220 volts by simply changing the position of the links. In the illustration the rectifier is ready for use on 220 volts; if it is desired to use it on 110 volts we would simply loosen the links and connect them to binding posts marked X-X.

The restifier is built in three current capacities; 30, 40 and 60 amperes, and are interchangeable on either 110 or 220 volts. They are also made for various frequencies, the 60 cycle rectifiers being satisfactory for 50 cycles and over, the 25 cycle rectifier being suited to frequencies up to 50 cycles. The rectifier can be furnished with or without an ammeter, or with an ammeter and voltmeter. It is always advisable, though, to have an ammeter as it gives the operator a better understanding of the action of the arc and enables him to operate more economically than he otherwise could. Some operators have become so proficient in the handling of this apparatus that they can tell by looking at the ammeter the results upon the screen, while others can tell from the position or condition rather, of the arc just how many amperes of current they are using.

Triple Pole Supplied with Outfit

The triple pole, double throw switch shown at "A" is now being supplied with all outfits and is of invaluable assistance in keeping the show going, for by its use it is possible should anything happen to the tube to continue the show by simply throwing this switch downward and operate the arc from the rectifier as an alternating current compensarc, thus taking care of any emergency that might arise.

An additional feature which is now being perfected for use on the rectifier is an auxilliary equipment whereby two pictures can be faded or "dissolved" one into the other by a very simple and automatic process. We hope to be able to more fully describe this feature in the near future, or as soon as the engineeers of the G. E. Company have brought it to the high state of perfection which they are desirous of reaching. It will cost a few dollars more, but will be worth its cost to any exhibitor who has one of the rectifier outfits.

It has been for some time the accepted notion of the operator when using a restifier outfit on two lamps, to have the lamps in multiple and when the picture on machine number one was nearly over to step to machine number two and prepare to "steal" the light from machine number one, thereby getting the "dissolving" effect, and it may be said to the credit of a great number of operators they have managed to do this in a number of instances, in a manner that has been most successful, but it requires careful handling of the lamp to get this effect, and unless an operator is always "on the job" this method of handling will prove to be a flivver.

Next week I will try and describe some of the other machines used to change alternating into direct current.

Color Photography

Spectrophotography—Use of the Spectrograph in Photographic Research Work—Different Types of Spectrographs —Determining the Color Sensitiveness of Photographic Emulsions—Spectrographic Examination of Dye-Stuffs

ALTHOUGH the spectroscope is an indispensable ally to the student or worker in color photography, it will be apparent that in some of the investigations into the photographic action of light a combination of the camera and the spectroscope is an important, if not indispensable, piece of apparatus.

As has been previously stated, a light filter can only be satisfactorily adjusted for use with a given emulsion by the aid of spectroscopic analysis. But, the proper composition of a filter cannot be definitely decided upon until the characteristics of the emulsion, and the extent of its sensitiveness to light of different wave-lengths (or colors) are known. A record of the extent to which a photographic emulsion is acted upon by light of various colors may be readily secured by exposing a plate in a camera to which a spectroscope is attached.

The Spectrograph

A combination of the camera and the spectroscope is called a spectrograph, and, as the spectrograph is a necessary adjunct to the equipment of all experimenters in color photography, we will describe some of the simpler forms of spectrographs and give a brief outline of the manner in which they are used.

The simplest form of spectrograph is the Direct Vision Prismatic Spectrograph shown in cross section by the diagram A, Fig. 7. Attached to the front of a light tight box (or an ordinary camera) is a direct vision prismatic spectroscope, S, exactly similar to the Pocket Prismatic Spectroscope described three weeks ago and illustrated at C, Fig 3. These direct vision prism instruments may be secured with a flange surrounding the eyepiece, which facilitates their attachment to the front of a camera.

For spectrographic work a Direct Vision Spectroscope having a train of five prisms (instead of 3 as in the customary pocket instrument) is generally used, because, it is found that a train of five prisms gives greater dispersion and will show more of the fixed lines than does the three prism instrument.

Just back of the eyepiece of the spectroscope, S (in the diagram A, Fig. 7) is seen the camera lens L, which produces an image of the spectrum on the photographic plate P. H is the plate-holder, arranged at the back of the camera-box, while D is the customary dark-slide with which all plate-holders are provided.

A prismatic spectrograph, as described above, will be found very interesting to experiment with, but as has been pointed out in a previous installment of this article: prismatic spectra are not normal spectra, so, naturally spectrographs employing diffraction gratings are used in practical research work.

Prism Grating Spectrograph

A simple and highly efficient form of Diffraction Spectrograph is the Prism Grating instrument shown at B, Fig. 7. B, Fig. 7, is a simplified diagram of the well known Tallent Spectrographic Camera, designed by Mr. Alex. A. K. Tallent of London and manufactured by Messrs. A. W. Penrose and Company.

At the front of the Tallent camera is an adjustable slit S. Mounted on a suitable support (within the camera) in line with the slit is a right angled prism P having a Thorp Replica Grating cemented to its hypotenuse (sloping side). Immediately in front of the Prism Grating is an achromatic collimating lens C. This collimator lens is, of course, separated from the slit by a distance equal to its principal focus.

Just back of the prism grating P is the objective lens O (also an achromat) which projects an image of the grating spectrum onto the sensitive plate located at A. As was explained last week; when a Diffraction Grating Replica is mounted to a prism the resulting spectrum can be viewed on a direct line with the collimator and object lenses—the central white image of the slit being refracted and thrown to one side by the prism.

When this deflected ray of light, from the central image of the grating spectrum, strikes the inside of the camera box it is reflected and is liable to fog the sensitive plate which is being exposed. The Tallent instrument is, therefore, provided with a partition or light trap T (lined with black velvet) into which

Projection Questions Answered

Operating Electricity

Repairing Equipment

Edited by Ira G. Sherman, Past President, Local No. 384, I. A. T. S. E.

Who will answer all questions you may send in, no matter how simple or difficult

SETTING POWER'S INTERMITTENT

Frank McManus, Corvallis, Oregon: Up to date I have not seen any articles on the motion "head;" will you please reply in the department as to how an operator should proceed to set up the intermittent on a Power's 6-B?

Ans.—The articles on the various types of projecting machines are being compiled and will appear shortly in the series under the heading of "A B C of the Motion Picture Operating Room."

I have never seen the photos you mention, but would be glad to use them if I had them for I want the operator to feel that this is his department, for nothing can be accomplished by me without the co-operation of the operator, and if I am given that I assure you I will try to do all in my power to be of assistance.

Now to answer your question. The setting of an intermittent movement is something that possibly one out of a hundred operators can do right, and while it should be sent to the factory for proper adjustment I realize that in your case this is not practicable, so I will try to explain to you as well as I can the method of doing so. On your machine, located directly opposite the fly wheel there is an eccentric bushing, while on the other end of the intermittent sprocket shaft there is a set collar; between this and the casing of the mechanism there is another bushing which has two holes to enable one to use a steel punch in making the adjustment which is done by first loosening screws that hold the bushing and set the collar in place; then inserting a punch (which can be made by cutting the hook off of a button hook and bending the remainder into a shape resembling a letter L slightly curved, taking care that the bending process is done under heat and that the hook is tempered afterward) in one of the holes while a screw driver is inserted in the slot of the bushing on the opposite side, and the two are then revolved or turned away from you until the cross is tightened against the cam.

If the geneva begins to pound or the machine runs hard you have it too tight and must slack off until the machine runs easily and with no trace of pounding. It is necessary when making this adjustment to see that both bushings are turned the same distance, otherwise the shaft will be out of alignment and you will experience the novelty of having a picture that will have a "jumpy" effect as well as causing unnecessary wear on one side of the sprocket. The use of calipers is recommended to determine whether the intermittent shaft and the cam shaft are in perfect alignment their entire length and as the two shafts are of the same diameter throughout their entire length this is not a difficult matter.

After you have set the intermittent be sure and tighten all screws so that there will be no possibility of their loosening through vibration or any other cause. See that there is no end motion in the shaft, although it is permissable to have a slight circumferential movement, but not very much. If there should be end play slack off a trifle on the screws which hold the bushings in place and with a block of wood force the intermittent sprocket and shaft toward the side of the head where the fly wheel is and then hold in place until you have loosened the screws in the set collar, moved it up against the casing and tightened it again; if it is too tight gently tap with a small hammer the end of the shaft until the machine runs freely.

If I were you I should purchase an extra framing carriage with all parts assembled, so that when you have any trouble with your intermittent it may be removed and returned to the factory for repairs, the new one being installed meanwhile.

WANTS LICENSE QUESTIONS

O. B. Bridges, secretary of an operators local in the Lone Star State: The City of ——— is going to pass an ordinance to have the motion picture machine operators licensed and we thought that perhaps you could give us the questions and answers for a good examination. We are going to have one of our men on the board and want to have everything down before the ordinance is passed so that we will be up on same.

Ans.—Speaking purely as a union man, and having in mind many things which I learned on my recent trip throughout the Middle West, I might say that the inaugurating of a license board in your City for motion picture operators is a good thing, but—what are you going to get out of it? Is it going to benefit your working conditions, making them more healthful and giving you sanitary surroundings, or is it just a political reform movement which is to benefit some bunch of petty politicians who are looking for an office where they will have but little to do and where those who have no ability but do have the cash can secure a license to operate picture machines?

The licensing of operators has proven a rank failure in some cities by reason of this very thing, but if an examination can be given that is strictly impartial there is no doubt but what it would be of benefit, for it would drive out of business the so-called "schools" where operators (?) are turned out as one would manufacture sausage, and would give to those who are by experience entitled to hold a license and perform the duties of an operator. It is absolutely impossible for any one to give a set of questions and answers which would be applicable to all cases, as you no doubt are aware from your experience on the executive board of your local, the examination must vary, for if it did not, and you were to follow some accepted form you can readily see where it would be valueless. The best method that I know of is for the members of the local to submit such questions as they think should be asked by an examining board, and from the list of questions submitted, cull out those which will prove that an operator is competent to handle the equipment that is to be placed under his care. He should have a general knowledge of electricity, its action, etc., as well as a thorough knowledge of the various types of machines, and such other apparatus as may come under his control.

I have never been in favor of a verbal examination unless it was possible to incorporate with it a practical demonstration by the applicant as to his ability, and it does not take an examiner very long to find out whether the candidate possesses ability or not. One of the greatest requirements in an operator is a cool head for upon him depends the safety of the patrons. Given a cool head and a knowledge of what to do in case of an emergency there is no reason why any of your members should not pass this coming examination with flying colors, for you are already fortified with the knowledge that you must have possessed to obtain your membership in your local.

If after reading this it should be your desire that I submit a list of questions I will be glad to do so to you direct if you enclose sufficient postage. Start in to read the "A B C of the Motion Picture Operating Room" and I believe that there you will find many suggestions.

WANTS TO BUY CARBON ECONOMIZER

Sid G. Spear, Malone, N. Y.: Where can I purchase a carbon economizer such as you described in your article "Waste in the Operating Room," published in the July 22nd issue of the News?

ANS.—The carbon economizer which I used to illustrate the article you mention was loaned to me by the Picture Theatre Equipment Company, New York City. It is known as the "Weeb Carbon Economizer," and is manufactured by the Motion Picture Specialty and Repair Company, whose advertisement appears in another column. This economizer has my heartiest endorsement for I used them myself and was very much pleased with them. When ordering be sure to state size of carbons you are using and whether you wish them for both top and bottom.

AMBERLUX FILTER MATERIALLY HELPS TO ELIMINATE EYE STRAIN

DURING my visit to Columbus, Ohio, I had the pleasure of meeting William Deshler Warner of Amberlux fame, and while I had formerly held in disfavor the Amberlux lens filter, the demonstration given me by C. B. Wilson of the Ohio State Board of Censors made me one of its converts.

Authorities on photography claim that anything which obstructs the light rays of the projection lens is harmful, in that it causes a loss of definition, and does not bring out the high lights and shadows to their best advantage. This may all be true. I am not well enough versed in the intricacies of photography to refute their claims, but this much I will say; the projection as seen in the inspection room of the board of censors on the machine in which the Amberlux filter was used was of an extra good quality. The picture lacked nothing of "definition" as far as I could see, and taken altogether the use of this filter had a most restful effect upon the eyes of the onlooker. It was to all intents and purposes obtaining the same results that is obtained by the use of a "yellow" screen.

Mr. Wilson said: "No one can appreciate the value of Amberlux except those, who like us, have to look at pictures almost continuously." As I said before, after witnessing projection on both machines (one with, and one without the Amberlux) I am ready to acknowledge that my former opinion was wrong and that the use of this filter does materially help to eliminate eye strain. And it is to the interest of the exhibitor who wants to make use of the seats down front to carefully examine into its merits, and cater to the comfort of his patrons.

NO TOWN TOO SMALL FOR POWERS' PROJECTION MACHINE

HAVING just returned from a visit to the Speer Carbon Company, a detailed description of which will be found on another page, I was very much surprised to see on exhibition in the window of the Ridgway Electric Light Company, Ridgway, Pa., a Powers' 6-B machine with a banner on which were the following words:

POWERS' 6-B
A M E R A G R A P H.
The Best Moving Picture Machine in the World.
Takes First Prize at the Panama Exposition.
To be This installed in——— NEW ORPHEUM THEATRE ——— City
Go to the NEW ORPHEUM for perfect projection.
To be opened soon.

This appeared to me as a pretty good advertising stunt, and from the curiosity displayed by those who were gazing at the machine, it made me feel as though the New Orpheum was going to have a record-breaking crowd on its opening night, and if the management puts on good, clean shows there is no reason why the success of this theatre should not be assured.

UNION ANNOUNCEMENTS

LOCAL 355, I. A. T. S. E.

THE Sioux City Moving Picture Machine Operators, Local 355., of Sioux City, Iowa, have elected the following officers for the coming year:

President, Fred Burr; Vice-President, Clair Hilgers; Secretary-Treasurer, Carl Gilbert; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Ecky Sternberger; Business Agent, Robert Marksbury; Sergeant-at-Arms, Fred Hard.

Meetings of the above local are held on the first and third Wednesday of every month at Labor Temple. First Wednesday meeting is held at 8:30 A. M. Third Wednesday meeting at 11:30 P. M.

The address of Secretary-Treasurer Gilbert is P. O. Box. 834.

LOCAL 330, I. A. T. S. E.

The officers and committees for local 330, Fort Worth, Texas, for the ensuing twelve months are as follows: President, V. Wood; Vice-President, D. P. Dodd; Recording and Corresponding Secretary, W. M. Lee; Financial Secretary, L. D. Spranger; Treasurer, R. M. Wilman; Trustees, J. J. Langlois, Jno. H. Sparks and J. J. Hill; Guard, F. H. Bates; Business Agent, D. P. Dodd; Assistant Business Agent, W. M. Lee.

The business committee of the local consists of brothers Dodd, Lee and Wood. Examining board, brothers Lee, Willman and Sparks. Card Inspector, S. A. Austin. Press Committee, C. M. Fox, L. Friedman; Delegate to I. A. Convention, V. Wood, W. M. Lee, alternate. Delegate to the Texas State Federation of Labor, same as to the I. A. Convention.

All of the theaters in Ft. Worth, with the exception of the Isis theater have signed the contracts of the local, as have the theatres of Cleburne, Tex., which is under the jurisdiction of this local and everything is running along harmoniously for Local 330; they have the best wage scale in the State and the Eight Hour Day in effect.

All of its members are working and find time to do some extra work occasionally. The organization is 100 per cent. strong and expect to bring the Isis in line shortly. No doubt they will for they claim to be wide-awake and progressive, and always try to do better for themselves and their local.

My compliments to you, gentlemen, I believe that if you display half the progressiveness with the Isis that you displayed in your letter to me you will win this house over in short order. Managers are beginning to realize that the employment of union operators is to their advantage, and the manager of the Isis can hardly be an exception for his patrons number in the majority working men and women, and it is through your appeal to them that he is bound to come across. For your kind wishes to myself I extend my sincere thanks, and hope that I may hear shortly that you have all houses in your jurisdiction unionized.

LOCAL 181, I. A. T. S. E.

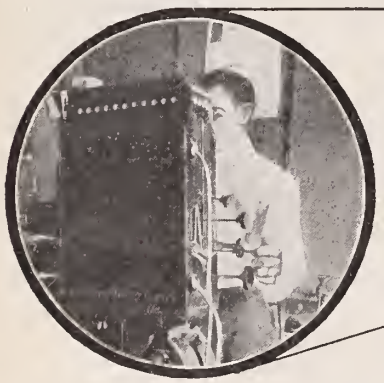
The Moving Picture Operators' Protective Union Local 181, of Baltimore, Md., sends tickets for a Grand Danse that is to be tendered by that local to the delegates of the American Federation of Labor who are to hold their convention in that city beginning on November 13.

This "Danse" is to be given in lieu of the Annual Ball of the local which is held in January of each year, and it is promised that this affair will surpass anything ever before attempted by Local 181.

Accept my thanks for the tickets, and if I can possibly arrange to do so I will try and be present on the evening of November 15, when the "Danse" is to be given. In the meantime let me say that I hope this affair will far exceed your expectations and that "you all" will have an enjoyable and profitable time.

PARAMOUNT HOUSE IN PITTSBURGH INSTALLS $12,000 ORGAN

MR. DEMAS of the Minerva theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., at which Paramount pictures are shown exclusively, is installing a $12,000 pipe organ. The instrument will be one of the largest and finest pipe organs in western Pennsylvania, embodying the most advanced ideas in organ construction.



Seeing is Believing

You, of course, want a perfect, continuous white light on your screen. You don't want any flickering or unevenness of light you get from hand-feed, shown in top picture.

So sure are we that it will satisfy your most exacting demand for a perfect, continuous, shadowless, exactly focused, automatically maintained white light on your screen, we will send you the

with a positive guaranty that if it isn't satisfactory in every respect, we will take it back at our expense and return you your money. We want you to put it to the test of actual trial in your own operating booth, attached to your own lamp house, see it do its perfect work independent of manual care, as shown in right hand picture, and then decide. We want you to see how much better pictures it makes; what a good talking point it is for you and your house. Better pictures, you know, mean better patronage and that means more money in the box for you. Fits any standard lamp house. Any operator can understand it. Write today. this light ray falls. This non-reflecting pocket prevents the deflected central ray from setting up reflections within the camera which would fog the plate.

At the front of the Spectrograph shown at B, Fig. 7, will be noticed two panels, or supports, D and E. D is a support (with an opening in the center) upon which may be mounted a dry filter, a cell of colored dye solution, or any other transparent medium whose transmission it is desired to photograph. The other support E, Fig. 7, contains a condensing lens G which is used to concentrate the rays from whatever light source is being used and focus a strong beam of light upon the slit of the spectrograph. While these attachments D F and E G are not shown in the diagram A, Fig. 7, they form part of the necessary equipment of all spectrographs. Many spectrographs also have grooves for holding another light filter close to the slit. This is a handy feature, because, sometimes, when working with artificial light an extra filter must be used to make the spectral composition of the light source approximate daylight in quality.

Plotting a Plate-Curve

The foregoing descriptions will serve to give our readers an idea of the arrangements and action of a Spectrograph—so we will now proceed to a description of the interesting process of determining the color sensitiveness of an emulsion (or plate).

This is most generally expressed by a diagrammatic chart or "spectrum curve" with which our readers are, doubtless, familiar as many such plotted curves have been published, in connection with articles on orthochromatic or color photography.

Formerly the color sensitiveness curve of an emulsion was obtained by making an exposure (in a spectrograph) to a spectrum. We may represent the photographic result by A, Fig. 8.

The densities in the various regions of the resulting spectrum negative were then measured—either by visual estimation or by the use of some form of photometer—and a curve plotted upon ruled paper. Thus a result was secured similar to B, Fig. 8.

As there are chances of error in such procedure it was found desirable to secure, in some way, an actual photographic representation of the curve of color sensitivity. This may be done with the spectrograph and an example of a photographed curve, or Spectrogram, is shown at C, Fig. 8.

Arrangements of the Spectrograph

Before explaining how a Spectrogram is produced there are some other considerations, regarding the spectrograph proper, to be disposed of. We will assume that a Diffraction Spectrograph is to be used. When it is desired to produce spectrograms the spectrograph must first be provided with a scale-plate, similar to that shown at D, Fig. 8. In preparing a scale-plate a line spectrum (showing the principal Frauenhofer lines) must first be photographed. Using this as a pattern a transparent glass scale-plate is ruled having the principal spectrum lines spaced exactly as are the photographed lines. This scale-plate is placed in front of the sensitive plate when making an exposure, and the lines thus impressed on the resulting spectrogram serve to identify the various spectral regions. The scale-plate is also ruled with a series of transverse lines the use of which will be mentioned presently.

Ultra-Violet Filter Necessary

When making exposures with a diffraction spectrograph there is one thing which must be compensated for and that is the overlap of the ultra-violet of the second order spectrum into the red of the first order spectrum.

This overlap was not shown in our diagram of the spectra produced by a diffraction grating (A, Fig. 4) which appeared two weeks ago, as we were then considering the visual examination of the spectrum with the spectroscope. When examining the spectrum produced by a grating in the spectroscope, a dark area is noticed between the first and second order spectra. As a matter of fact, however, all of the spectra produced by a grating overlap one another, but this overlap between the first and second order spectra occurs in the ultra-violet of the second spectrum and the infra-red of the first spectrum and is, therefore, not noticeable in visual work, because ultra-violet and infra-red rays are not visible to the eye.

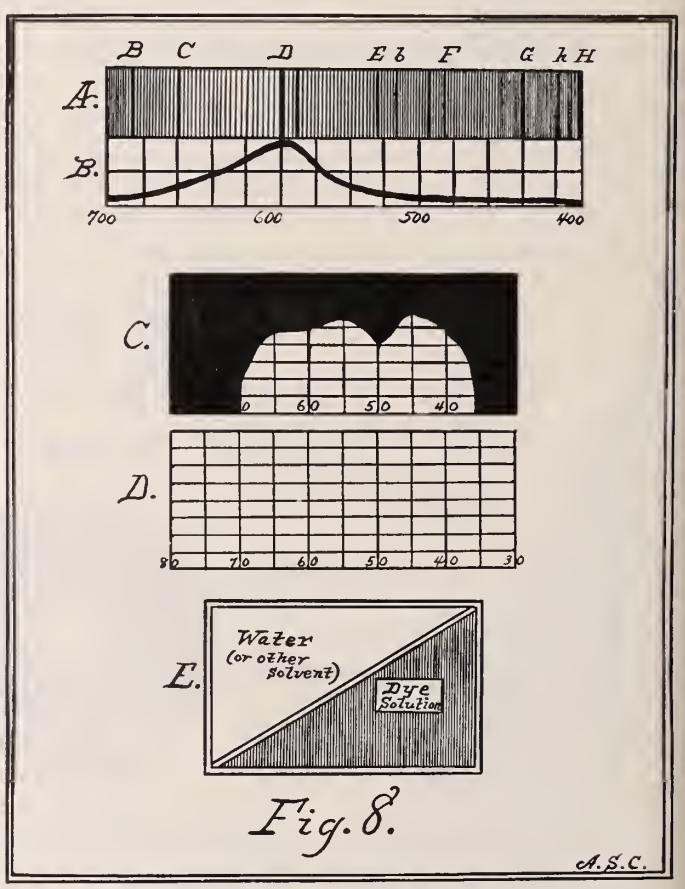

Fig. 8.

As is well known, the ultra-violet region of the spectrum strongly affects the photographic plate, and this fact would be apparent in the results produced with a grating spectrograph unless some means were taken to screen off the ultra-violet where it overlaps the red of the first order spectrum. It will, therefore, be found necessary to attach a gelatine filter which absorbs the ultra-violet to one side of the scale-plate before proceeding to make spectrograms.

Method of Making Spectrograms

Belin, a Frenchman, seems to have first suggested a method by which the color sensitiveness curve of a plate could be photographed. His plan was to decrease the length of the spectrograph slit by a variable aperture during exposure. This he accomplished by rotating a small disc leaving openings of increasing size, before the slit while exposure was in progress.

Belin's method has been improved upon by R. J. Wallace who uses a small disc or sector wheel having a series of openings whose width increases in geometrical proportion. This is rotated close in front of the slit of the spectrograph during exposure and gives an accurate and clean cut photographic curve of the color sensitiveness of an emulsion; the absorption (or transmission) of a colored solution; or the "cut" of a photographic color filter.

When preparing to make a Spectrogram the scale-plate is accurately mounted in the spectrograph by comparison with the emission or flame spectrum of some metallic salt. For instance, the Bunsen flame, colored by the introduction of a salt of sodium, is placed before the slit and the line on the scale plate, which corresponds to the D (or sodium) line in the spectrum must be aligned with the sodium line seen in the spectrum of the colored Bunsen flame. Then the sensitive plate may be inserted, the sector wheel (in front of the slit) set in rotation and the exposure made. The slit of the spectrograph is opened wide during exposure and only sufficient exposure is given to produce a developable image for, if exposure be prolonged a false result is secured—showing a more extended sensitiveness to the red than is actually the case. We have yet to mention the use of those horizontal lines on the scale plate. These correspond in number to the number of apertures cut in the exposing sector. While the range of colors to which the plate is sensitive will be shown by the lateral extent of the exposed area; the intensity with which the various colors record will be determined by the height of the various portions of the curve, which can readily be determined by referring to the horizontal lines.

There remains to be described the way in which the absorptions and transmissions of dye solutions are photographed. This may be done with the spectrograph arranged as above and a flat glass cell of the colored solution placed between the rotating sector wheel and the light source

A very convenient method of securing photographs of the absorption spectra of dye solutions, without the use of the rotating sector, is to put the solution in a wedge shaped cell such as is shown at E, Fig. 8.

A rectangular glass cell is divided diagonally (by a glass partition) into two wedge shaped compartments. Into one compartment is placed the dye solution. The other compartment is filled with water or whatever liquid the dye was dissolved in. This second compartment must be filled with the solvent because if the wedge-cell of dye solution were used alone it would act as a prism and refract the incident light.

Dr. Mees has used a wedge of neutral black glass (cemented to a similar shaped wedge of clear glass) in front of the spectrograph slit to photograph the color sensitiveness curves of emulsions and the "cuts" of dry filters.

Spectrograms secured through the black glass wedge are not accurate, however, as the nearest approach to neutral black glass which it is possible to obtain is glass with a noticably purplish tinge. Glass of such a color will therefore exhibit selective absorption (will absorb its complementaries) and it is tolerably certain that all of the results secured by means of the black glass wedge are inaccurate in the green, yellow, and red regions.

SENTENCES OMITTED FROM "COLOR PHOTOGRAPHY" LAST WEEK REPRINTED

WE regret that through some unforeseen accident in making up the issue for last week a slight omission occurred in the third installment of the article, "Color Photography."

Several sentences are missing from the paragraph at the end of page 2079 and this omission is likely to result in a misunderstanding.

"In A, Fig. 5, a transmission grating G (a replica—being transparent—is similar) is shown in place upon the prism stand of a spectroscope. The slit S and collimator C are at right angles to the grating G, the grating being placed so that the rulings are vertical. Upon swinging the telescope, T, to one side the spectra of various colors come into view and may be suitably examined. When using a reflection grating (ruled on speculum metal) a somewhat different arrangement of the collimator and telescope is necessary. In B, Fig. 5, a reflection grating G is shown on the spectroscope table. The collimator-tube C is now facing (at an angle) the ruled surface of the

THE REGUN, IN A BUSY HARLEM DISTRICT, IS COOLED BY TYPHOON VENTILATING SYSTEM

THE Regun, a real theatre with real ideas in modern equipment is situated at 60 West 116th street, in one of Harlem's business districts. The building was remodeled in 1915 by the Royal Pastime Company who are the owners. J. M. Tilson of 1133 Broadway was the architect. Its concrete and steel construction make it absolutely fireproof. The exterior of the building is brick. Terra cotta mouldings add to its attractiveness. A large cast iron marquis gives the desired effect to the front elevation.

Upon entering, a lobby of unusual attractiveness is seen, which measures 15 by 20 feet. Tile flooring of a checked design, and marble walls with a gold border are the decorations therein. The lobby ceiling is plaster. The doors throughout are metal. The box office is to the right upon entering. The double automatic ticket selling device which it contains is of advantage both to the patron and the management. The projection booth is reached from the box office. The inner lobby is spacious and inviting. The floor is cement and covered with carpet of a green shade. The office of the theatre is to the left and is entered through the inner lobby. Its size is about four by six feet. The interior decorations are striking. The walls are concrete, stained a walnut color with a stenciled design in green. Many lamps of artistic design hang on the side walls. The general interior illumination is a soft green color which is very pleasing to the eye.

Several drop lamps hang from the concrete ceiling. The building is cooled by the Typhoon Ventilating System. Heat is maintained in the winter by the same Typhoon system which then blows in hot air instead of cold. The house uses the indirect lighting system. Ten four by four vents are on either side wall which open into large areaways. A cool draught can be had whenever needed. In addition many electric fans hang about the walls. This theatre can "back up" the famous saying, "twenty degrees cooler inside." The projection booth contains two new Simplex machines, direct current. Mike Warren operates them. A "comfy" dressing room for employees is situated next to the booth. This house contains a Merroid screen, 17 by 24.

The height of theatre from floor to ceiling is twenty-eight feet. Its capacity is one thousand. Smoking boxes are to the rear on orchestra level, an unusual feature for a "movie" house. The orchestra seats are leather upholstered and the chairs in the boxes are of white frame and caned. Metro, Paramount, World and Triangle features are on the management's list for selection. The theatre opens at one and closes at eleven. The price of admission is five cents matinees and ten cents evenings. Boxes are fifteen cents after six o'clock.

The music is excellent and constitutes an orchestra of seven pieces at the evening performance and five pieces in the afternoon. Mr. Kistler is the leader. The management uses exceptional advertising methods. An "Ad" of the Regun is seen in the New York Journal. They have a mailing list of over two thousand. Wagon display is also considered beneficial by Mr. Adams, the manager. A roof garden will be opened atop the Regun next summer.

FULTON AND ASSISTANTS DEVELOPING AND TESTING NEW APPLIANCES FOR BETTER OPERATING

ONE of the most interesting departments of the E. E. Fulton Company, a Chicago supply house, is the experimental laboratory under the personal supervision of L. M. Fulton.

Mr. Fulton and the men under him are constantly developing and testing new appliances to make better operating possible.

Some of the devices which have been produced by this department, which have aided the cause of better projection, are improved lugs, carbon savers, bench rewinds, fireproof enclosed rewinds and film patching devices.

Mr. Fulton is an experienced operator himself and so judges the various contrivances he makes from the practical standard of the operator rather than the theoretical viewpoint of an inventor.

One of the devices produced by L. M. Fulton, which has been particularly successful among operators, is his enclosed fireproof rewind. Realizing that no booth is properly guarded against fire accident unless a thoroughly tested fireproof rewind is used, Mr. Fulton determined to make as efficient and simple a device of this kind as possible. The Fulco enclosed fire proof rewind is the result of a long series of experiments and tests, made to develop a rewind which would meet the most stringent requirements. As it is now made, it will meet the approval of any board of fire inspectors. The accompanying illustration shows the construction of this apparatus.

It will be noticed that fire trap valves are fitted to the top of the rewind, which permits inspection and repair of film while it is being rewound with doors closed. The apparatus is very strongly constructed and supplied with friction reducing and noise-deadening ball thrust bearings. Rewinding of the film is impossible unless the door is closed. This instrument may be operated either by hand or by an attached motor.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

PYLE, GENERAL SALES AGENT FOR BARTOLA, REVIEWS CONDITIONS IN PICTURE THEATRES

IN an interview with Charles C. Pyle, general sales agent for the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, Mr. Pyle states that exhibitors all over the country are waking up to the fact that one of the greatest assets of the picture theatre is good music. He states that the sales of the Bartola have more than doubled in the past twelve months over the same previous length of time. This, he says, is due to the simplicity of the instrument which is free from pneumatic action, rubber tubing, discs, belts and pulleys, and is manually played, the entire action being electrically controlled.

Mr. Pyle quotes from various letters received by him from users of the Bartola, which speak for themselves.

W. G. West of the West theatre, Galesburg, Ill., and the Majestic and Willard theatres, Kewanee, Ill., writes: "I am a lover of good pictures and good music. I formerly had an orchestra of six musicians in each theatre, at a weekly salary of $125 for each orchestra. I found that the orchestra could not follow my pictures in a manner that was satisfactory. By the time the orchestra could master the theme, the picture was gone and another replaced it. I finally considered the Bartola.

"This instrument pleased me, so why should it not please my patrons, because I was pleasing them with the pictures I was selecting? I had confidence in my own judgment and bought a Bartola. Here are my deductions, after two years' experience with this instrument. First, no orchestra can follow and produce the wonderful effects and soul-stirring melodies of a Bartola. Second, my patrons are better pleased with my music than with an orchestra, and tell me that they are. Instead of tiring, the music grows on one, its possibilities and effects are so out of the ordinary and beautiful. I am going to build a new theatre in the spring and shall install another Bartola."

Charles Pacini, owner of the new Majestic theatre, New Cozy theatre and New Crystal theatre, Kenosha, Wis. writes: "I installed one of your Bartolas in my Harvard, Ill., theatre two years ago. It gave such satisfaction that it convinced me that I should place it in my New Majestic theatre here in Kenosha, Wis., and am satisfied that I have made the change. My pianist, who was formerly leader of the orchestra, now plays the Bartola, and my patrons are agreed that he accomplishes more pleasing and appropriate accompaniment than was possible before. This may sound a bit enthusiastic, but for a fact, if I could not obtain another Bartola, I would refuse to sell the one I have, at any price."

F. J. Rembusch, owner of the Mirror Screen Company, also owner of the Alhambra theatre, Shelbyville, Ind., writes: "I have now had a Bartola for three years. I feel as enthusiastic as I did when I first bought the instrument. I have a musical education and believe me I am a good judge of instruments. The Bartola is far the best I have ever heard. The particular reason why the Bartola is better for motion picture theatres than any other is this: If you put in a pipe organ you soon wear people out with it. It is too solemn—too dignified, and your piano alone is not sufficient for the better things in pictures.

"With a Bartola you have all of it—you have the pipe organ, the piano and the orchestra, and then you have all those novelties, like the marimbaphone, the xylophone, drums, etc. I like the Bartola because it is not a set of whistles. Everyone of the pipes is real and each stop gives the same color of the instrument that it is designed to play. For example, the violin sounds like a violin, the clarinet like a clarinet. My competitor put in a pipe organ recently. The people are already complaining about it. I cannot find words to express my appreciation, especially in view of the fact that I have had other instruments and have been running theatres now for ten years."

Mr. Pyle goes on to say that there is no longer the difficulty of approaching exhibitors as there used to be. They are now in a position where they wish to obtain absolutely all possible information concerning equipment which will benefit their business and increase patronage. He says just as they are looking for the best pictures, just so they are looking for the best equipment purchaseable.

"I PAY AS MUCH FOR MUSIC AS I DO FOR FILMS," SAYS THOMAS OF THE STRAND, OMAHA

"I PAY as much for music as I do for films," says Manager H. M. Thomas of the Strand theatre, Eighteenth and Douglas streets, Omaha, Neb. "And the music adds one hundred per cent to the pictures. Some pictures that are not remarkable are made so by music.

"Formerly the best musicians considered it below them to play in the motion picture theatre. But that is changing. I advertise my musicians—well known and prominent in Omaha—and I find it assists in getting the crowds. The motion picture theatre offers a longer and a more reliable season than the legitimate house, and this appeals to the musician.

"I have an eight piece orchestra and two organists. It is a Hillgreen, Lane and Company organ, built to specifications.

"Along with the music I count on the interior decorations of the house to appeal. Having a large stage for the screen, I am better enabled to follow out this idea. I am just finishing the redecoration of the house, with a brand new stage setting and electrical effects."

Manager Thomas has had the screen at the Strand surrounded with foliage, flowers, sparkling fountains and other decorations, with tiny, mysterious looking lights and real live birds twittering about the place. He is a fan on projection, and the clearness of the Strand's pictures, with the beauty of the interior, has often been the subject of favorable comment.

MOLLER ORGAN IS INSTALLED IN THE GRAND, HARRISBURG, PA.

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

HARRISBURG, PA., Sept. 23.

A FINE new Moller pipe organ has been installed in the Grand theatre, 1426 Derry street, with an opening recital by Professor C. Walter Wallace, the blind organist. It was announced that Professor Wallace will remain permanently at the Grand. He is now giving a series of nightly lectures in the theatre on the construction and workings of the pipe organ and their adaptability to motion picture theatres.

GRADY IS APPOINTED EASTERN REPERSENTATIVE FOR BARTOLA

THE Bartola Musical Instrument Company has just announced the appointment of John F. Grady as Eastern representative of the Bartola Company. Mr. Grady will have his headquarters in Philadelphia, and will act as general sales manager for the Eastern territory, under the direction of Charles C. Pyle, general sales agent, whose headquarters are in Chicago.

ABSENCE OF HANGING FIXTURES IS THE FEATURE OF INTERIOR LIGHT EFFECT IN THE GERMANIA, CHICAGO

UPON entering the auditorium of the Germania theatre, Chicago, one sees just what is shown in the first picture. The architect, Adolph Woerner, has succeeded in working out a most harmonious interior and although the photograph does not show the decorative colorings, an idea of their effectiveness can be obtained by noting the various features that make up the decorative scheme.

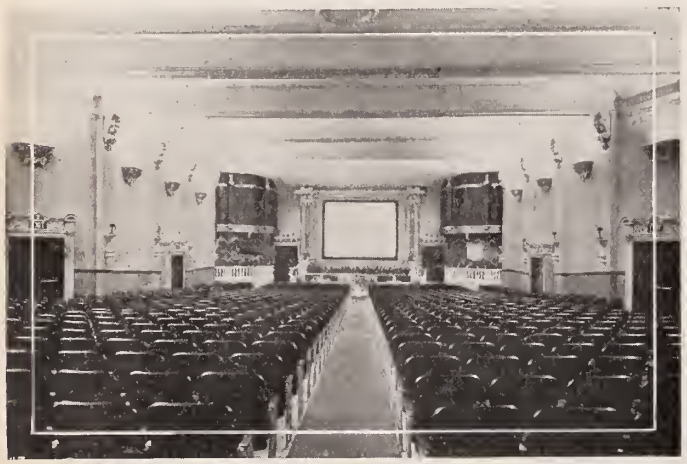

Fig. 1. The Germania Theatre, Chicago

Probably the first thing that arrests the attention is the presence of ornamental wall boxes in the center of each panel between the pilasters. A second glance shows that these boxes are in reality receptacles for the lighting equipment of the auditorium, and that there is an entire absence of hanging fixtures of any kind. The system of illumination for this theatre is, therefore, a feature of more than ordinary interest, something which is entirely distinctive, a new method which is coming into great favor. Note how open and unobstructive the view in all parts of the house with the central hanging ceiling fixtures removed.

It will be interesting to note by what means this novel lighting effect is obtained. The sketches of Figs. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 were prepared to explain in detail the equipment, which is installed in the ornamental wall boxes, and the manner in which the various units in these boxes are connected by the electric lighting circuits to give the desired illumination effects.

In looking at Figs. 2 and 3 it is apparent that each wall box contains three special units which consist of a peculiarly shaped reflector with shade holder, socket and other wiring accessories. Fig. 5 shows that each of the center units in the boxes is wired on the same switch, and that the outside units in all boxes are on another separate circuit. This arrangement makes it possible to obtaain three different intensities of light in the auditorium. With the center units only turned on a dim illumination is provided which is correct for the lighting of the house during the progress of the show. By turning on circuit No. 2 only a brighter illumination is obtained, while with all units in the boxes burning the result is a bright lighting effect which is desirable for intermissions.

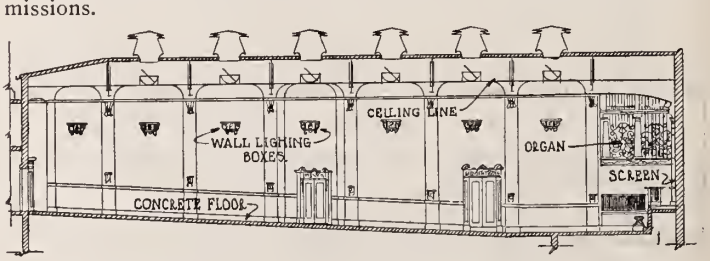

Fig. 4. Longitudinal Section of Auditorium

The secret of the success of this new lighting method lies in the special shaped E-65 reflector that is used. The reflector, which is of silvered glass in one piece, is so designed that it throws the light from the 100-watt Mazda "C" lamp out onto the ceiling and away from the wall.

FOUR THOUSAND PEOPLE ATTEND OPENING OF THE FERRY FIELD, DETROIT

FOUR thousand people attended the opening of the new Ferry Field theatre, Grand River avenue and West Grand boulevard, Detroit, Mich., on August 30. The new playhouse seats 1600 and was built entirely from subscriptions for the $100,000 capital stock procured from neighborhood residents. Walter R. Smith is treasurer and managing director. Metro, Mutual, Brady, Fox and V. L. S. E. pictures have been contracted for.

Unusual artistic taste is shown in the decorations and scenic effects of the Ferry Field. The screen is set in a semi-circle of pillars in the form of a Greek theatre. There is a fountain in the center of the stage and behind a bower of ferns the orchestra plays.

A system of this character is economical to install and operate. In the Germania theatre only 1400 watts or .21 watts per square foot are employed for the dim illumination, and with all units burning the total wattage is 4200 watts or .64 watts per square foot.

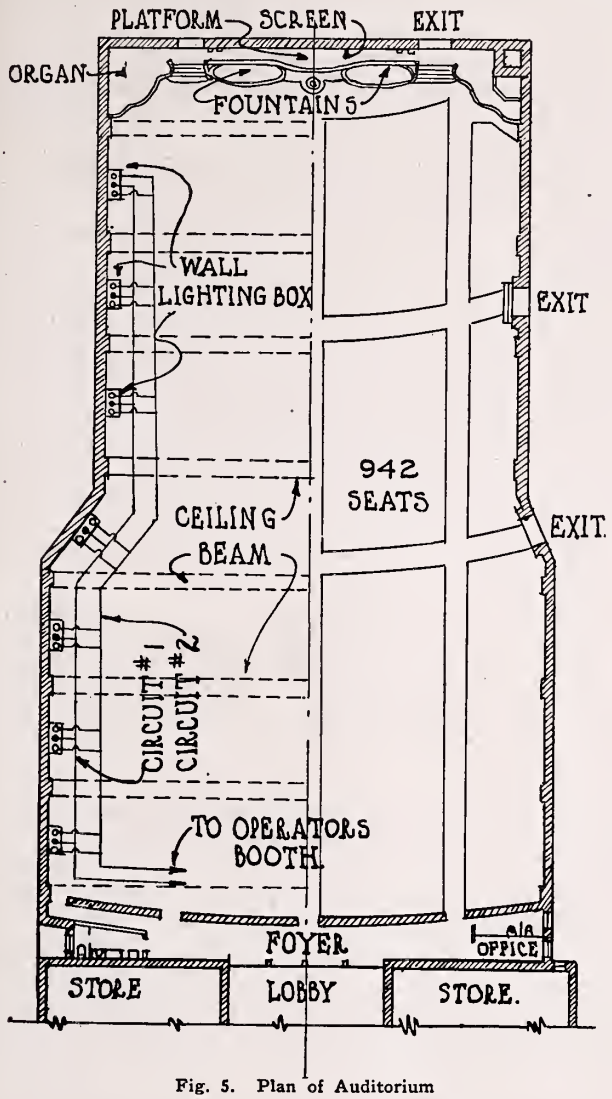

Fig. 5. Plan of Auditorium

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

WOOD, CONCRETE AND COMPOSITION FLOORS FOR THEATRES

W. H. Kinsley, Kansas.— I am interested in composition floors. I have read that such composition will adhere readily to either concrete or wood. As concrete floors are cold and hard to fasten seats to, I plan to build the floor with joists in the regular manner, merely laying a rough flooring and putting the composition on this. This would give me a smooth floor easily kept clean. Will you advise me fully regarding the material and how it is applied to make it stay?

Answer.—Wood Floors. A good solidly built maple floor is about the cleanest and most sanitary and practically noiseless of all floors. The chairs can be fastened very securely by 1¼ inch screws and will hold permanently. A coat of shellac or floor varnish preserves the floor and gives a pleasing appearance. A runner can be put down on the aisles and removed for replacing or cleaning purposes most any time at practically no expense.

Concrete Floors. Second best to wood floors are concrete floors. With a good foundation and a top layer of two parts to one of cement about 2 inches thick will give a waterproof and safe floor. It will not be as soft and as resilient as wood, but seems to be preferred in a thoroughly fireproof building; also because of its being cheaper. With the 2 inch top layer as mentioned above, expansion bolts can be inserted and the chairs made to hold permanently. The permanent fastening of chairs on concrete floor is dependent only upon the thickness and composition of the top layer, as well as its evenness of spreading. Of course it is assumed that a responsible company is installing the chairs.

Composition Floors. These floors cause more trouble than any of the two mentioned above. Composition floors are usually patented by the various companies, some reliable and some not quite so. In addition to this climatic condition and local conditions cause cracking and bulging of the composition and inferior dyes prevent a fast color. This is particularly true since the recent war prevents the importing of aniline dyes. While the floor is practically noiseless and has an easy give to it for walking, this type does not guarantee a permanent fastening of seats. Some compositions are made so as to receive a wood screw, which is a little longer than the regular screw, and the chairs will hold permanently. On the other hand some compositions are so hard that it is necessary to drill in order to insert an expansion bolt. The texture of this composition is such in some instances that the top will split and make it impracticable for fastening of the chairs. Particular care should be exercised in the selection of the composition and samples thoroughly tested whenever possible.

PLASTER SCREEN AND HOW TO MAKE ONE

T. V. Humphrey, manager Pastime theatre, Canadian, Tex.
—I want to know your opinion on making a screen on a plaster wall, and what you use in making it. My theatre is 50 by 80, the throw is 81 feet. What size screen should I make; I am using A. C.

Answer.—The plaster wall screen, when made right, has always proven satisfactory. While there are screens on the market of a semi-reflecting type that will aid materially in reducing your bills for current consumption, I take it from your letter that you are not in a position to purchase one of these.

The best method of preparing the plaster wall is to have a plasterer finish the wall to a perfectly smooth surface, then coat with either white Alabastine or some other perfectly white coating, to which has been added a little blue. Many exhibitors prefer English whiting, which can be mixed with water, and in which they dissolve a small quantity of glue. Add just a little more of the ultramarine blue than you would with the former method.

It is necessary when using this latter method to wash the entire coating off at least once a month and recoat, otherwise there will be a sort of haziness or lack of definition to the picture being projected, for the dust and dirt that will accumulate in that time and which will have become deposited on the screen surface, will be considerable, and the screen, equally with the picture is the one thing that you must keep in first class condition.

You no doubt realize that with the use of alternating current it becomes necessary for you to use double the amount that would be required with direct current; therefore, I believe that a picture 12 by 16, which can be obtained with a lens of 5-inch E.F. will meet your requirements. I would suggest that when you have your wall coated, you throw a light from your projector onto the screen and then draw a line entirely around the projected light about an inch inside of the projected light and paint a border of black, using a flat black and one that will not wash or rub off. This will not only add to the effect of a perspective in the picture, but will enable you to more easily renovate or recoat the screen when it becomes necessary.

I would like to know how in the world you get a throw of 81 feet when your theatre is only 50 by 80.

DIRECTORY OF NEW THEATRES
CALIFORNIA

THE Reliance theatre at San Pablo avenue and Clay street, Oakland, recently opened its doors and has taken its place as one of the leading motion picture houses in that city. This theatre has been constructed on the site of the old Rice Institute, but so extensive has been the work of remodeling that it may be regarded as being practically a new building. The house has a seating capacity of about 1,800 and is being given over to feature productions. A feature of the entertainment offered is the music, two special organ recitals being given each evening on the orchestral organ that has been installed.

Charles Goddard, one of the leading exhibitors of Sacramento, has taken a lease on the old Kirk-Geary Building at 521 J street, and contracts for remodeling this structure and transforming it into a moving picture theatre with a seating capacity of 1,600 have already been awarded to a total of $56,300. When completed this will be one of the largest theatres in the Capital City.

Contracts have been awarded for the erection of the new Turner & Dahnken theatre at Stockton, and the work of clearing the site is now under way. The contractors plan to rush work on this house, and it is expected that it will be ready for opening shortly after the first of the year. Work on the new Oakland house of this concern is also being rushed, and plans are now being made for a grand opening during the first week of November. This will be the largest motion picture theatre on the Pacific Coast when completed, with a seating capacity of more than 3,000.

The Casino theatre, 4319 Central avenue, Los Angeles, owned by Mike Gore, proprietor of the Liberty and three other Los Angeles theatres, is undergoing a big change, and will be enlarged so that it has a seating capacity of 900. This will make it one of the largest suburban houses in Los Angeles.

CANADA

M. Dufresne has opened a house in Powassan, which is on the main line railroad, Sturgeon Falls, Onutario. This town, while small, is noted for being the former site of an extensive Indian camp.

To build a new theatre seems to be the aim of every theatre manager in Toronto; the latest to be stricken by this pleasant malady is Mr. Marvin of the Strand theatre, who it is said will build a most pretentious new house on a location not yet announced. Mr. Marvin is already interested in three theatres situated in Camp Borden, Angus and Toronto.

The People's theatre of Toronto has profited greatly by a change of management which brings to them Mr. Morris, formerly of the Bonita theatre. Mr. Morris is well known as a most successful exhibitor, and it is expected that he will achieve great results with his downtown house.

The Majestic theatre of Winnipeg, managed by Mr. McKinnon, has now changed hands. Mr. Sherman, late owner, has taken it over and it is stated will change the entire policy.

According to apparently well founded reports, the Brighton theatre, situated in the suburb of Parkdale, Toronto, will be replaced by a big house seating at least 1,500 people and equipped with all the latest conveniences. A feature of Toronto is the string of large high-grade houses which is commencing to circle the city in the outlying suburbs. The Brighton is being managed at present by Mr. Pomeroy.

COLORADO

Plans now being made for a $25,000 moving picture theatre at Colfax avenue and Ogden street, Denver, are said to be only a start on what promises to be a program for building several moving picture houses in the residence sections of the city. Those said to be interested in the movement are August Hahnewald of Leadville, with his brother, Paul Hahnewald; M. C. Harrington of the Hibernia Bank and Trust Company, and former Judge Peter L. Palmer.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The Elite theatre, Washington, a resident house under the management of Mrs. M. E. Stone, is coming into its own under her hands. Though only a house of about 300, it is using features with an additional short reel, either a picture news, a comedy or a travelogue. A neat program is issued to patrons giving the shows for the week, as well as the hours for the beginning of each show. This latter information has greatly facilitated overcrowding at any one time. Mrs. Stone has made this program of community service in that it carries advertisements of nearby establishments.

INDIANA

J. W. Fisher has bought the Victor motion picture theatre at 1720 North Second street, Vincennes. It has been renamed the Wabash by Mr. Fisher, who already has taken charge. The new owner plans to change his program.

The Lyric theatre, Marion's newest photoplay and vaudeville theatre, opened recently to large crowds with "Ramona." Ora Parks, an experienced showman, having been connected with Harry G. Sommers for many years, is manager of the new theatre.

Carl Jackson and Frank Swift have bought the Edelweiss theatre, Morristown's only picture show, from Paul Williams and Laurence Rogers, who have owned it for several years. The house is the best theatre between Indianapolis and Rushville. It has always done a good business, and the new owners plan to conduct the theatre in the same high-class manner.

A short-circuit of electric wires, feeding the carbon arcs of a motion picture machine at the Lyric theatre, Connersville, recently destroyed a reel of motion pictures and slightly damaged the operating room of the theatre. Eugene Hiers, the operator, received slight burns on his right hand. The management of the theatre emphasized the fact that the steel fireproof walls of the operating room would have held through any emergency, and that had the house been crowded no one would have been injured.

IOWA

The Strand theatre, Dubuque, operated by Messrs. Billos, Thanes and Yainiuas, will soon be reopened on Saturdays and Sundays. The Princess, in Dubuque, is under the same management.

For reasons not made public, the Delphums theatre at Clarinda has been closed. It is not known whether it will reopen.

The New theatre at Olmutz, operated by Nick Caroso, will probably be opened about the first of October. This is a new theatre in the real sense of the word.

The Orpheum at Oelwien has been closed temporarily.

J. H. Clark, manager of the Isis theatre at Cedar Rapids, has recently installed in his house a Bartola organ. Orchestra music has provided the accompaniment previously.

The New Orpheum theatre at Webster City was recently opened. This house, managed by Colonel Hiatt, seats about 650 people.

The Orient theatre at Oskaloosa, after playing straight pictures during the summer months, announces that it will show occasional acts of vaudeville along with its pictures during the winter.

A serious accident to the electric light plant at East Peru caused the moving picture theatre there to close down temporarily. Messrs. Hiatt and Jorgenson, proprietors, have set one month before reopening.

After managing the moving picture theatre at Rock Valley for some time, J. Werkhoven recently announced that he had sold it to W. W. Cocroft.

A recent fire destroyed the Opera House at Toronto. J. H. Bielenberg, proprietor, was running pictures most of the time.

The Cecil theatre at Mason City, one of the finest houses in the State, has changed a heretofore invariable policy of nothing but legitimate shows and has completed arrangements to run pictures when regular shows are not booked. Jolly Jones, Metro salesman, was right on the job when the decision was made and got the house signed up with his company.

After being closed during the summer months, the Opera House at Burt, operated by E. C. Nelson, has been opened for the season.

Willard Seager, manager of the Cozy theatre at Gilman, will soon begin showing pictures every night in the week. For some time past he has been running but a few nights a week.

C. F. Sperbeck has sold his moving picture theatre at Reinbeck to C. E. Aines, who took immediate charge.

A. J. Nash, proprietor of the theatre of the same name at Nichols, has sold his house to C. L. Pike.

R. E. Kent has purchased the Hardacre theatre at Tipton from Mr. Littlejohn, former proprietor.

H. J. Lego, manager of the Majestic theatre at Ft. Dodge, just installed a $3,000 Kimball pipe organ. Up to the present time Mr. Lego has used an orchestra, playing five hours a day. With the addition of this continuous music, ten hours each day, will be a big feature.

The new $50,000 Grand theatre erected at Estherville by F. H. Graff, was opened September 20. Exhibitors and exchange men who have seen this house declare it to be one of the best looking and most modern theatres in the West. Seating 1,050 persons on a first floor and balcony, the theatre is the pride of the town, a place of but 4,500 inhabitants. Every seat is an unholstered one, while the furnishings are equally as good. Special decorators did the interior work. A large pipe organ is one of the many desirable features.

The picture theatre at Rinard, which has been under the management of E. F. McCullough for some time past, was recently sold to Ralph Jamison.

After a series of decorations and improvements, the Call Opera House at Algona has been reopened. It is probable that a policy of pictures and legitimate plays will be in effect.

Following his purchase of the Grand theatre at Cedar Falls, Edward Madigan is making some extensive repairs. Carpenters and decorators have been busy for some time, and a much improved and better house will soon be thrown open to the public.

Schlank and Gilensky are preparing to open the Dohaney, the largest motion picture theatre in Council Bluffs. They have installed two Powers 6B machines, a Minusa screen, and a Fort Wayne motor generator set, secured from the Western supply Co. at Omaha. The Dohaney is a former legitimate house, and is equipped with seats for 1,500.

Manager Rosenfield is building a new theatre at Creston.

G. H. Peterson has purchased the moving picture theatre at Jewell Junction.

MICHIGAN

Fire on Sept. 18 damaged the Majestic theatre, Kalamazoo, to the extent of $20,000. The theatre is owned by Col. W. S. Butterfield of Battle Creek.

The contract for the remodeling of the Family theatre, Port Huron, into a modern fireproof playhouse has been let. The present Family theatre building will be converted into a lobby for the new theatre.

Sale of the property on which is located the Detroit Opera House has been announced, and this means that Bert C. Whitney, proprietor, will immediately scout around for a new location after the expiration of his present lease, which runs two years more. The Opera House has been playing motion pictures during the summer months.

Forty thousand dollars is to be spent on remodeling of the Theatorium theatre at Lansing, for J. M. Neal. Fuller Claflin of Detroit is the architect. The seating capacity will be close to 1,000.

NEBRASKA

Jack Hayser of Aurora has enlarged and redecorated his house.

M. M. Moore of Tekamah has enlarged his house, putting in seventy-five chairs, secured from the Western Supply Co. at Omaha.

James Martin, manager of the Magic theatre at Fort Dodge, will use vaudeville and moving pictures in the future.

A. H. Banks has purchased the Family theatre at Omaha.

E. W. Blakeslee has purchased the Empress theatre at Nebraska City.

R. A. Dittner has purchased the moving picture house at Falls City.

PENNSYLVANIA

Scranton has a new theatre, to be known as the Strand. The theatre opened on October 1. This new theatre has been erected by the Strand Theatre Company, Inc.

Boyertown will have another moving picture house shortly. Several months ago the Dreamland theatre, at the eastern limits of the borough, was razed. Since that time an effort has been made to purchase or lease the lot at the rear of the W. B. Keely shoe store. It has now been decided to erect a building on these premises, 60 by 80 feet in size, to be used as a moving picture house. R. Magners, who had charge of Dreamland, is also interested in the new project. The building will be located on Chestnut street, 125 feet rear of Philadelphia avenue.

H. T. Miller, formerly manager of the Lyric theatre at Duquesne, has taken over the Avenue theatre at Duquesne, and has changed the name to Miller's theatre. He has assumed charge and during the lull in business caused by the quarantine he is getting the theatre in shape for the fall and winter months.

Henry J. Blum, of the Gem theatre in Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, states that he has let the contract for remodeling and work is to start at once. He will redecorate and repaint the house both inside and out and the seating arrangements will be greatly improved.

Announcement has just been made that the management of the Strand motion picture theatre, Front and Pine streets, Steelton, Pa., one of the finest motion picture houses in that part of the state, has been taken over by W. A. Kline, who recently opened a Unicorn exchange at 824 Market street, Harrisburg. Mr. Kline several years ago was manager of the Palace motion picture theatre, Harrisburg, but more recently has been in charge of a film exchange in Washington, D. C.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Bowman and Nordseth, proprietors of the Empress theatre, Canton, recently opened another motion picture theatre in that city.

TEXAS

H. H. Starcke has a new picture house at Seguin. It is the Palace and seats around 500 on the main floor and balcony. Two Powers 6B machines grace the operating booth. One other exhibitor, D. E. Petty, with the Wonderland, is located there.

John Ward, who has been with the Hulsey interests managing the Zoe theatre at Houston for the past year, has been transferred to Galveston, where he is in charge of the old Opera House theatre.

H. C. Norfleet, another old-timer with the Hulsey string, now has the Zoe and Liberty, Houston, under his wing.

A. J. Xydias, head of the Xydias Amusement Company, Houston, is installing a $10,000 Fotoplayer in his Rex theatre. He has been advertising the new instrument rather extensively through the newspapers.

The old Cozy theatre has been rejuvenated and is now open, playing vaudeville and pictures, under the name of the Gulf theatre. It is operated by the Gulf Amusement Company, Houston.

Pierre C. Levy, Hippodrome theatre, Fort Worth, has recently installed a $10,000 Fotoplayer, and the crowds visiting his house since this installation seem to prove conclusively that good music certainly helps.

J. Y. Robb at San Angelo and Big Springs, is another believer in good music, and has installed a large Fotoplayer in both his houses.

At Quanah, Mike Segal will soon have completed one of the finest theatres in the small towns in the southwest section. His house will cost complete around $60,000 and will seat 800.

Thumm Brothers, at Del Rio, who have had quite a bit of bad luck with fires damaging and destroying their theatres in that Mexican border town, are now planning a large semi-fireproof structure to house a new picture show. The new house will probably not be completed until January.

TENNESSEE

The Strand motion picture theatre at 240 Main street, Chattanooga, has been purchased by D. S. Ethridge, local agent for Ford cars, for a consideration of $20,000. He will continue to run the theatre as a picture house. Negotiations for the building were carried on between Mr. Ethridge and E. R. and J. W. Lawless, its owners. The building is brick and stands two stories high. It covers a lot 25 by 135 feet.

Two of the motion picture theatres at Cleveland, Tenn., the Ocoee and Moneta, which have been closed and which have been the subjct of litigation for some time, have been sold at public outcry by Trustee W. O. Taylor. The theatres were purchased by George N. Shourey, of the Gay theatre, Knoxville. One of the theatres will likely be operated in Cleveland and the other moved to Mascot.

WEST VIRGINIA

P. W. Barrett, owner of the Star theatre at Parkersburg, has purchased the Bijou theatre in that city and will combine the two theatres. The theatres at present adjoin and it wil require the removal of the wall and entire redecorating when the work of cutting out the walls and changing the floor plans are completed. It is said that when the work is done the theatre will be one of the finest in the state and will have a seating capacity of 800 with plenty of standing room so that more seats can be put in later should it be necessary to increase the capacity. Feature pictures are to be shown and the theatre is on a ten-cent basis. Mr. Barrett is one of the best motion picture men in the State of West Virginia and knows the business from start to finish.

WISCONSIN

Oliver Webb, an architect, is drafting plans for a motion picture and vaudevile theatre for Milwaukee. The building is to cost about $20,000, it is reported, and will be located on a site in the vicinity of Ninth and Walnut streets. Names of the parties back of the new theatre have not been made public.

The Crystal theatre, Oconomowoc, managed by G. W. Huebner, has been renovated during the warm summer days, and has opened its fall season with Paramount pictures.

Milwaukee is in the midst of a downtown building, or rebuilding, boom, to be more exact. One house, Otto Meister's new Whitehouse theatre, is now under the course of construction and will replace the old Vaudette theatre about November 1. The Princess theatre, owned by the Saxe brothers, will shortly be entirely rebuilt and redecorated. Th American theatre, owned by Jean Olinger, is also slated to be rebuilt very shortly. Through some strange circumstance these three houses are all in the same block and on the same street, and have long been in competition with one another.

E. H. SOTHERN IN FILM DEBUT AT STRAND

Famous Actor Appears in Star Role of "The Chattel"—Academy of Music Offers Gala Anniversary Bill—Others.

E. H. SOTHERN, the famous actor, made his debut as a screen star at the Strand Theatre yesterday afternoon in "The Chattel," the first of three pictures in which he has acted before the camera for the Vitagraph Company of America. The importance of Mr. Sothern's debut in the "movies" was sufficient to warrant the largest audience that ever crowded its way into the Strand. Mr. Sothern's work was applauded as vigorously as if he had been there in person rather than in shadow.

"The Chattel" is a strong play, and gives Mr. Sothern a capital role. It is presented in five reels, and is head and shoulders above the average "five reeler." The settings are unusually lavish, and the surrounding company is excellent. This may especially be said for Peggy Hyland, whose work in the emotional moments of the film play was second only to that of Mr. Sothern.

The play proved an admirable vehicle for Mr. Sothern, and if the two promised ones prove to be of the same calibre it is more than likely that the distinguished actor will be prevailed upon to do at least several others.

Another Strand

The Proof

PUBLIC OPINION—the Court of Last Appeal—has acclaimed the triumph of Greater Vitagraph productions.

Notwithstanding the car strike in New York City, more than 15,000 people—the largest audience in the history of the wide-famed Strand Theatre—crowded its way into that house on the first day of the initial showing of "The Chattel," in which E. H. Sothern, America's foremost actor, made his screen debut.

This notable production, which is but one of a list of supreme offerings available to exhibitors through the Greater Vitagraph, was also selected by the management of the magnificent new Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, after a canvass of the output of the entire field, as the one picture worthy of the opening of this theatre.

Thus has every claim of the enormous public interest in the film appearance of Mr. Sothern been proved by actual results to the exhibitor.

And thus may exhibitors at all times demonstrate by actual test the claims made for Greater Vitagraph productions as a whole.

STATE RIGHTS

As the official representative of THE BRITISH WAR OFFICE, ADMIRALTY and MINISTRY of MUNITIONS, I have been commissioned to arrange the broadcast Exhibition of the Pictures described over-leaf, throughout the United States of America.

The "Battle of the Somme" is considered throughout Britain and the Allied and Neutral Countries of Europe (where it is now causing a tremendous stir), as the "Greatest Picture in the World," while "Kitchener's Great Army" and "Jellicoe's Grand Fleet" have caused astonishment everywhere by the realistic rendering in motion pictures of these stupendous subjects.

As the British Government desires and the Cause of Civilization demands that these pictures be seen by the people of the United States, I am in a position to lease same on advantageous terms. It behooves the progressive Exhibitor to show the unvarnished truth of this War (as no other medium is possible to show it) to the members of his Community, therefore get into touch with me at once.

SOMME BATTLE FILM

The war film of the Battle of the Somme is proving a record "draw" for the picture houses showing it. Never have war conditions been realized so fully in this country, and the result is everywhere declared to be an intensified patriotism.

Below are reports selected at random from the thirty halls showing the film in London last week:

SCALA THEATER.—"Wonderful business all the week. Nothing like it before. On Saturday afternoon every seat sold before the doors opened. Two hundred turned away at many performances."

PHILHARMONIC HALL.—"Full houses every time and hundreds turned away. Advance bookings very heavy."

MAIDA VALE PALACE.—"The biggest success we have ever had. Played continuously to full capacity."

PALLADIUM, BRIXTON.—"Record business. Long queues waiting for opening of doors every time. Scores turned away."

QUEEN'S, FOREST GATE.—"Broken all records. Hundreds turned away; 16,000 saw the film here up to Saturday morning. Greatest enthusiasm; people appreciating realism and obvious truthfulness of film."

ANGEL, ISLINGTON.—"Immense. Thousands turned away. Crowds waiting for doors to open."

BLUE HALLS, LTD.—"Our two halls at Hammersmith and our Putney house packed every time. About 60,000 in Hammersmith alone have been stirred by the film. Unable to accommodate all comers at evening performances."

KING'S HALL, LEWISHAM.—"Phenomenal."

Mr. William Jury—the largest distributor in the United Kingdom, who had the exclusive booking of this film in Britain, advises that the "Battle of the Somme" has been booked in almost every city, town and village throughout the Kingdom, many exhibitors "shelving" programmes for which they have paid as high as $1200 per week in order to run this picture.

"GRANT, POLICE REPORTER"

KALEM'S Latest FEATURE Series

Ready October 20th

A feature, says the dictionary, is "something of prominence and importance." A feature, says the wise exhibitor, is "a picture that I can advertise, knowing it will draw patrons and please them."

Neither definition mentions LENGTH—for length does not guarantee PROMINENCE, IMPORTANCE, ADVERTISING VALUE, DRAWING POWER or SATISFACTION.

Every Kalem release is a feature—for each Kalem release measures up 100 per cent. in every point that makes up the definition of a real feature.

It costs money to do this—proportionately many times the cost of the average five reeler. For instance, on "Grant, Police Reporter," we are paying more for each one reel story by Robert Welles Ritchie than many five reel scenarios cost. We are giving you two stars, George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby. We are giving you productions that are setting new per foot records for programme releases of any length.

"Grant" is no exception. The same exacting test is met by every Kalem release—"The Girl from Frisco," "Ham Comedies," "The Hazards of Helen." All are in regular General Film Service.

The point to you is—BOOK FEATURES, but book intelligently. Remember that five features on one programme give you five times the punch of the average five reeler. And remember further, that booking features on which you can't make money is not booking intelligently—it is BUSINESS SUICIDE!

"The Code Letter" is the first "Grant" release, October 20th.

New Helen Holmes Chapterplay First Release Oct. 23rd

IN RESPONSE to more than 6,000 requests from exhibitors for another Helen Holmes serial," the Signal Film Corporation has made a new chapter-play starring this popular favorite. The first chapter will be released on Monday, October 23. A new chapter will be released weekly thereafter. The new picture is undoubtedly the greatest production in which Miss Holmes has ever appeared. She easily outdoes all the daring deeds she has previously performed and yet the story is entirely logical. Every exhibitor knows how important a box-office asset Helen Holmes has proven to be. Every exhibitor knows that this leading woman has a tremendous following. He can imagine how much more of a box-office magnet a new play will be in which Helen Holmes outdoes all previous efforts.

"A Lass of the Lumberlands."

The new Helen Holmes picture is entitled "A Lass of the Lumberlands." As one can gather from its title, it is a story of the great timbering regions in the far North. Helen appears as the daughter of a great lumber baron who controls vast tracts of standing timber. Ere the first chapter ends Helen, as a baby, is borne across a lumber-jam just as the huge mass of lumber is torn apart by a dynamite explosion. This is but the first of the thrills which are to come. Years later, Helen, now a young woman, becomes an operator on the railroad running into the big timber country. Railroading, lumbering and all the hazards and perils that are involved in such tremendous undertakings in a wild, lawless country, form the background of the story.

Thrills Come Thick and Fast.

There is not a dull moment in the entire length of "A Lass of the Lumberlands." Thrills come thick and fast. The great lumber trust engages in a fight with the independent owners of timber. Helen's father heads the forces of the gigantic corporation. Helen leads the smaller owners in their fight to live. On the swirling rivers, over the tracks of the lumber company, in the forest, the fight goes on. The tale grows more thrilling with each succeeding chapter. Every exhibitor who booked the previous Helen Holmes serial, "The Girl and the Game," knows the business it brought him. Hundreds have already booked "A Lass of the Lumberlands." It may be booked at any Mutual exchange.

President Freuler Fights Censorship

"Treason and incendiarism" are the words with which President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation denounces the movement to gain an indorsement of federal censorship from motion picture producers. Mr. Freuler, in a telegram last week to David Wark Griffith, who is aiding in the fight against censorship, went on record as follows:

"The Mutual Film Corporation and the other interests which I represent will never at any time, under any conditions, submit to or participate in any proposal to accept censorship in any form. We are fighting and will continue to fight every form of censorship existing or contemplated, city, state or federal. Acceptance of any form of censorship would mean the violation of the primary principles of Americanism and a surrender of our right to our business. There is no possible value, even temporarily, in acceptance of federal censorship as a foil against state censorship, since it is established beyond question that the states would still retain whatever censorship power they may have. Any film man who stands for such a policy should not be in the motion picture industry, and will not be for long. The Mutual Film Corporation will fight to the everlasting finish for its principles."

The lumber jam that is shown as the climax of the first chapter of "A Lass of the Lumberlands" is a real one, which actually cost the lives of some of the men who attempted to break it up.

Richard Bennett's Debut in Mutual Star Production

RICHARD BENNETT, famous on th speaking stage and well remembere by exhibitors everywhere for his splendi performance in "Damaged Goods," is th star of the newest Mutual Star Produ tion. Its title is "Philip Holden-Waster." It inaugurates a splendid serie of Bennett productions, each better tha the one before. Richard Bennett wi amaze you by his cleverness in this nev est of photoplays. It is five reels i length. Every audience will wish it wa longer. Every exhibitor who runs it wi have his patrons demanding more Be nett productions without delay. By bool ing the entire series of Bennett Mutua Star Productions he will be able to cas in on that desire of his patrons.

"Philip Holden—Waster."

"Philip Holden—Waster" is a del ciously whimsical little play. It is inde scribably humorous in places. It is high ly dramatic at others. Its sub-titles ar sure to occasion chuckles of real gle Philip Holden is a young author wh doesn't appreciate the value of a dolla His brother, Miles, is just the opposit He fairly worships Mammon. Phili falls in love with Helen Langdon, a viva cious maid who appreciates Philip's li erary talent. Philip sets forth to carv out a fortune for himself. He tries i vain to land a position. At last he un dertakes the sale of stock for a wild-ca mining concern. The orders roll in Philip accepts certificates of stock in lie of salary. And then the mine proves veritable bonanza. Philip finds himsel so rich that even his banker begins t patronize him. By chance he overhear a scheme of his brother Miles' to driv down a certain stock. He speculates o the tip and grows more wealthy. "Phili Holden—Waster" is so good it sim ply cannot be described in words. I has to be seen to be appreciated. It i now available at sixty-eight Mutual ex changes. October 9 is the release dat for this unusual picture.

"Redeemed."

The week of October 9 will see the re lease of another Florence Turner Mutua Star Production. "Redeemed" is its title Magnetic Florence Turner scores an ever greater artistic triumph in this new pic ture than she has already done in previ ous releases. The "Series" Idea

The trail has been blazed! A new era in film distribution and exhibition is here! And the Mutual Film Corporation leads in offering exhibitors feature productions of the greatest magnitude in "series"—groups of Mutual Star Productions in five and six acts featuring America's most popular stars, each picture being an individual and complete feature of superior merit.

The "series" idea was originated by the Mutual Film Corporation. It was fashioned out of a thorough study of the exhibitors' needs. It was born of actual experience in the operation of a number of profitable motion picture theatres. It has now come to be the big thing in film distribution and exhibition.

Here are the basic reasons for the success of the Mutual "series" idea: It means steady patronage. It enables the exhibitor to offer his patrons big stars in superior productions on definite days at regular intervals. It means economy in theater operation. It enables the exhibitor to advertise each "series" of pictures heavily yet at a lower cost per picture than the cost of advertising each picture separately. It builds prestige. It establishes a standard—a reputation for high quality and consistent programs.

The sixty-eight Mutual exchanges in America are now offering exhibitors exceptional opportunities to secure big feature attractions in "series." Mutual Star Productions include:

The Mary Miles Minter Series
The William Russell Series
The Richard Bennett Series
The Kolb and Dill Series
The Helen Holmes Series
The Margarita Fischer Series
The Florence Turner Series, and others.

The Charlie Chaplin series of Mutual Special Features is also available at all Mutual Exchanges. Wire, write, or call on your nearest Mutual exchange. Book a few of these "series." Arrange for special days and special advertising—and watch your box office receipts grow!

Coming! HELEN HOLMES in

A LASS A LUMBER

Announcement—

We announce for release, beginning, Monday, Oct. 23rd, a new and spectacular chapter-play — Helen Holmes in "A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS." This production will be presented in fifteen feature chapters. Helen Holmes, the popular favorite of the big success "The Girl and the Game," is the star of this new production. The author is E. Alexander Powell. The director is J. P. MacGowan, who directed "The Girl and the Game." "A Lass of the Lumberlands" was produced by the Signal Film Corporation. It will be released thru the sixty-eight Mutual Exchanges in America.

"A Lass of the Lumberlands," starring Helen Holmes, is just such a play as its title implies. The story is laid in the great timber regions of the North woods, amid the mighty sequoias, pines and cedars, which make that country famous. As the film unfolds, every detail in the operation of the great lumber industry will be revealed. The lumber camp, the sawmill, the swirling river, the log jams, suggest some of the backgrounds that make "A Lass of the Lumberlands" a particularly spectacular motion picture work. The title suggests the opportunity for big scenes. Miles of railroads and fleets of freighters are brought into play.

Helen Holmes in "A Lass of the Lumberlands" is a worthy successor to the successful serial, "The Girl and the Game." In this new production will be found even more sensational scenes and greater thrills than in Helen Holmes' previous success.

"A Lass of the Lumberlands" offers tremendous profit possibilities to the exhibitor. Here are fifteen chapters with tremendous cumulative value. The exhibitor securing this big feature this Fall is certain of big box office receipts for fifteen weeks thru the winter.

You Exhibitors who know of Helen Holmes' tremendous success in "The Girl and the Game" will be anxious to book this new Helen Holmes chapter-play, "A Lass of the Lumberlands," at once. Bookings are now being made at Mutual Exchanges.

Wilfred Lucas in "Rummy"

Triangle-Fine Arts

"Rummy" is a sweeping, sensational story of a "star reporter" on a big city newspaper. You need have no fear that your patrons will yawn over "Rummy," for it has all the elements that give it an irresistible human appeal. With all his brilliant prospects this brilliant newspaper man lost faith in his wife and sank down into the depths. The story of his regeneration and restoration is something to remember. Wilfred Lucas' work in "Rummy" is convincing, and the able support given him by the Fine-Arts cast makes the play something that is tangibly alive and compelling. Theatre goers everywhere will recognize "Rummy" as a page from life.

Bessie Barriscale in "Plain Jane"

Triangle-Kay-Bee

If there is a single community anywhere that will not love the simple romantic tale in which Bessie Barriscale appears this week, that community ought to be ostracised by the rest of the country. In "Plain Jane" Bessie Barriscale does some of the best work of her career, and she has been given a vehicle that sets forth her talents superbly. Here we have a sweet, old-fashioned love story that contains all the elements that make it a sure-fire popluar success. When you have finished with "Plain Jane" if you do not get requests for a repeat it will be because your audiences are both dumb and blind. "Plain Jane" is one of the sure-fire money getters of the season, and Bessie Barriscale reveals an entirely new and attractive side of her great talent.

WHAT THE FOREMOST AUTHORITIES ON MOTION PICTURES HAVE TO SAY

The million and more readers of the book will find the appealing love story of Valerie West, the artist's model, and Louie Neville, the painter, absorbingly revealed on the screen. The sensational touches that gave the novel such wide vogue have been retained, but are depicted with such exceptional taste as to give offense to none.—VICTOR WATSON in the NEW YORK AMERICAN.

"The Common Law" attracted throngs to the theatres, both downstairs and an on the roof. . . . Beautiful models are never more beautiful than when played by Miss Young, and Miss Young is even prettier as Valerie West in the Chambers novel than she was as Trilby.—JOHN LOGAN in the NEW YORK HERALD.

"Clara Kimball Young Scores a Great Hit in 'The Common Law'"—This picture is playing to capacity audiences at the Marcus Loew theatres. The initial Selznick production makes him one of the most important producing factors in America from the beginning.—NEW YORK EVENING WORLD.

"A Magnificent Production"—Lewis J. Selznick has made an even greater photoplay of "The Common Law" than Robert W Chambers made a successful novel.—NEW YORK EVENING SUN.

In "The Common Law" Lewis J Selznick has again shown that he is a great believer in the necessity of lavishness in making a picture a sure winner. He has spent an enormous sum in the production, and yet he has not been wasteful as he has made every dollar count in the production of a remarkable picture. No detail missing; every dollar spent will bring back many dollars to the treasury of his producing company.—LEWIS SHERWIN in the NEW YORK GLOBE.

A beautiful and popular star, a story by one of the most popular authors of the day, and magnificent direction by Albert Capellani gives to this Selznick picture the impetus such as few producers have been able to gain. . . . Photographically the picture is also a superb production.—"ZIT" in the NEW YORK JOURNAL.

Mr. Capellani, the director . . . has wrought quite wonderfully. . . . It is so admirably done that it nowhere hangs heavily. . . . It is a well-made picture technically, and Miss Young is both beautiful and histrionic.—KITTY KELLY in the CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Clara Kimball Young is charming and appealing. Her leading man and the rest of the cast are wonderfully capable. Capellani, the director, is a positive genius. If the future productions of the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises are of this remarkable calibre this organization will receive a hearty welcome from the American public.—OMA MOODY LAWRENCE in CHICAGO EVENING POST.

Congratulations to Clara Kimball Young in the successful launching of her great motion picture venture and more congratulations to Lewis J. Selznick, the daring producer, with his first "C. K. Y." picture. The Studebaker is playing to capacity audiences and you are lucky to be able to get into the theatre at all during the opening engagement of "The Common Law" Albert Capellani is the director among all directors.—ROB REEL in CHICAGO AMERICAN.

If he (Robert Chambers) is one of those proud authors who scorn the plebeian movie, he will, after seeing how the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation has handled his brain child, take movies to his heart and embrace them. . . . Miss Young fulfills the extravagant description Chambers gives his beauteous heroine . . . Capellani staged "The Common Law" in a masterly fashion. . . . Miss Young holds the center of the stage and charms with her truly exotic beauty.—LOUELLA O PARSONS in the CHICAGO HERALD.

It is an assured triumph. It has the magnetic personality of a beautiful star, the splendid stage craftsmanship of Capellani, and the justly popular novel of Robert W. Chambers. As a picture "The Common Law" rivals some of the most spectacular revues. It is scenically magnificent.—W. K. HOLLANDER in the CHICAGO DAILY NEWS.

"Something Different Wins"—If Lewis J Selznick turns out more subjects as good as this one—a tense, interesting and human story for the sophisticated—he may well stick out his tongue at his disagreeable competitors, who scoffed at his idea of something different. —JUANITA GRAY in the CHICAGO EXAMINER

WINSTON CHURCHILL
THE CRISIS, Winston Churchill's great story of the Civil War, has been made into a gigantic moving picture spectacle by the Selig Polyscope Co., Inc. Many characters appear whose names are enshrined in the hearts of all Americans, among them the titanic figure of Lincoln, the great Emancipator. The entire National Guard of the State of Mississippi was employed at Vicksburg in the filming of the battle scenes described in the novel. It would be hard to conceive of a more comprehensive or elaborate picture of the great struggle between the North and South than is shown by this production, the interest of which can hardly be exaggerated.

Your Lobby—What About It?

LAST Spring an advertising man took hold of a theatre in Montreal with the determination to make it pay in the face of very adverse conditions.

Montreal, as everyone knows, has been racked by the war situation. General business conditions have been very bad. Not a single theatre in the city has made money this summer—except the one we will speak of.

* * *

IN addition to war conditions and facing also the slackness of the summer season, this theatre had another problem. Its clientele is composed about equally of three distinct peoples, French, Jewish and English, each with widely different picture tastes.

But our advertising friend bent cheerfully to his task.

He had some broad and clear ideas about picture theatre advertising.

HE decided, in the first place, that most of his prospective patrons walked by the theatre at least several times a week. His people therefore were his passers-by. A fair proportion attracted in would pack every performance.

So he came to the very simple deduction that the theatre lobby was his prime advertising medium. He would use newspaper space also but judiciously. His energy and brains he would devote to that lobby.

HE would make it work for all it was worth, day and night. He would make it live and talk, and say something new seven days in the week. He would make it a showplace that would get constantly the genuine interest of one hundred per cent. of his passers-by.

And he did.

And since April 23d, for twelve hours every day there has been scarcely one vacant chair in this remarkable theatre, at prices of ten and fifteen cents.

Four feature services are used, a serial and other short specialties, the program not exceeding seven reels. And this advertising man doesn't book the pictures. He advertises another man's selections.

THIS advertising man's name is M. Kashin; and we take off our hat to him.

He says that his lobby advertising policy is applicable to most any theatre anywhere and apparently it is. And he furthermore states that successfully applied, it will make successes of the great majority of the several thousand losing theatres in this country.

A large claim indeed; but we subscribe to it and we invite correspondence from any exhibitor who is interested.

Mr. Kashin's accounts of his lobby displays will continue to appear each week in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

THIS is anything but a new idea—this use of the lobby for advertising purposes. Of course, that's what the lobby is for. But how many exhibitors are making it pack their houses?

You may buy a whole page in a newspaper. But its value to you is what you put in it. The lobby also is an expense, a fixed charge.

If it is not being used for what it's worth, it is a loss that cannot well be carried. It is like an unused or misused newspaper page.

THE aggregate theatre lobby loss, in an advertising way, throughout the country, probably runs well into the millions. Mr. Kashin, who made a survey along these lines in New York City, says that the waste here alone is enormous.

What Mr. Kashin is really doing is this: he is applying to picture theatres the store window dressing which successful retail merchants have brought to such a scientific point and which they could not do without.

In the same respect probably eighty per cent. of the country's theatres are comparatively in the dark ages. And yet a lobby can make or break a theatre as a store front can make or break a store.

MR. KASHIN'S displays are not expensive. Indeed, as the articles explain, he keeps them all under fifteen dollars. Yet they are big, colorful, lively, pleasing—and they say something.

For his material he uses everything available. He makes his own cutouts by mounting his posters. He uses cardboard for his super structures.

He gets motion from his own electric fixtures. He borrows right and left from nearby merchants, giving them advertising for their own wares.

And he oversees every detail. He uses—not money—but brains and energy.

THIS utilization of the lobby is a mighty important factor in the exhibiting business today. We had best look at it for what it really is.

The field is wide open today for scientific lobby dressing and the exhibitor who fails to make his lobby work for him may wake some day to find competition ready to down him in the shape of a big theatre chain based upon this important principle. Such theatres will get the business.

THE problem is up to the manufacturer too. Manufacturers of other kinds of nationally distributed goods are racking their brains to-day to devise novel and attractive store helps, attention-getting devices that will draw customers to their goods. And they have long been at it.

The picture maker has a wide-open opportunity to supply the exhibitor with just such theatre helps.

A FEW years ago people went into picture theatres just because there were motion pictures inside. Today they stop and appraise the wares. They are shoppers. They want to know the quality of before they buy goods.

And the lobby that tells them in the liveliest, most attractive fashion, the lobby that puts up the best selling talk is going to get the customers.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

The Number of Theatres in the Country

FOR the benefit of those who still talk largely and loosely about sixteen, or eighteen or even twenty thousand theatres in the country, we would like to cite the experience of a subscription canvasser for MOTION PICTURE NEWS who went hopefully forth a week ago with an approved list of seventy-four New York picture houses, which had not responded to our circulation efforts.

This is what he found:

14 recently closed.
15 reconverted into stores.
4 permanently closed.
3 not using motion pictures.
2 rarely using motion pictures.
1 indefinite address.

* * *

PROSPECTIVE publishers of trade journals also will be interested in knowing about the remaining thirty-five as subscription prospects.

8 never have, never will read a trade paper.
3 cannot talk or read English.
1 prefers free house organ.
1 reads his "News" at his exchange.
4 claim to subscribe to "News" and do not.
18 new subscribers were secured in two weeks' strenuous work.

* * *

THESE figures, too, probably throw some light upon the reason why it is impossible to get a mass-meeting of more than ten per cent. of the reputed number of New York exhibitors even in the face of a situation which threatens their very existence.

Open Booking or Program—Which?

THE subject of open booking is probably one of the most vital and deeply discussed questions before the industry today. And no wonder.

It touches the exhibitor and distributor with equal force. It makes itself felt as much in the exchange as in the theatre.

EVERY exhibitor and every exchange man, every manufacturer and every distributor in the country has specific views upon the question. Both open booking and program booking have their adherents, and though the matter may be passing out of the experimental stage, there is no readiness on the part of the industry as a whole to cast one aside and embrace the other absolutely.

REALIZING these things, MOTION PICTURE NEWS has determined to devote space for a number of weeks to a discussion of the subject by the leading manufacturers and exhibitors of the country.

There will be alternate articles during the life of the series—a statement from a producer or distributor one week, the next week an article from an exhibitor. Ample opportunity will be given to both groups and to the exponents of both sides of the question to present their arguments and experiences.

The first of the series, "Open Booking or Program—Which?" an interview with Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Film Corporation, will be found on page 2351.

From Bandits to Bathing Suits

AFTER several months of comparative harmlessness—nothing more than "local irritation"—the Ohio Board of Censors has broken out in a new spot.

This time it is against the bathing girls who now and then find their way into the animated weeklies. The decree is an absolute one. Girls in bathing costume will, in future be barred from the screens of the state of Ohio.

THERE is no qualification, as far as we have been able to learn. To the pure—in Ohio, that is—all bathing costumes are impure.

From the all-revealing one-piece suit to the shapeless oilskin, nothing a woman might wear upon the beach can be worn upon the screen—in Ohio.

There seems to be only one thing the unfortunate residents of Ohio can do now. Whenever they want to get the latest news on fashions they will be compelled to go to the vaudeville or burlesque theatres or wait for a musical show to reach the local opera house from New York.

POOR Ohio! The last time the censors thought it necessary to protect its weak-minded citizens, they forbade the exhibition of any pictures of Villa, because Villa was a bandit.

This time Ohioans must not look upon the eternal feminine when she is garbed for a dip, because—well, we'll leave the censors to supply the reason. It's beyond us.

Triangle Plans to Change Its Distributing Scheme

Means Selling Territories to Independent Exchangemen Instead of Operating Own Exchanges—President Aitken, Adam Kessel, Jr., and C. O. Baumann Express Confidence in Success of New Idea—Ince and Sennett Renew Contracts with the Company; Former Gives Entire Commendation to New Marketing Plan Before Leaving for Coast

THE Triangle Film Corporation inaugurated a change in its distributing arrangements last week which, if carried out in its entirety, will have a radical effect on the industry as a whole. It is nothing more nor less than the selling of state rights territory to independent exchange men and doing away with the Triangle exchanges.

The new arrangement was only put into effect in the New York and New England territory. The former was sold to Alfred Weiss, formerly eastern district superintendent of the Triangle company and one of the best known exchange men in the United States. It is stated that he will form a half million dollar corporation to take over this territory. The New England territory was sold to a Boston man closely identified with the interests of another one of the large distributing companies.

Both of these contracts, however, were guarded by many conditions, so that if the plan does not work out to the satisfaction of the Triangle company they can be abrogated on short notice. The intention of the company is to dispose of the territorial rights for the whole country if the proper class of exchange men come forward and purchase the rights.

Ince and Sennett Renew Contracts

Another important development of the past week is the fact that both Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett have renewed their contracts with the Triangle Corporation. It is stated, however, that the new contracts are different in many respects from those that were in effect when Triangle was first formed. At any rate Mack Sennett has left New York for the coast. Just before leaving Friday afternoon he said to a representative of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "Yes, I have renewed my contract with Triangle and believe that under the new arrangement everything will go along in a manner satisfactory to all concerned."

Though Mr. Sennett would not commit himself it can be authoritatively stated that under the new arrangement Keystone comedies will continue to be released through the Triangle offices, but that they will be virtually on the open market. In other words, an exhibitor in order to book the Keystone comedies will not be forced to book the entire Triangle program. This is a radical departure from the way things have been in the past.

The Triangle Corporation in speaking of its new plan to dispose of its product through the independent exchanges of the country calls it "a semi-co-operative plan of distribution which permits the return to active participation in film circulation of the independent exchange man."

President Aitken's Statement

In an authorized statement from Harry E. Aitken, president of Triangle, he says: "The idea on which we are now working tends in two directions—first, toward the independent ownership of exchanges through which Triangle Films will be supplied to theatres, and second, toward a constant increase in the number of smaller exchanges within each general exchange district.

"It is not unnatural that the opportunity to conduct a business of their own should be attracting the most vigorous and able film men the country over. A good many who have owned exchanges in the past, but who, because they refused to work for large corporations as exchange managers, have actually left the business, are indicating to us their desire to return to it again as independent exchange men.

"The exhibitor in any district will not (when this system is thoroughly installed) be dealing with the agent of a distant concern, but with the owner of a nearby independent business. The whole change, while it seems a radical one, is as a matter of fact a natural development caused by the demand on the part of the exhibitor for better service, and on the part of the public for better film."

Adam Kessel, Jr., president of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, controlling both the Keystone and Kay-Bee studios, stated that he was in the most hearty accord with every detail of the new arrangement. He said:

"I believe the new co-operative plan is one that is going to be of the greatest possible benefit to the industry as a whole. While enormous sums have been necessarily used in the installation of the numerous branch offices of the great manufacturing and distributing companies, this expenditure has not been the greatest disturbing element of the existing film conditions throughout the country. To my mind it has been the lack of personal interest and personal touch in the relations of the branch managers and the exhibitors.

"Manufacturers Benefited"

"The manufacturers now contributing to the Triangle service will obviously be greatly benefited by the new arrangement, for they will now be permitted to give all their time and attention to the manufacturing of film, leaving the producers—and this includes myself—to devote all their time to the production of better pictures. While the public may not realize this, it is going to be of the greatest possible service in raising the quality of Triangle product from this time on. Speaking for Kessel and Baumann, I can say that the new Triangle plan is most heartily endorsed by us."

Charles O. Baumann, vice president of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, expressed his sincere approval of the new Triangle distributing plan, and its application to the best interests of the film industry. He said: "We must recognize that the principle of profit sharing is one that is of growing importance in our commercial development in this country, and I welcome a method of bringing this principle into the film industry. Too long have we been considered as outside the lines of reasonable and modern business development.

"Our methods have, to more conservative business men, seemed unsound, and I most sincerely believe that a move of this kind wherein individual enterprise is given an impetus and an incentive to manifest itself in the dstributing centres, and thereby build up a greater volume of business must of necessity give a healthy tone to the industry everywhere.

"I know that the manufacturing producers will now be permitted to give their whole attention to improving their product, and I am confident that this new step of the Triangle Film Corporation is but the herald of a complete change that is going to lead to far better conditions in what has become the fifth of the great industries of the country."

Thomas H. Ince, just prior to his departure for Los Angeles, gave his entire commendation to the new plan of the Triangle Film Corporation. As Mr. Ince is one of the prime cogs in the Triangle machine, his approval has definite and important significance. He said:

Baumann Endorses New Plan

"When I say that the new Triangle plan of distribution has my entire approval, I think I have said all that can be asked. My reasons are purely personal ones, in one way, and quite general ones from another view. I think that this return to a measure of independence in the exchanges and distribution is a marked step forward, and one that I have been hoping for during some years. The tendency in the motion picture industry has apparently been quite away from this present Triangle plan, and I think I am not alone when I say that this has seemed quite opposite to the best interests, not only of the producers of film, but of the exhibitors and of the public."

Concerning the new Triangle plan as outlined by President Aitken, Mack Sennett, producer of the famous Keystone comedies, and who, necessarily, is a vital factor in the new arrangement, said:

"I am heartily in accord with the new Triangle plan. I feel that the Triangle Film Corporation has made a long stride forward in making this move, and I believe it to be solidly in accord with advanced commercial practice, for the monopolistic tendencies that have been growing up in the film business are not at all in line, so far as my view goes, with the advance in business methods of recent years.

"One of the features of the new plan that particularly appeals to me is the opportunity it gives me, as a producer, to get closer, not only to the exchange men, but to the exhibitor, and I am pleased to know that I am to consider now that the exchange is in reality my partner, that my success depends upon the success of the exchange men, and that both of us have a common interest, a common working point, that must inevitably produce better results for all concerned."

Alfred Weiss feels that he has closed one of the biggest local film deals on record. In an authorized statement he says: "After H. E. Aitken, president of the Triangle Film Corporation, and its officers decided to interest local capital in the twenty-one branch offices on a chain stretching across from Maine to California, Mr. Weiss was the first man who was invited to bid for the New York franchise. While the deal involved over a half million dollars, Mr. Weiss was not overawed, and contracts were signed one week after the proposition was suggested to him.

Alfred Weiss

"The Triangle local franchise gives the holder the right to rent, circulate and distribute the brands under the Triangle trademark, such as Fine Arts, Ince-Kay Bee and Keystone productions and conduct a regular exchange business, the same as heretofore conducted by the general organization."

Mr. Weiss has formed a half million dollar corporation to take over this territory, of which he is the president and general manager. He is a veteran exchange operator and started more than fifteen years ago, the Alfred Weiss Film Exchange at 219 Sixth avenue, New York City, and which for years was one of the most popular in the metropolitan territory. He later sold out to the General Film Company and aligned himself with the Mutual on the invitation of Mr. Aitken, then president of that corporation.

BOOTH TARKINGTON SEES "THE CRISIS"

Booth Tarkington was present at the first private showing of William N. Selig's photoplay, "The Crisis," at the Strand theatre, Friday morning, September 29.

Mr. Selig has just completed arrangements for producing Mr. Tarkington's famous novel, "Beaucaire."

THOMPSON RESIGNS FROM PARAMOUNT

Wallace Thompson has resigned as director of publications and advertising of the Paramount Pictures Corporation. He was brought to Paramount by W. W. Hodkinson last April, when the latter was president of the company, and was placed in executive charge of publicity, advertising, house organs and pictographs. He left the managing editorship of the Popular Science Monthly to join Paramount. Previous to his connection with the Popular Science Monthly, Mr. Thompson was managing editor of Town and Country, and before that was in magazine and newspaper work in the West, Mexico and France.

Mr. Thompson handled the recent Convention of Exchange Managers and Publicity Men for Paramount in Chicago last July, and planned and put under way the Paramount scheme of a publicity manager in each exchange which was the backbone of the Paramount drive of co-operative publicity and trade advertising.

Mr. Thompson will remain in the motion picture business, but did not care to discuss his plans at the present time.

WARNING TO MICHIGAN EXHIBITORS

Definite information has been received that Michigan exhibitors will likely have to pay a state license as follows: $300 in cities of 5000 population or less, and from that up to $1000, according to population.

Unless Michigan exhibitors get together at once and form some plan through which concerted action can be taken, they will wake up some morning to find that it will be necessary to close their doors to the public.

Get in touch with A. J. Moeller, secretary Michigan Branch No. 4, M. P. E. L. of A., at Howell, Mich., at once for detailed information.

WOMAN WILL INTRODUCE "FALL OF A NATION" TO FRANCE

The recent great success of feminine agents in handling matters theatrical with France, has prompted Thomas Dixon to appoint Flora MacDonald as the traveling representative of "The Fall of a Nation" in the land of the tricolor. Provided with a sample print and much advertising material, she sailed on the French liner Rochambeau on Saturday, September 30. Contracts for the French exhibition of the spectacle are making on this side of the water, so that Miss MacDonald's work will be chiefly to supervise the French productions. Besides her notable acting as Angela Benda in the play, she has had much business experience.

One hundred and fifty days of "The Fall of a Nation" have already been booked by the greater Vitagraph in this country. At several of the exchanges private presentations with elaborate musical features are given to exhibitors. W. C. Burns, general manager of the National Drama Corporation, attended an extremely successful up-State showing of this sort at the Syracuse V-L-S-E Exchange, September 21. Mr. Burns was the guest of Exchange Manager F. F. Hartich. The visitor favored the exhibitors with a short and interesting account of how the Dixon spectacle was made in California.

THANHOUSER TO RELEASE "HIDDEN VALLEY" IN NOVEMBER

A drama, with beautiful and absorbing scenes laid in South Africa, is "Hidden Valley" starring Valkyrien, which will be released by Thanhouser through Pathe in November.

Valkyrien, the beautiful Danish dancer, plays the part of the "White Goddess" of a wild tribe of ostrich hunters. The "goddess," an American girl, has been captured by the natives, who are about to sacrifice her to their water god when aid arrives in the person of a young New Yorker, played by Boyd Marshall.

The feature was directed by Ernest Warde and the South African scenes, notable for artistic photography, were made in Florida. Mr. Warde himself plays the part of the high priest of the savage tribe.

STARS PLACED BY PACKARD THEATRICAL EXCHANGE

The Packard Theatrical Exchange announces the following recent film engagements negotiated through their agency:

Marie Shotwell and Robert Connors with the Frohman Amusement Corporation for "The Witching Hour"; Robert Cain with the Edison Company, supporting Ann Murdock; Charles Gotthold and Montague Love with the Astra Film Company; and Alice May with the Fox Film Corporation.

DAVIDSON WITH THE NEW STANDARD IN TORONTO

It has been officially announced through the Toronto newspapers that H. W. Davidson, formerly of the World and Universal Companies, is now in charge of the Ontario branch of the New Standard Film Company headed by Mr. Sawyer.

Activities of the National Association

Action on Censorship Brings in a Flock of New Members—Organization of Equipment and Supplies Division—Active Political Campaign Planned—Philadelphia Exhibitors to Fight Censorship—Ochs Reports New Hampshire Men Are Ready to Combat Censorship in Coming Session of the Legislature

THE National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, having declared itself against any form of legal censorship, several powerful interests, which were waiting for a pronouncement on this very question, decided to become a part of the great trade organization. These include the Mutual, Triangle, Fox, Kalem, Thanhouser, Pathe, Wharton, Inc., Crystal, Cosmofotofilm and the Kinecartoon. David Wark, Griffith, whose address on censorship was one of the features of the gathering that unanimously decided against it, has also taken an individual membership.

The applications are coming in from all sections of the industry and the team work of the boosters, both by word of mouth and by correspondence, has been productive of the most gratifying results. It is argued—advancing a fact already demonstrated—that if you are not in the association, you are not in the industry. The various meetings have been marked by enthusiasm and a constructive purpose that acts at once to reach accomplishment.

There was a luncheon meeting at Shanley's, Forty-third street and Broadway, on Wednesday last, when the Equipment and Supplies Branch discussed the necessity of organizing its particular branch of trade into a country-wide organization, which would deal, through the national association, with some of the problems that sorely press the dealer at present. There were present E. S. Porter, of the Precision Machine Company; E. Kendall Gillette; Walter J. Moore, of the H. C. Miner Lithograph Company; J. H. Hallberg of New York; Fred Hawley, of the Motion Picture Directory; J. F. Coufal, of the Novelty Slide Company; and William M. Seabury, general counsel of the association, who gave legal guidance regarding the proposed organization, its purposes, its interrelation with the central body and the co-operative and protective limitations.

The Equipment and Supplies Division is the third of the big sections to organize and the date of its general meeting for that purpose has been fixed for Wednesday, October 4, at 2:30 P. M. at the National headquarters in the Times Building.

The National standing committee will meet for the purpose of organization during the coming week. Their work is of basic importance and indicates the thoroughness with which the methods of big business is working to shape the industry to power, vigor and efficiency. These committees are Standards, Nicholas Power, chairman; Fire Protection, Regulation and Insurance, Jesse Lasky; Transportation, J. Stuart Blackton; Industrial Economics, Richard A. Rowland; Labor, P. A. Powers.

A campaign conference was held during the week and several letters were received from political candidates requesting the support of the national association and advancing their reasons therefor. The campaign committee, of which the chairman is Lee Ochs, president of the Exhibitors' League of America, will meet next week to hear his report.

Mr. Ochs has already reported that the exhibitors of New Hampshire have begun to effect a strong organization to combat hostile legislation at the coming session of the legislature. The Exhibitors' League will give aid and direction throughout New England.

The national association faces a year that will be filled with activities all over the country, for the forty-four legislatures soon to convene will be watched for adverse legislation. Wherever it develops all of the resources of the organization will be called into play to defeat it. Legal talent and effective speakers familiar with the work will be aided by the power of the exhibitor to influence public sentiment by the screen. The exhibitors of Philadelphia, where censorship is most onerous, had arranged for a conference with Mr. Ochs on Sunday, October 1, at which time he told how the campaign was won in New York against Senator Cristman, author of the Cristman Censorship bill, and offer advice on the local situation. Afterwards he delivered an address during the evening at the Family theatre, Philadelphia.

Greater Vitagraph Purchases "Within the Law"

Pays Selwyn & Company Big Price for A. H. Woods' Success, Which Ran Two Solid Seasons in New York

EXHIBITORS who have been using Greater Vitagraph productions will be able before very long to announce "Within the Law" as one of their coming attractions. Which is by way of saying that Vitagraph has purchased the motion picture rights to the biggest melodrama of the decade from Selwyn & Company, the producers who have made a million dollars with it as a stage production.

The purchase price, it is said, was the highest ever paid for a motion picture scenario, Vitagraph's bid being only one of a great many offers made for Bayard Veiller's greatest play.

"Within the Law" opened the Eltinge theatre in New York, in September, 1912, and ran two solid seasons. With one accord the dramatic critics praised it as the exceptional play hit, and predicted the run which it enjoyed. The following year, twelve road companies went on tour with "Within the Law," with such stars of the stage as Jane Cowl, Margaret Illington and Helen Ware playing the same part at the same time.

It was the most successful play, American-made, that ever was produced in London, and remained on the boards there for a solid year. It was also a great success in Spain, and would have been put on in the other European countries had not the war interfered. "Within the Law" also ran a full year in Australia, and is still being played by road companies in the United States.

The Greater Vitagraph organization feels equally confident about its success as a Blue Ribbon Feature, and will immediately get together a representative cast, including Vitagraph favorites, for its production.

"Within the Law" is a dramatic exposition of the subtle manipulation of the laws to serve evil ends. It shows how criminal parasites, criminally disposed, live successfully and affluently, and still remain "Within the Law." Cropping out from the main story is a preachment against a capital that underpays its hirelings and forces them into dishonesty. Mr. Veiller, the playwright, has not hesitated to take his fling at department store methods, whereby shop girls are compelled to stand on their feet nine hours a day for a wage too small to allow them ordinary necessities.

MARYLAND CENSORS YIELD TO FILM MEN'S REQUEST

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Baltimore, September 30.

Film men representing all of the leading motion picture producers of the country met in Baltimore several days ago and paid an official visit to the members of the Maryland Board of Motion Picture Censors, with a view of having set back the date for censoring pictures released prior to the date of commission of the censor board. The board has been censoring all pictures released since June 26, when censorship became effective.

It had been their intention to censor all pictures now being shown and subsequent to the latter date on and after November 1. The film men asked that the censoring of these pictures be delayed until March 1 of next year. It was finally decided to make the date January 1.

LIQUOR MEN IN ONTARIO SEEK OPENINGS IN FILM FIELD, FOLLOWING PROHIBITION

One after effect of the Prohibition measure which has just come into force in Ontario, Canada, is that several men formerly in the liquor business are now in the market for movie theatres. These men are said to have considerable capital at their disposal and it is said that they will become prominent figures in the industry during the coming year.

Three Scenes from Coming Triangle Productions.—Left and Right, Louise Glaum and Charles K. French in "Somewhere in France" (Kay Bee); Center, Mildred Harris, Sir Herbert Tree and Josephine Crowell in "Old Folks at Home" (Fine Arts)

TRIANGLE USES TRAILERS TO ANNOUNCE COMING RELEASES

The Triangle Film Corporation has inaugurated a distinct novelty that is generating large quantities of satisfaction in the breasts of the exhibitors throughout the country. With each release now sent forth by Triangle goes from 75 to 100 feet of pictorial trailer, calling attention to the high spots and features in the succeeding release.

The new trailer is artistically designed, and represents considerable care of selection on the part of the studios, being made up or from two to three different scenes from the coming play, and some specially prepared sub-titles indicating the character of the play, together with the star appearing therein, and also the features of the drama. In commenting upon the new trailers, H. E. Aitken, president of the Triangle Film Corporation, said:

"Exhibitors have written us most enthusiastically about the new trailers, and we are more than pleased with the result. One man writes us: 'In my opinion this trailer is one of the best advertisements you could give the coming attractions. Each trailer is different and immediately attracts attention.' Another exhibitor says: 'We feel you have made a long step in advance in giving us these splendid trailers. Triangle is to be congratulated on the enterprise displayed. We feel they are most valuable and are sure to increase our business.'"

TOOKER, MAYALL AND ALICE GALE RETURN TO FOX FILMS

William Tooker, Herschel Mayall and Alice Gale, all of whom are well-known as photo players, have returned to the William Fox forces.

Mr. Tooker will have a prominent part in the new picture begun last week by Virginia Pearson, under the direction of Kenean Buel. He played previously in four William Fox dramas: "East Lynne," "The Fool's Revenge," "A Modern Thelma" and "Ambition."

Mr. Mayall had the role of the millionaire mine-owner in "The Beast." He is also recalled as the king in "Civilization."

Miss Gale is cast for a part in a new production. She appeared in "Sins of Men" and has a record of thirty years' success on the stage.

William L. Sherry Opens Extensive New Quarters

Entire Ninth Floor of the Godfrey Building Now Devoted to New York Exchange of Paramount Pictures

THE William L. Sherry Feature Film Co. formally opened its new offices which occupy the entire ninth floor of the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, on Tuesday evening, September 26. This New York exchange for Paramount pictures was previously located at 126 West 46th street, but expansion of business in the last year necessitated a move to larger quarters.

Mr. Sherry, head of the company began his present business in March, 1913, in the Times Building with one office, one assistant and one picture, the Famous Players release "The Prisoner of Zenda." Now when he handles the entire output of Paramount Pictures Corporation, he has taken 8,700 square feet of floor space.

The office is the largest exchange headquarters in New York. Forty-one employes are at work in the various departments. A valuable feature of the new home of the Sherry Features is the installation of two fireproof, built-in film vaults and another of like sort for office valuables. The offices are equipped with mahogany furniture throughout. In each of the seven private offices there is a stenographer's desk, although there is one large room where the typists do general work. Nineteen oil paintings of Paramount stars adorn the walls.

The poster and film rooms adjoin the entrance to the freight elevators, and these departments are entirely separate from the executive offices. A magnificent projection room is in the center of the floor. The office also boasts possession of its own printing plant for publicity purposes, and has two multi-color processes for the printing of advertising matter for the help of the exhibitor.

Among the prominent film people who attended the formal opening of the offices were, James Steele, Mitchell Mark, Harold Edel, Hiram Abrams, Raymond Pauley, Carl Pierce, Kenneth Hodkinson and Lenore Ulrich.

First Frank Powell Picture Shown Before Large Audience

"Charity?" with Creighton Hale, Linda A. Griffith and Sheldon Lewis, Given on New York Theatre Roof with Representative Gathering Present—Will Go State Rights

"CHARITY?" the first feature of the Frank Powell Productions, Inc., in which appear Creighton Hale, Linda A. Griffith and Sheldon Lewis, was given a private showing at Loew's New York Theatre Roof before an audience unusual in size and character. Present were not only practically every person of prominence in the picture world, but as well most of those interested in the recent charities and subsequent controversy, reports of which have been given great prominence in the New York papers for the past few months.

Among the audience that packed the New York Roof were: Monsignor J. J. Dunn, Archbishopric of New York; Father William B. Farrell, Dr. James J. Higgins, Rev. W. A. Courtney, Hon. John A. Kingsbury, Commissioner of Public Charities of the City of New York, and Deputy Commissioners Henry C. Wright, Wm. J. Doherty, George G. Thomson, and Stanley H. Howe, secretary of the Board of Public Charities; Dr. Ludwig B. Bernstein, of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society; Dr. R. R. Reeder, of the Orphan Asylum in the City of New York, and John A. Sleicher, editor of Leslie's Weekly. Also present were: Lillian Russell and Mme. Marie Cross Newhaus, president of the Society of Beaux Arts.

The music which accompanied the presentation of the picture was arranged by Silvio Hein, and the orchestra was directed by A. Baldwin Sloane.

"Charity?" will be released on a state rights basis.

JONES STRAIGHTENS OUT MOROSCO-PALLAS TANGLES

Grover Jones, of the Morosco-Palias organization, has been placed in charge of the department that straightens out the tangles and cross wires which might interfere with the smooth running machinery of picture producing. The studio is now running along at top speed, and all adjustments and changes required by the producers pass through this novel clearing house.

Open Booking or the Program—Which?—I

"Effect of the Open Booking Plan Will Be to Change the Character of Motion Picture Theatres," Says Adolph Zukor, President of Famous Players-Lasky—"It Is a Grave Menace to the Exhibitor and If Generally Adopted Will Eventually Put Him Out of Business"

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This article is the first of a series on a question which has agitated both producer and exhibitor for some time. MOTION PICTURE NEWS, anxious to throw light on a debatable subject, will publish the views of men in favor and against the open booking plan and program distribution of features.

ADOLPH ZUKOR, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has probably given as much thought to the controversy of open booking versus program as any man in the industry, and his conclusions are well worthy of serious consideration. He has analyzed the question purely on its merits, gone in detail into all of its ramifications and has traced out its inevitable effect on the exhibitor and the producer.

As a result of all his reasoning he reaches the two following major conclusions: Open booking if pursued to its logical and final application will eventually drive the present-day motion picture exhibitor out of business. It will not affect the producer to any appreciable extent, for with the inauguration of this policy it merely means the changing of his business to meet new conditions. It will not drive him out of business, it will not affect either his gross or his net income to a measurable degree. It will change the character of his business but in changing it the aggregate receipts will not be changed.

Mr. Zukor reached these conclusions by a system of logic that seems almost irrefutable and in doing so presented a new angle of this much discussed subject. He said, "The question of open booking is a menace to the exhibitor of to-day and if adopted will eventually put him out of business. To best drive home this truth let us examine carefully the motion picture theatre as it is to-day. It holds a position analogous to that of the variety theatre, except that its entertainment is pictures instead of the direct efforts of actors and actresses.

Program a Variety Offering

"Its program is made up of a variety offering, its whole keynote is that of a variety of entertainment. How long would the public patronize a motion picture theatre that continually presented the same kind of pictures. The motion picture theatre can keep open three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, because it is presenting something different all of the time. This it has been able to do because there have been in the market several programs from which the exhibitor could choose, programs with a definite policy, with a definite list of stars, with a definite offering of picture plays which the exhibitor knows about in advance, and which he can advertise with the sure knowledge that when the release date arrives he will have that picture in his theatre to offer to his patrons. These programs have been compiled and put together by the producer with this idea of variety in mind, for variety of attraction is the main feature of success for both the exhibitor and producer.

"Now let us examine the effect of open booking on this system and see where it will lead. If the aggregate return of the producer for his output does not exceed his cost of production and operation he must either go out of business or change the character of his business. Most assuredly he is not going out of business. With the inauguration of open booking and the casting aside of the program, what will naturally result? The producer will take those stars which have been most successful and exploit them. He will put them out in productions and then charge for those productions a price commensurate with their cost and their salability. Instead of using his large list of stars to make up a program of consistent average quality he will take the few who have been phenominally successful and put them out in pictures at a greatly advanced price, in pictures that he is sure that he can get his money back with.

Effect on the Exhibitor

"What is the effect of this on the exhibitor. It means that he will have to change the character of his theatre from that of a variety house to that comparable to a theatre playing legitimate stage attractions. For instance, let us say that the producer puts out a picture costing one hundred thousand dollars. He must obtain a greater price for that picture than one costing twenty thousand. The exhibitor must in order to make it pay give it a longer run. Let us say that he runs it for a month. Then the next picture that he books is not up to the quality of the first and he can only run it one week. His third may be good for two weeks and so on. What is the effect of this. He is making each individual picture the attraction, just the same as each stage success is the attraction at the legitimate theatre.

"Now it frequently happens that a legitimate theatre obtains a run of unsuccessful attractions, or if it cannot obtain successful attractions, is dark. At a scale of prices ranging from two dollars down a theatre of this class can make between fifty and a hundred thousand dollars or more in one season. Its loss for the same period may be equally great. Let us suppose that it has two unsuccessful years, and the third year obtains a big success. At the two dollar scale of prices, this one successful year will make up for the two unsuccessful ones. This is impossible with a motion picture theatre playing to a ten-cent admission price, or even with a slightly higher price of admission.

"Therefore the effect of open booking will be to change the motion picture thetre from a variety house in which the main idea consists of enhancing the value of the theatre as an institution providing the kind of entertainment which its patrons desire, and bringing them back week after week, to a house in which each individual picture shown is the only drawing feature. If the exhibitor is lucky he may succeed in showing a balance on the right side of his ledger at the end of the year but only if he is lucky, for with his small admission price he cannot afford more than one or two failures. With open booking he changes the character of his business from a surety to a gamble, with the continual prospect before him that he may make a mistake in judgment, to the detriment of his pocketbook.

"Such will be the real effect of the general acceptance of the policy of open booking. It will change the whole character of the business and the exhibitor will be the one who will stand the greatest risk and the greatest loss."

BOLSTER IS BUSINESS MANAGER OF VITAGRAPH

A promotion of importance in the executive ranks of Greater Vitagraph has just been made by President Albert E. Smith in the appointment of Harold Bolster as business manager.

This step has followed President Smith's consideration of the increased responsibility falling upon the president's office, after the recent $25,000,000 recapitalization of the company. To relieve Mr. Smith of much of the detail involved in this increased responsibility, Mr. Bolster has been clothed with definite authority appertaining to business affairs of Greater Vitagraph.

Mr. Bolster, young, energetic and modest, has been little known except within the organization, though he has been engaged over a year in constructive work as assistant to the executive. His success in bringing forth results has been recognized in the higher appointment by Mr. Smith.

HOT CENSORSHIP FIGHT LOOMS IN KANSAS

Kansas will have the hottest fight in the history of censorship at the general election, for apparently this will be an important issue in the activity of numerous associations. An interesting feature of the contest is that the partisans of strict censorship by the state seem to be confusing the issue, through a suggestion that the legislature take the censorship away from the superintendent of public instruction and give it to another department of the state government. This will mean that even the defeat of the present superintendent—if his conduct of the censorship is made an issue—will not result in any change in the policy necessarily. The various associations are laying their wires now for a firm stand with reference to censorship when the legislature meets.

"THE SUNBEAM" FOR MABEL TALIAFERRO

"The Sunbeam" will be the name of Mabel Taliaferro's next Metro-Rolfe picture play following "The Dawn of Love." Miss Taliaferro will play the part of a girl who brings sunshine to the lives of all those with whom she comes in contact. Very little sunshine, however, filters into her own life, her happiness until the interesting denuement being the reflected joy of others.

Some of the leading scenes in "The Sunbeam" are laid in a candy factory. Everything in the life of the gruff owner, played by that veteran actor of sterling qualities, Gerald Griffin, is sweet, so Prue, the Sunbeam, tells him, except his disposition. So she proceeds to change that. The play is originally from the pen of Shannon Fife, revised and prepared for the screen by June Mathis, these writers also being responsible for another Mabel Taliaferro photoplay, "God's Half Acre." Edwin Carewe, who has directed all Miss Taliaferro's photoplays at the Rolfe studio, will again be her director in this picture.

ELEANOR WOODRUFF RETURNS TO STAGE

After three years of picture work, Eleanor Woodruff has returned to the "legitimate" stage, and is now playing in New York as leading woman with Otis Skinner in "Mister Antonio," a play by Booth Tarkington.

Miss Woodruff's work in pictures with Pathe, Vitagraph, World Film and other big producing companies, is well known to picture people, and her temporary abandonment of picture work, in the face of some of the best offers she has ever had, make her reasons important. Briefly summed up they are: "Every picture player gets into a rut and is apt to forget much of the technique of the stage after several years of work in pictures, and a return to the hard work and almost endless rehearsals of the stage gives them a new angle on their work and a freshness which is of great value."

Exhibitors Act on Question of Return Express Charges

Three Borough Presidents of New York Branch Given Power of Attorney to Act for Their Locals—125 Exhibitors Present

AT a mass meeting of Greater New York and New Jersey exhibitors held under the auspices of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League in Wurlitzer Hall, New York City, on Wednesday, September 27, stringent measures were adopted by the showmen to combat with the recent announcement from the exchangemens' organization that the exhibitors would be obliged to pay all express charges on their films.

There were approximately a hundred and twenty-five exhibitors present, including the Jersey men who attended unofficially.

The three borough presidents of the New York branch of the league were given power of attorney to act in behalf of their respective locals. The meeting, however, was not exclusively a league affair as many among those present were affiliated with none of the three Greater New York branches.

A motion was made by the presidents to the effect that unless the exchangemen rescinded their recent order that exhibitors in the future would be obliged to pay return express charges of films as well as the first charges, exhibitors would reply by cancellation of their contracts.

It is reported that all those exhibitors present affixed their signatures to the paper, except those from New Jersey. These men will take the matter up with their own organizations in an effort to follow suit.

The exhibitors feel that it is an injustice for them to pay express charges on both the receiving and shipment of the films. The smaller theatre men, specially those who are located at a distance from the exchange territory, and who book from a number of exchanges would find it difficult to bear the increased burden, as in some instances the extra cost of expressage would result in his rental price being almost doubled.

The movement is expected to spread through other sections of the country providing an equitable adjustment of difficulties can not be reached soon. At the mass meeting several exhibitors expressed the opinion that if the exchanges were allowed to have their own way this time, they might be encouraged to impose upon the exhibitors in other ways in the future.

New Christie Film Laboratories Completed on Coast

First Prints Made at the Plant Have Been Shipped to Exchanges—Additional Contracts Made During Past Week with Exchanges by Charles Christie

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, Oct. 1.

THE Christie Film Company's new laboratories were completed this week, and the first prints made there have been shipped to exchanges for their October 9 and 16 releases. The factory has all modern machinery, and is under the supervision of William Horsley, formerly in charge of the Centaur laboratory at Bayonne, New Jersey, and who built Universal City.

The release for October 9 is titled "His Wedding Night," which offers Billie Rhodes as the bride; Nolan Leary, the groom; Harry Ham the best man, and Stella Adams and Harry Rattenberry as mother and father of the girl. The film has many comedy situations, dealing as it does with the misfortunes which befall the groom on his wedding day, the bride having selected Friday, the 13th, for the event. The day starts with a black cat crossing his path, and from then on hard luck comes in large and numerous packages. Finally, while the service is being performed, he forgets the instruction given him by his tailor when it was necessary for him to borrow a suit after his own had been stolen. He stoops to pick up the ring, and his trousers will not stand the strain. The guests not understanding what has happened, crowd into the room adjoining to which he and the bride fled, and there find him hidden behind a screen while the trousers are being repaired by the bride.

"The Making Over Mother" is the release for October 16. In it Stella Adams has the featured part of mother-in-law, who comes to visit her daughter and Mr. Newlywed, and is given such excellent treatment at the parisian beauty parlor, that the son-in-law, never having met her, starts a flirtation with her across the tables at a cafe, while she is waiting to meet his wife.

Lou-Tellegen Will Appear on the Stage in Screen Success

Lasky Star Terminates Spring and Summer Engagement with Company to Present Before the Footlights One of the Dramas He Enacted for Camera

LOU-TELLEGEN, Lasky star, upon completion of "The Black Wolf," which is now in the course of production at the Lasky studios in Hollywood, will terminate his spring and summer engagement with the Lasky Company and return to the stage.

Reversing the usual order Lou-Tellegen will this winter appear in a dramatization of one of the screen plays in which he has been presented by the Lasky Company. Just which screen play he will reproduce on the stage is not yet determined, but among the dramas in which he has been starred by the Lasky Company are many that possess stage possibilities, notably "The Victory of Conscience," his last release on the Paramount program, which has already attained a great popularity throughout the country. Lou-Tellegen plans to tour the country in this new play, starting from Los Angeles so that the following which he has created through his screen work for the Lasky Company may be able to see him in person in the living form in one of the plays in which he appeared in shadow.

The photoplay which Lou-Tellegen will adapt to the stage for his use will be announced shortly. Thus for one of the few times since the association of the screen with popular stage stars the public will be able to choose between the play on the stage and screen in the same play.

It is announced by the Lasky Company that after the completion of Lou-Tellegen's tour through the country he will return to the screen under its management.

NEXT GAUMONT SERIES "THE VAMPIRES"

With the conclusion of "Fantomas," the popular screen version of the depredations of the greatest criminal in the world, the Gaumont Company is preparing a longer series for release through Mutual. This is "The Vampires, or the Arch Criminals of Paris."

"Fox Organization Ready for World Market"—Sheehan

General Manager, Returned from Extended Stay Abroad, Reports Company Established in Great Britain and Predicts That William Fox Will Commence Manufacture and Production in Europe After the War—Motion Picture Business Booming in England, He Reports; English Exhibitor a Keen Showman in Every Way

WINFIELD R. Sheehan, general manager for the Fox Film Corporation, returned recently from England and France with many interesting impressions of the motion picture industry under war conditions. During his trip he visited every town of any size in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales for the purpose of organizing the Fox Exchanges throughout the British Isles. He returns with a total of sixty-seven exchanges completely organized under his direct supervision.

"With the completion of this work, William Fox now has a well established organization giving his product a world market," said Mr. Sheehan in speaking of his trip with a representative of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "With a market taking in the whole globe and a distribution system complete in every detail, he can go ahead building up better and better productions, not productions based on the individuality of some high priced star, but pictures which in every department are the best that money and brains can make them."

Fox Established in Britain

"The work of establishing the Fox pictures in the British Isles has been complete in every detail. The country is covered with exchange centers as complete or possibly even more so than in this country. Every part of the distribution work will be done in England, including the supplying of all of the advertising matter used for the exploitation of the pictures. In the near future a complete developing and printing plant will be built so that we will only have to ship our negatives to the other side.

"I hope as a result of establishing the Fox pictures in England, that in the near future it will result in a more general exchange of pictures between the two countries, a sort of a reciprocity arrangement, whereby the English manufacturers will be able to show their pictures in this country with the same facility and with just as much profit as American pictures are shown over there.

"There are many difficulties in the way of bringing this about, the principle one being that the English pictures have not as yet reached the American standard of quality. They have most excellent writers and actors, but have not as yet been able to utilize them to the best advantage. With so many first class American pictures now before them, however, it should not take them long to reach this stage of quality production.

Fox May Manufacture in Europe

"Plans are now being put into effect for the Fox Company to commence producing and manufacturing in Europe as soon as conditions are right, probably immediately on the conclusion of the present war. Studios are to be established in England, France and Italy, completely equipped in every way for the production of the Fox standard of pictures.

The Fox Offices in London; Above, Winfield R. Sheehan, General Manager of the Corporation

"The motion picture business in England is booming. All of the theatres are open and doing a rushing business, even though many of the managers and members of the staffs are 'somewhere in France,' fighting for their country. No new theatres are being built, however, owing to government restrictions on account of the great shortage of both material and labor."

Mr. Sheehan then told of an amusing, and at the same time pathetic experience he had when he bought the building for the Fox headquarters at 76 Old Compton street. The building needed most extensive alterations before it could be used for the purpose for which it was intended, but it was almost impossible to obtain mechanics in any of the trades as all of the able bodied men were away at the front. After much scurrying around he gathered together a gang of six or eight men, all of them elderly and most of them with some affliction.

"It was a typical collection of the lame, the halt, and the blind," he said, "but it was the best that could be obtained. Once it was assembled, however, I took particular care to keep it together and this same gang of mechanics did all of the alterations in the buildings which I bought later in Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, Leeds, New-Castle-on-Tyne, Glasgow and Dublin. These buildings are undoubtedly the best arranged and the best equipped exchanges in the British Isles.

Main Office Is Five Stories High

"The main office in London is five stories and basement high. The first floor is given over to the London Exchange, the second contains the scenario and film editing department and a completely equipped projection room, the third floor the manager's office, the contract and sales departments, the fourth floor the publicity and bookkeeping departments, the fifth floor is used as a supply room and the basement contains ten fire and burglar proof vaults for the storage of film and a complete film repair department.

"The whole of our English staff is comprised of Englishmen. The managing director is Ernest Reed, well known for his keen ability throughout the whole British Isles. W. Horace Biss, formerly on the staff of the Bioscope, is director of publicity, and Harry Engholm is scenario editor. All of our pictures are re-edited and given new sub-titles when they reach England.

"I found the English exhibitor a keen showman in every way, shape and manner. They are well informed, know every detail and branch of their business, and are on tip toes all of the time to take advantage of every legitimate means that will increase that business. There were two things that impressed me about the English picture palaces.

"Practically every one of them has its own individual house organ put together in attractive style for the information of their patrons, and the fact that every theatre cleans and repairs every reel of film before it is sent back to the exchange. These are features that exhibitors in this country would do well to imitate.

"I also want to say a word in praise of the English trade press. The three papers, the Kinnematograph Weekly, the Cinema and the Bioscope are alive to every interest of the trade, cover the field thoroughly, and are fair and just in their reviews and comments.

"The Fox Film Corporation now has offices circling the globe. The office in Rome covers Italy, Egypt, and the Balkans; the one in Paris covers France, Switzerland, Portugal, Spain, and North Africa; the one in Moscow, all of Russia; the Australian offices in Sidney, Melbourne, and Wellington, also take care of Japan, the Philippines, and the Far East, while South America is covered by offices in Rio de Janiero, Buenos Aires, San Paula, Montevidio and Santiago, Chile.

HARRY LYONS DECIDES TO CHANGE NAME

Harry Lyons, one of the leading members of the Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran Universal Nestor Company, has decided to change his name to keep out of politics, and he is now known as Harry Nolan.

In Los Angeles county is a state senator of the same name, and the two were continually having their mail mixed up. The senator was receiving the notes of admiration and commendation belonging to the actor, and letters on proposed legislation and politics arrived at the studios for the state solon.

Nation-Wide Campaign to Publicize Pickford Is Begun

Wells Hawks Leaves on Tour to Herald Coming of Star's First Film in Newspapers from Coast to Coast—Will Also Visit Exchanges

WELLS HAWKS, personal representative for Mary Pickford, following the completion of her first picture for Artcraft Pictures Corporation, "Less Than the Dust," has started on a continent-wide trip to blaze the trail through the newspapers. This tour is a sample of the indirect co-operation of Artcraft with the exhibitor. Mr. Hawks will not work with the exhibitor at all, but will endeavor to pile up a volume of personal publicity for Mary Pickford, which will be followed by the special campaign arranged to exploit "Less Than the Dust."

His trip carries Mr. Hawks south. He left for Philadelphia, going thence, according to schedule, to Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Atlanta, Birmingham, New Orleans and Dallas. From Texas he will turn north and work east from Kansas City, visiting St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Toronto, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse.

In all this territory Mr. Haws has a host of friends, made in the days when he toured the country for Charles Frohman, Ringling Brothers' Circus and other prominent attractions.

While on tour for Miss Pickford he will visit the Artcraft exchanges in Philadelphia, Washington, Atlanta, Dallas, Kansas City, Chicago, Detroit, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh. He will also be in touch with the newly formed Artcraft Pictures Corporation, Ltd., in Toronto, the birthplace of Mary Pickford, which is the center of distribution of her new superior productions in Canada. He is expected to return with a budget of recommendations for achieving perfect co-operation between Aircraft, the branch managers and the exhibitors whom they serve.

Universal Denies Ella Hall and Kerrigan Leave Their Ranks

Repudiate as Well the Statement That "Idle Wives" Was Produced by the Anti-Vice Company—Also Deny Connection with Hal Reid's Picture

THIS week it was announced in a New York daily that "tears and sobs were rampant in Universal Film Headquarters because Ella Hall, star of that company, has left without so much as a farewell and has gone over to ...."

"The Ella Hall report is false," said a Universal official the other day. "The diminutive star of "The Master Key" serial and a dozen other Red Feather and photoplays de luxe is still at Universal City and President Laemmle says that he has turned over the golden key to "the only legally incorporated moving picture municipality in the world" to her to do with as she likes.

Nor has Warren Kerrigan left the Universal fold. Reports were bruited about this week that he intended to star with Mary Something-or-other, that he would start a film city of his own to rival Universal City and that he would go into vaudeville at a Sarah Bernhardt salary. Mr. Kerrigan is still appearing in Universal pictures, however, and when the rumors were brought to his attention the star of stars denied them with great positiveness.

"In passing, the Universal also wishes to deny that 'Idle Wives,' the Universal feature now in its third week at the Maxine Elliott theatre was produced by the Anti-Vice Motion Picture Company. The Anti-Vice Motion Picture Company had absolutely no connection with the picture."

The fourth report concerns Hal Reid who the Universal understands produced a political picture for the Republican National Campaign committee. At the time Mr. Reid produced this picture he was not an employee of the Universal.

TWO MORE EXCHANGES WILL OPEN IN CLEVELAND

Special to Motion Picture News.

Cleveland, Sept 30.

Cleveland is becoming more and more a motion picture center, as was evidenced last week in the announcement that the Metro Picture Corporation and the Paramount Picture Corporation soon are to open exchanges here. Up to the present, theatres using the programs of these two concerns depended upon Pittsburgh as their source of supply. It is said both Paramount and Metro are to open offices in the Sincere building soon.

Marguerite Clark to Remain in Pictures

Diminutive Star Renews Contract with Famous Players, Thus Dissipating Persistent Rumors That She Was to Return to Musical Comedy Stage—First Picture Under New Arrangement Called "Miss Bigamist"—"The Decision of Miss Clark . . . Particularly Pleasing"—Zukor

CONTRARY to the rumors that have constantly found their way into print for the last few weeks to the effect that Marguerite Clark, the Famous Players star, would abandon the screen and return to the stage, it is announced that Miss Clark has just renewed her contract with the Famous Players.

This announcement permanently dispels the cloud of conjecture and rumor which followed the report that Miss Clark would return to the stage under the management of Charles Dillingham. So universal was the credence gained by this rumor that exhibitors in the West and Middle West actually advertised Miss Clark's latest picture, "Little Lady Eileen," as her farewell appearance on the screen.

A particularly truthful color was given to the rumors of Miss Clark's return to the stage because of her determination to take her first vacation since becoming a photoplay star two years ago. Accordingly, Miss Clark retired to her summer home in Rye at the completion of "Little Lady Eileen," and J. Searle Dawley, who has directed her more recent photoplays for the Famous Players, took over the direction of "The Rainbow Princess," in which Ann Pennington is starred. With the finishing touches administered to Miss Pennington's picture, Dawley again resumes directorship of Miss Clark, who begins work in "Miss Bigamist," her first production under the new arrangement.

Coming fresh from the musical comedy stage, Miss Clark became a favorite over night when she made her screen debut in the Famous Players picture, "Wildflower." From that time she has ranked as one of the foremost motion picture stars in popularity and in accomplishment.

Miss Clark has appeared exclusively in Famous Players productions, with the single exception of "The Goose Girl," for which she was loaned to the Lasky Company by the Famous Players nearly two years ago. Among the other feature plays in which Miss Clark has starred are "The Prince and the Pauper," "Molly Make-Believe," "Mice and Men," "Out of the Drifts," "Helene of the North," "Silks and Satins" and "Still Waters." Each of these productions scored a tremendous success and, if possible, added to the prestige and popularity of the star. In "The Prince and the Pauper," an adaptation of the celebrated story by Mark Twain, Miss Clark played her first dual role, in which she proved herself as much mistress of the double exposure as she is of the single action upon the screen.

Marguerite Clark's most recent appearances on the stage were in "Snow White," "Are You a Crook," and "Prunella."

It was while Miss Clark was appearing in "Prunella" that she was engaged by the Famous Players to make her motion picture debut.

Commenting on the decision of Miss Clark to remain with the Famous Players instead of returning to the stage, Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players said:

Marguerite Clark

"The decision of Miss Clark to continue in her successful career as a photoplay star instead of accepting the flattering offers which have been made to her to return to her first love, the stage, is particularly pleasing, because it is a confirmation of the managerial policies of the Famous Players Company and because it was made in the face of enticing offers to return to the stage.

"Little Miss Clark's phenomenal rise to popularity from the moment of her first appearance on the screen and her continued rise to a position of undisputed favoritism among millions of people is one of the most inspiring episodes in my connection with the motion picture business.

"Miss Clark's wonderful personality, her charm and her remarkable versatility have gained her her place in the public affection. It is particularly gratifying that Miss Clark has decided to remain on the screen, because the plans which we have for her future will, I am confident, result in her gaining even more popularity and prestige among the photoplay public than she now enjoys."

Miss Clark's decision follows closely that of Pauline Frederick to remain on the screen with the same company for the next two years.

Ohio Women's Clubs Will Discuss Pictures at Dayton

Films Will Be One of Principal Topics at Annual Convention—Cleveland Federation Makes Extensive Plans for Picture Work During Coming Year

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Cleveland, Oct. 1.

MOTION pictures for children will be one of the principal topics of discussion at the annual convention of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs, meeting in Dayton, Oct. 17 to 20.

"How the City Federation Becomes a Power in the Community," "Needs of Rural Life" and "Music Interests in Ohio" are other subjects announced.

Among the speakers are Dean Shailer Mathews of Chicago University, who will give an address on "The United States and International Relations"; Edward Howard Griggs of Boston on "World War and Ethics"; William Norman Guthrie of New York, immigration specialist, and Dr. Ernest C. Kunwald, leader of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Some of the prominent club women who will appear on the program are Mrs. George Zimmerman of Fremont, state president and presiding officer; Mrs. Cornelius Selover, Cleveland; Mrs. Samuel B. Sneath, Tiffin; Mrs. J. L. Selby, Greenville; Mrs. Lewis Laylin, Columbus; Mrs. Charles Halter, Fremont; Mrs. Prentice E. Rood, Toledo; Mrs. Walter Kepner, Bucyrus; Mrs. W. E. Schutt, Cleveland; Mrs. A. V. Baumann, chairman of conservation, Fremont; Dr. Josephine Pierce, chairman of public health, Lima, and Mrs. John Roby, Lima.

The first function of the convention will be a reception on Oct. 17. Mrs Kent Hughes of Lima, chairman of the program committee, is arranging other events.

Carrying on the work begun last year, the civic committee of the Cleveland Federation of Women's Clubs will put its main strength on the better film movement again this season.

Neighborhood groups, pledged to help by supporting moving picture programs arranged by the federation committee will be formed in twenty-five localities, to give the work a city-wide character and any club ready to help in the formation of these circles is asked to confer with Miss Bertelle Lyttle, chairman, 1512 E. 107th street.

At the first meeting of the fall held September 19, at the Public Library, 1375 Euclid avenue, a summary of the motion pictures conference at the New York biennial was given after which resolutions adopted by the national committee were indorsed.

Mrs. Elmer G. Derr is vice-chairman this year; Mrs. A. L. Knight, secretary. Besides active work in the cause of good pictures, Mrs. J. H. Doolittle and Mrs. W. D. Lee will report the city's methods of cleaning sidewalks, Mrs. Frank Stimson and Mrs. E. C. Gulliford will watch the building restriction code and Miss Matilda Spence is commissioned to work out a practical plan for keeping in touch with city legislation.

Several new members were present from clubs which have not sent delegates heretofore, the number reaching twenty-five.

Wisconsin Exhibitor Tells of Method Used by a Distributor in Placing Service Where Most Money Was to Be Had

THE NEWS is in receipt of a letter enclosing the correspondence between Gustav Frellson, secretary and treasurer of the Auditorium and Unique theatres of Waukesha, Wis., and one of the largest distributing companies in the business, which clearly show a condition of affairs not only disastrous to the motion picture business as a whole, but in direct contradiction to the fundamental rules of business success.

In a letter to the general manager of the distributing company in question, Mr. Frellson says: "On July 27 your Chicago agent called on us and suggested that we take the service of your company, stating that our opposition house had given up this service. After considerable talk we decided to give up the service of one of the companies which we were using and take on the service of your company, to the extent of one picture each week for thirty days, and after that two pictures each week, the price for the latter being $12.50. We signed a contract and made a deposit of $30. The next day we received a letter from your Chicago office acknowledging the receipt of the contract and deposit and thanking us for same.

"On September 12, we received a letter from your Chicago manager stating that he was obliged to cancel our contract in two days owing to the fact that they had taken on our opposition house for the full service. Remember, Mr. General Manager, the opposition house had been taking your service and had given it up, and for that reason your agent called on us and booked your features. Of course, as soon as this became known to the opposition house they immediately applied for service again rather than see us get it.

"Do you consider this fair treatment? Remember we signed in good faith and gave the required deposit. I cannot believe that your corporation would allow such shady transactions. I believe you do your business in a business like manner, and we ask you to give this your careful attention and full investigation and give us a square deal."

The letter then concludes with a detailed account of the reliability of the corporation and directors operating the theatres, and showing conclusively their financial responsibility.

It would seem that this practice of cancelling a contract with a reliable and reputable motion picture theatre for the simple reason of jumping the price on another theatre was extremely bad for the business as a whole. This is not the only case of this kind by any manner of means, as a number of other concerns have been guilty of the same practice in the past. It is time, however, that it was eliminated.

Detroit Exhibitors Oppose Increase in Rentals; Fear Admission Advance to Twenty-five Cents

DETROIT exhibitors have recently expressed themselves as being opposed vigorously to the increase in rental prices for film. They argue that it is almost impossible for them to increase the size of their theatres to meet the increase, that they can't do a great deal more business because of the competition and the increasing number of theatres, and that furthermore, that if they increase prices what will be the future of the motion picture business.

"The secret of success in this business has been the low price of admission," said one Detroit exhibitor.

"Increase that admission price and you are going to drive people away from the theatres; otherwise, they will probably see only one or two pictures per week where they are now in the habit of seeing three or four. Always remember this, the large downtown houses can do things that the neighborhood house cannot do. It can get almost any price of admission because of its downtown location, organs and orchestra, varied program and the fact that it caters to the transient trade. But in the outskirts where you cater to the same people every night, you endeavor to get those people back as often as you can.

"An admission of 10 and 15 cents is all right for the neighborhood house, but when you get prices to 25 cents flat, as some of the exchanges urge us to do for the big features, you are going to find that these people will not come so often. Then again, they would prefer to pay 25 cents and go to one of the big downtown houses where they get a bigger and better show.

"If producers and exchanges want to drive hundreds of outskirts theatre out of business, they just need to keep advancing the price of film rental. If the exhibitor can't make money—and a proper return on his investment—he can't afford to stay in the theatre business."

FOUR SPOKANE HOUSES UNITE INTO ONE CORPORATION

A consolidation of four Spokane moving picture theatres, the Casino, the Class A, the Rex, and the Unique was completed during the past week and hereafter these houses will be operated by a corporation. C. E. Stilwell, proprietor of the Casino, the Class A and the Unique will be general manager, and B. W. Copeland proprietor of the Rex, will be assistant manager and publicity representative. The new corporation is capitalized at $50,000 and has assumed active management of the four theatres.

The amalgamation is the result of negotiations that have been pending for about a year. They started when Mr. Stilwell purchased the Class A theatre from Lee Forbes nearly a year ago. Another step was taken recently when he purchased the Casino theatre from the Clemmer Estate. Both the Class A, as the Clem, and the Casino, were established by the late John Clemmer, a pioneer in the film business in the northwest.

The bulk of the offerings will be selected from the releases of the Metro, Fox, World and Mutual studios. Negotiations are also pending for the new Clara Kimball Young and Mary Pickford productions.

The Casino has a seating capicity of 600; the Class A, 400; the Rex, 460, and the Unique, 325. On averages of the last few years the four theatres play to approximately 1,925,000 persons annually.

BUSINESS BOOMING IN PEMBROKE, KY.

Manager C. E. Salisbury of Pembroke, Ky., manager of the Lyric theatre, was in Nashville last week on business in the interest of his theatre. The Lyric, said Manager Salisbury, has recently taken on vast improvements within the past few months. Something like $1,500 has been spent on improvements. "This is the only up-to-date theatre in Pembroke," said Manager Salisbury, "and to keep it up to the highest standard of perfection that it has always attained I decided to make a few improvements that would make it even more attractive. The Lyric has a seating capacity of some 256, upholstered seats, each one being comfortable and roomy. I am now using a five-piece orchestra, also a Wurlitzer organ, which was recently installed. The organ is a thing of beauty, costing in the neighborhood of $2,500. Business has been of a record-breaking nature for the past number of months. I am using General Film service and find it to be the best of its kind."

OCTOBER 25 IS EXHIBITORS' DAY AT TEXAS STATE FAIR

October 25 will be Motion Picture Exhibitors' Day at the Texas State Fair to be held in Dallas, Texas, October 14 to 29 inclusive. The Texas Amusement Managers' Association has made arrangements with the Fair Association for a special program for that day for the entertainment of the visitors. In addition the film exchanges and supply houses will join and give a banquet at the Oriental Hotel Wednesday noon.

In the morning an informal reception will be held in the lobby of the Oriental. At 10.30 a conference of all amusement men present will be held for an hour in order to discuss any matters of statewide interest.

Organization work has been going on rapidly in Texas the past three months, and it is probable that by the time the next session of the legislature convenes, which is in January, 1917, the entire amusement interests will be so cemented together that quick and uniform action by the members of the trade can be had on very short notice, should anything affecting their interests come up.

INTERESTING FRAUD CASE IN ROCHESTER

The sale of a Rochester motion picture theatre, and the subsequent verdict of a court and jury, ordering the return of the purchase price, are topics of discussion in motion picture circles. The theatre in question is the Merryland, on Clinton avenue north, about a mile and a half from Main street. It is a neighborhood house.

Joshua C. Harris was the purchaser of the theatre. He paid $1,500 for it to Eugene A. Stein and Thomas W. Heberle. Upon taking possession and operating the theatre, he found that the business done was not what the sellers represented, and he sued for the recovery of his money on the ground of fraud.

Justice Clark and a jury heard the testimony. Harris put in a complaint that the sellers represented to him that the theatre was showing a profit from $50 to $75 a week, but pointed out that as a matter of fact the profit ran all the way from nothing to $10 a week.

The suit was brought for the return of the purchase price, $1,500, and an additional $1,500 for damages for lost profits. The jury returned a verdict against Stein and Heberle for $1,200. Harris having sold the fixtures for about $300.

PENNSYLVANIA QUARANTINE LIFTED SEPTEMBER 29

The members of the Exhibitors League of Pittsburgh sent a query to Dr. Samuel G. Dixon of the Pennsylvania State Board of Health in reference to the quarantine which prohibits children from attending the theatres in this state, asking him if there was any chance that the quarantine would be modified, now that the chance of an epidemic seems to be past.

In reply, Dr. Dixon wrote that the quarantine would be lifted September 29.

Democratic Association Offers to Assist Cleveland Exhibitors' League in Fight Against Censorship

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Cleveland, Ohio, held its weekly meeting on Tuesday and took up the regular business of the League. The League is in receipt of a letter from the Democratic Association, asking for a list of names of members, and volunteering to assist the League against censorship. Not understanding the obligations imposed by submitting such a list, no action on the matter was taken.

A discussion was widely entered into, in regard to the formation of some plan to strengthen the local organization. Ben Sawyer, president of the League, proposed the plan which was adopted. He moved that a committee be appointed to divide the city into sections, call on each exhibitor in the districts and discover his disposition in regard to the League. This means will force the exhibitor to declare himself either for or against the League. It is hoped that the membership will be materially increased by these measures.

The committee, consisting of F. E. Simmonds, D. L. Schumann, A. Mahrer, Benjamin Sawyer, Wm. Slimm, J. J. Mellert and Henry Lustig, will meet on Wednesday at 11 a. m. at 511 Williamson building, in Mr. Lustig's office, to divide the city into districts and to apportion the exhibitors to the committeemen.

The following card was passed among the members of the League:

To Our Friends and Patrons.

The operator, A. E. Mahen, of the Lucier theatre is a licensed operator and has a financial interest in the theatre. Another operator could not give you the picture service you have been getting.

Our equipment is of the finest type so we could not afford to employ cheap labor.

The Lucier Theatre Amusement Co.

The Lucier theatre has been picketed by fourteen men. Sam Bullock made a motion which was seconded that the League tender its sympathy and moral support to Mr. Mahan, and that it stands ready to offer financial aid if necessary to assist Mr. Mahen in his fight against the operators' union.

Michigan Exhibitors Hesitate Between Rental and Percentage Methods on Big Specials

IN connection with the big new special releases that are being put on the market, there comes a question with Detroit exhibitors as to which is the best way to book them. Some exhibitors say that if the producers know them to be such crackerjack box-office attractions, why not play them on a percentage basis with the exhibitor and not ask him to take all the chances by paying a big flat rental.

In more instances than one, five Michigan exhibitors asked the owners of big features to play them on percentage basis. On the other hand, a manager of one Detroit exchange, handling these big features, says that it is better for the exhibitor to pay a flat rental—that if the big features do draw big business the exhibitor would be kicking himself if he played them on a percentage basis.

"It's as fair one way as the other to the exhibitor to play features on a flat rental," he said. "Everybody in the show business has to take a chance, but he has a better chance to make money on a flat rental basis than on percentage."

The retirement from the theatre business is announced of W. A. Rusco, who has disposed of his interest in the Bijou theatre, at Saginaw, Mich., to Col. W. S. Butterfield. As a result of the retirement of Mr. Rusco, who is a pioneer in the theatre industry of Michigan, Mr. Fleischer, former manager of the Strand in Saginaw, has been transferred to the Bijou, while Joseph Friedman, manager of the Garden theatre in Flint goes to the Strand in Saginaw. Mr. Friedman, by the way, will do all the picture booking for the Strand and Bijou in Saginaw, and the Garden in Flint.

The surprise of Detroit has been the tremendous business of the new Regent theatre, Woodward and the Boulevard, since the opening, Sept. 11. Despite the immense capacity of the Regent—seating 3,600—it has been doing an actual capacity business at both evening performances. It was the intention of Managing Director McVicker to change pictures bi-weekly but he will run all pictures a full week until further notice. The success of the Regent so far has been far greater than anticipated.

AUTO WEATHER CUTS INTO THEATRES' BUSINESS IN MONTANA

J. McClean, travelling auditor of Universal, is spending a few days at the Butte, Mont., branch and is well pleased with the work of Manager Hudson, who has been in charge less than two weeks, having succeeded H. L. Thompson.

Manager F. A. Tipton, of the Butte Metro exchange, returned this week from a trip up to and taking in Spokane, reporting business picking up at the approach of cooler weather, and the consequent closing of the autoing season.

One of the greatest hindrances to profitable exhibiting in that territory is the fact that Montana has the best roads of any state in the Union, and when you couple this to the facts that the proportion of cars to population is large, that weather is ideal nearly all the time and that the true western hospitality makes the fellow with a car take along a bunch of his neighbors, you can easily see how many people are left in a town to take in the movies.

Serials are having their days again in Montana and as the "Iron Claw" went good in other parts of the country it naturally would go well here. What is believed to be a new record has been established by the Butte Branch of Pathe Exchange in placing the "Iron Claw" in thirty-six towns for a total run of forty-five days. And the end is not in sight, the new Strand, a $100,000 house at Livingston, the Auditorium, at Big Timber and the Grand, at Westby, will start this serial next week.

Anti-Censorship Campaign Is Launched by Denver Exhibitors; Urge Concerted Action

THE plan to bring the question of censorship to the attention of film patrons through the medium of the screen, which is being urged by prominent men in the motion picture business, seeking the support of the public in the campaign, is taking a definite stand in Denver, Colorado.

Already one of the larger houses on "Denver's Great White Way" has adopted it and a slide presenting an argument against censorship by the "few," has become a part of the program. It is expected that in a short time the above plan will be put into effect by all Denver exhibitors, and the sooner, the better for all concerned.

"The people of Denver are not sufficiently interested in the question to bring about the desired result, this is also true of all other cities in the United States," said a film man of that city.

"The exhibitors do not seem to give this important matter enough consideration, and until they do, we cannot expect the public to become interested.

"It is up to the exhibitors to aid in this campaign. Up to the present time this important matter had been handled by the reformers in a one sided way, and no doubt, they have labored hard to right the wrong of censorship, but to put the matter squarely to the people, the argument must be backed by every exhibitor in the United States. An argument on the screen reaches more people than printed matter ever could.

"If the exhibitors would arouse the sentiment of the intelligent public through an educational campaign to bring out the unjust and unfair measures of Federal censorship, then the "few" that are waging the campaign against odds would accomplish their goal. But, to do this the "few" must have the combined support of the exhibitors before they can ever expect the public to listen to their cries," concluded the speaker.

Pittsburgh Exhibitors and Exchangemen Request Reduction of Prices During Paralysis Quarantine

ABOUT 100 exhibitors and exchangemen gathered at the mass meeting held last week at the Moose Temple. The attendance was small considering that it was of vast importance to all branches of the business.

A. W. McClelland presided at the meeting. A resolution adopted by the Exhibitors League the day before, requesting the exchangemen to make a 50 per cent reduction in film rentals during the present quarantine, was presented by Mr. Sahner, and the same was adopted. Several of the exchangemen spoke on the fallacy of such a sweeping reduction, as individual cases differed and a general rule could not be applied to all exhibitors.

The meeting was in progress for more than two hours, and it was moved and adopted that a telegram be sent to the manufacturers, requesting them to instruct their exchangemen to make concessions in film rentals to those exhibitors whose business demanded the same.

The question of funds was also brought up at the meeting, and it was decided that the exhibitors would be asked to donate money toward defraying the expenses of these meetings, as the exchanges had borne the expense of all the meetings held, while the exhibitors would get the most benefit if a reduction was made in rentals for films. What the exhibitors will do when this is put up to them, is a speculation.

MONTANA PROSPEROUS; SOUTHEAST FEELS EFFECT OF PARALYSIS

At the present time the moving picture business in Montana as a whole is very prosperous, except in the southeastern part of the state where the infantile paralysis scare is again slowing things down. With no children admitted to the theatres and the schools not yet oponed, though scheduled to open nearly a month ago, exhibitors in towns of Billings, Laurel, Hardin, Forsyth and others in the near vicinity find it necessary to cut down, rather than increase, their programs and number of showing days. As a result, exchange managers and salesmen are not covering this part except, as in the case of Pathe, to visit the exhibitors to see what aid can be given till the ban is lifted.

MORE PITTSBURGH THEATRES RAISE PRICES

Several of the theatres in the Pittsburgh territory have boosted their prices recently and the latest addition to the ranks is that of the theatres at Carnegie, Pa. All of the theatres in that town have been showing at five cents and have decided to boost the price to 10 cents as a result of the increased cost of film rentals.

All of the managers of the theatres in the town gathered at a meeting and after a lengthy discussion decided that the time was ripe for the boost. All of the theatres will increase the price after the end of September.

William Kane, of the Lyric theatre; C. G. Couch, of the Grand; and F. J. Nally, of the Arcade, the managers of the best theatres in the town, are working in harmony and better business will be the result of the increase in prices.

PICTURES SUPERSEDE STOCK IN MINNEAPOLIS

For the first time since Minneapolis became a city, there was no spoken drama in any of the theatres during the summer months. Since the beginning of theatres here, summer stock had held the boards. During the last summer, however, the houses that usually had stock companies showed films when they were open at all. Those who hold to the old order of things thought the condition deplorable, but it had to be. The stock companies didn't even make a go of it the previous winter. The price of the spoken drama is not the sole or most important issue either for two of the houses that showed stock at 50 cents for the best seats in the old days have been getting big circuit prices for motion pictures, notably $1.50 for the best seats.

TORONTO NEWSPAPER CRITICIZES FILMS BROUGHT TO THAT CITY

The Toronto Daily News in a full page article last week attacked the quality of the moving pictures being supplied to Toronto theatres. Under a heading, "City Poorly Served with Motion Pictures," the writer goes on to say that only 6 per cent of the pictures may be properly called good while the great majority are mediocre.

The writer also states many unnecessary objectional features are seen in the plays.

While the exchange men are naturally very indignant at this sort of argument which in their opinion is an attempt to foist one man's prejudices on a half a million people, they are very reticent claiming that the matter is one for the censor-board to deal with and that inasmuch as the films are double censored compared to those shown in the United States, something must be very wrong either with the producers or the censor-boards.

FAIRGRAVES MAY ADD FOURTH TO HIS ERIE THEATRES

William Fairgraves of Erie, Pa., now has three theatres in that city. He purchased the Princess theatre there and built the Nixon and Grand theatres. It is said these three theatres are the feature photoplay houses of the city, and Mr. Fairgraves is contemplating the addition to another theatre to the list.

The Colonial theatre and Majestic theatre at Erie, are now running vaudeville. These theatres were recently in the motion picture business, but switched after the summer months to vaudeville. O. A. Potter owns the Majestic and also the Columbia theatre, the latter is one of Erie's big photoplay houses.

The Strand theatre, one of Erie's dime theatres with a capacity of 1,500, reports that business is good, although the order against children under 16 being admitted to the theatres has made itself felt in that city as it has all over the state.

DONOVAN AGAIN MANAGER OF REGENT IN EAST LIBERTY

J. P. Donovan, general manager of the Rowland and Clark theatre in Pittsburgh, has again taken charge of the Regent theater in East Liberty as house manager. Jerome Casper, who has been the house manager of the Regent, has resigned to take charge of Duquesne Garden Skating Rink.

The office of general maanger has been abolished by the Rowland and Clark interests, and Mr. Clark will devote more time to the affairs of theaters than in the past.

William F. Kirsch, manager of the Bellevue theatre of the Rowland and Clark chain will do all of the booking for all of the theatres of the company in this district.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

"The 'News' wishes to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything in fact done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to send for publication the successful ideas that he has worked out, also to come to us for suggestions or information. Address the Editor."

Making Your Lobby Displays Pull Possible Patrons

By M. Kashin

EDITOR'S NOTE.—We take unusual pleasure in offering to the exhibitors of the country herewith a signed article by Mr. Kashin, of the Midway theatre, Montreal, dealing in detail and at length with his methods of lobby display. We believe that Mr. Kashin's work cannot fail to be an inspiration to many exhibitors. Such emphatically individual advertising as his is cannot fail to cause both imitation and discussion. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be glad to hear from any exhibitor who either agrees or disagrees with Mr. Kashin in his principles and methods. How many "LIVE WIRE" ideas are you putting into your own theatre? Write us about them today.

IN appealing to possible patrons who daily pass your doors I have found that the lobby display, worked out to its finest detail, will bring more results than any other form of advertising to which an exhibitor could resort. True enough, the secret of the success of such advertising will depend upon an analysis of the general public who see your theatre lobby displays.

The inserts appearing herewith are reproductions of a front which I recently made featuring Charlie Chaplin in "The Count." The theatre which used this advertising display secured most satisfactory results from every point of view.

To begin with, I want to point out to every exhibitor that these fronts are inexpensive. In this particular instance the entire result was obtained by wooden frames covered with painted cotton bunting. This is about the cheapest thing of which I can think.

The counter used as a pressing table was 6 feet long, 2 feet deep, and the only solid part of it was the board on which the iron traveled. In forming my background or stage setting, I simply resorted again to the use of a feeble framework covered with the same painted bunting; likewise the ceiling and the two wings.

Giving It an Element of Interest

The flatiron which Charlie Chaplin holds in his hand was cut from a piece of ordinary pine. The figure of Chaplin himself was made from cardboard, braced with one-inch strips. The figure of Charlie's blonde friend was borrowed from a cloak store. The head appearing in the window was of paper.

As I have described this display, it would indeed be a very unattractive advertisement. Realizing this, I resorted to the use of a small motor and arranged a very simple mechanical device, whereby the iron traveled at short intervals across the pressing board, carrying with it Charlie's arm, the elbow and wrist of which I had pivoted with small rivets, giving it free action. Using the same power that moved the iron, I so arranged the mechanism of this pasteboard figure that the cane in Chaplin's left hand would intermittently reach out for the female figure's neck.

I am giving you this description in very matter of fact form, and in reading it the same may sound tame and unattractive, and you will be surprised, doubtless, to learn that such a display as this completely filled the lobby of the theatre in which it was shown for four consecutive days and nights.

The Cost—and the Profit

In the event that the reader should get some idea that such an advertising freak as this entails any great expense, I simply want to state that the entire outfit was produced at a cost of approximately $12, and that the results obtained therefrom during the four days in which it was in operation doubtlessly netted this theatre several hundred dollars. The portieres which you will note hanging on either side of this display were simply borrowed from the balcony of the house referred to herein.

It might be of interest to the readers to know that the suit which is worn by the female model was borrowed from a tailor in the establishment under rather peculiar conditions. As I needed a woman's suit, I went to a nearby tailoring shop and requested the propritor to lend me one.

This he refused to do, telling me that he would be glad to rent me a suit provided I placed in his hands sufficient funds to cover any damage which might be done to it. I countered his proposition with the following offer: I agreed to take the suit, place it on the model and attach at the bottom of the skirt a 10 x 12 inch card stating that "this suit is sold by" the tailor in question; that if on the strength of this advertising business did not "pick up" I would be willing to pay any reasonable rental. Following the day on which this display first appeared, this merchant sold more suits than he had the entire previous week.

Getting to the Passers-by

For several days prior to installing this little ad I made a general study of the type of public who passed before the doors of the theatre, and noticed among the by-passers a great many Jews. The idea occurred to me that I should resort to some trifling departure in order to appeal particularly to these people. As a result of itos you will note on the lower right-hand exc.er of the counter in front of Chaplin tionhrase in Yiddish which, translated, is qu follows: "Charlie busy buy Cloaks." amis phrase was immediately taken up by every cloak and suit man in the neighborhood, and in a great many of their windows they also have miniature figures of Chaplin "Busy buy Cloaks." And this trifling appeal to the Jewish people excited great interest and custom on their part.

The perfect results attained by this front were practically demonstrated by the extremely satisfactory box office receipts. I will, however, not touch on this. Suffice it to say that from the hour this front appeared it was a wonderful drawing card, and the outside audience continually laughed and passed jokes with reference to the STAR of the feature on the screen within, Mr. Chaplin.

Lobby Display Values Increasing

With competition as keen as it is to-day in the moving picture business, with thousands of people who each day and night make it their business to inspect theatre fronts, seeking some film production which they feel would be of interest to them, the lobby display fronts are becoming even greater drawing cards than the old (I need not say old) overworked newspaper ads. and readers. No exhibitor need feel that these displays are too expensive for him to tackle. They can be produced at almost a nominal cost in comparison to the results which they bring; the secret of a proposition of this nature is primarily in producing something that will appeal to common, ordinary, childlike human nature; secondly, it is necessary that some analysis be made of the possible patron who passes before the theatre front. It is all simple enough when one sits down and gives the matter a little common-sense thought and study.

"FALL OF A NATION" ACTORS APPEAR AT NEW WEBSTER THEATRE IN THE BRONX

Herman Pollak opened his new Webster theatre and airdome in the Bronx, Saturday evening, September 23, with a stunt that delighted picture fans in that district more than anything that has recently been put over there. To use the facile vocabulary of the press agent, Mr. Pollak "dedicated" the theatre with "The Fall of a Nation," but in addition to that he had the flesh and blood "Fall of a Nation" principals on the job, namely, Percy Standing and the Misses Flora MacDonald, Lorraine Huling and Lelia Frost, which is to say all the big roles except those of Messrs. Shirley, Gastrock and Willis, who are in California.

Somebody in the Bronx—it might have been Pollak, it might have been a disinterested fan—bought out a nearby florist's shop. As the three girls took the bows in person for their big scenes, they were fairly inundated with bouquets. The Bronxites were quick to catch the vraisemblance of the counterfeit presentments with the reality, and thunderous cheers greeted the brave daughters of Jael in the picture, who had just been seen out front in every day costume, overwhelmed with flowers and looking almost wistfully happy.

THEY MIND THE BABIES FOR SHOPPING MOTHERS

"Leave your babies at the picture show, and do your shopping."

This comfortable arrangement has been inaugurated by J. E. Sliney, manager of the Reel, one of the largest downtown picture show houses in Cleveland.

This theatre is equipped with a row of balcony boxes, where the little ones can see the pictures without being disturbed by the comings and goings of a restless audience. Adjoining the boxes is a large rest room supplied with all conveniences, where an attendant nurse takes full charge of the children, and sees that their ordinary needs are satisfied.

"Young babies are too much responsibility," says Mr. Sliney, "so we keep them only from six years of age up." When asked whether many mothers take advantage of this convenience, he said, "Yes indeed, we often have six or eight little ones at a time, and they are always happy and contented to stay."

"WALLET" ADVERTISING FOR "YELLOW MENACE"

One of the best advertising novelties which has yet come to our notice is that of the illustration shown below, advertising "The Yellow Menace."

John C. Green of Galt, Canada, has favored us with this specimen of his advertising genius. It may not be generally known that Mr. Green was the first man to exhibit motion pictures in Canada, which dates as far as back as 1896, when he owned a picture house at the West End Park, Ottawa, Ont.

We consider that many may follow the example of this clever "wallet" advertising when projecting "The Yellow Menace" serial.

CITY VOTES ON SERVICE IT WANTS AT LEADING THEATRES

A unique election was held in Somerville, Mass., recently, the question at issue being that motion picture service was to be maintained in the leading theatre, the Cross Street theatre, for the coming season.

The theatre had recently changed hands, and for service the new management retained what the former manager had installed, but with little satisfaction. He decided upon an election by the people, and for them to decide what program he should run. In accordance with his idea he visited 1,400 homes, rang the bell, told who he was, what his object was, and had the dwellers in those homes vote on the following services: Paramount, Triangle, Metro and Fox.

The result was that 1,120 families out of the 1,400 requested the Paramount service. A goodly amount of publicity was given the unique idea by the newspapers of that community, and the result of the voting was looked forward to with the keenest interest. The theatre will become an exclusive Paramount theatre, running features and short reel subjects.

House Service a Big Asset, as Management of the Imperial, San Francisco, Proves

THE service given patrons of the Imperial theatre at San Francisco is such that its excellence is commented upon by the theatregoing public, and many managers of other houses come here to study it in detail, so famous has it become. Almost any afternoon or evening one can stand in the crowd in the amusement section of upper Market street and hear some one say: "Let's go to the Imperial, it's so comfortable there." Not only do they go, but many pay just a little more than they do elsewhere, for the twenty-cent section of this house is much more popular than the ten-cent section, something that but few other houses can boast.

The ideal service commences the moment the patron enters the door of the theatre. An attendant is on hand to check hast, wraps or any other articles with which they do not wish to be bothered. For this service there is no charge, as the attendants are well paid, and they are forbidden to accept tips. The wish of patrons in regard to the selection of seats is carefully observed by the corps of well trained ushers.

The neat program compiled under the direction of Manager J. A. Partington is the means of communication between the management of the house and patrons. A time-table is published in this, giving the time that the principal feature goes on, and this is studied so that patrons rarely enter in the middle of a picture.

A mailing list has been compiled, and each week a neat car, with a photograph of the star and descriptive matter of the production, is sent to each person on the list. The program contains a coupon to be filled out, and the list is growing steadily. It also contains, in addition to the bill for the week, a description of the special orchestra selections played at evening performances.

Attention is called to the fact that it is against the policy of the management to show the type of pictures that require the exclusion of children, and children of any age are welcome at this house.

FROM PENNY ARCADE TO TEN-CENT HOUSE SHOWING FEATURES WITH ORCHESTRA

One of the most significant moves in motion picture circles in Cincinnati is that made by the Star theatre, 38 East Fifth street, of which Tom Corby is manager. This house has been devoted to motion pictures from the time the first reels were shipped into Cincinnati. Before that time it was known as the People's Penny Arcade, devoted to the exploitation of the penny-in-the-slot crank-turning picture devices. Since it has become a motion picture theatre it has been operated under a policy of 5-cent admission. A program of three reels of film has been shown.

The new policy which has just been adopted by the company indicates that the general prices of motion picture admissions will be substantially increased. Corby has announced that his theatre hereafter will charge ten cents admission. He has contracted with William Fox and Metro for feature services. In addition to this change, the house has been redecorated inside and out at an expense of $4,000. The house is situated near the corner of Walnut street in one of the most congested centers of traffic in the city. The Star theatre is noted for its good music. Corby has steadfastly refused to install any mechanical musical device, and has announced that with the beginning of his new picture policy he will retain an excellent pianist and a violinist to furnish music for his films.

GOOD MEDICINE FOR "MILLION FOR MARY"

"Take a Pill Every Hour—Pray and Have Faith." Thus read signs appearing all over Atlantic, Ia., where "A Million for Mary" is to be shown at the Garden theatre, and all over Sioux City, Ia., where the same picture is to be shown at the Plaza. The card is an idea of Max Weisfeldt, manager of the Mutual exchange at Omaha.

"This card is followed by one announcing 'Panacea Pills, Good for the Ill,'" said Weisfeldt. "By that time everybody is wondering. Then comes the announcement that Mike and Louie have made a million with an empty drug store and these pills. Then the announcement of the picture. It works. We've tried it elsewhere."

GLOBE CLUTCHED BY GIANT HAND FOR "GRIP OF EVIL"

C. I. Ramsdell, owner of the Lyric theatre at Lincoln, Neb., showing "The Grip of Evil," has constructed a huge globe, five feet in diameter, and mounted it above his theatre, and over the sidewalk. Apparently holding it up, in a grip, is a giant hand. The globe constantly turns. On one side is the name of the picture, on the other the hours and days it is shown.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

THE camera has begun turning on Henry B. Walthall's new superfeature, "The Truant Soul," to be constructed in at least seven acts by Essanay. First scenes are being taken in and about Chicago and when these are completed, Mr. Walthall, Director Harry Beaumont and company will depart for the hill country of Wisconsin to film upward of 150 exterior scenes.

Mary Charleson, long a photoplay star, has been obtained to play the chief supporting part to Mr. Walthall. For some years she has been a favorite and her recent appearance in two large features, in which she gave admirable performances, has served to strengthen her reputation.

Patrick Calhoun, a young heavy, who has been appearing to advantage in Essanay pictures during the past year, will also be an important principal. He was the villain in "The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row."

For its exterior scenes the play requires a hill country, a barren place of little habitation and, by chance, a locality even more ideal than required has been found. It lies back of Richland Center, Wis., where towering hills rise abruptly to their summit on one side, only to sweep into deep and beautiful valleys on the other. The field has never been touched for pictures, and amongst the natives a motion picture camera is as much a novelty as would be a grand opera prima donna.

Director Beaumont himself spent a week tramping through the hills, where even flivvers couldn't go, to find perfect location.

As a house at the summit of a hill must be burned and as the natives have failed to build their homes in the high spots, lumber for a complete structure must be carried by hand up the steep sides of a small mountain.

Two weeks will be spent in this wild spot and then the company will return to the Chicago studios, where its sets will be awaiting for interiors. In all there are nearly 600 scenes to be taken.

Spoor Sees "Prince of Graustark"

President George K. Spoor has viewed "The Prince of Graustark" and believes it one of the best offerings from his studio. This visualization of George Barr McCutcheon's famous novel will be released in 5 acts through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service at a date yet to be announced. It features Bryant Washburn and Marguerite Clayton, with Ernest Maupain and Sydney Ainsworth in the chief supporting parts.

Edna Mayo, Eugene O'Brien and Sydney Ainsworth, principals in "The Chaperon," with a company of ten are at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., filming exteriors. Director Arthur Berthelet has completed all interior scenes.

Director Fred Wright has begun interiors for "The Breakers," with Bryant Washburn and Nell Craig. Ernest Maupain has been cast for the heavy lead, and will have a part which will give him much the same latitude as that of Prof. Moriarity in "Sherlock Holmes."

Four photoplays were completed last week in the Eastern studios of William Fox. Madame Bertha Kalich and June Caprice each finished her third production, and Virginia Pearson her fifth, for the Fox films. The picture featuring Gladys Coburn and Fritz Leiber is also now in the cutting room.

"The Ragged Princess," Miss Caprice's new photoplay, will be released on October 16. The little Fox actress has been released from her bondage of rags and began acting this week, sparkling and radiant in some beautiful costumes.

Virginia Pearson has also commenced on a new screen drama under the direction of Kenean Buel. Prominent in her supporting cast will be William Tooker, who, with Herschel Mayall and Alice Gale, have just returned to the William Fox players. Mr. Tooker acted previously in "East Lynne," "The Fool's Revenge," "A Modern Thelma," and "Ambition."

Alice Gale, who appeared in "Sins of Men," has a record of thirty years' success on the stage. She has a part in a forthcoming production.

Olga Gray Now with Fox

Olga Gray, who has come from leads with Fine Arts, and Leo Delaney, formerly of Vitagraph, are included in the Joan Sawyer cast. Mr. Delaney is a graduate of New York Law School, but he heard the siren call of the movies, and put away his legal shingle.

Stuart Holmes is featured in Miss Sawyer's first production for William Fox. Holmes will add the character of a ferocious gypsy to his long line of screen impersonations.

Four hundred and fifty convicts have been used in the production of the forthcoming Metro-Rolfe 5-act photodrama, "The Brand of Cowardice," starring Lionel Barrymore and Grace Valentine. They are the inmates of the Correction Farm at New Hampton, N. Y., and are under the charge of Major Louis Lawes.

These convicts are not under lock and key, but have almost the entire freedom of the farm, and there is not an armed guard on the place.

There are some realistic battle scenes in "The Brand of Cowardice." Uniforms, equipment and rifles of the most approved and modern pattern as used in the United States army were taken to New Hampton. The inmates were outfitted with these, and then proceeded to act as both infantry and artillery soldiers. They are thoroughly familiar with military drill and tactics, since Major Lawes has introduced the study of them during his administration.

Two Views of Hall Caine's "The Deemster," Being Filmed for Arrow's 8-Reel Production, which Will Be Released Under the Title of "The Bishop's Son"

The military aspect of the picture was handled by John W. Noble, the director, formerly an officer in the regular army, a veteran who has been under fire, and Captain Charles Maigne, the author of the scenario, a retired army officer.

Virginia Pearson started acting last week on her sixth production for the William Fox Films. Kenean Buel, who made four of her five previous pictures, has charge of the direction. The story is one of the strongest Miss Pearson has ever had.

June Caprice has been liberated from the bondage of rags which fettered the winsome little Fox actress in her three former photoplays.

She will begin work this week in a new picture in which she will be more sparkling and radiant than ever.

Essanay Actor Killed by Auto

Richardson Cotton, well known character actor both in photoplays and on the speaking stage, was killed by an automobile (Sunday, Sept. 24) at Ephraim, a summer resort near Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin.

Mr. Cotton had gone to Ephraim with a company of Essanay players, where exterior scenes were being taken for "The Chaperon," an Essanay feature. He was to take an important character part, but had not yet started work. On Sunday evening he took a stroll along the country road. At a sharp turn in the road an automobile going at a high rate of speed struck him. He was killed instantaneously.

Mr. Cotton joined the Essanay Company two years ago, and had taken prominent character parts in many plays. He was an exceptionally versatile actor.

Mr. Cotton was born in Massachusetts forty-eight years ago and was on the speaking stage eighteen years before joining the Essanay Company. He began his career with Dan Ryan in Shakespearean roles, afterwards playing with Thomas Kean and with Ward and James. He played leads in stock in Chicago and Minneapolis. He was a member of the Strollers Club, Chicago. A widow and daughter survive him.

New Play Ready for Flo La Badie

Philip Lonergan has just completed a new play for Florence La Badie that will be made at the Thanhouser studios as soon as "Divorce and the Daughter" is completed. The story handles in a new way the present day problem of prison reform, and is particularly timely.

"Her New York" will be Gladys Hulette's next picture, following "Prudence, the Pirate." Miss Hulette is now at work on "Her New York" at the Thanhouser studios, unde rthe direction of O. A. C. Lund. Agnes C. Johnston, author of "The Shine Girl" and "Prudence, the Pirate," wrote "Her New York."

In "The Shine Girl" Miss Hulette carried a geranium through the story. In "Prudence, the Pirate," Panthus, the ugliest pup in the world, is her companion. In her newest picture her pet is a hen that amid great weeping is sacrificed in the frying pan when starvation threatens the little country girl.

"Her Beloved Enemy," by Lloyd Lonergan, the first Thanhouser play in which Doris Grey and Wayne Arey will be co-starred, calls for many scenes on beautiful estates. Ernest Warde, the director, has been working recently on the grounds of three of the finest estates in Westchester county.

Three Unusual Glimpses of "International" Stars. Above, Olive Thomas; Below, Irene Castle; Insert, Grace Darling

Boston exhibitors are especially interested in "Her Beloved Enemy," and Edwin Thanhouser has had several inquiries from Boston regarding the release date. No date has been set. Doris Grey is especially popular in Boston, which is her home. It was at the motion picture exhibitors' ball there that Miss Grey was chosen as the most beautiful girl and given the tryout in Thanhouser pictures that started her on her way to success.

The thirty-one children who were seen in Mabel Taliaferro's Metro-Rolfe wonderplay, "God's Half Acre," have been having the time of their lives assisting in her new play, "The Sunbeam," which will follow "The Dawn of Love." In "The Sunbeam" the children of the tenement district, through a misapprehension of the butler of Rutherford, the candy king, enjoy the banquet that was intended for the "Helping Handers." The banquet was a real one in every sense, and the youngsters had all the ice cream their mothers would permit them to eat.

In the second episode of Pathe's "The Shielding Shadow," released the week of Oct. 8. Ralph Kellard was thrown overboard in a coffin, the lid of which had been nailed on.

This episode was filmed in tropical waters, the home of man-eating sharks. One of these voracious denizens of the deep appeared suddenly on the scene just after Kellard had been thrown overboard, safely cooped up in the rough coffin. The shark showed considerable curiosity as to what the strange-looking box might contain, and insisted on bumping it around with Kellard inside.

As this was not according to Hoyle, Kellard was first displeased, and then, when he managed to kick the cover off the box so as to escape from it and swim toward the schooner, the director managed to make himself understood and apprised Kellard of his danger. Kellard is a good swimmer, but it is safe to say that he made the distance between the box and the schooner the fastest he ever made a like distance. The shark was frightened by the mighty splashing of the motion picture actor and dived under the water.

The roof garden of the Hotel Astor, New York, is shown in the cafe and cabaret scenes of W. Christy Cabanne's first offering on the Metro program, as yet unnamed, a five-part wonderplay in which Frances Nelson is starred and Niles Welch featured.

In order not to interfere with the Astor's patrons, it was necessary to take the pictures at nine o'clock in the morning. A stray tourist who went up to the roof to see the view fled in dismay at seeing a host of men and women in elaborate evening dress at that hour in the morning.

Pearl White of Pathe will receive on Occtober 1, as a gift, a Rolles-Royce motor car costing $14,000. Rumor does not state the name of the giver.

Donald Mackenzie, director for the Astra Film Corporation, after almost a year's work on "The Shielding Shadow," Pathe's serial, is beginning work on "The Challenge," a five-reel adaptation of A. H. Woods' play of the same name by Bertram Millhauser, for release on the Pathe Gold Rooster Program.

The lead will be played by Miss Helen Chadwick, a "find" made by Louis J. Gasnier, president of the Astra. Miss Chadwick is a beautiful girl with artistic and dramatic ability, who screens admirably and who bids fair to become a worth while addition to the Astra galaxy of stars. The Pauline Frederick has returned to town after a brief vacation at Mountain Lakes, stolen between the completion of "Ashes of Embers" and the beginning of her next Famous Players-Paramount picture. Miss Frederick declares that it was a great relief to be able to roam around for a few days without having to remember to keep her eyes away from the camera.

When Consolidated Film Corporation bought the old Lent Mansion in Scarsdale, N. Y., recently for the purpose of filming one scene of the third episode for "The Crimson Stain Mystery," little did its officers know that with it they were securing a fully developed man-size jinx.

This jinx made its presence known from the minute the house changed ownership. The first evidence occurred one hour after the signing of the bill of sale, when O. E. Goebel, president, Ludwig G. B. Erb, treasurer, Ben Goetz and Director T. Hayes Hunter went to examine the place. Just as they turned off the main road into the grounds the rear wheel of their automobile collapsed throwing out its occupants and injuring them. Within the space of two days an electrician broke his left arm; two property men perched on a scaffold in the interior of the house fell a distance of two feet and sustained injuries which laid them up in a hospital for more than a week; the cameraman fell from the roof, and besides injuring himself, broke a fifteen hundred dollar camera beyond repair.

Then came the final stroke. The company were on the grounds ready to take the big scene, in which the house was to be blown up by dynamite. Everything was set. The explosives were planted, four cameras were ready to take the scene, when suddenly, in the midst of a preliminary rehearsal, it began to rain. Everybody hurried to the shelter of the automobiles. Only the two dynamite men went into the house. Suddenly a blinding flash of lightning split the heavens, followed immediately by a terrific crash. When Director Hunter and his company regained their sight the old Lent house was gone, and in its place was a mass of ruins.

Cobe Returns to New York with Many Contracts

President of Unity Believes "Tweedledum" Comedies Will Cause Sensation—Were Most Successful in England—Territory Nearly All Sold

ANDREW J. COBE, vice-president and general manager of the Unity Sales Corporation, was in New York the past few days, after a sojourn of two weeks in the Chicago offices of the company. Mr. Cobe brought with him a number of new contracts covering bookings on the new Tweedledum comedies.

Tweedledum

"Tweedledum," says Mr. Cobe, "is sure to prove the sensation of American filmland, just as he was on the other side. There is no one like him in this country. Of course, we are not sure that he will be as popular as Chaplin, but his comedies in Europe, when he was with the old Eclipse Company, sold more prints than Chaplin or any other comedian in the business. Think of selling 950 copies of one picture. That's what they did on the other side with "Tweedledum's" "The Near Sighted Cyclist," and Billy Dunn has plans under way that will give Tweedledum a chance to outdo anything he has ever before attempted.

Among the exchanges who have already booked these comedies are The Eastern Feature Film Company, Boston, for the New England States; Merrit Feature Film Company, for New York and Northern New Jersey; United Mutual Exhibitors Film Company, for Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Southern New Jersey; Liberty Film Renting Company, Pittsburgh, for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia; Unity Pictures Corporation, Minneapolis, for Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Northern Wisconsin; Monarch Feature Film Company, Kansas City, for Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

The Unity exchanges in Houston, Tex., and Atlanta, Ga., will distribute the comedies in the South and Southwest.

"THE CHATTEL" CROWDS THE STRAND TO CAPACITY

In spite of the street car strike which tied up New York pretty geenrally, the Strand theatre admitted five capacity audiences (16,000 people in all) Sunday, Sept. 24, to witness the first appearance on the screen of E. H. Sothern.

On Friday, Sept. 29, "The Chattel" was presented at the opening of Stillman theatre in Cleveland, one of the finest motion picture houses ever built.

To C. A. Meade, Vitagraph V-L-S-E manager at Cleveland, and to Harry Lichtig, manager of the new Stillman theatre, is due the credit for the Stillman booking, which is a contract for the three Sothern pictures that the Greater Vitagraph will release. The opening of the Stillman was by invitation only, no tickets being sold.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, Oct. 1.

NO less than five, ten or twelve reel subjects are shortly to be placed in production by new companies at Los Angeles, and every day statements that other companies are in the process of formation are to be heard about the studios.

The Continental Film Company producing organization under the direction of Frank Montgomery has taken up the filming of the twelve-reel subject, "The Spirit of '76," the players having gone to Yosemite Valley for exterior scenes. Up to this time this organization has used the commercial studio of the Pacific Film Laboratories on Santa Monica Boulevard, Hollywood, but General Manager Goldstein has made the announcement that a studio will be built within the next two weeks, and put in readiness for the company by the time the players return. It is expected this subject will require six months for filming.

Director E. A. Martin, now busy in producing "The Light of Western Stars," in ten reels for the Selig-Polyscope Company, with a cast headed by Tom Mix and Bessie Eyton, is authority for the statement that he will upon completion of his present work take up the making of a twelve-reel picture, giving the history of the United States. Mr. Martin, in speaking of his plans, says he has spent the past year touring different parts of the country to secure locations, first-hand information and correct pictures for settings, at an expense of twenty-five thousand dollars. The picture is to cover the period between 1775 and the preesnt time. The scenario has been prepared and is now copyrighted.

Jap Film Company Under Way

Articles of incorporation of a Japanese film company, named Fujiama Feature Film Company, has opened offices at 1776 Allesandro street, and is preparing details for the making of a twelve-reel subject, dealing with the Korean war. Only Japanese are to be employed in the making of scenes for this subject. This company is backed by financiers of Redlands, Cal., and the studio will be built in that city and offices maintained here. It is stated by the officers that the leading players will be sent to Japan for principal exteriors of the production, but it is very possible these may be built here.

Scene from Cub Comedy, "Oh! for a Cave-man"

Incorporation papers will be filed within a day or two by organizers of the Empire Film Company business men of Glendora, Cal. Henry Kabierske, who directed the production of "The Daughter of a Don," and has had many years' experience as director of pageants, has been engaged to direct for this organization, and will first film "The Silver Arrow," adapted from the story of the same title by Elbert Hubbard.

The Norbig studio, the first one built in Los Angeles, is soon to become active if present plans are carried out. Frank E. Norton is now on his way to New York to complete negotiations for the production of a twelve-episode serial for the Unicorn Exchange system. Mr. Norton recently produced the five-part story titled "Darkness," and will make additional subjects of this size.

Old Lady Rumor has been busy, her latest report being to the effect that Nat Goodwin is to build a studio at his ranch in the San Jacinto Valley for the making of Mirror films.

A former director of the Dudley Motion Picture Company, of Redlands, is reported to have organized a company for the filming of "William Tell." The product of this company is to be known as Redlands Beauty Films, and the studio is to be located at Redlands.

The absence of William C. deMille, now on a vacation which he is spending in New York, reduces the Lasky staff to seven directors, all of whom are busy with their productions.

One company has gone to Balboa Beach, where they will film ocean scenes for the story titled "The Tides of Barnegat," which will offer Blanche Sweet as star.

Director Robert Leonard has taken up the filming of a subject with Mae Murray in the featured part, and Director Frank Reicher is now making the finishing scenes of the last Lou-Tellegen subject. Upon Unparalleled!!

And with proof to back up the assertion, too

THE sweeping on-rush of bookings for the Mighty UNIVERSAL PROGRAM stands unparalleled.

From every corner of the Country, Exhibitors are coming back to the Universal Program in greater numbers than ever since the inception of the industry.

In a letter addressed to President Carl Laemmle, the Theatre Mgrs. and Motion Exhibitors Association of St. Louis said—"We are appealing to you as the President of one of the regular releasing companies in the matter of production. It is the unanimous opinion of Exhibitors generally that the regular program of short subjects, one and two reels, must be maintained for the benefit and the promotion of the business; therefore we earnestly urge you to use your efforts in maintaining the regular program and instead of reducing the number of short subjects—GIVE US MORE."—Signed—Edward Pohlman—Pres.

We could write you a thousand pages of high pressure advertising and not even begin to impress you as does this "appeal."

AND what does this and other letters prove? Proves beyond the slightest shadow of a doubt that Exhibitors are throwing off the galling yoke of high priced, long drawn out, padded, over starred features, of which the public are rapidly tiring. Proves that the public want short subjects—snappy subjects, of variety, so they don't have to stand in line for hours and then see the back end of a feature first and the first part last.

To Exhibitors who see the light breaking and who long to return to the good old days there is one answer that solves the problem of former profits and popularity, and that solution is THE MIGHTY UNIVERSAL PROGRAM. Any one of our 59 Universal Exchanges will arrange bookings with you. Better get in now while the getting's good.

THREE INTERESTING MOMENTS IN BLUEBIRD'S "LOVE NEVER DIES," IN WHICH IS FEATURED RUTH STONEHOUSE

the completion of this, Tellegen will go to Chicago to begin rehearsals for a legitimate stage production, which opens there in October. Nell Shipman is playing opposite Tellegen in this picture.

Director George Melford is directing Fannie Ward in her week "at home." In explanation of the above, it may be said, a setting representing the entire lower floor of a Long Island home, including library, drawing-room, hall, dining-room and kitchen, has been built for this subject, and is referred to as a most elaborate set at the studio, which means a good deal as sets go at Lasky's, this studio having become known among the technical men of the Coast as a most liberal spender for effects.

Lasky Will Use Coast Artillery

A Lasky company will shortly have use for a company of Coast artillery, and already men are engaged in practice under the command of Captain Harry Light. The organization was perfected by Theo. Duncan, former captain of a voluntary company, and H. T. Woodward, former captain of the Philippine Constabulary. Eighty men constitute the company, and they are being drilled under the direction of a Federal officer in the government fort at San Pedro.

"The Soul of Kura-San" is the title given the Japanese photoplay being filmed by Director E. J. LeSaint at the Lasky studio. All scenes for this are laid in Japan, and the entire cast are native sons of Nippon, who have appeared in a number of Japanese stage productions in America. Upon the completion of the filming of this photoplay, Sessue Hayakawa, the star, will open a Japanese theatre in Los Angeles, and these players will serve as members of his stock company. Hayakawa will continue his work during the day with the Lasky company. But one or two of the players understand English, and the star is serving as co-director, technical director and interpreter, in addition to playing the featured part.

The releasing title selected for the C. Gardiner Sullivan Irish comedy-drama starring Bessie Barriscale, supported by Charles Ray, and Marjorie Wilson is "A Corner in Colleens." The star takes the part of a daughter of Ireland named "Shamrock" or "Shammy," who because of her numerous pranks, is known to the villagers as the devil's own witch. Two American youths visit the city of this colleen's home, and a pretty romance follows. Charles Ray is a young American millionaire who falls for the little Irish girl's charms, Miss Wilson is one of Shammy's sisters, and other principals in the cast are Roy Neill and Charles K. French. Clyde DeVinna was in charge of photographing this subject, which was filmed under the direction of Charles Miller.

Ince Gets Enid Bennett

Thomas H. Ince has engaged Enid Bennett in New York, and she is now on her way to the Coast to begin work as a film star. Mr. Ince saw Miss Bennett in a New York production, and immediately arranged for her to come to the Culver City studios. She is best known, perhaps, to legitimate stage patrons as the ingenue who played in support of Otis Skinner.

"Sudden Jim," a popular novel recently published in serial form in the Saturday Evening Post, written by Clarence Budington Kelland, has been purchased by Thomas H. Ince, according to advice at the studio, and preparations are being made for filming it at the Culver City studio. Scenes for this story are laid in the woods of northern Michigan, and the plot is said to be one of love and intrigue.

Director Walter Edwards requiring a dance scene for the production he is now filming, representing the dances of the early '50s, demonstrated to the large number of extras used that he had not forgotten the dances he learned years ago. These scenes take place on a Mississippi river steamboat, and Edwards coached his players in the steps of the lancers and a Virginia reel. The interior of a large steamboat has been built on one of the studio stages, and these scenes were filmed upon the deck of the "stern wheeler."

Three Big Ones at Inceville

Three Ince Triangle players, Dorothy Dalton, Louise Glaum and Charles Ray, are working amid gorgeous sets under the direction of Raymond B. West. The setting represents the entire ground floor plan of a millionaire's mansion, and by Art Director Robert Brunton is said to be the costliest made at this studio. In all there are six complete rooms, all adjoining. The scenario is adapted from a well-known phychological story by Alice P. Brown, the screen version having been prepared by Monte M. Katterjohn. Supporting the three stars are Margaret Thompson, Charles K. French, J. Frank Burke, Jack Gilbert, George Elwell, and a number of others. George Fisher is also a member of this cast, and he will be remembered as impersonating the Christ in "Civilization." Upon the completion of this story, he leaves the Ince organization, and will play with Morosco-Pallas. Charles K. French, playing an important character part, is wearing a vest more than fifty years old. It is of brown brocaded silk, and forms an attractive part of his dinner clothes. It was originally the property of his father, a wealthy retired merchant of Columbus, Ohio.

Thornton Edwards, juvenile of the Ince Triangle players, and Ethel Hopper of the Keystone stock company, were married this week. They decided to keep the event a secret, but a remark dropped in the presence of the groom's uncle caused suspicions, and a confession was finally forced from the popular actor. Young Edwards is accredited with being the most constant wooer of filmdom, he having visited his financee every evening for eight months previous to the wedding. Edwards appeared as juvenile in "The Eye of the Night," and "Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A."

Hart Finishes Northwest Story

William S. Hart is finishing the last scenes for the northwest story, and this week took his entire company to a small town north of Bakersfield, where ideal locations in a town that has not lost its frontier day appearance could be found. Upon his return Mr. Hart will take up a new play which is by J. G. Hawks.

Charles Ray has died in so many photoplays that his admirers are writing him suggesting that he live through one, and it so happens that he has been cast in a part in which he remains a living hero after the last scene is shot.

Peruna is being bought by the keg for the Fine Arts production now known as "Bugs," and Director Paul Powell is serving it to F. A. Turner, who appears in the part of a man who imagines he is afflicted with every ailment to which man is heir. Wilfred Lucas and Constance Talmadge are featured in this story which is from a scenario by William E. Wing. Winifred Westover takes the part of a Swede servant girl, and Elmo Lincoln appears as the sheriff.

The early California life story originally titled "The Defenders," is to be known as "The Sister of Six," little Bessie Love playing the featured part. This story has been completed, and is now in the cutting room. It required the erection of four large sets, one was a rancho of the mission type built in the '40s. Another shows the street of a New England village of the same period, and another set needed was that of a street scene in California in 1870. Ralph Lewis was given a very difficult character part, he appearing as a miser whose character gradually undergoes a change when he is associated with six children. The transition is said to have been very ably acted by Lewis. Bessie Love became a bride in the climax scenes, and wore the wedding gown of her grandmother, who was married in San Francisco in 1872. It is of heavy satin, and fitted the actress without alteration.

Fay Tincher's New Frock

Another frock of black and white, fully as conspicous as any heretofore conceived, has been prepared by Fay Tincher, and she will wear it in playing the name part of the Triangle Komedy "The Lady Drummer." It is plaid, the checks being two inches square, and the costume is made on the bias of the material. It has all the atmosphere necessary for the entire subject. Eddie Dillon is directing and playing the role of the salesman in love with the female of the grip. An old maid shopkeeper, taken by Kate Toncray, wishing to win him, places all her orders with his firm, and turns down the woman. Max Davison takes the part of the small town sport, who thinks he is some "killer" with the ladies.

Another Fine Arts subject finished is titled "Attaboy's Last Race." This was originally known as "His Best Bet." Director Geo. Seigman filmed this story, and to secure the race track atmosphere, the company visited Sacramento during the California State Fair, and staged special races at Exposition Park, Los Angeles, and worked at Tia Juana, Mexico, for several days. This was necessary because races are prohibited any place in California, except at the State Fair. Some exceptional effects were secured when Seigman had an entire race course filmed by means of a camera being fastened to an automobile and running ahead of the horses. It shows the grand stand full of people, the betting booths, and pool rooms, and all features of racing in its balmiest days.

Three New Films in Work at Fox

Three new productions are to be commenced at the Fox studio this week. Director Otis Turner has autoed "all over" Southern California during the past week, selecting suitable locations for the story he will next produce with Juanita Hansen in a featured part, supported by William Clifford and others. Another new picture is to go into production under Frank Lloyd in which the well-known Fox player, William Farnum, will leave his western and working-man's attire in his dressing room, and step forth as a polished gentleman of the gilded palace. Farnum has been absent from the studio more than a month, and is reported to have recovered his health. The third new picture will have Harry Carey in a featured part, and will be of a western nature.

Oscar Apfel and a company of Fox players have gone to San Francisco to film exteriors for an underworld story.

The International boundary war drama, part of the scenes for which were made in Texas, is now in production at the studio, where a number of big sets, including an army's camp have been erected.

Walter Reid with his company of Fox players has gone to San Diego for a number of water and railroad scenes. Accompanying the players was a full crew of stage hands and assistants, so that it will be possible for them to build anything necessary for the scenes needed.

Director Charles Parrott, Hank Mann, Joe Lee and other members of this Fox comedy company have returned from a trip to the high Sierras east of Fresno. They bring no news of big game or of catching all the trout in the mountain streams, but have an enthusiastic account of having secured some wonderful scenes.

The third Fox comedy company has now gotten to work filming a burlesque melodrama.

What's What at Universal

The changing of an avowed miser's character by a child being left at his home, and all his savings stolen, form the principal incidents in the plot for the two-reel scenario "The Storm of Life," filmed at U City. Hayward Mack appears in the role of a woodcarver, who later becomes a miser when his wife elopes with a neighbor of more wealth. Other parts are taken by Universal stock members, and the direction is by Walter Morton.

Director Fred Kelsey is making "Back on the Job," being a newspaper story in which the star woman reporter aids the police in arresting a noted band of crooks. Roy Stewart appears as the heavy, the gentleman leader of the second story men. It so happens that Irene Hunt, upon her return from a three week's honeymoon, following her marriage with Lester Scott, was cast to play the lead part in this story, before title was known. Kelsey is also author of the story.

A melodramatic story of the South, titled "Old Plantation Home," with an atmosphere of before and after the war, is holding the attention of Director William V. Mong, who is author of this two reeler and is also playing the leading part supported by Nellie Allen, Marc Fenton, and Harry Holden, recently added to the stock company of Universal City, following his appearance in a recent photoplay produced by Mong. Mr. Holden came to the coast to dispose of screen rights on a number of plays he owns, and here met Director Mong, who was formerly one of his leading men. Mong induced Holden to take a small part for the novelty of playing before the camera, and when this was viewed in the Universal theatre, Holden was engaged to remain here until his plays are all read.

A mining district story, "The Lost Lode," has been filmed by Director Henry McRae, from scenario by William Parker. It has a highly melodramatic plot, with a number of thrilling scenes depicting the explosion of a mine, at the hands of the heavy's aids, in order that it may be purchased at a low figure from the owner. Edwin N. Wallack has the leading part, that of the owner, and he has the support of a well-known cast of Universal players.

A murder mystery, contained in the Universal subject, titled "The Serpent's Tooth," is an ingenious one. This story is being filmed by Director Stewart Paton from a story by S. R. Jones. A man of wealth is taken ill at the breakfast table, and when revived, tells of a supposed count who wished to win his daughter, attempting to take his life. Investigation brings out the fact that the count is the man's own son, an East Indian, who sought revenge for the wrong done his mother, by administering hypodermically extract from the cobra.

Current Kalem Releases: "One Step Too Far" (October 3), "Girl from 'Frisco," "Blocked Track" (Hazards of Helen)

Another program subject is being filmed by Donald Macdonald, titled "For Value Received, Paid." It pertains to a daughter promising her mother, while the latter is on her death bed, that she will do everything possible to change the ways of her brother. She makes numerous sacrifices, finally being shot by the officers, when she is disguised as the brother, that he may get away without being detected. Lois Wilson is cast for the part of the sister.

Emory Johnson and Dorothy Davenport in "The Unattainable" (Bluebird)

Conway Films Five-Reeler

Director Jack Conway is filming a five-reel subject, titled "The Main Spring," which gives Ben Wilson a dual role of reporter and son of a wealthy broker, and Francelia Billington the lead opposite. It is the story of a clique of brokers attempting to break an enemy, and resorting to the kidnapping of the son, when the broker is dying. The newspaper reporter, closely resembling the son, is induced by the assistants of the dying man to impersonate the son, and thus is brought face to face with the man who caused his father serious loss by forgery, and he is placed in position that makes it possible for him to secure lawful revenge. The cast for this includes the names of twelve prominent Universal players.

The comedy situations in the one-reel Universal subject, titled "No Dogs Allowed," arise from a mix-up in grips of the same appearance, one containing a dog, another a bomb, and the other, lady's lingerie. The direction is by William Beaudine, and the cast is made up of Wm. Franey, Gale Henry, Charles Conklin, Lillian Peacock, and Milburn Moranti.

The Nestorites are producing the one reeler entitled "A Political Tramp," the name part being taken by Eddie Lyons. Two tramps steal a politician's automobile, and arriving at the village pass themselves off as the political candidate and his secretary, Lee Moran. While the supposed candidate is making a speech, their identity is discovered, and they make a hasty get-a-way with the fifty dollar donation given them by the mayor. Fred Gamble, Harry Nolan, Priscilla Dean, Countess DuCello make up the supporting cast. The direction is by Louis Chaudet.

"The Rivals" is the title of a one-reel Universal, produced by Director P. C. Hartigan. The mistaken identity of a pretty wife and homely daughter, affords the comedy situations in this picture. Ernie Shields, Ed. Sedgwick, Ed. Baker, Marcia Moore and Jane Bernoudy, appear in the cast.

Henley Will Make a Feature

Hobart Henley is to produce a five-reel subject, playing the lead as well, and for his leading woman will have Gertrude

Chester Conklin in the Triangle-Keystone Comedy, "A Tugboat Romeo"

Selby. The subject is titled "Little Italy," and is an adaptation from a well-known story.

The Universal Liberty Serial Company is now working on the tenth episode, and continue with their activities at the Old Universal City ranch.

A new story has been placed with Director Charles Swickard for production, which is now known as "Mixed Blood." The continuity is being prepared and cast will be announced within a few days.

Allen Holubar, who was assigned to filming the three-reel subject "A Gentleman and a Soldier," from the story of the same title by Robert H. Davis, was advised when settings were ready for the production, that error had been made with respect to rights on the story. He secured permission to use the settings and people assigned to him, and in thirty minutes had a synopsis written, and began making "A Taint of Fear," without working script. This was completed on schedule time, and he is now busy with "The Old Toy Maker," a decided character sketch, in which he plays the featured part.

While a multiple reel scenario was being prepared, Ruth Stonehouse this week engaged in producing another of the "Mary Ann" series of juvenile comedy-dramas. This one will be known as "Mary Ann's First Job," and shows the mischievious orphan using every means possible to get out of the asylum and into a family, where she will be loved.

The two novels, "The Journal of a Neglected Wife" and "The Woman Alone," have been used for the forthcoming Pathe serial titled "The Neglected Wife," which is now being made at the Balboa plant. Ruth Roland plays the featured part in this, that of the woman alone, and this is her fourth serial. She is now working on the final scenes for "Who Wins," and prior to this appeared in "Who Pays," Pathe release and "The Girl Detective" series for the Kalem. "The Neglected Wife" will consit of twelve two-reel episodes, and will be released early in 1917.

Most everything is going up and down this week at the Kalem studio where "Ham, the Theatrical Broker" is being filmed. Many of the scenes are laid in an office building, and two practical elevators were needed. The operation of the elevators fell to little Bud Duncan, at a time when he had just purchased a new Cadillac car, and when he mixed the instructions for operating the elevator and the auto, he came near wrecking the entire set.

Al Edmundson, who has been playing character parts in Ham Comedies, has been appointed technical director of the studio, and in the future will look after this work in addition to his work before the camera.

During the coming week the Kalem

Norma Talmage in Triangle-Fine Arts' "Fifty-Fifty"

Company will go to Catalina Islands to spend a week where they will film exteriors for two comedies.

Plans for New Kalem Studio

Plans are being made for an enclosed artificial light studio at the Kalem Hollywood plant. Work on this, it is expected, will be commenced within the next week. This will make it possible for continued work during the California rainy season, which heretofore has greatly retarded the activities of this company.

The Kalem Ham Comedy players have come to believe that the old adage that the falling of a star is a sign of death, is incorrect, for during the past week Henry Murdoch, who recently came to the coast from Jacksonville, while riding on a star supported by a piano wire, fell to earth, a distance of fifteen feet. The only injury received was a badly sprained wrist. The scene was needed for a comedy in which Ham and Bud conduct a supposed munition factory, but which in reality is a sauerkraut establishment.

Permission has been granted the Kalem Company to erect a large garage and gasoline station at the edge of Griffith Park, which will be used in the comedy "Ham the Mechanic." The garage will be practical in every respect, with a complete equipment of tools and machines. It so happens that the employes of this invent a new drink composed mainly of gasoline. Everything goes lovely until the habituals light a cigarette.

McGowan Baffled by Fog

Foggy weather has caused Director J. P. McGowan of the Signal Company to give up using lumber regions in and about Eureka and Arcata, and during the week the company moved to Fresno, where they will remain while permanent locations are being selected for the making of the final release of the Helen Holmes serial, "Lass of the Lumberlands." It was the intention to use locations about Hume, California, but arriving there is was found the fogs hang over the district until almost noon each day. Director McGowan is now in the Yosemite Valley where he is making arrangements for accommodations for the players, and they will use a big lumber camp in the Sequoias just at the edge of Yosemite Park.

The day before leaving Arcata, McGowan staged what is perhaps one of the most sensational thrills put into pictures. He had purchased a bridge which spans a river and canyon near that town to use in a race scene between an automobile and a train. The bridge as originally planned, was to be collapsed when the automobile was in the center. The players drove to that point, but the technical men were unable to fell the bridge. Observing this the men in the machine, Charles Wells and William Behrens, drove the car through the railing and off the side, falling to the river thirty-five feet below.

Ford Beebe, publicity writer for the Signal, performed a hazardous act for scenes made around the wrecked steamer Bear, when he swam across the bay to the main land. This is the most westerly point of land in the United States, and the waters are always very rough owing to the exposure on three sides.

A child eight months old, used in a number of scenes of the early episodes of "The Lass of the Lumberlands," has been formally adopted by Helen Holmes, and will be known as Dorothy McGowan.

Rolin Finishes Two Comedies

The Rolin players have completed two exceptional comedies. One was made by Director Hal Roach, and features Lonesome Luke and Bebe Daniels. The larger sets used for this were of the interior of a New York cafe, and a big scene was that in which a wild-eyed individual rode a fiery horse into the place, while it was at the height of its cabaret merriment. Everything went lovely until the horse reached the foot of the stairs leading to a mezzanine floor, where it stopped, and all the persuading of the scores of ingenues, male and female, could not induce it to climb the steps. The director tried out a number of different horses, and finally found a docile one which would march up, but arriving at the top it would not have enough "pep" to buck as the scenario provided. It then became necessary to get a horse and lift it onto the floor where it would do the bucking as a double for the one of sweet disposition that would climb the stairs.

General Manager Dwight Whiting, who has turned his attention to the direction of one company, has completed his second subject. It has a three hundred pound comedian as the principal, and he gives a wonderful show of superfluous flesh, while wearing the hula-hula frock furnished him by his desert island admirers.

The Rolin Company has added Ralph McComas to their stock organization. McComas will be remembered as comedian in the Selig comedy series "The Chronicles of Bloom Center." Later he played with the E. & R., and has since played with Vitagraph.

Yorke-Metro Get McGrath Story

The management of the Yorke-Metro has purchased the film rights for the Harold McGrath story "Pigeon Island," which is to be filmed with Harold Lockwood and May Allison as the secret service agents in the story, upon the completion of the present subject titled "Big Tremaine." The scenes of this story are laid along the St. Lawrence river on the Canadian border, and a smuggling mystery adds much to the romantic plot. The cast for the subject has not been selected, and probably will not be slated for a couple of weeks.

A character actress in the make-up of a negro mammy singing the lines of a southern song a number of times in rehearsal, "started somthing," and now the miniature P. A. of the Yorke studio heralds to the world the formation of a quartette composed of May Allison, soprano; Lester Cuneo, bass; Henry Otto, tenor; and Harold Lockwood, baritone. No disturbance has reached the police department as yet. Further information is to the effect that the stars of this company have made friends with three mammoth blood-hounds used in the present production.

The Yorke-Metro Company spent several days of the past week in Imperial Valley, where they found the temperature hovering about the century mark. The trip inland was made to secure cotton field scenes, Imperial Valley being the only place on the west coast where it is grown.

The Lynn Reynolds Universal company is home from spending four weeks in the lumber camps near Hume, California, making scenes for "The End of The Rainbow," where they had many remarkable experiences. Their daily work began at 5:30 A. M., for it was necessary to catch the 6:15 tram car up the mountain to location. This car was not as comfortable as a pullman either, for the only seats on it were of eight-inch timber with no backs. The passengers were forced to permit their feet to dangle, and all they had to do was to hold on for dear life. Sliding off a seat at any of the thousand and one bends of the track, meant a drop off a trestle and then a lovely roll for most any distance. The deepest spot along the scenic railway was a trifle more than three thousand feet.

One of the large Sequoias, estimated to be more than two thousand years old, was felled and Director Reynolds and Cameraman Clyde Cook sought to get an unusual scene by shooting toward the tree as it fell toward the camera. There was no way to estimate the height of the tree. They built a crow's nest in the top of a nearby Sequoia thinking they were out of the danger zone. They were, but the tree came so close to them when it fell that it blew Reynolds' hat off, and Cameraman Cook's glasses.

VIVIAN MARTIN STARS IN THIS FORTHCOMING MOROSCO-PARAMOUNT, "HER FATHER'S SON"

Myrtle Gonzalez Ill

Myrtle Gonzalez, starred in the picture, was taken ill because of the high altitude, and two physicians worked over her one entire night before they could assure other members of the company that she would recover. Her illness, her physician advises, caused an enlargement of the heart, and this will necessitate Miss Gonzalez taking a long vacation which she is planning to spend at Catalina Islands.

Members of the company feel positive that the most brutal fight ever enacted for films was that made at the lumber camp in which Val Paul and Joe Ryan were principals. The scrap was filmed more than two weeks ago, but the men both have numerous bruises on their faces and bodies from the injuries received during the battle.

President Carl Laemmle has departed for New York after a stay of almost four weeks at Universal City. While here he spent practically all of the time at the studios, and most every day was out on location with one director or another. Several days he spent with Director Stuart Paton viewing and re-viewing the colossal production of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." On the day of his departure he saw the film city staff the largest since it was opened. On this day there were thirty-eight companies working.

Princess Kawananakoa and her children of Hawaii Islands were guests at Universal City one day during the past week, and for the first time in her interesting life she saw motion pictures produced. The princess is the widow of the first representative of the islands in the United States congress.

The George Cochrane U company has just completed a two reel picture titled "The Little Outsider," which gives Molly Malone the featured part of a wealthy farmer's daughter, who is sent to the city to receive education and polish, and there is cared for by a relative badly in need of funds. The country girl sees that the relatives are attempting to swindle her father and exposes them. There is a good love interest, the country girl winning the sweetheart of the city relative's daughter.

Molly Malone in a Two-Reeler

"Her Idol" is another two-reel subject being made by the same company. Here the small sister learns of an attempt on the part of her father to swindle a young man in love with an elder sister who is of the worldly type. The girl exposes the father's plan when the youth is called out, and leaves papers where the father can find them. Molly Malone, playing the part of the younger child, has a scene in this in which she breaks a window glass that she may call to the young man on the lawn with her sister. It was a dangerous piece of business, but was accomplished without accident. In both of these productions, Jack Nellson, Burton Law, Annette DeFoe and others appear.

How a grandmother induces her grandchild to promise to never gamble forms the greater portion of "The Emerald Pin" of two reels, filmed by Director Burton George. Roberta Wilson takes the part of the granddaughter and grandmother. The story is one within a story. The entire cast includes Eileen Sedgwick, Gretchen Lederer, Charles Pearle, and Louise Owen.

A gentleman crook story which ends with the expose of a wager of a popular clubman to play the part of Raffles at a big social function, is being filmed under the title "The Shadow" by Allen Holubar, who plays the gentleman crook. The wager is to the effect that he shall take anything he gets his hands on, and in the end he even takes the sweetheart of the clubman with whom he made the wager. The photoplay gets its title from the fact that another clubman follows to see that he carries out the program. Harry Carter is the shadow and Neva Gerber the girl.

A bank messenger given a tip on the races by a tout wins a number of times, and then fearing he had lost all when a horse is reported "scratched," attempts to take his own life, just at the moment the tout enters the room. The man who gave him the tip is railroaded to prison on an attempt to murder charge, and the bank messenger to in a way relieve his own conscience marries the tout's sister. Years later when the man is released he seeks revenge, but learning of the happiness of his sister, goes away. This story is titled "The Triple Cross," and the three principals under the direction of F. A. Kelsey are Earl Page, Irene Hunt, and Jean Hersholt.

"The Forbidden Game" is the title given a short story dealing with the dual life of a supposed man of wealth and his attempts which continued to his dying moment to keep the secret from his devoted sister. Ed Hearne, Fronzie Gunn, Tom Walsh and Richard Ryan are the principals, and Harry Millarde was in charge of the direction.

Neva Gerber is featured in the program subject "The Better Woman," filmed by U Director Donald Macdonald, and Lee Hill plays the male lead, while Lois Wilson has the part of a spoiled daughter of wealth, who breaks her engagement with her physician lover because he insists that he shall see his patients before looking after her pleasure. Miss Gerber's part is that of a cabaret girl left an orphan and forced to lead a life anything but pleasant to her.

MacDermott Switches to Comedy

John MacDermott, who heretofore has been producing dramatic program subjects at U City, is now filming a comedy. The principal role is taken by George Berranger who appears as an eccentric whose greatest pleasure is collecting dogs and cats, and whose most harmful pastime is the making of bombs. Betty Schade and Albert MacQuarrie are the only other principals in this one-reeler titled "His Harmless Hobby."

Nine single reel comedies have been placed in production at Universal City in the past two weeks, and a majority have now been completed and shipped east.

The Nestor Company headed by Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran have filmed "Learning The Business," a plumber's story in which a youth just home from college is turned over to a journeyman plumber to learn all about it from the ground up. Louis Wm. Chaudet was in charge of directing this.

Glimpses of the Vitagraph Tourists in Seattle, Wash. On Left a Group in Front of the Vitagraph Seattle Branch, Including Tom North, Huntley Gordon, Ralph W. Ince and

Lucille Lee Stewart. In Center, Miss Stewart, and on the Right She Is Again Surrounded by Some of Her Admirers

The Joker Company has produced "Haunted Ghosts" which has scenes laid at the beach, and deals with the attempts of the long-haired faction to carry on a bathing suit crusade and to insure that skirts will be longer and necks higher. Another comedy produced by this organization, under the direction of Wm. Beaudine, is "The Fiery Conquest," wherein the fire chief and constable of a small town try to outrival each other for the hand of the boarding house landlady.

"Who Said Chicken?" is a mix-up between an elderly man with a young wife and a young man with an elderly wife, wherein the couples meet and attempt to get paired off to the satisfaction of all. The same cast appeared in this as in "Lizzie's Waterloo." Ernie Shields and Jane Bernoudy take the leading roles in these.

Three comedies, one of two reels, are nearing completion under the direction of Carter DeHaven, who plays a featured part in each. The two-reel comedy is titled "The Quick and the Dead" and relates to the adventures of a college youth who accidentlly drops a vase on a girl's head, causing her loss of memory. The two single reel subjects are titled "Chip of the Old Block" and "A Gentleman of Nerve."

The last of the Swedie series made for the Universal by Wallace Beery, who plays the featurcd part, have been completed. One is titled "Only a Janitor," and "Bombs and Banknotes." Beery left the Universal this week.

Two One-Reelers Completed

M. K. Wilson has completed the direction of two one-reel pictures titled "Crooks" which has Louise Lovely and Willard Wayne as principals, and "The Wrong Mary Wright," with Edith Roberts, Violet Schram and Malcolm Blevins and the director in the cast. The latter has to do with a rich and a poor girl of the same name who both arrive at a summer resort at the same time. The father of the wealthy maid sends a desirable youth for a son-in-law to jolly up the week end for her, and he, of course, finds the wrong girl and wins her heart.

The most recent subject to be taken up by Wilson is written by Douglas Bronson.

Seattle Gives Vitagraph Players Royal Welcome

Ralph Ince, Lucille Lee Stewart, Huntley Gordon and L. F. Dent Enthusiastically Entertained

SEATTLE has been entertalning four prominent Vitagraph people. The party comprises Ralph W. Ince, the director; Lucille Lee Stewart, leading woman; Huntley Gordon, leading man; and L. F. Dent, studio manager.

The Ince party is on its way to Los Angeles, where Mr. Ince will visit his mother, and had merely intended to stop in Seattle one day. On their arrival they were met by several prominent people of the city and persuaded to remain several days. When they found that extensive plans had been made for their entertainment they readily consented to prolong their stay to one week.

It happened that during the week the Ince party was in Seattle the Vitagraph five-reel feature, "His Wife's Good Name," was booked at the Clemmer, one of the principal theatres. This feature was directed by Ralph Ince, and Miss Stewart plays the leading feminine role and Mr. Huntley the leading male role.

The party was invited to see the film and occupied one of the boxes. When it became known that they were in the theatre a demand was made for their appearance on the stage, to which they graciously acquiesced.

Mr. Huntley made a short, snappy speech, introducing Miss Stewart, who, with tears in her eyes, thanked the audience for their kindness, after which she sang a couple of pleasing selections. Mr. Ince was then introduced and made a clever talk about photoplay producing.

The trio was so enthusiastically received that arrangements were made to have them appear at other performances, and in all they each appeared nine times. The theatre was the center of attraction during their stay, and thousands were turned away each day.

Seldom has any performer received the ovation in Seattle as that accorded this trio of picture people.

The Ince party was kept very busy during their stay here. Receptions, parties, automobile trips, including one to the summit of Mount Ranier, and dancing parties were thickly crowded together. Society outdid itself to make their stay exceedingly pleasant.

Michelena in Calfornia Wilds to Act for "Passion Flower"

Picture Will Recall "Salomy Jane," California Motion Picture Corporation Officials Predict—Theme Is in Marked Contrast to Her Two Previous Films

REPORTS from the studios of the California Motion Picture Corporation at San Rafael, Cal., would indicate that when Beatriz Michelena makes her screen appearance in "The Passion Flower" the picture public will find that the production is in many ways reminiscent of "Salomy Jane," in which Miss Michelena made her debut as a motion picthre actress.

"Salomy Jane," at the time of its release, was widely heralded as the first photoplay of consequence to exploit Northern California scenery. Heretofore the more pretentious pictures made in California came from the southern end of the State.

"The Passion Flower" is said, like "Salomy Jane," to revel in the bigness of Northern California's out-of-doors. At last report the producing company headed by Miss Michelena was isolated somewhere out in the mountain wilds southwest of Lagunitas.

This section is commonly known as the "Bad Lands" of Marin county, and is possessed of a heritage of unsavory notoriety haded down from the "wild-and-woolly" days of the Far West. It is a locality of almost inaccessible mountains and canyons and at one time offered retreat to some of California's most feared bandits. Black Bart's is one of the names associated with the history of the section.

Miss Michelena's role is that of a wild and ungovernable Spanish girl of the earlier California type. The part is said to contrast markedly with that of the Woman in the seven-reel feature "The Woman Who Dared."

Looking Ahead With The Producers

Mutual Program for Week of October 9 Is Headed by Bennett and Florence Turner

William Russell and Margarita Fisher, Mutual Stars; Center, a Scene from "Citizens All"

RICHARD BENNETT, in "Philip Holden—Waster," heads the schedule of Mutual Film Corporation's releases for the week beginning Oct. 9. This Mutual Star Production will appear on Monday, Oct. 9.

"Philip Holden—Waster" is a re-title for the drama "His Brother's Keeper," which was written for Mr. Bennett by Kenneth B. Clarke before the star's journey out to the coast, and which, from the first announcement of Mr. Bennett's present contract with the Mutual, was named as the vehicle for his second Mutual Star Production.

"The Sable Blessing," which was intended for Mr. Bennett's premier in Mutual Star Productions, and was announced as such, was delayed before release, however, and postponed until a later date. Thus "Philip Holden—Waster" will mark the popular player's first appearance in pictures since the famous "Damaged Goods," over a year ago.

Mr. Bennett is supported by a cast, including Rhea Mitchell, Adrienne Morrisson (Mrs. Richard Bennett), George Periolat, Clarence Burton and Orral Humphrey.

A second Mutual Star Production will go out from the Mutual during the week of October 9. Florence Turner will appear October 12 in "Redeemed."

"Redemeed," as the former of Miss Turner's Mutual releases, was produced by Larry Trimble.

On Monday, October 9, a drama of two reel length, featuring Winnifred Greenwood and Edward Coxen, entitled "Citizens All," will be released.

In this screen story is combined a plot with an amusing combination of whimsical characters, colored by the red, white and blue of its patriotic background.

Miss Greenwood and Mr. Coxen, in the roles of the younger members of the respective families, are supported by Clarence Burton as the German music teacher, George Field as the French fencing teacher, and Louise Lester as the landlady.

On Friday, a second two-part drama, will find its way to the public. "At the Edge of the Aqueduct," from the studios of the Thanhouser Company.

The regular weekly Beauty comedy of the week appears on Tuesday, October 10. John Sheehan, Carol Halloway, John Steppling, Vera Sissons, Robert Klein, Dick Rosson and Earl Montgomery, old favorites of the Mutual, will be seen in this two-reel funny picture entitled "That Sharp Note."

Ben Turpin and Rube Miller will be seen in a two-reel Vogue on Saturday, October 15, entitled "Ducking a Discord."

There will be three one-reel comedies of "Cub" brand on the Mutual's program for the second week in October. "Inoculating Hubby" will appear on Friday, October 15. "Those Primitive Days" and "Their College Capers" will go to the public on Saturday, October 14.

The usual release of Mutual current news, Mutual Weekly No. 93, will appear on Wednesday, October 11, as will "See America First" and Harry Palmer's Kartoon Komics, in split reel.

The Mutual's magazine in film, "Reel Life," will be released on its regular day, Sunday, and will contain interesting material of pertinence to today's business and educational activities.

Pathe Program for the Week Contains 15 Reels; "The Pillory" a Modern "Scarlet Letter"

THE Pathe Program for the week of October 8th contains a five-part Gold Rooster Play, "The Pillory," the second episode of "The Shielding Shadow," 2 reels, the 13th chapter of "The Grip of Evil," 2 reels, "The Sword of Damocles," a two-reel drama, "Heinie and the 400," a one reel comedy, "U. S. Customs' Inspection," one reel educational, and Pathe News Nos. 82 and 83, a total of 15 reels.

"The Pillory" was made by Thanhouser and features Florence La Badie. It has been aptly described as a modern "The Scarlet Letter" and is a scathing criticism of the "unco guid" who in their eagerness to point out the mote in their neighbor's eye heed not the beam in their own.

Honors are about equally divided between Miss La Badie as the girl and Nellie Spaulding as the bigoted, hypocritical aunt.

The second episode of "The Shielding Shadow" contains the secnes in which Jerry Carson is dragged into the depths of the sea by a giant octopus.

In the 13th chapter of "The Grip of Evil" it becomes increasingly evident that John Burton is not so decided as he was in the opinion that all humanity is bad.

"The Sword of Damocles" is a story of a musical genius, dragged down by drink, who sells at a ridiculous price his masterpiece to a man who straightway has it produced under his own name. Over the purchaser's head, like the sword of Damocles, hangs the knowledge that he is parading under false colors and in the end his deception is discovered with tragic results.

"Heinie and the 400" is a rough and tumble comedy in which as a social lion Heinie bats .400.

"U. S. Customs' Inspection" presents the intimate side of a department little of which is known by the majority of people. The film was made with the approval of the U. S. Government.

SELIG OFFERS COMPLETE FILMS ON WORLD'S SERIES

Every play made on the baseball diamond, including preliminary practice, conferences of the managers, the throngs of people seeking seats, these and all other interesting details in connection with the world's champion baseball series will be filmed by a staff of cameramen, engaged by the Selig Polyscope Company. There will be a dozen or more of these cameramen on the playing fields working for the Selig Company, which has secured exclusive rights to film the world's series.

The feature baseball film in five or more reels, will be released through the twenty-three exchanges in all principal cities operated by the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service.

Plans have been perfected by which a film will be presented that will give almost as much satisfaction to the spectator as if one had attended the ball games. All the stars of the opposing teams, in fact every detail will be filmed and presented to movie and baseball fans in the form of an entertaining story.

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, (INC)

THOUSANDS who are willing to concede the soundness of the BLUEBIRD policy "The Play's the Thing," were at first skeptical on another point.

They wondered if the acting would not suffer from this policy. For answer we have proven in the BLUEBIRD Photoplays that through selecting capable actors of the right type for each character, the acting has reached the highest standard known in screen productions.

Under the star system, the play and support-players were subordinated to the star; the result an uneven and unsatisfactory performance.

Millions of people have learned of this BLUEBIRD policy through half-page advertisements in the Saturday Evening Post. Your share of the resulting increased patronage of theatres showing BLUEBIRDS is awaiting you. Write today for full particulars to your Local Bluebird Exchange or

Red Feather for October 9 Is "Romance of Billy Goat Hill"; Bevy of Shorter Pictures Rounds Out the Week

TWO Universal Special Features and a Red Feather will be released on the Universal program for the week of October 9. Carter De Haven will be seen in "Breaking Into Society," a two-reel episode of the "Timothy Dobbs—That's Me" series, while Marie Walcamp, Eddie Polo and Jack Holt star in "A Daughter of Mars," the latest two-reel episode of the new Universal serial "Liberty." In "Breaking Into Society," ninth of the "Dobbs" series which have been produced by Wallace Beery from the story by Bess Meredyth, Carter De Haven is supported by Robert Milash and Margaret Whistler. Besides the principals, the cast of "Liberty" now includes Bertram Grassby, Neal Hart, G. Raymond Nye, Maud Emory and L. M. Wells.

The Red Feather release on October 9th, is "A Romance of Billy Goat Hill," a five-reel drama featuring Myrtle Gonzalez, Val Paul and Fred Church. The play was scenarioized and produced by Lynn Reynolds from the book by Alice Hegan Rice. George Hernandez, Thomas Jefferson, Frankie Lee, Jack Connelly and Jack Curtis also play important roles in the picture. On the same day "Almost Guilty," a Nestor comedy featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Priscilla Dean will be released. "Almost Guilty" was written by Walter Newman and produced by Louis Chaudet.

On October 10, Mary Fuller will be seen in "Cheaters," a Gold Seal three-reel underworld and society drama written by E. M. Engleton, picturized by Catherine Carr and directed by Lucius Henderson. Clara Beyers, Harry Spingler, Paul Panzer and Johnnie Walker appear in support of Miss Fuller. There will be no Victor release on this date.

On October 11 the L-Ko two-reel comedy, "Lured But Cured," with Gertrude Selby, Dan Russell, and Charles Inslee in the principal roles will be released. No. 41 of the Universal Animated Weekly will be released on the same date. There will be no release under the Laemmle brand on this date.

The Universal special feature, Flora Parker De Haven in "Behind Life's Stage," a two-reel human interest drama, will be released on Oct. 12. Virginia Corbin, Charlie Cummings, Margaret Whistler and William Welch, appear in support of Miss De Haven. On the same day the Dorsey travel picture, "The Beautiful Temples of Ceylon," will be released as a Powers educational. There will be no release under the Big U brand on this date.

William Garwood and Lois Wilson will co-star on October 13 in "A Soul at Stake," an Imp two-reel Oriental drama written by John Fleming Wilson, scenarioized by Calder Johnstone and produced by William Garwood, Al Barzan, Edward Brady and Andrew Arbuckle appear in support of the co-stars. On the same day "Pat" Rooney is featured in "It's All Wrong," a Nestor comedy produced by Roy Clements from the story by Henry McRae which was scenarioized by Ben Cohn. Ed Sedgwick, Yvette Mitchell and Jean Hershott play in support of the versatile Pat. There will be no Rex release on this date.

"Night Shadows," a two-reel western drama written by Willis Robards, will be released on October 14. Alfred Gordon, Edward Carey, Ernest Murray and Alice Nelson play the principal roles. "The Oil Smeller," a Joker comedy written by Charles J. Wilson, Jr., and produced by P. C. Hartigan will be released on the same date with Ernie Shields, O. C. Jackson, Yvette Mitchell and Albert MacQuarrie in the cast.

"When Little Lindy Sang," a juvenile drama featuring Ernestine Jones, a little colored girl, will be released with "Diplomacy," a cartoon, as a split reel under the Powers brand. "When Little Lindy Sang" was produced by Lule Warrenton. Little Nora Dempsey, and Margaret Whistler also played important parts in the picture. There will be no Rex nor L-Ko releases on this date.

The Universal also will release during the week a Rex two-reel drama, a Big U one-reeler, a Laemmle one-reeler and an Imp one-reeler, the titles of which have not yet been decided upon.

VIVIAN MARTIN IN "HER FATHER'S SON"

As its next release on the Paramount Program, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company will present Vivian Martin in "Her Father's Son" by Anna Fielder Brand and staged under the direction of William D. Taylor.

"Her Father's Son" is the second Paramount release starring Miss Martin and offers a drama of heart interest together with quaint situations dealing with the period in the South just prior to the Civil War.

In addition to Director Taylor's touches, Miss Martin's new vehicle displays various spectacular scenes including a series of battle scenes. One of the largest interior sets ever erected at the Morosco studio is also shown, representing a massive ballroom with a high balcony and grand stairway.

The supporting cast discloses another typical Morosco company and includes such sterling players as Herbert Standing, Alfred Vosburgh, Helen Jerome Eddy, Joe Massey, Jack Lawton, Lucille Ward, and Tom Bates. Homer Scott supervised the camera work.

Special advertising boosters have been prepared for this production and big returns are expected by exhibitors throughout the country, particularly in the many cities in which "Vivian Martin Cooking Chatter" series is being published by local newspapers. The photoplay will be released through the Paramount commencing October 12.

THREE SINGLE REELS FROM GAUMONT WEEK OF OCTOBER 8

With the fifth "Fantomas" episode having been released Oct. 5, the present series is brought to an end. The Gaumont Company does not follow it immediately with "The Vampires." Hence the week of Oct. 8 has only three Gaumont single-reels to offer. The first day of the week "Reel Life" No. 23 will be released. Mary Miles Minter and her life, both at home and at the studio, is pictured under the title of "A Day With Mutual's Youngest Star." A second division is called "A Backyard Farm." The remarkable results to be obtained by intensive cultivation of the soil is the feature of these pictures. "How to Handle a Canoe" tells in pictures the wrong and right methods of handling these frail crafts.

"See America First," for Oct. 11, takes spectators on a trip to Richmond, Va. This is a split-reel, the second half being given up to one of the Gaumont Kartoon Komics, animated by Harry Palmer.

The third single-reel of the week is the Mutual Weekly which is manufactured and edited at the Gaumont laboratories at Flushing, New York.

A Trio of Scenes from "In the Diplomatic Service," Metro, Starring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne

TALMADGE AND WARNER STARS IN OCTOBER TRIANGLES

Norma Talmadge and N. B. Warner are the stars of the Triangle feature releases for the week of October 22. Miss Talmadge appears in "Fifty-Fifty," a Fine Arts production recently made in the East under the direction of Allan Dwan. Mr. Warner's vehicle is the Triangle-Kay Bee drama, "The Vagabond Prince," written by J. G. Hawks and directed by Charles Giblyn.

In "Fifty-Fifty" Miss Talmadge has the piquant role of an unconventional girl of the New York artist quarter. She marries happily and a baby comes to the little home. Then the husband drifts away, fascinated by another woman. The adventuress hires a detective to "frame" the young wife and the husband brings trial for divorce. In a dramatic court room scene, the wife demands the custody of the child, declaring falsely that her husband is not the father of the infant. This apparent sacrifice of reputation for mother love in the end brings about a happy reunion of the young couple.

Mr. Warner has a picturesque role in "The Vagabond Prince," playing the young Prince Tonio of Bothalia. The young nobleman, tired of the false pomp of his little country, comes to the San Francisco Barbary Coast in quest of adventure. There he encounters one Fluffy, a fascinating dancer of the cafes, and, after many adventures, gives up his throne for love of the girl.

Dorothy Dalton plays Fluffy in support of Mr. Warner in "The Vagabond Prince," while J. W. Johnston is leading man for Miss Talmadge in "Fifty-Fifty." In this production Marie Chambers plays the adventuress, Dodson Mitchell is the detective, and Frank Currier the judge.

VITAGRAPH CONTRIBUTES TWO COMEDIES TO GENERAL PROGRAM

Frank Currier has made "Billy's Melodrama," as one of the comedies Vitagraph contributes for the week of October 9, to the General Film Program, with William Lytell, Jr. and Shirley Moore in the cast. Billy's favorite indoor sport is reading blood curdling thrillers. Failing to find anything sufficiently exciting, he decides to write a real thriller himself. As he writes he smokes and, becoming excited, ignites his celluloid collar. Result—the fire engines are summoned and Billy is torn away from his work so that the story is never finished.

On the 13th of October, "The Mayor's Fall From Grace," will be released by the General Film exchanges. The mayor forgets his promise to his wife to attend a five o'clock reception when a delegation of politicians wait on him with the news that he is to be nominated for governor. A mild celebration follows and it is well after five o'clock when he recalls his reception engagement. Mr. Frisbie leaves the reception to learn the base-ball scores and when the mayor shows up Frisbie's butler puts him to bed. Complications follow thick and fast. Of course his fall from grace is purely innocent and eventually his honor is vindicated.

"THE FLOWER OF FAITH" FOR OCTOBER 2

"The Flower of Faith," the second of the Golden Eagle Features of the International Film Service, Inc., will be released on Monday, October 2. It is a five-reel drama, written especially for the films by Charles T. and Frank Dazey. It was produced for the International Film Service, Inc., by the Superb Pictures Corporation. Jane Grey is starred in the production and Frank Mills is featured. Others prominent in the cast are Percy Helton and Albert Travernier.

Work Started on Famous Players Production of "Seventeen" —Adapted from Booth Tarkington's Novel— Louise Huff to Star

ACTUAL work has been started on the Famous Players adaptation of Booth Tarkington's novel, "Seventeen," in which Louise Huff and Jack Pickford are co-starring under the direction of Robert G. Vignola, for the Paramount Program. One striking change which is noticeable in the arrangement of the stellar roles is the appearance of Louise Huff as Lola Pratt, the baby-talk lady, instead of Jane, the apple-sauce and bread-consuming expert, the role she had originally intended to play. Jack Pickford will of course play William Sylvanus Baxter, in accordance with the original announcement made at the time of the acquisition of the rights to the popular novel.

Ann Murdock (McClure)

The others in the cast include Winnifred Allen, Madge Evans, Helen Lindroth, Walter Hiers, Dick Lee, Richard Rosson, Julian Dillon and Anthony Merlo. Winnifred Allen will be Ray Parcher, whose unrequited devotion to the illustrious William is a source of deep concern until the very closing scenes. Instead of Miss Huff, Madge Evans will impersonate Jane; Walter Hiers will be George Cooper, the fat and hated rival of William. Genesis, the negro servant of the Baxter family, whose presence is a source of great annoyance to poor William, will be played by Dick Lee. Mrs. Baxter, the patient, understanding mother of William, will be impersonated by Helen Lindroth, who has done excellent work in several other Famous Players productions. Anthony Merlo will be the long-suffering Mr. Baxter, whose dress suit is the alternate source of bliss and despair on the part of William, the youthful hero.

ULRICH RELEASE POSTPONED FOR ONE WEEK

Due to a change in the Paramount release schedule, Lenore Ulrich's new photoplay vehicle, "The Intrigue," will be shown in the Paramount theatres commencing October 9th in place of October 2nd. The new Pallas Pictures subject will first be seen in New York City at the Strand theatre where it will be given an elaborate presentation. Miss Ulrich, who is now in New York, will appear personally at the opening exhibition and plans to be present each day during the week it appears at the Strand.

"OLD FOLKS AT HOME" IS TRIANGLE MEDIUM FOR BEERBOHM TREE

When Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree announced his intention of appearing in a moving picture version of "Macbeth," he added that it would be his one and only appearance on the screen. It is to the credit and distinct gain of moving pictures that the noted English actor found the work before the camera so interesting and so dignified that it was really at his own suggestion that a second story was found for him to work in.

"The Old Folks at Home," a Triangle-Fine Arts feature, was selected by the distinguished English actor himself, and is by Rupert Hughes, who has won an enviable place for himself as a writer of short stories.

A cast which includes Josephine Crowell, Elmer Clifton, Mildred Harris, Lucille Younge, W. E. Lawrence, and Spottiswoode Aitken, gives support to Sir Herbert Tree.

JEANNE EAGELS IN "THE WORLD AND THE WOMAN"

Jeanne Eagels, known for her work on the speaking stage in "Outcast" and "The Great Pursuit," is to be starred by the Thanhouser Film Corporation in "The World and the Woman," a Pathe Gold Rooster play by Philip Lonergan. Eugene Moore is the director. The feature is to be released in November.

Miss Eagels plays the part of a woman of the streets who is spiritually reborn and becomes a faith healer.

The story starts in a New York restaurant and the characters are carried to a little mountain town where the influence of a little child makes the woman turn back and take the better path.

The feature has been shown to prominent Christian Scientists, who have heartily indorsed the play.

Miss Eagels is supported by Boyd Marshall, Thomas A. Curran, Wayne Arey, Grace De Carlton, Carey Hastings and Ethelmary Oakland.

MARGARITA FISCHER AS "MISS JACKY"

In the role of "Miss Jacky," the astonishing daughter of nouveau riche parents, who want her to marry a title, much to the young woman's merriment and disgust, Margarita Fischer will make her reappearance on the screen as a Mutual star at an early date.

Miss Fischer formerly belonged to the cohorts of the American Film Company, Inc., appearing in American Beauty and later Mutual Masterpicture releases under the direction of Harry Pollard. Last year the pretty actress and her director joined the Equitable's Eastern forces. In August, they again joined the ranks of Mutual producers. The pictures in which Miss Fischer is to star are the product of Pollard Picture Plays Company, released by the Mutual through a special arrangement with the American Company.

The original synopsis of "Miss Jacky" was written by Alfred Solman, the composer, and was put into working form by Harry Pollard, Miss Fischer's director, and Julian Louis Lamothe.

Selig Pictures Open and Close General Program for Week of October 9—Essanay, Vitagraph, Kalem, Biograph and Vim All Register with Offerings

SELIG productions will open and close General Film Service program for the week October 9-14. "Converging Paths" from the Selig studios, a drama in two parts, presenting Robyn Adair and Virginia Kirtley, will be the first picture shown for the week. This will be followed by a Vitagraph one-reel comedy, "Billy's Melodrama," presenting William Lytell, Jr., and Shirley Moore. The Selig-Tribune will next be thrown on the screen, and as there has been so much news of importance transpiring lately this feature of General Film Service program for that week should be especially interesting. The first day's releases will conclude with a Biograph reissue, "A Tale of the Wilderness," in one act, with Dorothy Bernard in the titular role.

To Essanay falls the task of putting theatre patrons of General Film Service theatres in good humor with their first picture Tuesday, October 10. For this the comedy-drama "Money to Burn," in two parts, presenting Lillian Drew and John Lorenz, has been selected. Then will come a Kalem comedy in one reel, "The Love Magnet," with "Ham" and "Budd" and Ethel Teare providing the fun. Another Biograph reissue in two parts, "A Pueblo Legend," with Mary Pickford, will close the program for that day.

Essanay's split-reel Canimated Nooz Pictorial and scenic film will be the first displayed Wednesday, October 11. A Vim comedy, "Their Installment Furniture," presenting Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby, will follow this and then will come the tenth episode of "The Girl from 'Frisco" in two reels.

This is called "The Reformation of Dog Hole," featuring Marin Sais and True Boardman.

Selig-Tribune and a Vim "Plump" and "Runt" comedy, "The Candy Trial," will be General Film Service's offering for Thursday, October 12.

The Knickerbocker Star Feature offers "From the Deep," a drama in three parts featuring Joyce Moore, Friday, October 13. This will be succeeded by "The Battered Bridegroom," a Kalem one-act comedy with Ivy Close featured. Two more comedies, a Vitagraph, "The Mayor's Fall from Grace," with Anna Schaefer and Jack Mower, and a Vim production, "Watch Your Watch," of the "Pokes" and "Jabs" series, will close the program for that day.

The final day of the week will begin when "Lost Twenty-four Hours," a comedy in three parts, is shown by Essanay with Richard Travers and Marguerite Clayton as headliners. Then will follow an episode of "The Hazards of Helen" by Kalem, featuring Helen Gibson in "To Save the Special." A Selig one-act drama with Tom Mix in the titular role, "A Mistake in Rustlers," will conclude the week's offerings.

Initial Episode of "The Shielding Shadow," Pathe, Release Date October 1, Deals with Buccaneer Treasure

THE initial episode of Pathe's serial, "The Shielding Shadow," produced by Astra, will be released on October 1. It deals with the adventures and the love affair of Jerry Carson and Leontine Walcott.

Jerry Carson, an American novelist, while in the Bahamas, finds a message in a bottle washed up by the sea, signed by Joseph Dexter, recognized as a master of synthetic chemistry. It states that Dexter has found the treasure of Sir Henry Morgan, buccaneer, on the South Atlantic rock known as Ravengar's Ledge. Much against the wish of his sweetheart, Leontine Walcott, Jerry starts out to seek this treasure. Leontine also is wooed by Sebastian Navarro, an Argentino, whose suit her father favors.

The ship on which Jerry has taken passage burns at sea and Jerry is the only one saved. When the report is spread that Jerary has been drowned Walcott tries to persuade Leontine to marry Sebastian. Jerry, however, returns in time to hear Diego Navarro, Sebastian's brother, tell Leontine that Jerry had borrowed money from his brother which he failed to return after selling the property pledged for the loan. He shows her a supposed receipt for a large sum advanced by Sebastian. This document was forged by One Lamp Louie. The signature does not deceive Leontine, who defends her sweetheart. Jerry at this moment appears in person and tries to get the receipt from Diego. In the fight which follows Jerry throws Diego to the floor. The latter strikes his head on a iron ornament. Jerry is charged with Diego's murder.

Grace Darmond is Leontine Walcott, Leon Barry, Sebastian Navarro; and Ralph Kellard, Jerry Carson.

"HERITAGE OF HATE" IS NOT UP TO BLUEBIRD REQUIREMENTS, SO IS WITHDRAWN FROM RELEASE

When "The Heritage of Hate" was edited and cut it was found to fall short of the requirements of a Bluebird and it has been withdrawn as the Oct. 23 release, and "Love Never Dies" has been substituted. Ruth Stonehouse will play the leading role with Franklyn Farnum and Kingsley Benedict as her chief support. Harvey Gates wrote the story and furnished William Worthington the scenario from which to direct. Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" formed the basis of the idea carried out in five reels.

"Love Never Dies," on Oct. 23, will follow Cleo Madison, in "The Chalice of Sorrow," Oct. 9, and J. Warren Kerrigan and Louise Lovely, in "The Social Buccaneer" on Oct. 16. There remains a play to be selected for Oct. 30 to fill the month's program.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

Exhibitors and Exchanges at Close Quarters in Denver on "White Way"—Fox Exchange Moves

THE Fox Film exchange of Denver has moved into a new location on "Film Exchange Row." Manager A. W. Eden claims that business was coming in so fast at the old quarters, 414-15-16 Ideal Building, that the exchange had to move into a more spacious office to be able to handle the increase, and of course NEWS is pleased to hear this. Mr. Eden's assistants are A. F. Bergen, booker; Miss Jane Krause, bookkeeper; Norman Cohen, shipping clerk; Marie Battone, inspector.

"Denver's Great White Way," located on Curtis street, comprises only three city blocks. But in these three blocks there are eleven of the largest and most beautiful theatres in America, representing a net investment of three million dollars. They are the Rialto, Tabor Grand, Princess, Strand, Isis, Iris, Paris, Plaza, Colonial, Empress and the American. The last named is now under course of construction. But "The Great White Way" had better look to its laurels, as it has a near rival in "Film Exchange Row," known as Welton street. At the present time the following companies are represented on the "Row":

Universal, Unicorn, Artcraft, Fox, Mutual, United, Paramount, and World. In all cases the above named are located in new buildings, on the ground floor, and all utilize their windows for clever displays of new releases.

The exhibitors are very pleased with the idea of the exchanges being located close together, as it saves Mr. Exhibitor much time in booking his program. Novel lighting effects add to the window displays of the exchanges and attract much attention from the passersby, "Film Exchange Row" is a close second to "The Great White Way."

William A. Calkins, who has been in charge of the Bluebird exchange at Denver since the first of the year, has resigned, and will enter a new field of endeavor. No appointment has been made to succeed Calkins up to the present writing, but it is expected that a new manager will take charge at an early date. The Bluebird productions are soaring high in the Intermountain territory and are responsible for some record-breaking crowds.

Denham Palmer, former manager of the World exchange of Denver, is now connected with the new Vitagraph as road representative. Palmer made an exceptional record as manager of the World exchange, and his success with Vitagraph is assured by his experience and aggressiveness.

G. N. Montgomery, special representative of William A. Brady, arrived in Denver the early part of last week to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Denham Palmer, the former manager. Montgomery states that he is very much pleased with the outlook of the motion picture business in the Inter-mountain territory. The World exchange is hitting the high mark financially.

The new Artcraft exchange was opened in Denver Monday, September 18, with T. Y. Henry as the manager. Manager Henry selected a very desirable location on "Film Exchange Row." Henry, formerly manager of the General Film exchange of this city, predicts a whirlwind business for the Mary Pickford productions in the Inter-mountain territory, and from the start that the new brand has to date we get that impression too.

M. H. Cohn, manager of the Notable Feature Film Company of Denver, handling Paramount productions, is back at his desk after a brief illness, and we might add that Cohn is again hitting on "six cylinders," at least that is the impression we get after making a survey of the new contracts that have arrived at the office since Cohn's return. Naturally, all who know Jack Scott, Cohn's live roadman, will readily realize that he is directly responsible for a good part of the new business. And our friend Cohn confirms this statement. The Paramount contest for exchange managers is attracting Manager Cohn's attention, and he declares that "his hat's in the ring." It is Cohn's intention to win the first prize. Go to it, Cohn, we're all for you.

F. Y. Langtree, managing the Universal exchange at Denver, is rounding his office force into shape for the winter season. Miss Anna Solan, bookkeeper for this office, resigned her position last week, after serving eight years in the film business. It is said by Dame Rumor that the marriage germ is the cause.

Mutual Makes Changes in Sales Forces of Exchanges; Two New Buildings Are Under Way in Boston and Cincinnati

THE opening of the Fall season and the usual arrangements for the handling of the added business that always comes with the approach of cold weather has resulted in numerous additions and changes in the sales and executive forces of the Mutual Film Corporation's sixty-eight branches.

Plans have been drawn up and arrangements completed for the erection of two-story buildings to handle the Mutual's business in Boston and in Cincinnati. The Boston building will be located at 123 Pleasant street, in the heart of the Boston film trade.

B. Tolmas, former salesman of the Mutual's New York Twenty-third street branch and of the Philadelphia office, has been appointed manager of the Philadelphia branch. J. W. Pierce has been made his assistant. The sales force at this office will consist of J. Safron, W. Naismith and B. S. Daniels.

E. G. Evans, until recently manager of the Mutual's Baltimore office, has been transferred to Washington in the same capacity at the Mutual's branch here. O. D. Weems, formerly salesman at the Baltimore branch, has succeeded Mr. Evans in that city.

The Indianapolis office has been put in charge of William Engelman, previously manager of the Evansville, Ind., branch. Norman D. Dixon, former salesman, has been appointed to the management of the Evansville branch.

M. S. White, formerly assistant manager of the Oklahoma City office, has been transferred to Kansas City as assistant manager of that city's branch. Harry M. Young has been sent to Kansas City as salesman. O. S. Taylor, formerly Phoenix, Arizona, branch manager who resigned some time ago on account of ill health, has again returned to the Mutual fold. He will assist Jack Brainard to manage the Oklahoma City branch.

W. J. Drummond, a former manager of the Mutual's Spokane office, has again returned to the Mutual as manager of the Los Angeles branch. N. E. Levi, salesman out of the San Francisco office, has been transferred to Los Angeles, where he used to be.

The following salesmen have recently been added to the Mutual's forces: J. Herrington, Spokane; A. S. Kirkpatrick, Seattle; W. H. Teeple, Buffalo; Lloyd Hammond, Detroit; F. E. McCoy, San Francisco; Arthur Hogenson, Detroit; H. S. Waterman, Los Angeles; Charles A. Gardner, Cleveland; Alfred Raymond, Dallas, Tex.; Leon Klasky, Indianapolis, and M. Kauffman, Toronto, Ont.

C. B. Price, the Canadian General Manager, has just returned to his office at Toronto after a trip through the Mutual's Canadian branches. He announces the appointment of T. C. Malcom as manager of the Montreal office to succeed N. Hepworth, who has left for the European front.

Philadelphia Mutual Has New Manager; K-E-S-E Established; Greater Vitagraph Does New Stunts

B. R. Tolmas has succeeded J. W. Pope, Jr., as manager of the Philadelphia Exchange of the Mutual Film Corporation at 251 N. Twelfth street. The appointment with Mr. Tolmas is in line with the policy of General Manager Hunter Bennet, who always selects his managers from the ranks.

Mr. Tolmas was formerly in the New York office, but since March has been connected with the Philadelphia branch as road representative, in which capacity he became personally acquainted with all the present Mutual exhibitors and many expected future Mutual exhibitors. It is this wide acquaintance with the distinct needs of each exhibitor that will stand the new manager in good stead now.

G. W. Pierce, now traveling representative, becomes assistant manager of the exchange.

The booking department for Masterpictures and regular service will be in charge of B. S. Daniels, of New York, who has had ten years of experience in this line having represented, at various times, General, Pathe and Mutual companies.

The business is growing so rapidly that present quarters are found too small. An addition that will double this present capacity will be necessary. The present neighborhood will be retained.

Charlie Chaplin in the "Count" is proving a big hit. Many theatres are asking for a rebooking. Many advance bookings are being made on "Youth's Endearing Charms," with Mary Miles Minter.

Mr. Tolmas is anxious that all patrons shall know that his policy is to be that of "perfect satisfaction to each exhibitor."

Philip Greenberg, of the extinct New Film Corporation, has been appointed chief booker for the Philadelphia office of the World Film Corporation.

"If the man who gave up these releases worked hard, what do you think of us who got them," said Manager Harry Scott, of the new Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service. "Not only day, night and Sunday with our old force, but six new ones added." These six will be permanent owing to the immense increase in the business.

It is imperative that more room be added to the exchange as soon as possible, but at present Mr. Scott is managing to jog along by using the basement as a store house. By December a new building will doubtless be obtained whose capacity must be twice that of 1309 Vine street, where the exchange is now located.

Letters of congratulation entirely unsolicited were received from the Stanley and Arcadia theatres of Philadelphia, and the Arcadia of Reading on the new program and its possibilities. A more substantial proof of its popularity is the $1,940 worth of business picked up in two days.

"The Cossack Whip," with Viola Dana, will be a special $100 a day feature to be released late in October. This will be shown a week at least at some large Market street house not yet decided upon.

The Greater Vitagraph force are taking breath now that the big task of moving all the Selig and Essanay releases have been accomplished. Night and day and all Sunday, too, did the loyal helpers of Manager Hebrew kept at it. In spite, however, of the additional space obtained by the sending away of so many films, the present quarters are still inadequate, and it is hoped soon to obtain additional room.

Any kind of booking the exhibitors prefer, be it contract, open or just an occasional picture are all to be obtained now at the Philadelphia office. Several episodes of the "Scarlet Runner" were shown at a special late performance at the Stanley theatre last week. This was an invitation affair, about 1,000 invitations having been issued to exhibitors, their friends, and the trade generally.

The whole Stanley Symphony Orchestra was retained to increase the pleasure of this occasion, and give the picture its proper atmosphere. In this connection a record-breaking, rapid-fire task was accomplished when the 1,000 invitations were sent out in the course of three and three-quarters hours after coming from the printers' hands. "Maybe we didn't hustle some," said the office girls, "from two until five forty-five." Much interest is being shown in the "Scarlet Runner" series.

"The Ne'er-Do Well," which Leon D. Netter managed during its engagement at the Forrest, is now under the Greater Vitagraph, and going by leaps and bounds since cool weather set in.

Large bookings are held on the "Combat." Sixty bookings already go to the advance credit of the "Chattel," with E. H. Sothern, not released until September 25.

The release of Earl Williams in the "Scarlet Runner" scheduled for October 16, will be made more interesting from the fact that on October 15 the first installment of the story will appear in the Philadelphia North American, where it will run as a serial.

"Jaffrey," the first feature release in the Philadelphia territory of the International Film Service, Inc., had its premier Philadelphia performance at the Leader, a large West Philadelphia theatre at Forty-first and Lancaster avenue, of which Herbert Effinger is manager.

COL. STEVENS HAS A HAPPY BIRTHDAY

S. T. (Colonel) Stephens of the New Orleans Mutual Office, has had a birthday. It is evident that he will remember this birthday. Employees of the Mutual Film Corporation began to impress upon Mr. Stephens the fact that he was one mile stone more along the path of life, the other morning when the Mutual manager arrived at his office. First, of all, they put flowers on his desk. Next, but not least, they presented him with a mighty fine traveling bag. "Steve" was quite overcome.

Later in the day Mr. Stephens received a pair of solid gold cuff buttons on which was engraved the familiar Mutual clock emblem. These were from the Memphis office of Mutual.

K-E-S-E GIVES SHOWING OF SELIG FILM IN ST. LOUIS

I. P. Rosenberg, manager of the new offices of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay, in the Empress Theatre Building on Olive street, gave a premier showing of "The Country That God Forgot" and "The Return of Eve," at the Mutascope theatre on September 26, to exhibitors in the St. Louis district, and to a number of newspaper folk. Mr. Rosenberg received very favorable comments on the films and many prospective bookings for them.

The Universal Exchange, 2116 Locust street, St. Louis, has just been put through a severe and thorough overhauling, according to Manager Barney Rosenthal. Nearly every department has been gone through from beginning to end, and many additions have been made to the supply department. Everything about the plant has been systematized and brought up to a very high standard of efficiency.

H. P. Wolfberg, manager of the General Film Exchange, is sending out a little advertising sheet containing news of the late releases of the exchange and suggestions to the theatre managers in the way of advertising his show. The sheet is in the hands of Edgar H. Wolfberg, and will be issued twice a month.

UNIVERSAL AT TORONTO PLANS CENTRALIZATION

That the convention of Universal district managers held in Chicago last week is having an effect is very evident from the new plans being put into operation at the Canadian Head Office of the Universal Company in Toronto.

Mr. Hague has announced that in future all purchasing for the company in the matter of stationery and supplies will be done from the Toronto office. A stock room is being established and the purchasing will be done through the Publicity Service department in charge of W. A. Bach. This centralizing idea is being carried out in the whole business and it is expected that by so doing much expense and waste will be eliminated as well as relieving the branch managers of a lot of detail work thus enabling them to give more attention to the essential business of the office.

"LIVE WIRE" WEBSTER VISITS NASHVILLE

Dan ("Live Wire") Webster, special representative of Unity Sales Corporation of Atlanta, Ga., was in Nashville last week during the run of "The Birth of a Nation," and while here was the guest of Manager W. A. Sheets of the Vendome theatre. "Danny," as he is familiarly known to all of his friends, both near and far, is now covering North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Louisiana. Mr. Webster was formerly advertising agent of Klaw and Erlanger's Atlanta theatre, Atlanta, Ga. In each city or town "The Yellow Menace" is being booked capacity business has reigned at each and every performance. The picture is now being shown in Nashville at the Star theatre, a colored moving picture theatre on Cedar street, and is meeting with success.

SOLUTION OF A TROUBLESOME PROBLEM

This letter, included by Jake Mitchell, exchange manager for the Universal in Omaha, in the exchange's weekly paper, is of vital interest to exchangemen and exhibitors in the Omaha territory, and is no doubt of interest elsewhere. It shows how Mitchell deals with a problem that is troublesome in his territory:

"We have had a great deal of trouble in getting our films back to the exchange and we want to impress upon all our customers the fact that co-operation in this respect means better service for everybody. Don't allow one train to go by without returning the films because it might mean that your brother exhibitor is going to be without a show. It's a little extra trouble, but if you will just bear in mind that you are in the same boat with the other fellow you will see where it will always be to your advantage to make prompt returns of all shipments. I hope that every one of our customers will make it a point to return all films immediately after they have been used and please bear in mind the posters and slides, etc. It's the only way we can give perfect service and we know you want us to help you wherever we can. Thank you."

Many Changes in New Orleans Exchange Offices—International Establishes Service—Bluebirds Going Strong

THERE have been a few shakeups around the New Orleans exchanges, one of the most important of which happened at the Crescent City office of General Film. Hoyt G. Morrow, who has been branch manager for more than a year, left the employ of General on September 18. It is understood he has a very favorable film proposition in view. He left New Orleans on September 19 for New York City.

T. O. Tuttle, manager of the General exchange at Houston, Tex., likes his place. Mr. Tuttle announces the appointment of E. C. Kirkpatrick and G. H. Woods as additional roadmen who will travel out of the Crescent City. Mr. Kirkpatrick is well known in the New Orleans territory, as he formerly managed the Crescent City Paramount office. J. O. Ford, one of the most popular regular program men in the entire South, remains with the company.

J. B. Dugger, Dallas manager of V-L-S-E, and C. E. Tandy, general manager of the Southern Paramount Pictures Company, were two prominent visitors of the past week. Mr. Dugger came to New Orleans to install a new booking system with his New Orleans manager, R. King Evans, and likewise in advance of the heavy advertising campaign that V-L-S-E is to put out.

J. C. Ragland has returned from the convention of Kleine-Edison exchangemen in Chicago, and announces that his office will now handle all feature releases of Kleine, Edison, Essanay and Selig.

Through H. A. Segrave, manager, it was announced at the Carondelet street office of the Southern Film Service Company that "Tom and Jerry," a ten-number series release of the Emerald Motion Picture Company, will be handled by them in the future.

International Film Service has established a branch office in New Orleans, with temporary headquarters at 315 Carondelet street, H. V. Catlin is the local representative.

"Beatrice Fairfax" received an enthusiastice reception at the hands of exhibitors who hitherto asserted they would never run another serial, while "The Mysteries of Myra" is booked solid in New Orleans in every territorial zone.

Ross Hardenbrook, formerly manager of the Mutual and World Film in New Orleans, is at present connected with Kleine-Edison. Maurice F. Barr, manager of Bluebirds, Inc., is likewise ahead of "Where Are My Children?" and Anna Pavlowa in "The Dumb Girl of Portici," two Universal features that are going strong in this territory. "Where Are My Children?" in particular has registered a "cleanup" in every community in which it has been shown.

Bluebirds business broke all records last week, according to Mr. Barr. He reports that the New Orleans office has not only broken its own record, but at present holds the record for all of the Southern Bluebird offices.

"Benny" Doodenheffer, until recently closely confined to an office position, has taken to the highways and byways in the interest of World Film.

Maryland Censors Insist Upon Payment of $2 a Reel for Commercials, Though These Are Usually Furnished to Exhibitors Gratis

SINCE the Washington exchangemen control the distribution in Maryland, these men recently visited the censorship commission of Maryland in Baltimore to discuss matters pertaining to fees on films. Those who went from Washington, D. C., were J. H. Butner, of Triangle; Fritz B. Wathne, International; R. Burger, Kleine-Edison; Manager Nelson, General; Mr. Oletzky, Universal; Edwin G. Evans, Mutual; Frank Spirrier, V-L-S-E; Manager Wales, World; and Sydney B. Lust, New Film and Famous Players.

The chief object of their visit was to endeavor to prevent the payment of the censorship fee of two dollars per reel on all "commercial films," which at present rarely bring money to the exchanges, but are usually given gratis to the exhibitor to lengthen his daily program. This would work a particular hardship upon the exchangemen, and in the face of present expenses could not be met.

When the financial side of the matter was explained to the censorship committee, it is reported that the committee merely replied that it had to increase its revenues, that the office was not paying for itself as it stood; that the State of Maryland received one-half of the revenues and the remaining half was not sufficient to support the commission.

"And suppose we decide not to rent all those films, where will you secure your money from then?" one of the exchangemen boldly questioned.

"That is a bridge we will have to cross when we come to it," was the unsatisfying reply.

There is a strong feeling among exchangemen to stand out in this high-handed movement on the part of the Maryland censors and not to issue any of these old films to exhibitors and see what will happen. This, of course, means a loss to the exhibitor, as his daily show will be reduced, his expenses increased, and his patrons not satisfied. The exchangemen have been given to January 1 to come to a decision.

It was brought out in this hearing that of the 4,000 reels examined by the censorship commission during the past six months only four subjects were condemned. It appears that there is no need of the commission and since it is not a paying commissions at present and if the exchanges refuse to further increase the revenue by not issuing commercial films, the Maryland censorship may cease to be of service and go out of existence.

HENRY SIEGEL JOINS SELZNICK SALES FORCE TO COVER THE MOSQUITO

Henry Siegel, who recently made an enviable record as New Jersey salesman for Bluebird, was engaged last week by Sol. H. Berman, New York exchange manager of Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, Inc., to handle the mosquito belt for Selznick pictures. Siegel began his career in the film business with the World Film Corporation in Pittsburgh, transferring his activities to the East when given charge of the Newark branch.

He resigned from World Film to go with Bluebird, where he put that company's pictures on the New Jersey map so ably as to attract the attention of Mr. Selznick and Mr. Berman.

BLUEBIRDS FLY WELL IN TORONTO

Great progress is being reported in the booking of Bluebird films in Ontario. One of the latest city houses to show these features is the new Rialto, which opens with the "Eye of God" and follows with "Shoes."

Theatre men are reporting excellent results in all sections of the country from their showing which is naturally delighting Mr. McKenny, the Toronto manager.

LYON GOES TO BOSTON FOR INTERNATIONAL

B. F. Lyon, recently appointed district manager of exchanges of the International Film Service, Inc., is in Boston, where he will remain several weeks. While in Boston, he will devote his time to the new productions of the International, "Beatrice Fairfax," "Jaffery" and The Flower of Faith."

Omaha Screen Club Plans Busy and Active Season—Helen Holmes Pictures Well Received—Meyer a Live Wire

THE Omaha Screen Club at a recent meeting planned the busiest season of its history. A pretentious event, even outstripping the big Club ball last winter, will be planned immediately following Ak-Sar-Ben, the big annual celebration at Omaha. Every day now sees constantly increasing crowds for the mid-day luncheon at the Movie Inn, a small and tastefully decorated restaurant set apart in the Blue Room of the Brandeis stores. Not a few "movie fans" are among those who dine at the Inn.

Tentative arrangements have been made for a visit with the Kansas City Screen Club. The Chicago Movie Inn Club, which recently visited Kansas City, is expected to visit Omaha in the near future. Whereupon a number of Omaha exhibitors will drop in to see the Chicago clubmen in their native haunts.

A similar "trade" visit will be made with the Kansas City club. President Van Husan attended the convention at Minneapolis, where he secured the plans of numerous other clubs. Secretary J. E. Kirke has been corresponding with a number of similar clubs all over the country, getting ideas for social events that might be introduced in Omaha.

A dance at least once a month, with an occasional "surprise" party on an exhibitor at his theatre every now and then, are two affairs that are certain to characterize this winter. The big ball, which was such a success last season, will be duplicated.

At least once a week the Screen Club will entertain a leading legitimate star at the Movie Inn, inviting in outside guests. These stars will be taken from the various companies playing in Omaha.

Helen Holmes, the star in "The Lass of the Cumberlands," is a great favorite in Omaha territory, says Manager Max Weisfeldt of the Mutual exchange. He is making plans for a most unusual campaign in exploiting the popular star in the new serial.

John A. Bennet, formerly a Presbyterian minister in Kearney, Neb., Presbytery, is learning the film game from the ground up. He started as night shipping clerk in the Mutual exchange in Omaha. T. L. Stark, from the Mutual executive auditing department in Chicago, was in Omaha last week and expressed himself as greatly pleased with the Mutual's trade in the Omaha territory. Manager Weisfeldt wishes it announced that F. B. Rice is no longer with the Mutual exchange.

Sidney Meyer, a star roadman out of the World Omaha exchange, reports the following activities among exhibitors in his territory:

Houserman and Retzman have bought the Orpheum and Tepee theatres in Red Cloud, Neb. J. G. Jackson has bought the Colonial at Bloomington. R. K. Piper says he has sold the Empress in Malvern, Ia., to W. C. Schmidt, formerly of Huntington, Ia. Dr. Wood has taken over the Alliance at Edgar, Neb., formerly owned by Mr. Johnson of Hastings. He is running the house three nights a week now, and plans to run it every night soon. E. L. Bowhay has just opened a new house at Liberty, Neb. P. H. Hoppen is planning great things for the opening of the Crescent at Kearney, Neb., October 1. Mr. Weaverling is the proud owner of the Lyric, a new house at North Bend, Neb. He opened with a big World feature. Joseph J. Vaska has sold the Columbia, on South Tenth street, Omaha, to Harry Crounse.

RAYMOND IN HOUSTON, TEXAS, FOR MUTUAL

Al Raymond, Mutual roadman, is in Houston, Tex., and will travel in the Southeast Texas section, since J. P. Murrin has been transferred to the managership of El Paso.

Harry F. Botto, Consolidated roadman, is now in Houston, acting as assistant to Manager Peebles, and doing a little road work in the section.

J. P. Murrin, recently Mutual roadman, has been promoted, taking charge of the El Paso office of the Mutual. Murrin is well liked by exhibitors and exchangemen, and he has many friends who are pleased to hear of this deserved promotion.

Laemmle Film Service, Des Moines, Installs Supply Department; Serials Going Well in Iowa

L. A. SHERIDAN, Des Moines manager of the Pathe exchange, recently took a trip to Kansas City. Mr. Sheridan went there on a business jaunt, part of which was devoted to a conflab with Howard Jameyson, publicity manager of the Kansas City Pathe office. The much discussed publicity department of the Des Moines Pathe will probably materialize very soon. Mr. Sheridan has been desirous of getting such a department installed and the lack of a man to fill the position is all that prevented it from opening sooner.

Charles Stevenson, publicity manager of the Blue Birds in Des Moines, has been meeting with success in his circular matter. He recently received a request from the Dallas, Tex., Blue Bird exchange for six hundred copies of a "freak" letter sent out over his territory. The Blue Bird company is boasting of an excellent business and is constantly booking new houses.

R. C. LiBeau, manager of the Paramount office, comments on the sudden activity of the Universal and Pathe exchanges in putting in publicity departments. "Although we have no publicity manager here in Des Moines, for over the past year Lee Balsley, head of that department in the Kansas City, has been doing this kind of work for us. Through this department our exhibitors exchange ideas and get the benefit of our own publicity ideas. I welcome similar innovations in the other exchanges."

The Laemmle Film Service, distributors of the Universal service, announce that it has just installed a complete supply and equipment department. "So that the exhibitors of the state can spend their money at home, we have added this feature to our business," said D. B. Lederman, manager. The department is a very complete one and results are already evident.

"Serials are going great in Iowa," according to C. W. Ross, who travels for Pathe. "Our new picture, the 'Shielding Shadow,' is going like wild." Other travelers of other companies report that releases of their respective firms are going very well. Metro men comment on "The Crimson Stain," while the "Gloria's Romance" salesmen are much pleased with the showing of that serial in Iowa. For the Universal, "Peg of the Ring" and the "Broken Coin" are still in demand, while "Liberty" is creating a sensation wherever shown.

Iowa exchangemen and travelers are extending their heartiest congratulations to A. J. Diebold, genial manager of the Palace theatre at Cedar Rapids. Mr. Diebold recently married his assistant, Miss Grace Chamberlain, and now the Palace is being run under the auspices of the Diebold family.

Conditions in the Iowa territory are but fair. This is the consensus of the exchange men of the city. Features seem to be in demand, although serials are rather popular. Many changes in theatres are being noted and the chase for business by the travelers is a merry one. The cooler weather which was expected to bring about a noted increase in business materialized, but the increase is not as large as forecasted. Exhibitors are holding to what they have and are making sure before taking any steps that might make them risk their finances.

WORLD FILM'S PITTSBURG MANAGER RESIGNS

Charles F. Schwerin, manager of the World Film Corporation's Pittsburg office, for the past year has resigned. Leo F. Levison, manager of the Newark office, takes his place. Mr. Levison was formerly manager here, and has a host of friends among the motion picture men.

Mr. Schwerin is now local manager of the Louis J. Selznick Corporation, and at present has temporary offices on the sixth floor of the Film Exchange Building, 938 Penn avenue. He expects to open permanent quarters next week.

BENEDIC TO TRAVEL FOR CONSOLIDATED

A. Jules Benedic, who for two years has been correspondent for MOTION PICTURE NEWS in New Orleans and Gulf States territory, has connected with the Consolidated Film and Supply Company as traveling representative out of the Crescent City office.

In addition to these duties, Mr. Benedic is representing the two new Universal features, "Where Are My Children?" and Anna Pavolwa in "The Dumb Girl of Portici." "Where Are My Children?" is having an unprecedented run in Consolidated territory. Exhibitors, likewise invariably book "The Dumb Girl of Portici," which has had a highly successful run.

New Laws and Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

Ruling of Maryland Censorship Board on Commercial Reels Postponed Until January 1—Exchanges to Make Further Protest

THE Maryland censorship law which recently went into effect will work a hardship on the film industry in that State unless the members of the censorship board created under that law will recede from their determination that all commercial reels, regardless of the length of time they have been in service, must be subjected to censorship in the same manner as the very latest releases and pay the same fee.

This ruling was to have gone into effect on November 1, but the concerted action on the part of the exchange managers of Washington, D. C., serving the Maryland territory, caused the board to delay, and the date upon which the "free" use of the films expires is now January 1 next.

Thousands of dollars are involved in this matter, for some of the exchanges carry a thousand or more of these commercial reels, perhaps a majority of which would bring an average of one dollar a day rental. The fee for screen examination by the board is $2.

Besides this unusual monetary expense, there is also to be considered the matter of delay. Unless the exchangemen desire to take a chance on getting their money back and will each submit his films all at the one time, should he desire one or more of these reels in a hurry he would find that it is not safe to assume in advance that the board will be free to make an immediate examination that the needed films could be rushed to the exhibitor as ordered.

The board claims that it must demand the examination of these commercial reels and incidentally intimates that it needs the money. It is said that 150 reels are examined weekly. This would mean an income of $300 a week, or more than $1,200 per month, while the estimated expenses of the board are placed at $1,000 per month. There is apparently no need for the "commercial reel" money.

It was advanced by some of the speakers at the meeting of the exchange managers with the members of the board in September, that if the latter persisted in making the charge on the commercial reels that were known as such before the formation of the board, very few of these would be allowed to go into the State of Maryland, thus working a great hardship on the exhibitors, especially those whose shows are largely or entirely made up of the reels in question. The board, however, would not look at the matter from this angle, and the field is left open to the exchanges to take such action as they desire.

The exchanges represented at this meeting were General, World, New Film, Metro, V-L-S-E, International, Kleine, Mutual and Universal.

COHALAN REFUSES TO PERMIT "IS ANY GIRL SAFE?" TO GO ON

"Is Any Girl Safe?" the white slave picture that was shown at the Maxine Elliott theatre a week or two ago has been barred from further showings by Supreme Court Justice Cohalan, who refused to grant an injunction restraining Commissioner of Licenses Bell from interfering with the picture.

The production was voluntarily withdrawn from the theatre September 16, but now that the opinion of Justice Cohalan has been handed down, Commissioner Bell will make it the basis of action against other white slave pictures, Justice Cohalan said:

"The preponderance of proof adduced herein shows that the City of New York is not benefited by such a realistic depiction of the sordid side of human life. The declaration is made in behalf of the scenario that it is 'literally a picturized sermon.' Such a statement does not appeal to me. I think that such a play offends public decency and tends to the injury not only of the young of the community but of all persons who witness it."

SAN FRANCISCO ORDINANCE GIVEN FINAL PASSAGE

The ordinance abolishing the motion picture board of censorship has been given final passage by the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco, the vote on it being the same as at the first passage of the measure, fourteen to three in favor of it. The old law will remain in effect until the new ordinance is signed by Mayor Rolph, and this will be done at the expiration of the legal time limit. The film exchanges of the city will co-operate in the future with city officials and with various organizations to keep the tone of moving pictures on a high level.

PARALYSIS HITS BOSTON THEATRES; CHILDREN UNDER 16 BARRED

Children under 16 are barred from places of amusement in Boston, by ukase of Mayor Curley, after a conference with health officials. There have been 186 cases of infantile paralysis reported in Boston, and the children have been barred for some time in Hyde Park and East Boston, but it was discovered that children from these districts come into the city proper to view the films. It is expected that cool weather will relieve the situation. In the meantime there is a campaign on to clean up the streets and alleys. The mayor stated that any house disobeying the order would lose its license. It is the consensus of opinion among the film men that only a few of the low priced houses will be hit hard.

Schools in Arlington, have been closed after being open eight days, and children 16 barred from attending local theatres.

Other cities and towns are following Boston's lead and continue to postpone the opening of the schools.

INVESTIGATION OF OKLAHOMA STRIKE UNDER WAY

Investigation of the strike of theatre employes and actors at Oklahoma City, Okla., by the state board of arbitration now in session, has developed that the strike in Oklahoma City was begun by the theatre employes and operators of picture machines and that the actors' organization, known as the White Rats, came into it after it was begun.

F. J. Gilmore, traveling organizer of the actors' union, testified that the actors of the union's organization are contesting for fair contracts and elimination of evils in the booking offices.

It is intimated by the actors that they are preparing to carry their cause to all the cities of the country, and that the beginning of the movement at Oklahoma City, was because conditions were auspicious at this time.

AUSTIN, MINN., MAY HAVE OWN CENSORS

They are going "crazy" in Austin, Minn., again. The city council is on the war path as the result of a spasmodic "reform" movement. The mayor is to appoint a censor board and license each theatre ten dollars a month regardless of size until next July, and then $100.00 per annum.

And all school children under eighteen are not allowed in any picture theatre any night except Friday and Saturday, and this is no quarantine measure, either. F. F. Latta, president of the Cozy Co. of Austin, when asked by Amusements, said:

"This makes over $500.00 per annum in war taxes and license for us, to say nothing of taxes on net income—if there should be any."

BALTIMORE EXHIBITORS URGE LIFTING OF BAN AGAINST CHILDREN

Leading motion picture exhibitors of Baltimore are keeping in close touch with the officials of the Health Department, urging that the ban restricting children under 13 years of age attending performances be lifted in the very near future. Up to the present time they have received very little encouragement. Children have been permitted to return to school as far as the seventh grade and over. These children are being admitted also to the motion picture performances.

It has been at first intended to lift the ban on September 23, but around this time there were signs of a slight increase in the infantile paralysis plague, and the date was indefinitely postponed and has never yet been settled.

Censorship Is Dominating Issue in Minneapolis Mayoralty Campaign, as All Classes Demand Its Abolition

THE censorship bogie has stuck its head up again in Minneapolis, but this time it has a new enemy, and one more formidable than any that have entered the lists before. This time the patrons of the motion picture houses are opposing censorship on the ground that it is un-American in spirit. The patrons are demanding that they be the censors, and that they alone decide whether the plays booked by the theatres are fit for them to see.

The censorship has entered the mayoralty campaign, and is causing a disturbance for the present administration. With the city election coming on and a meeting of the Legislature not far away, those who would judge for the people are preparing for the fight.

The present fight began when Mayor Wallace G. Nye ordered that all film exchanges file with his office one week in advance of the showing, all film releases. This order is aimed to make the work of a volunteer censorship committee easier. This Censorship Board formed at the request of the Mayor to decide whether the "Birth of a Nation" should be shown in Minneapolis, was kept in power as an Advisory Committee to the Mayor. Arrangements were made whereby films not passed by the National Board were to be reviewed by the committee.

Scenting the beginning of official censorship here, the exchange men and exhibitors met and demanded the abolition of the committee and the return to the old system of leaving the exhibitors alone until there was cause for complaint. The city's police power, they argued, was sufficient at all times to prevent the showing of objectionable films they said.

This request and its refusal by the Mayor has started the anti-censorship ball going.

Labor unions, trade organizations, and others have taken formal action, declaring censorship dangerous to American principles, and the members, in turn, have so told the Mayor, members of the City Council, and members of the Legislature.

At the request of the exhibitors, Otto S. Langum and Thomas Van Lear, the candidates for Mayor, are to give their views on motion picture censorship.

Mr. Van Lear has declared that any censoring that is done should be done by officials paid by the city.

Mr. Langum, while he has said that he would not permit improper films to be shown, has said frankly that the situation is new to him, and he asked time to study it.

In the meantime the Censorship Committee is working to bolster its position. It is composed of twenty-five representatives from semi-public organizations. The Film Exchanges and Exhibitors' Association and the labor organizations are represented, but there are those who say that the film men were made members for political reasons.

The Censorship Committee has conceded one point in the face of the opposition. Hereafter they will permit the film men concerned to be present when the film under question is discussed. Only the vote will be in private. Formerly all proceedings were in secret.

Members of the Censorship Committee are working to have the organization held over into the next administration, and declare that no mayor can abolish them. They say that they can view films in theatres and make recommendations to any mayor.

The film men say, however, that the joy of censoring will be removed if the committee can see only the pictures that everyone can see, at least, on the initial showing.

San Francisco Quickly Disposes of Nasty Film; Exchange Board of Trade Saves Situation by Prompt Action

JUST as the motion picture people of San Francisco, with the active assistance of the daily press have succeeded in arousing public opinion to a very liberal state of mind with regard to allowing motion picture exhibitors their freedom in the display of pictures, along comes some itinerant exhibitor and advertises his show with a lot of lewd and indecent pictures in a way that tends to undo all the good that has been accomplished.

Such a case developed recently, and it was only on account of the fact that the film exchangemen of that city have an active and alert organization, the Film Exchange Board of Trade, that greater harm was not done to the motion picture business. A traveling exhibitor with a white slave film, which he calls "The Traffickers," secured the right from Jesse Gibbs, owner of the Empire theatre at 955 Market street, to show his film in that theatre.

Full of the knowledge of the effectiveness of lewd lobby pictures to draw a crowd, and caring nothing for the future of the motion picture business, the exhibitor fixed up a little scene for the front of the theatre which caused a crowd to gather, and held a crowd all day until the Film Exchange Board of Trade introduced the police, when the pictures were torn down, and Mr. Gibbs was arrested. The entrance to the theatre had been gaudily decorated with red, and right lights.

There was a pasteboard brick building standing at one side to represent a house of ill fame, and looking out of a window here and there were women in negilgee attire. A picture also indicates a young man coming from the building. Other photographs were hung about of women, bare legged, in low neck dresses and smoking cigarettes. The whole scene was repulsive to the moral sense, and the quick action of the Film Exchangmen showed that they are a most effective censorship board themselves. They are opposed to censorship, but as citizens and as motion picture people they are as effective as any censorship board that could be devised.

Mr. Gibbs was tried before Judge Fitzpatrick. The Judge heard the evidence, and then continued the case for a few days in order to give the defendant an opportunity to remove the objectionable pictures and scenes, which he indicated would cause him to modify his judgment, although he intimated strongly that the defendant was guilty.

"I consider the pictures as most indecent and objectionable," said the Judge, "and I think that for the benefit of the people in general, for the sake of young boys and girls who pass the theatre, and for the benefit of the moving picture business, the display of indecent and suggestive pictures, displaying red light scenes, and tableaux of houses of ill fame, standing alone as posters and pictures in front of a theatre, should be stopped. Of the film which is shown inside, I have nothing to say, but I am very positive that the showing of lewd pictures and posters in the lobbies of theatres is indecent and objectionable, and I will do all that I can to stop it."

There was a big crowd of the film exchangemen at the courthouse, and all of them expressed their approval of the action of the judge. There was some discussion in the corridor of framing an ordinance which would impose a very high license upon itinerant exhibitors, which might have a tendency to discourage that kind of business.

PATHE FEATURE WINS PRAISE FROM CRITICS

"The Test," the Pathe Gold Rooster Play directed by George Fitzmaurice, and produced by Astra, is being booked very heavily by the various Pathe Exchanges. Contributing to the success of the picture are the numerous laudatory reviews appearing on it in large newspapers all over the country.

Film News From Foreign Parts

Eastman and British Concern Clash Over Prices; Anti-Monopoly Slogan Raised and Fight on National Lines Threatened

London, Sept. 18.

QUITE a stir has been caused throughout the ranks of British film manufacturers at the announcement made by Kodaks, Ltd., that Eastman first quality Nitro-Cellulose Positive Cinematograph Film stock of the standard width of 35 mm. will be sold in future in this country at 1.30d. per linear foot, inclusive of duty.

Purchasers are to be credited with a rebate of three-tenths of a penny per foot provided that they satisfy Kodaks, Ltd., that ninety per cent. of total positive film used during the previous month has been bought from the firm. This, of course, means that the price of film stock will work out at one penny, or two cents per foot. The price of Eastman negative film will be 1½d. per foot net, plus import duty.

This startling revision of terms has evoked quite a considerable discussion as to underlying causes of this new move, and the British Film Stock Co., Ltd., has replied to challenge by announcing that the price of British film base "Brifco" is now reduced to one penny per foot, less five per cent.

"If it comes to a fight, we're going to fight" is their slogan. Then they go on to state there are "No objectionable conditions. You buy what you want, no more, no less. You are not forced to buy ninety per cent. of your requirements. Our competitors have got cold feet, because the new "Brifco" base is twenty per cent. stronger than any other base on the market. While we experimented they let us alone.

"Now the new base is perfected, they are scared to death. Don't help to create an American monopoly. Keep British money in the country. Support British industry and research. Defeat the aims of the monopolist."

This is the bone of the British Film Stock Company's ultimatum. The question is one of considerable importance, but unfortunately owing to exigencies of existing circumstances, it will not command the attention at the present time, that it otherwise might have done.

Film Trade Returns

Having regard to greatly increased price of photographic materials, it is difficult to see what benefit there is to be gained by the methods now adopted. However, the matter is frankly a business proposition, and the British Company, if only on account of national feeling, is bound to have a good following.

Since May the value of film imports has been on the wane, and for the month of August the figures total only £57,000, to which the United States contributed £48,500, France £5,500 and other countries £3,000. The total value of imports for the month of July was £87,000. From January to the end of August, America has exported to Great Britain cinematograph film valued at £710,000, made up as follows: January, £75,000; February, £42,000; March, £140,500; April, £46,500; May, £139,000; June, £141,500; July, £77,250; August, £48,500. The total from all sources to the same date is £808,000. Exports have amounted to £75,250 and re-exports to £78,000 during this period.

The Censorship Question

The Home Office proposals for the establishment of an official censorship has loomed largely in the public mind during the current week, and of the proposals which have been put forward by the Home Secretary, the strongest exception has been taken to the proposition for the constitution of an Advisory Committee to the contemplated Censorship Board.

An important meeting of the various sections of the trade has been held, at which were present the representatives of several of the leading American concerns, including Selig Polyscope Company, Thanhouser Company, Vitagraph Film Company, American Company, Essanay Company, Trans-Atlantic Company, Edison Company, and although the deliberations were conducted in private, and the question is still to be regarded as being sub-judice, it is stated that the trade generally is agreeable to the principle of an official censorship whose decision is final. It is a matter of regret that trade is not so completely organized as it is recognized it should be in such an emergency, as it is felt that on the eve of such an important development as is contemplated, powers may be given to the local authorities which would enable them to perpetuate the numerous acts of petty jealousy and tyranny as were in vogue in the past. This is to be fought against and the occasion is providing opportunity for the individual members of the trade to form themselves into a solid phalanx, not necessarily for the purpose of conflict, but rather cooperation, with the chief authorities, to help them to provide a censorship on a reasonable and equitable basis in interests of cinematograph trade and public alike.

Amongst the best received American films during the past few days have been: "A Child of the Paris Streets" (Triangle-Fine Arts); "East Lynne" and "The Love Question" (Fox); "Hulda From Holland" and "Destiny's Toy" (Famous Players); "Two Mothers" (Laemmle); "Vanity Fair," "The Resurrection of Hollis," "The Supreme Temptation" (Vitagraph); "Against the Tide" and "The Man Trail" (Essanay); "The Purple Lady" and "A Child of Destiny" (Metro); "Any Youth" (Trans-Atlantic) and "The Redemption of Dave Darcy" (Blue Ribbon). In response to the representations of the Japanese Embassy, Home Office request that the J. L. Lasky film, "The Cheat," be withdrawn, has been acceded to.

Mr. Montagu, the London representative of the Selig Polyscope Company, has by his enterprise just secured a particularly interesting little film of 575 ft., replete with incidents of appeal, entitled "The International Censorship of Mails." The film has received well deserved plaudits throughout the British press.

British Films

The Ideal Company have entered the arena as comedy producers and the initial venture is designated "The Anti-Frivolity League"—a comedy which the Ideal Company hope to set up as a standard for this class of film. The fact that they have secured the services of George Robey, George Gregory and George Formby—the three Georges—shows that they possess at least the human resources. The "Anti-Frivolity League" scintillates with real good fun and, with George Robey in the leading role, is a production of considerable distinction. Two prizes of £100 each is being offered by the Ideal Company for best stories founded on the texts "Hail Smiling Moon" and "Peace on Earth," all manuscripts to be in by January 31, 1917.

It is announced that Mr. Horatio Bottomley, editor of John Bull, a weekly journal, is to appear in a proposed film known as "Truth and Justice." Mr. Bottomley is a vigorous personality of national repute, and his appearance on the screen would establish a precedent for the "Fourth Estate."

Lucoque, Ltd., are producing a Christmas film to be released in December. It is entitled "Fairyland," being a baby boy's dream of fairyland.

Several new British films are about to be put on the market. Amongst those shown to the trade during the last few days have been the following:

Louise Glaum in Some of Her Vampire Gowns Is Here Brought to Light; the Circles are Scenes from "The Rummy" and "Old Folks at Home," Triangle Releases

"The Phantom Picture." British Empire Film. Drama of an artist's model. The production is distinguished by the forceful acting of Violet Cameron in the title role. The story, while interesting, is lacking in originality.

"The Dustman's Wedding." Homeland comedy (three reels). A theme of striking individuality featuring the popular comedy artists, Egbert Brothers.

Kineto, Ltd. "The Cornish Riviera," int. 460 feet, showing some of the finest scenery in England. "The Strafer Strafed," int. 375 ft.; "How a Zeppelin Met Its Doom," Animal World Series No. 9 ("Birds of Prey"), int. 485 feet.

Great Variety of "Big" and "Little" Features Distributed by Paramount the Week of October 16; Ward, Moore and Courtot the Stars

FANNIE Ward, Owen Moore and Marguerite Courtot, are the three stars that will be featured on the Paramount Program for the week of October 16; Fannie Ward in "Witchcraft," produced by Lasky, and Mr. Moore and Miss Courtot in a comedy drama, "The Kiss," produced by the Famous Players. This is Fannie Ward's first production since her return to the Lasky studio in California, and it marks the second appearance of the co-starring of Mr. Moore and Miss Courtot in Paramount Pictures produced by the Famous Players.

For the same week, the "little features" that Paramount will distribute, are the 36th edition of the magazine-on-the-screen, the Paramount Pictographs, the 37th of the travel series of "Trips Around the World," conducted by Burton Holmes; a Paramount-Bray Cartoon, "Farmer Alfalfa Sees New York," from the pen of Paul Terry, and the second Black Diamond comedy released by Paramount called "Bridget's Blunder."

After having made a thorough tour of England, Germany, Ireland and Scotland, in the weekly "Trips Around the World," Burton Holmes, the world's greatest traveler, who is conducting these "Easy Chair Journeys" for Paramount, turns towards the south of the continent, and takes his fellow travelers to Italy.

Paramount Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen, has four exceptionally interesting pictorial articles for this week, in "A Newspaper in the Making," "Queer Jobs for the Motorcycle," "Checking Up the Umpire" and "Controlling an Oil Gusher."

Paul H. Terry, the well known cartoonist is responsible for the Paramount-Bray cartoon for this week, "Farmer Alfalfa Sees New York," in which he tells how Farmer Alfalfa made his debut in the great metropolis.

Paramount will distribute the week of the 16th, its second single-reel comedy, "Bridget's Blunder," a Black Diamond production.

With every single-reel that Paramount is issuing to its 3,300 exhibitors, there are special mediums of exhibitor's aids also issued, thus enabling the exhibitor to put "across" his pictures.

Pathe Delighted as Bookings on "Shadow" Pour In

"Better Houses, Higher Prices and Longer Runs for This Than Any Other Pathe Serial," Predicts J. A. Berst—Second and Third Runs Booking

"THE SHIELDING SHADOW," Pathe's Serial, which was released October 1, was booked in advance to better houses at higher prices and with longer runs than any previous serial issued by the House of Serials," says J. A. Berst, vice-present and general manager of Pathe Exchange, who is greatly pleased with the reports received from every one of Pathe's thirty branches.

With the first run houses lined up for the showing of this picture, under the direction of C. R. Seelye, business manager, all of the exchanges are now booking the second and third run theatres. It is expected that the advance booking figures already reported will probably be doubled within the next two weeks.

In Boston, the famous Boston theatre, the first-run house in Boston, will play the "Shielding Shadow," a solid week together with the Pathe News, Florence Rose Fashions and a Pathe Gold Rooster Play. Every Keith house in the United States and Canada, is following Boston's lead in booking it. In Boston, also Jake Lowry's Beacon theatre will start "The Shielding Shadow" on release date.

In accordance with the policy outlined by Mr. Berst, Manager Abeles of the New York Branch, put a price on each theatre in his territory according to its location, seating capacity and drawing power. Although the metropolis is just recovering from the effects of the infantile paralysis epidemic, New York reported $50,000 in advance bookings on "The Shadow." Chicago, several weeks ago, broke all previous records for advance bookings on serials. The Pastime theatre, which is across from the Morrison Hotel, on Madison avenue, has "The Shielding Shadow" first-run. Among the other prominent Chicago theatres booked by Manager Bunn, are the following: White Palace, Colonial, Douglas, Grand, Alvin, Marvin and Rosette.

In Cleveland, Manager Shurtleff has booked over fifty theatres in the city and the vicinity alone to start on release date and pay the scale of prices set on first-grade houses.

Negotiations are under way on the Pacific Coast with important houses which have never before run serials.

UNITY RELEASES FOURTH EPISODE OF "THE YELLOW MENACE"

The title of the fourth episode of "The Yellow Menace," serial released by the Unity Sales Corporation this week is "The Plot of a Demon." In this episode the struggle continues between Najla, the beautiful Princess and Hong Kong Harry, the dope fiend, who forces his hateful presence upon the unhappy girl and almost overcomes her.

Further evidences of Ali Singh's treachery multiply and all efforts of the Government authorities to capture him prove of no avail.

ANOTHER CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG FILM FROM WORLD IN NOVEMBER

"Without a Soul" is the title of a forthcoming World Film photoplay, with Clara Kimball Young in the central role. The story, called "Lola," was written by Owen Davis, and the release will be made early in November.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

Richard Jones, who directs productions of the Mabel Normand comedy dramas, has a four weeks' old bull pup which wears a blanket, bearing this inscription: "Ignore this pup. When he comes near you, slap him hard." The canine is receiving a speedy education.

Neil Burns, Christie comedian, moved the other day, and the iceman filled up the box at the new home, and started to leave without payment. He was asked by Burns' mother if he did not want to collect, and the iceman came back with the answer: "We trust everyone except these movie folks." And now Burns is trying to hide his identity.

Ralph Ince, Vitagraph director, accompanied by Mrs. Ince (Lucille Lee Stewart), Huntley Gordon and Mrs. Charles P. Brown, mother of the Ince brothers, spent a day at the Ince Culver City studios this week, the guest of Business Manager E. H. Allen. The party was taken over the mammoth studio, and were greatly surprised at the magnitude of the plant.

V. R. Day, an executive of the Essanay Company, of Chicago, is spending a week or two in Los Angeles combining vacation and business. Mr. Day advised that up to the present time the company has no intentions of establishing a studio in Los Angeles, as has been reported recently. "It is not improbable that we will have a studio here should any of our producing staff find that California conditions require a story," Mr. Day told the News representative.

During the past week contracts have been made by Business Manager Charles Christie, with a number of additional exchanges, and shortly the entire list of film renting firms handling the Christie comedies will be made public.

Universal Director John McDermott has produced the one-reel subject, "Vengeance Is Mine." The story deals with the efforts of a crook just out of prison, to "get" his former pal, who has reformed and married the sweetheart of the crook. The pal has planned to take his own life by drinking poisoned whiskey, but is prevented from doing so by the arrival of the crook, who drinks the contents of the glass as a toast to his pal's future life, and dies just as the wife and officers arrive. Those in the cast are Malcolm Blevins, Charles Cummings and Betty Schade.

"The Girl in Pawn" is the two-reel Universal subject, produced by Director Henry McRae. It is a story of international intrigue brought about by gambling debts between Government employees. Stolen plans and a love affair play important parts. J. Warren Kerrigan and Edith Johnson are the featured players, supported by E. N. Wallock, Lee Shumway and Rex Roselli.

A cucumber machine gun, which promises to revolutionize modern warfare, is the latest invention which Harry J. Cohen, of Metro, offers to civilization. The machine is simplicity itself, but the inventor declares he can stand off a regiment with one gun if he has a plentiful supply of cucumber ammunition at hand.

Mr. Cohen has long been noted for his ability to shoot the wild taurus, without the aid of a gun, and the extravagant claims he makes for his new invention is being accepted with the usual discount.

Harry Cohen and His Cucumber Machine Gun

Mr. Cohen has had himself photographed in twelve different poses, with the gun, each time wearing a more formidable expression. The title with the photographs is "The Man Behind." As a matter of fact the model was made for use in "In the Diplomatic Service," a forthcoming Metro wonder-play, in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are starred.

The inventor modestly declined to be interviewed about his justly famous gun, but it is said that he intends offering it to President Woodrow Wilson for use on the Mexican border. Anyway, the picture of him standing resolutely behind it, will create some excitement among the folks back home.

LEN SPENCER DIES SUDDENLY

(From Motion Picture News—January 2, 1915.)

Len Spencer, founder of Len Spencer's Lyceum, one of the best known theatrical agencies supplying operators, musicians and singers to motion picture theatres throughout the country, died suddenly last Wednesday, December 16. The agency at 245 West Forty-second street, New York City, will continue under the direction of Henry Spencer, brother of the deceased.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

George N. Shorey, of the Queen and Gay theatres, Knoxville, Tenn., returned to that city last week, after a short visit to New York, and will come North again the latter part of October.

Herman Rifken, of Boston, was in town last week, and has returned to Boston.

Mayer Silberman, after a short visit in the city, has returned to Pittsburgh.

Paul Gulick, editor of the Universal Weekly, has reurned from his vacation.

Andrew J. Cobe has returned to the Unity offices in Chicago after several days' visit in New York.

E. W. Lynch has returned to Boston.

J. H. Hill, Jr., of Dallas, Texas, is in town.

J. Taylor is in town on a visit from Manchester, England.

Thomas H. Davidson arrived from London, England, September 29.

Louis Lourie, manager of the Rialto theatre, San Francisco, Cal., was in town last week.

A. M. Beaty, who has been touring South America with the "Birth of a Nation" is expected in the city October 13.

Billy Dunn, comedian in "Tweedledum" (Unity), is in town on a short visit.

Joe Friedman has returned to Chicago after a short visit in town.

"Fritz" Hirsh is back in town again.

"IDLE WIVES" ON STATE RIGHTS

State rights to the Universal's success, "Idle Wives," which is now running at the Maxine Elliott theatre, New York, are being sold. The States Rights Department of the Universal is receiving all telegraph bids for the picture at its offices at 1600 Broadway.

License Commissioner Bell had two of his men in the audience at the Maxine Elliott theatre last week to decide whether the production had crossed the danger line. The picture, however, has received the approval of the Board of Review, so it is not likely that the performances will be stopped by the License Commissioner.

Phillips Smalley, Lois Weber, Ben Wilson, Maude George, Mary MacLaren and Neva Gerber play the principal roles.

"Pearl of the Army" Follows "The Shielding Shadow"

Military Serial from Pathe, Released November 12, Will Feature Pearl White, Supported by Marie Wayne, Theodore Friebus, Ralph Kellard and W. T. Carleton—Seitz Wrote the Story, Produced by Jose—Billboard and Newspaper Advertising Campaign on National Scale Will Create Business

PEARL WHITE will be seen as an American Joan of Arc in Pathe's next serial, "Pearl of the Army," just announced for release November 12.

The true atmosphere of Uncle Sam's land forces is pictured with an exactness of detail that evidences the careful study made by Guy W. McConnell, the author. Mr. McConnell has spent much of his life studying army conditions from the viewpoint of the enlisted men, of the officers and also the departmental men. In the preparation of his picture story, he has had the active co-operation and advice of some of the country's greatest military experts.

The serial is being produced by the Astra Film Corporation, under the direction of Edward Jose, who produced "The Iron Claw." George B. Seitz, author of "The Iron Claw" has adapted the story.

Pearl a Joan of Arc

In "Pearl of the Army," Miss White plays the role of Pearl Dare, a Twentieth Century Joan of Arc, who awakens America to the dangers surrounding our country.

In the cast supporting Miss White are Ralph Kellard, Theodore Friebus, W. T. Carleton and Marie Wayne. Mr. Kellard, whose excellent work in "The Shielding Shadow" and several Pathe Gold Rooster plays is attracting attention, takes the part of the hero in "Pearl of the Army."

Edward Jose had a wide experience on the legitimate stage, which brought him to every corner of the globe. It was he to whom the Pathe Company entrusted the production of George B. Seitz's great serial "The Iron Claw," in which Pearl White was last seen.

Mr. Jose is in no small measure responsible for the great success of the Astra Film Corporation, in which Louis J. Gasnier, the president, has gathered about him a number of the most important figures in filmdom. The following statement comes from Mr. Gasnier:

"In line with the policy of Pathe, we are adding to the forces of the Astra Company some of the greatest directors and the best known actors in the country today. We have also constantly in mind the importance of good stories. The better class of motion pictures being produced to-day has educated the public to expect higher and higher standards. We are making every effort to meet the demand and we feel safe in saying that in "The Shielding Shadow" and "Pearl of the Army," we have produced two serials which do so."

Seitz Has Serial Record

George B. Seitz, who has prepared the scenarios from the stories by Guy McConnell, is known as the most successful writer of serials in this country to-day. His work on "The Exploits of Elaine" and "The Perils of Pauline" was largely responsible for their success, and he was the sole author of "The Iron Claw," Pathe's serial, "The Shielding Shadow," the first installment of which is scheduled for release October 1, was also written by him.

Theodore Friebus, who plays the part of the villain in "Pearl of the Army," has a reputation as one of the leading stock actors in the country, and for nine years he played leads in New York City and Boston. He was in his home city, Washington, when the opportunity came for him to join the production Blanche Bates was giving at that time. He played on tour with her, and then went to New York City, where he played leads in the Academy of Music Stock Company.

Marie Wayne takes the part of the vampire—the woman with a past.

W. T. Carleton, who plays Colonel Dare, Pearl's father, is well-known from Coast to Coast as an operatic singer, and has thousands of admirers and personal friends gained while he was proprietor and star of the Carleton Opera Company. He made his appearance on the operatic stage in the early '70's, and has been a noted figure before the public ever since. In 1884 he organized his own company, and in the initial season had such singers as Jessie Bartlett Davis, Jennie Winston, Clara Lane, J. K. Murray, Charles A. Bigelow and William Pruette. Raymond Hitchcock is a graduate from his chorus.

Mr. Carleton played the part of Pierpont Stafford, father of Billie Burke, in "Gloria's Romance." He screens well, and is of an erect, military bearing, and wears his uniform with grace and ease.

According to the policy set down by J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of the Pathe Exchange, a national newspaper and billboard campaign will be inaugurated to create business for the exhibitor. The National Sunday Magazine, with a circulation of over 2,000,000, will publish the story in addition to scores of other newspapers throughout the country.

Distribution of "Conquest of Canaan" Undecided

William L. Sherrill Has Received So Many Offers from States Rights Buyers and Program Men That He Cannot Decide Which to Favor

WILLIAM L. SHERRILL, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation received so many offers from state right buyers and independent exchange owners after the trade showing of "The Conquest of Canaan" given at the Strand theatre, New York, last week, that he is undecided as to what disposal he will make of it. The state rights men only voiced the opinion of three feature program concerns, who had previously put in bids for the picture. Whether or not the program or the state rights method of marketing the picture will be chosen will not be decided until next week.

Mr. Sherrill believes that the independent exchange handling independent features is in a position to market its product after a better fashion than the feature program company. A number of buyers such as Joseph Lee, Louis Rosenbluch and Joseph Friedman saw Mr. Sherrill after the Strand showing and urged him to release the picture on the open market. Mr. Sherrill strongly leans towards the open market, and was even further convinced of its advantages when several exhibitors wrote to him urging him to dispose of his picture in such a manner.

Another matter which will probably swing the balance in favor of the open market policy, is the fact that the program concerns who desire to procure the feature wish to sign up for the world's rights, and this the Frohman Amusement Corporation can not do owing to its pevious disposition of the European and Australian rights for all its output.

One prominent theatre owner said of "The Conquest of Canaan," "I've been playing three different programs two days a week, and my business has fallen off considerably. I will play "The Conquest of Canaan' 'a week. There are new faces in it, new ideas, novelties that my program features do not possess."

To Decide Marketing Plans for New Universal Serial Soon—Julius Stern and Louis Jacobs East for Conference

JULIUS STERN, president and general manager, and Louis Jacobs, business manager of the L-Ko Motion Picture Company arrived in New York last week, the former from a short vacation spent in the White Mountains, and the latter from the Los Angeles studios. Mr. Stern will spend a few weeks in New York, before returning to the west coast.

During the absence of the other officials, Abe Stern, secretary and treasurer of the company has been attending to all details of the organization. Mr. Jacobs came east to confer with Julius Stern regarding the marketing of the new serial starring Francis Ford and Grace Cunard which has been in the course of production at the L-Ko plant for the last few months. This will be the first picture other than slapstick that the company has so far turned out.

The usual run of comedies under the general direction of Jack Blystone are being produced as usual.

PRESS CLUB PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER IN FILMS

Winifred Westover, daughter of Clyde Westover, the well-known magazine writer and president of the San Francisco Press Club, is making her debut on the screen in the Triangle Fine Arts production, "Bugs." Little Miss Westover, plays the role of a pretty hired girl.

Winifred Westover

"Bugs," by the way, is being directed by Paul Powell from a scenario by W. E. Wing.

HOLMES BEGINS LECTURE TOUR OF COUNTRY

Burton Holmes, whose motion pictures are released exclusively through the Paramount Pictures Corporation as weekly "trips around the world," will begin the middle of October to make his lecture tour of the big cities of this country.

Mr. Holmes has, prior to his advent in the motion picture field, always been best known throughout this country as a travel lecturer. Canada, which never appeared in any former list of lectures, will be included this season under the subjects of "Canada, from Coast to Coast," and "The Canadian Rockies."

Mr. Holmes has been spending the past eight weeks at his motion picture studio in Chicago, preparing the new releases for the Paramount Pictures Corporation. His forthcoming releases on travel are far superior to any that have been shown.

SPEDON GOES WEST FOR TWO WEEKS

Sam Spedon left New York the latter part of last week for a trip West. He expects to be gone for ten days or two weeks. When asked the object of this hurried trip he acted very mysterious, and said that time alone could tell.

Vitagraph Prepares to Lay Large Emphasis on Photography

Reorganization of Camera Department Is Announced, with W. H. McCoy in Charge—Will Have New Quarters at the Main Plant

IN connection with its broader plans since the recent recapitalization, Greater Vitagraph has made changes in its camera department. Photography being recognized as one of the great factors in the production of fine motion pictures, the camera room of the headquarters plant has been placed in new quarters and under new management.

W. H. McCoy, known better as "Bill" McCoy about the studio, has been appointed superintendent and is now in charge of the many priceless lenses and rosewood boxes of the company and is at the head of the score of expert camera operators. From now on his department will be a distinct unit of the plant with a special view toward producing constructive results.

Mr. McCoy is an expert qualified to work out some great improvements in service and equipment for this department. Nine years ago he joined Vitagraph as a mechanic, being engaged in the machine department, where the company makes all its own cameras. After a few months at mechanical work on cameras he was transferred to the picture taking staff on account of his understanding of the peculiarities of the apparatus.

He did excellent work as a photographer and handled many of the best pictures ever turned out by Vitagraph. One of his first successes was in filming the great artistic production of "The Tale of Two Cities," which was one of the initial multiple releases of the company. The "stills" from this production, which were taken on 8 x 10 plates, were masterpieces of their kind and to-day remain in demand for reproduction, two recent examples of this being in the finer illustrated sections of the Sunday New York World and of the magazine Every Week. The good photography of a more recent success, "The Law Decides" may be pointed out as his.

As both an artistic and mechanical expert Mr. McCoy is depended upon to make constant improvements in the camera department. He is not only a student of lenses and camera mechanism but of lighting effects and opportunities for novelties in working out the spirit of photoplay manuscripts. It is to his record as a progressive workman that his promotion is due.

New Plan for Booking Kleine's "Gloria's Romance"

Twenty Chapter Serial Grouped Into Five Features of Eight Reels Each—New Plan Most Successful

A BRAND new plan for the booking of the George Kleine motion picture novel, "Gloria's Romance," is now in effect at all the Kleine exchanges. Exhibitors, instead of booking this picture in twenty chapters, are now permitted to play the attraction as a feature offering, running four chapters, or eight reels, per night for a period of five weeks. The new plan is reported to be meeting with much favor among the exhibitors, since it gives the houses that have already run "Gloria's Romance" a chance to stage a Billy Burke revue by running the whole production again in compact form, and thus taking advantage of all the word of mouth advertising created by the first showing of the picture.

One Kleine manager, in talking of the new booking plan, said: "Several houses in my territory are doing twice the business they did on the first run of the picture, by staging a Billie Burke revue. One of the managers told me that he felt confident when he booked the reshowing that he would make a neat profit, but he came into the office the other day smiling from ear to ear, and declared that he had no idea of the number of people who had missed the picture on the first run, had heard about it from their friends, and now were seeing it for themselves. He also explained that a lot of his summer customers who had been away on vacations and missed several chapters of the first showing were now revisiting his house to witness the chapters they missed while out of town. I have found that the film as a revue offers a most attractive 'buy' for the exhibitor who never runs serials, but is a strong believer in big feature shows. By booking the 'Gloria's Romance' revue he can give five of the best feature shows he could obtain anywhere, for he can spend more money on his first announcement of the booking of five such tremendous features and cover all five showings of the picture. The mere announcement of Billie Burke in five eight-reel performances is a sure box-office magnet, and the most optimistic estimates of the business which can be done are far exceeded in almost every case. Of course, for the exhibitor who has not previously shown Billie Burke in 'Gloria's Romance' the opportunity for big money is just as great as for the man who has already run the picture as a twenty-chapter picture novel, and is now reshowing it as five eight-reel features."

MANY CHANGES IN PITTSBURGH EXCHANGES

There have been many changes in the managerships of the various offices of the film exchanges in Pittsburgh during the past few weeks and once more there is another change to announce. This time it is in the office of the Famous Players Film Service in Pittsburgh. R. C. Schmidt has resigned the office as manager and C. G. Kingsley, at present manager of the Fox Film Company at Cincinnati, O., will succeed him. Mr. Kingsley will assume his new duties within the next few days.

Mr. Schmidt will remain in the employ of the company and will be the company's special traveling agent out of Pittsburgh. Mr. Kingsley has had considerable experience in the film business. During the past year he was in charge of the Fox Film Company's offices at Detroit and was transferred to Cincinnati recently. It is said there will be a number of other echanges in the Pittsburg film exchanges before the end of this year.

Pre-Release Showing "Common Law" Well Received

First of Selznick Pictures Given Enthusiastic Reception in New York and Chicago—Boston Showing Next Week—Brenon Working Hard on "War Brides"—Kitty Gordon's First Release, "Vera the Medium," Adapted from Richard Harding Davis Story

THE NEW trade-name, "Selznick-Pictures," was planted on the map of the film world last week through the successful pre-release appearances of the Clara Kimball Young production of "The Common Law." With this first picture safely launched under favorable auspices Mr. Lewis J. Selznick has begun to center his activities about the second Selznick-Picture, the Herbert Brenon production of Nazimova in "War Brides."

The twenty-six Selznick branches throughout the country, organized at the outset to handle the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation product, have all swung into line for the Herbert Brenon pictures.

Clara Kimball Young, in "The Common Law," has scored a triumph. In both New York and Chicago, where pre-release showings were given last week, the picturization of the Chambers story proved a record breaker both in attendance and in the general critical and public acclaim with which it was received.

In addition to the new laurels won by Miss Young the first presentations of the picture proved personal triumphs for Lewis J. Selznick, founder and president of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation and for Albert Capellani, the director general of the company.

In New York the picture was screened simultaneously at eight of the Marcus Loew theatres. In point of attendance the picture topped the highest week-day recepits in the history of the Loew houses. Miss Young gave additional zest to the occasion by a personal whirlwind tour of the city to appear before the audience in each theatre.

The story of the Chicago pre-release showing at the Studebaker theatre where the picture is being given a sixteen-day run, is concisely stated in the following telegram received by Mr. Selznick from his mid-Western associates, Messrs. Jones, Linick & Schaeffer, of Chicago:

"Clara Kimball Young, in 'Common Law,' did biggest business in the history of Studebaker theatre. Over two thousand on the two days. Everybody well pleased. All three morning papers, Tribune, Herald, Examiner, give picture wonderful criticism. Accept our congratulations."
